

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

---

Y 4. B 22/3: S. HRG. 104-869/
V. 12

Investigation of Whitewater Develop... E

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION
AND RELATED MATTERS

ADMINISTERED BY THE

COMMITTEE ON
BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS
UNITED STATES SENATE
ONE HUNDRED FOURTH CONGRESS

SECOND SESSION

VOLUME XII

ON

THE INQUIRY INTO WHETHER IMPROPER CONDUCT
OCCURRED WITH RESPECT TO THE OPERATION,
INVESTMENTS, AND ACTIVITIES OF WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, MADISON GUARANTY
SAVINGS & LOAN, CAPITAL MANAGEMENT
SERVICES, AND RELATED MATTERS

---

JANUARY 11, 16, 18, 23, 25, 30, AND 31;
FEBRUARY 1, 6, 7, 8, AND 13, 1996

---

Printed for the use of the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs

RECEIVED
FEB 27 1996

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION
AND RELATED MATTERS

---

HEARINGS

BEFORE THE

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE
WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION
AND RELATED MATTERS

ADMINISTERED BY THE

COMMITTEE ON
BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS
UNITED STATES SENATE
ONE HUNDRED FOURTH CONGRESS

SECOND SESSION

VOLUME XII

ON

THE INQUIRY INTO WHETHER IMPROPER CONDUCT
OCCURRED WITH RESPECT TO THE OPERATION,
INVESTMENTS, AND ACTIVITIES OF WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION, MADISON GUARANTY
SAVINGS & LOAN, CAPITAL MANAGEMENT
SERVICES, AND RELATED MATTERS

---

JANUARY 11, 16, 18, 23, 25, 30, AND 31;
FEBRUARY 1, 6, 7, 8, AND 13, 1996

---

Printed for the use of the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs

U.S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE

41-382 CC

WASHINGTON : 1997

---

For sale by the U.S. Government Printing Office
Superintendent of Documents, Congressional Sales Office, Washington, DC 20402
ISBN 0-16-055496-9

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

ALFONSE M. D'AMATO, New York, Chairman

RICHARD C. SHELBY, Alabama
CHRISTOPHER S. BOND, Missouri
CONNIE MACK, Florida
LAUCH FAIRCLOTH, North Carolina
ROBERT F. BENNETT, Utah
ROD GRAMS, Minnesota
PETE V. DOMENICI,* New Mexico
ORRIN G. HATCH, Utah
FRANK H. MURKOWSKI, Alaska

PAUL S. SARBANES, Maryland
CHRISTOPHER J. DODD, Connecticut
JOHN F. KERRY, Massachusetts
RICHARD H. BRYAN, Nevada
BARBARA BOXER, California
CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN, Illinois
PATTY MURRAY, Washington
PAUL SIMON, Illinois

HOWARD A. MENELL, Staff Director

ROBERT J. GIUFFRÀ, JR., Chief Counsel

PHILIP E. BECHTEL, Deputy Staff Director

STEVEN B. HARRIS, Democratic Staff Director and Chief Counsel

MICHAEL CHERTOFF, Special Counsel

RICHARD BEN-VENISTE, Democratic Special Counsel

ALICE S. FISHER, Deputy Special Counsel

LOUIS J. GICALE, Deputy Special Counsel

EVERETT C. JOHNSON, JR., Deputy Special Counsel

JAMES B. COMEY, Deputy Special Counsel

NEAL E. KRAVITZ, Democratic Principal Deputy Special Counsel

LANCE COLE, Democratic Deputy Special Counsel

STEVEN BANKLER, Investigative Accountant

H. CHRISTOPHER BARTOLOMUCCI, Associate Special Counsel

GABRIEL BERG, Democratic Legal Intern

JULIUS J. BONAVALANTA, Special Investigator

MARK J. BRENNER, Assistant Special Counsel

ROBERT H. BUCHANAN, Staff Intern

DAVID CARLE, Democratic Press Secretary

WILLIAM S. CASTLE, Senior Investigator

LORI A. CONLON, Administrative Assistant

VINCENZO A. DELEO, Special Investigator

VIET D. DINH, Associate Special Counsel

DOUGLAS A. EFSTEIN, Democratic Counsel

CHRISTOPHER FARRO, Staff Intern

STEVEN H. FROMEWICK, Democratic Assistant Special Counsel

SOPHIA HARDY, Democratic Intern

NGUYEN-HONG HOANG, Democratic Legal Intern

DAVID KAUFMAN, Staff Intern

DAVID M. LUNA, Democratic Law Clerk

JOSEPH MITCHELL, Staff Intern

TIMOTHY P. MITCHELL, Democratic Professional Staff Member

MICHAEL P. O'CALLAGHAN, Associate Special Counsel

RICHARD J. O'CONNELL, Special Investigator

JAMES S. PORTNOY, Democratic Associate Special Counsel

JAMES F. REDFERN, Special Investigator

ANDREW M. SCHAUER, Democratic Assistant Special Counsel

JENNIFER M. SWARTZ, Senior Investigator

MEGAN H. TINKER, Senior Investigator

AMY R. WENDT, Democratic Staff Assistant

JEFFREY H. WINTER, Democratic Special Assistant

STEPHANIE H. WOMACK, Democratic Special Assistant

* Appointed to replace Senator Bill Frist pursuant to S. Res. 184 (October 12, 1995).

III

PETER C. BARRETT, Staff Assistant
Yael BELKIND, Democratic Staff Assistant
SLOAN DEERIN, Staff Assistant
MITCHELL FEUER, Democratic Counsel
EMILY L. FRYDRYCH, Assistant to the Democratic Staff Director
MARTIN J. GRUENBERG, Democratic Senior Counsel
MARK D. HOFFMAN, Executive Assistant to the Staff Director
GLENN IVEY, Democratic Counsel
JOSEPH A. JIAMPIETRO, Counsel
JOSEPH R. KOLINSKI, Chief Clerk/Computer Systems Administrator
ANDREW LOWENTHAL, Democratic Professional Staff Member
DORIS R. MAHONEY, Executive Assistant
CHARLES MARR, Democratic Professional Staff Member
E. RICHARD MILLS, Press Secretary
JOSEPH N. MONDELLO, JR., Counsel
PATRICK A. MULLOY, Democratic Chief International Counsel
DOUGLAS R. NAPPI, Counsel
LENDEL PORTERFIELD, Financial Institutions Subcommittee Staff Director
AMY C. RANDEL, Democratic Staff Assistant
SARAH BLOOM RASKIN, Democratic Counsel
MADELYN SIMMONS, Professional Staff Member
PAUL WEECH, Professional Staff Member
EDWARD M. MALAN, Editor
GEORGE E. WHITTLE, Editor
IRENE C. WHISTON, GPO Editorial Assistant
DONNA LEE KRAUSE, GPO Editorial Assistant

CONTENTS

VOLUME XII

THURSDAY, JANUARY 11, 1996

	Page
Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	1
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	4
Senator Simon .....	5
Senator Dodd .....	20
Senator Moseley-Braun .....	26
Senator Mack .....	29
Senator Shelby .....	45
Senator Bennett .....	48
Senator Hatch .....	69

WITNESS

Richard N. Massey, Attorney, Rose Law Firm .....	5
--	---

APPENDIX

Transcript of Video Press Conference of First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, dated April 22, 1994 .....	29
Document DKS <sub>N</sub> 000767 .....	109
Document DKS <sub>N</sub> 000800 .....	110
Interview, Office of Investigations, Office of Inspector General, Participants: Hillary Rodham Clinton and David E. Kendall .....	111
Document DKS <sub>N</sub> 028934 .....	116
Document DKS <sub>N</sub> 028928 .....	117
Document DKS <sub>N</sub> 028962 .....	118
Documents RLF2 03030-03031 .....	119
Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Supplemental Report for the RTC, dated Decem- ber 13, 1995 .....	121
Interview of John Latham by the RTC/OIG, dated July 16, 1995 .....	213
Letter from David E. Kendall to Senator D'Amato, dated January 8, 1996 .....	218
Interview of Richard N. Massey by the FDIC, Office of Inspector General .....	222
Interview of Richard N. Massey by the RTC, Office of Inspector General .....	226
Document DKS <sub>N</sub> 028943 .....	239
Document DKS <sub>N</sub> 028960 .....	240
Document RS 000537 .....	241
Document 0000084 .....	242
Document RS 000381 .....	243

TUESDAY, JANUARY 16, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	245
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	246
Senator Bond .....	271

Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of—Continued

Senator Simon .....	274
Senator Murray .....	288
Senator Mack .....	293
Senator Faircloth .....	319

WITNESSES

William H. Kennedy, III, Attorney, Rose Law Firm .....	246
Bruce R. Lindsey, Deputy Counsel and Assistant to the President .....	247
W. Neil Eggleston, Partner, Howrey & Simon, Former Associate Counsel to the President .....	247

APPENDIX

Documents S 012517–012538 .....	367
Fax from John Spotila to Neil Eggleston, dated November 16, 1993 .....	389
Document S 011399 .....	390
Letter from John Spotila to Neil Eggleston, dated November 16, 1993 .....	391
Document S 012604 .....	392
GAO Questions for Mrs. Clinton .....	393
Letter and Response to GAO Questions for Mrs. Clinton from Neil Eggleston to Nancy Kingsbury, dated April 6, 1994 .....	394
The New York Times, Anthony Lewis, dated January 15, 1996 .....	396
Chronology of Events, DEK, November 10, 1993 .....	397
Document S 012599 .....	404
Bruce Lindsey's Notes of Conversation with Jim Blair .....	405
Document 10255 .....	407
Documents S 012595–012596 .....	408
Documents S 012597–012598 .....	410
Documents 0000149–0000167 .....	412
The Wall Street Journal, Editorial, dated January 12, 1996 .....	431
The Boston Sunday Globe, Thomas Oliphant, dated January 14, 1996 .....	433
Interview of John Latham by the RTC/IG, page 1 .....	434

THURSDAY, JANUARY 18, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	435
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	448
Senator Faircloth .....	453
Senator Mack .....	456
Senator Bond .....	463
Senator Murray .....	488

WITNESSES

Carolyn Huber, Special Assistant to the President .....	435
---	-----

AFTERNOON SESSION

Ronald Clark, Chief Operating Officer, Rose Law Firm .....	470
--	-----

APPENDIX

Deposition Exhibit 1, Carolyn Huber .....	521
Document DKS 028928 .....	522
Document DKS 028934 .....	523
Document DKS 028980 .....	524
Document DKS 029010 .....	525
Majority Summary Chart, January 30, 1996 .....	526
Document DKS 029011 .....	527
Document RS 000381 .....	528
Documents RLF 03182–03183 .....	529

VII

	Page
Letter from Jim McDougal to Seth Ward, dated September 3, 1985 .....	531
Document DKS N 028979 .....	532
Document DKS N 029008 .....	533
Document DKS N 029002 .....	534

---

TUESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1996

---

Opening comment of Chairman D'Amato .....	535
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	538
Senator Murkowski .....	564
Senator Boxer .....	567
Senator Shelby .....	572
Senator Kerry .....	576

WITNESS

William C. Lyon, Former Member, Arkansas State Bank Board .....	535
---	-----

APPENDIX

Documents DKS N 013314-013315 .....	585
Documents VCH 000367-000373 .....	587
Letter from Gary Bunch to Marlin Jackson, dated June 5, 1984 .....	594
Letter from Marlin Jackson to Charles Campbell, dated November 1, 1985 .....	595
Document DKS N 026346 .....	596
Letter from James McDougal to Betsey Wright, dated December 12, 1984 .....	597
Examination Classification of Madison Bank and Trust Company .....	598
Deposition of William Cain Lyon, page 61 .....	599
Document MG 0000759 .....	600
Document DKS N 025966 .....	601

---

THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1996

---

Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	603
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	604
Senator Bond .....	627
Senator Dodd .....	631
Senator Moseley-Braun .....	633
Senator Mack .....	634
Senator Simon .....	638
Senator Murkowski .....	648

WITNESSES

Beverly Bassett Schaffer, Esquire, Former Commissioner, Arkansas Securities Department .....	606
William B. Brady, Former Attorney, Arkansas Securities Department .....	606
Charles Handley, Assistant Commissioner, Arkansas Securities Department ..	606

APPENDIX

Document CCBW-884 .....	715
Documents CCBW-885-887 .....	716
Documents RLF2 03062-03063 .....	719
The American Banker article, dated November 4, 1985 .....	721
Document DKS N 026305 .....	722
Document 00000084 .....	723
Letter from Beverly Bassett to Hillary Rodham Clinton, dated May 14, 1985 ..	724

VIII

	Page
Letter from Hillary Rodham Clinton to Jim McDougal, dated May 23, 1985 ....	725
Document RS 000648 .....	726
Memo to File of John Mitchell, Re: Madison Guaranty S&L, April 3, 1985 .....	727
Document S-KR03131 .....	729
Board of Directors Meeting, FHLBB, dated July 11, 1986 .....	730
Document RLF1 03186 .....	738

TUESDAY, JANUARY 30, 1996

Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	739
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Murray .....	740
Senator Sarbanes .....	740
Senator Dodd .....	744
Senator Mack .....	763
Senator Murkowski .....	772

WITNESSES

James T. Clark, Former Bank Examiner, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Sixth Federal Home Loan Bank District, Indianapolis, Indiana .....	742
Dawn Pulcer, Former Bank Examiner, Federal Home Loan Bank Board of Indianapolis in Detroit, Michigan .....	743

APPENDIX

James T. Clark's Examination Report—Summary .....	806
Document DKSJ 028962 .....	809
James T. Clark's List of Potential Insiders .....	810
House Testimony of James T. Clark, pages 212 & 287 .....	811
Memo to File of John Mitchell, Re: Madison Guaranty S&L, April 3, 1985 .....	813
Pillsbury Madison & Sutro General Report for the RTC, dated December 28, 1995 .....	815
Document CCBW-884 .....	831
Personal Notes of Dawn Pulcer, Re: July 11 FHLBB Meeting, Supervision and Madison Guaranty S&L Board .....	832
Document DKSJ 029010 .....	849

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	851
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	864
Senator Bond .....	878
Senator Grams .....	884
Senator Murkowski .....	889
Senator Faircloth .....	896

WITNESSES

Bobby J. Nash, Director of Presidential Personnel and Assistant to the Presi- dent of the United States; Former Senior Executive Assistant for Economic Development, Little Rock, Arkansas .....	851
David Fitzhugh, Former Vice President of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, Little Rock, Arkansas .....	851

AFTERNOON SESSION

Darrell D. Dover, Attorney, House, Wallace, Nelson & Jewell, Little Rock, Arkansas, Represented Industrial Development Company [IDC] .....	926
---	-----

IX

	Page
Richard T. Donovan, Attorney, Rose Law Firm, Little Rock, Arkansas .....	926
Thomas P. Thrash, Attorney, Rose Law Firm, Little Rock, Arkansas .....	926

APPENDIX

Document 071997 .....	987
Document 071996 .....	988
Davis Fitzhugh's Commission Check for $50,000, dated November 1, 1985 .....	989
Document 0000091 .....	990
Bruce Lindsey's Notes .....	991
Document MG 0000797 .....	992
Documents SW1-005-006 .....	993
Memo from David Williams to Vincent Foster, dated November 20, 1986 .....	995
Document 029011 .....	997
Document 029010 .....	998
Majority Chart, Summary IDC, January 30, 1986 .....	999
Majority Chart, Hillary Clinton's IDC Billings .....	1000
Majority Chart, Rose Law Firm IDC Billings .....	1001
Memo from Richard Donovan to Hillary Clinton, dated January 3, 1986 .....	1002
Memo from Jim McDougal to Jim Guy Tucker, dated February 7, 1986 .....	1003
Handwritten Memo from Hillary Clinton to Richard Donovan .....	1004
Memo from Richard Donovan to Hillary Clinton, dated February 17, 1986 .....	1005
Document 029013 .....	1017
Document 029016 .....	1018
Memo from Richard Donovan to Hillary Clinton, dated March 4, 1986 .....	1019
Voucher 4391 .....	1023
Voucher 4372 .....	1024
Document 029008 .....	1025
Draft Agreement, dated August, 1985 .....	1026
Document 028979 .....	1033
Letter from Thomas Thrash to Darrell Dover, dated August 9, 1986 .....	1034
Document 029002 .....	1039
Draft Agreement, dated August 19, 1985 .....	1040
Draft Agreement, dated September 13, 1985 .....	1047
New Client Master Form .....	1052
Option to Purchase Real Estate .....	1053

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1996

Opening comment of Chairman D'Amato .....	1059
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	1068
Senator Dodd .....	1074
Senator Boxer .....	1080
Senator Bond .....	1091
Senator Murkowski .....	1096

WITNESS

Susan Strayhorn, Former Secretary, Madison Financial Corporation .....	1059
--	------

APPENDIX

Figure 2—Property Deposition Map .....	1106
Documents SW1-008-009 .....	1107
Documents SW1-005-006 .....	1109
Document SW1-007 .....	1111
Interview by Office of Investigations, Office of Inspector General, Participant:
Martha Patton .....	1112
Documents SEN 32910-32918, John Latham .....	1114
Document SEN 32828, Seth Ward .....	1123
Documents SW1-070-074 .....	1124
Letter from Susan Strayhorn to April Breslaw, dated January 25, 1990 .....	1129

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1996

Opening comment of Chairman D'Amato .....	1131
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	1141
Senator Shelby .....	1150
Senator Kerry .....	1154
Senator Dodd .....	1156
Senator Faircloth .....	1157
Senator Moseley-Braun .....	1159

WITNESSES

Steven A. Switzer, Deputy Inspector General for Audit, Office of Inspector General, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation .....	1131
Patricia M. Black, Assistant Inspector General for Inspections and Legal Support, FDIC; Former Counsel to the Inspector General, Resolution Trust Corporation .....	1132

APPENDIX

Letter from Richard Massey to Beverly Bassett, dated June 17, 1985 .....	1204
Document DKSX 028965 .....	1206
Majority Chart, Hillary Clinton's IDC Billings .....	1207
Deposition Exhibit 3, Steven A. Switzer .....	1208
Majority Chart, Rose Law Firm—Attorney Conference Billings .....	1209
Letter from William Collishaw to James Neal, dated December 29, 1995 .....	1212
Memo from Harold Ickes to The First Lady, dated March 1, 1994 .....	1214
Memo from Neil Eggleston to Harold Ickes, dated February 28, 1994 .....	1215
Document DKSX 029016 .....	1222
Deposition Exhibit 3, Patricia M. Black .....	1223
Document DKSX 029026 .....	1224
Document DKSX 029008 .....	1225
Document SW1-028 .....	1226
Document DKSX 028980 .....	1227
Memo from April Breslaw to Gerald Jacobs and William Roelle, dated February 26, 1991 .....	1228
Hillary Rodham Clinton's Supplemental Interrogatory, No. 64 .....	1235
Document DKSX 020024 .....	1237
The Washington Post article, August 5, 1995 .....	1238

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1996

Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	1241
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	1259
Senator Shelby .....	1260
Senator Mack .....	1265
Senator Bennett .....	1269
Senator Dodd .....	1271
Senator Faircloth .....	1281
Senator Bond .....	1288
Senator Moseley-Braun .....	1294

WITNESS

Webster L. Hubbell, Former Associate Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice .....	1241
---	------

APPENDIX

Documents SEN 22408-22409 .....	1341
April Breslaw's House Testimony, pages 200-201 .....	1343
Documents S 010097-010105 .....	1345

XI

	Page
Document DKS N 028935 .....	1354
Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report, December 28, 1995 [12123240] .....	1355
Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report, December 28, 1995 [12120070] .....	1443
Document RS 000381 .....	1466
Document DKS N 029011 .....	1467
Document GRO 000028 .....	1468
Memo from Mary Russell to Hillary Clinton, dated July 21, 1988 .....	1469

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1996

Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	1471
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Hatch .....	1483
Senator Sarbanes .....	1485
Senator Shelby .....	1496
Senator Simon .....	1501
Senator Faircloth .....	1505
Senator Bennett .....	1512
Senator Grams .....	1518

WITNESSES

David E. Kendall, Attorney, Williams & Connolly .....	1471
Jane C. Sherburne, Special Counsel to the President .....	1471

AFTERNOON SESSION

Capricia P. Marshall, Special Assistant to the First Lady .....	1535
Gary J. Walters, Chief Usher, The White House .....	1535
Dennis W. Freemyer, First Assistant Usher, The White House .....	1535

APPENDIX

Documents S 020431-020433 .....	1553
Deposition of Jane C. Sherburne, pages 15 to 20 .....	1556
Letter from the Special Whitewater Committee to The White House, dated September 6, 1995 .....	1557
Letter from The White House to the Special Whitewater Committee, dated October 23, 1995 .....	1560
The White House, Third Floor .....	1563
Committee Composite of Book Room .....	1564
Deposition Exhibit 1, Capricia P. Marshall .....	1565

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	1567
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Simon .....	1581
Senator Sarbanes .....	1595

WITNESSES

Nancy Hernreich, Deputy Assistant to the President & Director of Oval Office Operations, Former Scheduling Secretary to the Governor .....	1567
Sam I. Bratton, Jr., Chairman, Arkansas Public Service Commission, Former Counsel to the Governor .....	1567

APPENDIX

Document CCBW-884 .....	1625
Memo from Jim Guy Tucker to Mike Wilson, dated February 24, 1987 .....	1626

XII

	Page
Memo from NH to BC, dated April 14 .....	1628
Document DKSX 018009 .....	1629
Letter from Jim Guy Tucker to Governor Clinton, dated April 24, 1987 .....	1630
Letter from Jim Guy Tucker to Jeffrey Stern, dated April 27, 1987 .....	1632
Documents DKSX 018011-018012 .....	1633
Memo from Doug Strock to Jerrell Clark, dated April 6, 1987 .....	1635
Memo from Doug Strock to Butch Sullins, Larry Jegley, and Tony Creston, dated January 17, 1985 .....	1636
Documents DKSX 013314-013315 .....	1638
Memo from Janice Choate to Governor Clinton, dated March 5, 1986 .....	1640
Message Pad by Strayhorn from Hernreich to McDougal, dated January 15 ....	1642
Document DKSX 013118 .....	1643
Document DKSX 013154 .....	1644

VOLUME XIII

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	1645
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Simon .....	1663
Senator Sarbanes .....	1669
Senator Dodd .....	1672
Senator Faircloth .....	1675

WITNESSES

Alston Jennings, Sr., Former Partner, Wright, Lindsey & Jennings .....	1645
Helen Dickey, White House Database Administrator, Former Staff Assistant in the Social Office .....	1646

APPENDIX

Document S020085 .....	1687
Document S020557 .....	1688
Document S020561 .....	1689
The White House, Third Floor .....	1690
Documents SEN30383-30384 .....	1691
Documents SW1-005-007 .....	1693
Documents SW1-070-074 .....	1696
Deposition of Seth Ward's Pre-Trial Arkansas, pages 83-84 .....	1701
Letter from Alston Jennings to Viet D. Dinh, dated February 9, 1996 .....	1703
The Washington Post article, dated February 9, 1996 .....	1704
Majority Charts 1 & 2 .....	1705
Document SEN 33176 .....	1707
Majority Chart 3 .....	1708

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	1709
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	1722
Senator Hatch .....	1729
Senator Dodd .....	1736
Senator Grams .....	1744
Senator Faircloth .....	1766

WITNESS

Mark D. Gearan, Director, Peace Corps, Former White House Director of Communications .....	1710
---	------

APPENDIX

Documents S 020564-020583, S 020585 .....	1820
Documents S 020589-020590 .....	1841
Document S 020454 .....	1843
Documents S 020452-20453 .....	1844
Letter from U.S. Department of the Treasury to the Special Whitewater Com- mittee, dated February 9, 1996 .....	1846
Letter from Justin Simon to Brett Kavanaugh, dated January 31, 1996 .....	1849
New York Times article, dated December 20, 1993 .....	1852
RTC/IG Deposition of Mark D. Gearan, page 4 .....	1853
Documents S 020292-020310 .....	1854
Deposition of Mark D. Gearan, pages 23-24 .....	1873
Letter from The White House to the Special Whitewater Committee, dated February 13, 1996 .....	1875
Bruce Lindsey's Notes, page 3 .....	1876
Documents S 020760-020761 .....	1877
Documents S 020448-020450 .....	1879
Document OIC 001030 .....	1882

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	1883
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	1885
Senator Hatch .....	1908
Senator Dodd .....	1912
Senator Faircloth .....	1915
Senator Mack .....	1921
Senator Moseley-Braun .....	1957

WITNESS

Harold M. Ickes, White House Deputy Chief of Staff .....	1883
--	------

APPENDIX

Letter from Robert S. Bennett to the Special Whitewater Committee, dated March 25, 1996 .....	1993
Letter from the Special Whitewater Committee to Robert S. Bennett, dated March 26, 1996 .....	1996
Letter and Enclosures from Robert S. Bennett to the Special Whitewater Committee, dated April 18, 1996 .....	1999
Letter from the Special Whitewater Committee to Robert S. Bennett, dated April 22, 1996 .....	2004
Letter from Robert S. Bennett to the Special Whitewater Committee, dated May 3, 1996 .....	2009
Documents S 020783-020786 .....	2011
Documents S 007288-007313 .....	2015
Documents X 001200-001201 .....	2041
Deposition of Harold M. Ickes, July 24, 1994 .....	2043
Documents S 020790-020794 .....	2173
New York Times, Docudrama, Sidney N. Herman, dated January 27, 1996 .....	2179
Documents S 009929-009931 .....	2180
Documents 007301-097303 .....	2183
Documents S 020564-020579 .....	2186
New York Times article, dated December 20, 1993 .....	2202
Documents S 020797-020802 .....	2203
Associate Press article, dated February 9, 1996 .....	2209
Documents S 020884-020889 .....	2212
Documents S 020819-020820 .....	2218
Documents S 009908-009911 .....	2220
Treasury/IG Deposition of Harold M. Ickes, pages 1-8 .....	2224
Document S 020781 .....	2232
Documents 2987-2989 .....	2233
Documents S 020451-020451A .....	2236

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 24, 1996

Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	2239
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	2240
Senator Faircloth .....	2241
Senator Mack .....	2261
Senator Murkowski .....	2262
Senator Grams .....	2282

WITNESSES

Helen (Vowell) Herr, Former Leasing Administrator, Arkansas State Building Services .....	2241
S. Wooten Epes, Former Executive Director, Arkansas Housing Development Agency .....	2246
Patricia J. Hays, Former Administrative Assistant & Collections Officer, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan .....	2249
Paul Mallard, Former Director, Arkansas State Building Services .....	2252

AFTERNOON SESSION

Charles J. Peacock, Former Member, Board of Directors, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan .....	2288
Gregory M. Hopkins, The Hopkins Law Firm .....	2288
Lance Randell Miller, Partner, Mitchell, Williams, Selig, Gates & Woodyard ..	2288

APPENDIX

State of Arkansas Lease Agreement with Madison .....	2316
Letter from Wooten Epes to Helen Vowell (Herr), dated October 5, 1984 .....	2320
Deposition of Helen Herr, page 145 .....	2321
Memo from LM to JSS, dated April 23, 1987 .....	2322
Los Angeles Times article, July 31, 1995 .....	2325
Letter from Wooten Epes to Carl Brooks, dated October 11, 1983 .....	2327
Deposition of Paul Mallard, page 44 .....	2328
Memo from Sue Strayhorn to Davis Fitzhugh, dated December 17, 1985 .....	2329
Memo from Lance Randell Miller to Pat Heritage, dated April 21, 1987 .....	2330
Majority Chart, Listing of Checks receive in 1985 Fundraiser .....	2331
Cashier's Check No. 2497 from Ken Peacock to Bill Clinton .....	2332
Cashier's Check No. 2498 from Dean Landrum to Bill Clinton .....	2333
Cashier's Check No. 2461 from Madison Guaranty to Charles Peacock .....	2334
Personal Check from Charles Peacock to Madison Guaranty .....	2335
Madison Guaranty Loan Application signed by Charles Peacock .....	2336
Personal Check from Charles Peacock to Quapaw Title Company .....	2337
Memo from Nancy Hernreich to Governor Clinton, dated April 14 .....	2338
Memo from Jim McDougal to John Latham, dated March 27, 1985 .....	2339

THURSDAY, APRIL 25, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	2341
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Dodd .....	2355
Senator Sarbanes .....	2364
Senator Shelby .....	2393

WITNESS

Betsey Wright, Former Chief of Staff for Governor Clinton; accompanied by Alan M. Cohen, Esq., O'Melveny & Myers, New York, NY .....	2341
--	------

APPENDIX

Document DKS N 001244 .....	2445
Document DKS N 013309 .....	2446

	Page
Document DKS 002794 .....	2447
Deposition of Betsey Wright, page 320 .....	2448
Cashier's Checks—2496, 2497, 2498 .....	2449
Document DKS 018008 .....	2452
Deposition of Betsey Wright, pages 153–167 .....	2453
Document DKS 027487 .....	2456
Document DKS 027490 .....	2457
Documents DKS 027531–27534 .....	2458
Documents DKS 027572–27574 .....	2462
Document DKS 018184 .....	2465
Document DKS 027162 .....	2466
Documents DKS 026484–26485 .....	2467
Document DKS 026450 .....	2469
Documents DKS 017642–017643 .....	2470
Document DKS 017322 .....	2472

---

TUESDAY, APRIL 30, 1996

---

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	2473
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Mack .....	2474
Senator Sarbanes .....	2474
Senator Bennett .....	2507

WITNESSES

Johnny B. Mitchum, Former Commissioner, Arkansas State Police .....	2473
Thomas L. Goodwin, Former Director, Arkansas State Police .....	2473
John W. Myers, Investment Adviser & Actuary hired to analyze Police Radio Underwriting Proposal .....	2473
Paul B. Young, Jr., Vice President, Public Finance Department, T.J. Raney & Sons .....	2474

AFTERNOON SESSION

Sam I. Bratton, Jr., Former Counsel to Governor Clinton .....	2520
Michael J. Gaines, Former Public Safety Liaison to Arkansas State Police for Governor Clinton .....	2520
Bobby J. Nash, Former Senior Executive Assistant for Economic Development to Governor Clinton .....	2520

APPENDIX

Document DKS 017635 .....	2554
Letter from Michael Drake to Paul Young, dated August 21, 1985 .....	2555
Summary Bill from Mitchell, Williams, Selig, Jackson & Tucker to Michael Drake, Lasater & Company, dated March 15, 1985 .....	2556
Document DKS 018184 .....	2569
Letter from Mitchell, Williams, Selig, Jackson & Tucker to Ed Erxleben, dated May 16, 1985 .....	2570
Deposition of John W. Myers, page 11 .....	2572
Document DKS 027162 .....	2573
State Police Communications Bid Analysis .....	2574
Document DKS 017800 .....	2576
Document DKS 017636 .....	2577
Deposition of Betsey Wright, page 321 .....	2578
Documents DKS 027455–027457 .....	2579
Document DKS 017843 .....	2582
Document DKS 018182 .....	2583

---

WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1996

---

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	2585
--	------

	Page
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	2602
Senator Bennett .....	2611
Senator Dodd .....	2615
Senator Faircloth .....	2630
Senator Murkowski .....	2669

WITNESSES

Danny Ray Lasater, Partner, Collins, Locke & Lasater, Lasater & Company Investment Bankers .....	2585
Michael J. Drake, Senior Vice President, Fixed-Income and Tax-Exempt Securities, Collins, Locke & Lasater .....	2589

AFTERNOON SESSION

Mort G. Hardwicke, Arkansas Development Finance Authority [ADFA] .....	2654
George H. Wright, Jr., Arkansas Development Finance Authority [ADFA] .....	2654
Linda D. Chandler, Former Acting President, Arkansas Development Finance Authority .....	2654
Charles Stout, Arkansas Housing Development Agency Board Member 1980- 85 and Chairman 1983 .....	2654
S. Wooten Epes, Former President, Arkansas Development Finance Authority [ADFA] .....	2654

APPENDIX

Memo to File, David Collins Inv., dated October 14, 1986 .....	2692
Letter from Lasater & Company to Governor Clinton, dated February 15, 1985 .....	2696
Documents FBI 00003569-00003590 .....	2698
Document DKSX 026466 .....	2720
Documents DKSX 027455-027457 .....	2721
Document DKSX 026102 .....	2724
Document DKSX 026484 .....	2725
Document DKSX 027572 .....	2726
Document DKSX 026479 .....	2727
Letter from Michael Drake to Paul Young, August 21, 1985 .....	2728
Document DKSX 017635 .....	2729
Document DKSX 026125 .....	2730
Deposition of Barry Spivey, August 9, 1995 .....	2731
Document DKSX 027162 .....	2743
Document DKSX 027453 .....	2744
Minutes AHDA Subcommittee Meeting, February 17, 1983 .....	2745
Minutes AHDA Executive Board Meeting, April 12, 1983 .....	2746
Letter from Gene Wilbourn to Charles Stout, April 28, 1983 .....	2752
Minutes AHDA Special Executive Board Meeting, April 19, 1983 .....	2754
Minutes AHDA Board of Directors Meeting, February 17, 1983 .....	2758
Minutes AHDA Special Board Meeting, August 31, 1983 .....	2763
Documents DKSX 026126-026128 .....	2765

TUESDAY, MAY 7, 1996

Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	2769
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	2770
Senator Bond .....	2782
Senator Mack .....	2785
Senator Simon .....	2789
Senator Bennett .....	2791
Senator Dodd .....	2793
Senator Domenici .....	2796
Senator Boxer .....	2798
Senator Murkowski .....	2803

APPENDIX

Letter from Benito Romano, Willkie Farr & Gallagher to the Special White-water Committee, dated May 3, 1996 .....	2810
Document DKSN 000807 .....	2812
Interrogatory of Hillary Rodham Clinton by the RTC, page 5 .....	2813
Letter from the Special Whitewater Committee to the Office of the Independent Counsel, dated May 1, 1996 .....	2814
Majority Chart, Mrs. Clinton's Billing Records .....	2815
New York Times, Docudrama, Sidney N. Herman, dated January 27, 1996 .....	2816

---

WEDNESDAY, MAY 8, 1996

---

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	2817
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Bond .....	2818
Senator Sarbanes .....	2820
Senator Simon .....	2821
Senator Faircloth .....	2841
Senator Murkowski .....	2843

WITNESSES

Frank B. Burge, Former Senior Vice President, Citizens Bank & Trust of Flippin, Arkansas .....	2817
James N. Patterson, Former President, River Valley Bank & Trust of Lavaca, Arkansas .....	2818
Robert Ritter, Former President, CEO & Director, Citizens Bank & Trust of Flippin, Arkansas .....	2818
H. Don Denton, Former Senior Vice President & Chief Lending Officer, Union National Bank of Little Rock; Former Senior Vice President & Chief Lending Officer, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan .....	2818
Vernon H. Dewey, Former Loan Officer, Citizens Bank & Trust of Flippin/1st Ozark National Bank .....	2818
Ron A. Proctor, Former Vice President, Citizens Bank & Trust of Flippin/1st Ozark National Bank .....	2818

APPENDIX

Letter from Office of the Independent Counsel to the Special Whitewater Committee, dated May 3, 1996 .....	2889
Letter from Office of the Independent Counsel to the Special Whitewater Committee, dated May 7, 1996 .....	2890
The Clinton's Personal Financial Statement .....	2891
Real Estate Appraisal .....	2893
The Clinton's Loan .....	2894
Letter from Ron Proctor to Susan McDougal, dated February 24, 1988 .....	2895
Documentation Waiver, dated July 15, 1988 .....	2896
Chris Wade's Affidavit, dated May 11, 1992 .....	2897
Security Release Agreement, dated May 4, 1985 .....	2898
Chris Wade's Loan Agreement, dated May 11, 1992 .....	2900

---

THURSDAY, MAY 9, 1996

---

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	2903
Opening comments of Senator Sarbanes .....	2905

WITNESSES

Patsy L. Thomasson, Deputy Assistant to the President & Deputy Director of Presidential Personnel .....	2903
J. Wesley Strange, Former President & CEO, 1st Ozark National Bank .....	2935

XVIII

	Page
Edward M. Penick, Former President, Twin City Bank of North Little Rock and Former Chairman of the Board, 1st Ozark National Bank .....	2935
Margaret (Davenport) Eldridge, Former Senior Vice President, Twin City Bank of North Little Rock .....	2935

APPENDIX

Deposition of Patsy L. Thomasson, July 11, 1995, pages 33 & 34 .....	2983
Documents CGE012286-012294 .....	2986
Documents CGEPR0563-0564 .....	2995
Mr. Spafford's Handwritten Notes called out by Bernie Nussbaum of contents of Vince Foster's Office .....	2997
Document F 15, Excerpts of Mr. Foster's Notebook .....	2998
Letter from Michael J. Drake to Bob Snyder, dated May 30, 1985 .....	2999
Summary Bill from Mitchell, Williams, Selig, Jackson & Tucker to Michael Drake, Lasater & Company, dated March 15, 1985 .....	3000
Deposition of Patsy L. Thomasson, February 23, 1996, page 85 .....	3012
Majority Chronology of 1987 and 1988 Bank Branching Legislation .....	3013
Document JRTS 00206 .....	3015
Document JRTS 00195 .....	3016
Document CBF 0411 .....	3017
File Notes of Edward M. Penick, Jr., dated May 27, 1986 .....	3018
Document JRTS 00141 .....	3019
Documents CBF 0408-0410 .....	3020
Document CBF 0416 .....	3023
Letter from Hillary Rodham Clinton to J.W. Strange, dated July 13, 1988 .....	3024
Document House W/W Report 9540 .....	3025
Deposition of Ronald A. Proctor, May 2, 1996, pages 55 & 56 .....	3026
Deposition of Vernon H. Dewey, May 3, 1996, pages 28 & 29 .....	3027
Document JRTS 00002 .....	3028
Documents JRTS 00496-00497 .....	3029
Document JRTS 00491 .....	3031
Documents JRTS 00142-00143 .....	3032
Documents JRTS 00204-00205 .....	3034
File Notes of Edward M. Penick, Jr., dated March 14, 1988 .....	3036
Document JRTS 00203 .....	3038
Document RIC 003638 .....	3039

TUESDAY, MAY 14, 1996

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	3041
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	3041
Senator Dodd .....	3059
Senator Faircloth .....	3060

WITNESSES

Susan P. Thomases, Attorney at Law, Willkie Farr & Gallagher .....	3041
Patricia Solis Doyle, Special Assistant to the President & Director of Scheduling for the First Lady .....	3041

APPENDIX

Document CGE009110 .....	3080
Documents OIC000417-000418 .....	3081
Blood Sport written by James Stuart, pages 283-285 and 298-299 .....	3083
Testimony of Susan P. Thomases, August 8, 1995, page 76 .....	3088
Majority Charts .....	3090
Testimony of Susan P. Thomases, August 8, 1995, page 132 .....	3092
Testimony of Susan P. Thomases, December 18, 1995, page 46 .....	3093
Document S020561 .....	3094
Document ST0000039 .....	3095
Testimony of Susan P. Thomases, July 17, 1995, pages 126-127 .....	3096

XIX

	Page
Document ST 0000023 .....	3098
Document ST 0000043 .....	3099
Document ST 0000046 .....	3100
Document ST 0000047 .....	3101
Document ST 0000036 .....	3102

---

WEDNESDAY, MAY 15, 1996

---

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	3103
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	3112
Senator Murkowski .....	3130

WITNESSES

Gaines B. Norton, Jr., Certified Public Accountant .....	3103
Charles E. James, Accountant .....	3103

APPENDIX

Videotaped Deposition of William Jefferson Clinton, dated April 28, 1996, pages 58-59 and 60-61 .....	3136
Testimony of Harry Don Denton, May 8, 1996, pages 21-26 .....	3141
Deposition of Paul C. Berry, May 10, 1996, pages 17-34 .....	3147
Document LP 01602 .....	3151
Document LP 00672 .....	3152
Document LP 01547 .....	3153
Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, dated February 4, 1994, pages 1-4 .....	3154
Document LP 00682 .....	3158
Document LP 00659 .....	3159
Document LP 00678 .....	3160

---

THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1996

---

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	3161
Opening comments of Senator Sarbanes .....	3163

WITNESSES

John M. Latham, Former CEO & Chairman of the Board, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan .....	3161
David A. Knight, Former Partner, Rose Law Firm .....	3161
Gary W. Bunch, President, Madison Bank and Trust .....	3162

APPENDIX

Documents DKSJN 800-801 .....	3192
Minutes of Madison Bank and Trust Board Minutes .....	3194

---

FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1996

---

Opening comments of Chairman D'Amato .....	3195
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Murkowski .....	3215
Senator Sarbanes .....	3219
Senator Hatch .....	3227

WITNESSES

Jay B. Stephens, Pillsbury Madison & Sutro .....	3196
Charles E. Patterson, Pillsbury Madison & Sutro .....	3196
Bruce A. Ericson, Pillsbury Madison & Sutro .....	3197

APPENDIX

Case Plan and Budget from Bruce A. Ericson, Pillsbury Madison & Sutro to Mark Gabrellian, RTC, dated February 16, 1994 .....	3247
Pillsbury Supplemental Report from December 1995, page 7 .....	3256
Diary of Joshua L. Steiner .....	3257
Majority Chart, Pillsbury Madison & Sutro's Hourly Billing .....	3259
Majority Chart, Witnesses Not Interviewed by Pillsbury Madison & Sutro .....	3260
Statement of Mark D. Fabiani, dated May 17, 1996 .....	3261
Testimony of Jean E. Hanson, dated August 1, 1994, pages 160-163 .....	3262
Chicago Sun-Times article, January 21, 1996, Byline: Hillary Clinton .....	3266
Testimony on May 8, 1996: Frank B. Burge, pages 19 & 20; Robert Ritter, pages 34 & 35; H. Don Denton, pages 65 & 66 .....	3273
Deposition of Paul C. Berry, dated May 10, 1996, page 35 .....	3275
Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Supplemental Report on Madison Guaranty S&L by the Rose Law Firm, dated February 25, 1996 .....	3277

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1996

Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	3315
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	3316
Senator Hatch .....	3317
Senator Bryan .....	3317
Senator Shelby .....	3318
Senator Kerry .....	3319
Senator Faircloth .....	3323
Senator Mack .....	3324
Senator Domenici .....	3325
Senator Murkowski .....	3327
Senator Bennett .....	3328
Senator Simon .....	3332
Senator Dodd .....	3333
Senator Boxer .....	3335
Senator Moseley-Braun .....	3336
Senator Murray .....	3342

TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1996

Opening statement of Chairman D'Amato .....	3347
Opening statements, comments, or prepared statements of:
Senator Sarbanes .....	3348
Senator Shelby .....	3349
Senator Dodd .....	3350
Senator Domenici .....	3351
Senator Kerry .....	3352
Senator Faircloth .....	3353
Senator Bryan .....	3355
Senator Grams .....	3356
Senator Boxer .....	3356
Senator Bennett .....	3357
Senator Moseley-Braun .....	3358
Senator Murray .....	3359
Senator Murkowski .....	3360
Senator Simon .....	3362
Senator Mack .....	3362
Senator Hatch .....	3364

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

---

VOLUME XII

---

THURSDAY, JANUARY 11, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:15 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Mr. Massey, good morning.

Mr. MASSEY. Good morning.

The CHAIRMAN. Before we swear in our witness and take whatever statement he may wish to offer, I have a statement to make. Since we are starting our next phase of the hearings, I think it is important to take stock of the developments of recent weeks. These developments, quite candidly, are very troubling to the Chairman of this Committee.

The Committee has obtained important new evidence, and I will briefly outline this evidence, and the troubling circumstances of its discovery, for the Committee and the American people. Since the beginning of our hearings, the Committee has heard contradictory testimony and remarkable lapses of memory. One Administration official even implied that his diary lied.

We have unearthed evidence that has led to the resignations of a number of very senior Administration officials, including the Deputy Treasury Secretary, the White House Counsel, and the General Counsel of the Treasury Department.

This past summer when we looked at the handling of the documents in Deputy White House Counsel Vince Foster's office following his death, the testimony of senior White House officials was contradicted by professional law enforcement officials, including the Deputy Attorney General of the United States, the number two official at the Department of Justice.

The testimony of Maggie Williams, the First Lady's Chief of Staff, was contradicted by a Secret Service officer who testified that he saw Ms. Williams remove documents from Mr. Foster's office on the night of his death.

Susan Thomases, a close friend and adviser of Hillary Clinton, could not remember important events and conversations after Mr. Foster's death. This was all very troubling.

But in the last 3 weeks, we have seen new evidence emerge. There were three important developments.

First, the William Kennedy notes last December. This Committee asked for the notes from a November 5, 1993, Whitewater defense meeting. Mr. Kennedy, then an Associate Counsel to the President and former partner at the Rose Law Firm with Mrs. Clinton, attended this meeting and took notes. Also at this Whitewater defense meeting were White House officials Bruce Lindsey, Neil Eggleston, Bernie Nussbaum, and private attorneys. This was, to say the least, an unusual meeting. There were both Government and private lawyers at the meeting.

Now, in order to get the White House to turn the notes over, we had to get the Senate of the United States, to vote for enforcement. When we got these notes finally, after dragging on for many months, we discovered that Mr. Kennedy's notes contained some very disturbing passages.

In these notes there's a statement, "Vacuum Rose Law files." The White House has an absolutely absurd interpretation for that entry, but the real meaning is crystal-clear, because in the next line of Mr. Kennedy's notes, it says, "documents never know go out," and then under that "quietly." We all understand what that means. We know the documents were missing, the documents in question as it relates to the Rose Law Firm. And we're deeply concerned that the Rose Law Firm's records were vacuumed.

The second event of importance concerns new evidence about Travelgate and the miraculous discovery of a memo written by a former White House official, David Watkins, which shows a pattern of deception occurring at the White House, and that is disturbing.

This memo reveals that Hillary Clinton, contrary to her claims to Government investigators, did in fact order the firing of people working in the White House Travel Office. Travelgate again demonstrates the lengths that this Administration would go to hide its shortcomings and promote the interest of its cronies. The Travelgate affair shows what the Clinton Administration did to jeopardize a man's freedom, Billy Dale, who had been a director of the White House Travel Office which makes the travel arrangements for the press.

What the Watkins' memo and other memos now discovered show is what the Clinton Administration did in order to put their people in the Travel Office. They systematically destroyed the reputation and honor of those who worked at the White House Travel Office. They improperly brought in the FBI. This brought about censure upon the Clinton White House by institutions of responsibility, including the Attorney General that President Clinton appointed, Janet Reno.

What the Clinton Administration did was terrorize and traumatize civil servants in the White House, some who had been working there nearly 30 years, Billy Dale in particular.

Now we hear from the White House spokespeople an incredible thing. A man who is victimized is now characterized as ready to accept a plea agreement and that somehow this demonstrated that he may have been culpable or guilty. Terrible. After what he went through, after almost 2 years, after having to spend $500,000 to clear his name—and understand, he was found innocent—to now characterize him because he had to make a choice of facing a possibility, with missing records, unable to defend himself, of considering a plea agreement in which he would not admit that he broke the law, I have to tell you, that is incredible.

And then last Friday we had a second miraculous production of records from the White House. The billing records from the Rose Law Firm were discovered unbelievably in the First Family's residence at the White House. For more than 2 years law enforcement officials have sought these records. The Department of Justice couldn't get them. The Independent Counsel couldn't get them. The Senate couldn't get them.

The American people do have a right to know why these records were not turned over sooner. How did they find their way to the First Family's residence? Who brought the Rose billing records to the residence of the White House? These records may have been taken from Vince Foster's office. We do know that Vince Foster's handwriting is all over them.

Again, we get a pattern of deception, deceit, and memory loss. These records show numerous and extensive communications between Hillary Clinton and Madison Guaranty S&L, in complete contradiction to claims made by Hillary Clinton and her representatives.

Let me tell you what Madison Guaranty turned out to be. It was a corrupt S&L owned by Jim McDougal, the Clintons' Whitewater partner. Federal regulators have said that it was operated as a criminal enterprise. Madison's collapse cost American taxpayers $60 million. That's real money. Make no mistake about it, American taxpayers lost money because of Madison S&L and because of the way it was operated.

During the 1980's Mr. McDougal and his friends were concocting sham real estate deals to benefit the Arkansas political elite. One of those projects was called Castle Grande and another was called Whitewater. Castle Grande is a good example of the criminal activity of the Madison S&L. Federal regulators call this deal "a sham."

The chief beneficiaries of this sham were Seth Ward, Webster Hubbell's father-in-law, and Jim McDougal, the Clintons' Whitewater partner. Webb Hubbell is now in jail. He was the number three official in the Clinton Justice Department.

These Rose billing records are very troubling. These hearings will now begin to try to determine the truth about the three documents that we have just received—who knew about them, what did they know about them, and whether illegal activities occurred. The American people have a right to know the full facts about Whitewater and related matters. This Committee will continue to be thorough, to be comprehensive, and to be fair. That is what the American people expect and deserve.

Senator Sarbanes, before I swear in the witness, do you have any comments or do any of the other Members have any comments?

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I want to pick up on the last point you made about having thorough, comprehensive, and fair hearings, and it is hard for me to see how we are going to have that if we reach conclusions before we have the facts. Now, I have watched the activity over the recent past in this full-scale assault with respect to Mrs. Clinton, when we have as yet not developed before the Committee all of the facts with respect to these various issues.

The billing matter for which we have Mr. Massey here today, we asked also that Mr. Clark, who is the managing partner at the Rose Law Firm and familiar with these billings, also be included on this panel so we could really get a full development of the situation, really find out exactly what these billings are all about. That was, I regret to say, refused by the Majority, and I regret that.

The billings that were provided in these billing sheets seem to be consistent with the questioning that Senator Bennett made with respect to material that was then available with respect to how much time Mrs. Clinton had put in on this matter.

In any event, it's something that needs to be developed carefully here at the table, without leaping to conclusions, which of course is what's been taking place.

Mr. Kennedy, as I understand it, has said that his reference to vacuum was a vacuum in the files, not a vacuum of the files. Now, we will get Mr. Kennedy here and we will be able to ask him that question and find that out. I don't think it helps the inquiry of the Committee, though, again to leap to a conclusion with respect to that and then assert it out to the public before we have a chance to develop the situation at the witness table. You know, terms like "obstruction" and "deceit" are being thrown about, and as yet I don't think we have thoroughly explored the factual questions that are raised by the matters before us.

We got the billing records. Everyone says well, if they were engaged in a conspiracy to deceive, I assume the billing records would never have been provided. The assertion is that they were just found and that as soon as they were found, they were brought to the Committee. Obviously we will put people at the witness table in order to explore that assertion, find out what the facts are, what actually happened, where were these records, and how did it come that they were discovered and then provided to the Committee. But to leap to a conclusion before we go through that process is not a contribution to a thorough, comprehensive, and fair hearing.

We have joined in most of the document requests and in most of the subpoenas, because I subscribe to the objective of a fair, comprehensive, and thorough hearing. I'm deeply disappointed that the request to put Mr. Clark before us as well today while we are exploring this billing question was not acceded to by the Majority.

In fact, I understand he is here today and I still think that he ought to be included at the table along with Mr. Massey—he has been deposed by Counsel to the Committee, so it's not as though you are trying to bring someone in who hasn't been deposed, which I think is important. I don't think we ought to spring witnesses, as it were, who had not been previously deposed by Counsel so there's an opportunity to develop the factual basis upon which they are going to be questioned. I think proper procedure would require that. But that's occurred in Mr. Clark's case, and I think while we are trying to get a full picture of this, we ought to do all we can to get a full picture. That's our responsibility and we are committed to that responsibility, and I think that that's something the Committee ought to be engaged in, and I don't think it ought to be leaping to conclusions before we develop the facts at the table. And I think the facts developed at the table ought to be as thorough and full and as comprehensive as possible.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Simon.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL SIMON

Senator SIMON. Mr. Chairman, before we proceed with the witness, I have to say I have been out of town and haven't talked to Senator Sarbanes or to any member of our staff, but Senator Sarbanes' suggestion that Mr. Clark testify here and that we get a balanced presentation today seems to me to be a reasonable one, and if Mr. Clark is here, why don't we swear him in and move ahead and have Mr. Clark testify also.

The CHAIRMAN. There are good reasons, Senator. We're going to spend, we believe, a considerable period of time with this witness. Second, we are going to interview other witnesses whose work in relationship with the testimony that Mr. Clark will give is undoubtedly related, if not closely related, and we have not had an opportunity to examine those witnesses. Therefore, before we go forward, we need some additional information, which we are gathering, so that when we have Mr. Clark here, we'll also have that other information. So we are really not prepared, notwithstanding that we have had his deposition. There was other information and facts that our investigators are gathering.

Now, we will have him here. There's absolutely no inclination on the part of the Chairman to deny that. It's important. We are eager to hear from him. We will hear from him, but not at this point in time because we want to really concentrate on Mr. Massey's testimony. That's going to take quite some time, and that's why the Majority decided not to go forth with him today.

Senator SIMON. To the extent that we can agree on both sides and—

The CHAIRMAN. And we have in most cases.

Senator SIMON. —not present what may appear to be a stacked deck, I think that's in everyone's best interest, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I agree.

Mr. Massey, do you have a statement you would like to make?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF RICHARD N. MASSEY ATTORNEY, ROSE LAW FIRM

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me first say for the record we thank you for your cooperation.

Mr. MASSEY. Happy to be here.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. MASSEY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Massey, we thank you for making it in under very difficult weather conditions. We appreciate that.

Mr. Massey, when did you graduate from law school?

Mr. MASSEY. In May 1984.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you pull the microphone up a little closer?

Mr. MASSEY. May 1984, from the University of Arkansas.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you go to work right after you graduated?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, after passing the bar.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you start work?

Mr. MASSEY. August 1984.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's when you passed the bar?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In August 1984, where did you start work?

Mr. MASSEY. I was an associate at the Rose Firm in Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's the Rose Law Firm.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your position at the Rose Law Firm starting in August 1984?

Mr. MASSEY. I was called an associate lawyer, which is a non-equity lawyer at the firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just for the benefit of Members of the Committee who don't have the experience of the way law firms are organized, is it fair to say that your firm was organized along the distinction between partners who are essentially owners of the firm and associates who are lawyers who are employed at the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. That's very fair.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the general practice was at your firm, I take it, that associates after a few years if they performed well would be promoted to become partners?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it also fair to say that it was the practice in your firm to have the work of associates at the firm supervised by one or more partners?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, what areas of law did you practice in the Rose Law Firm when you began in August 1984?

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. Chertoff, the section or the division in which I practiced was called securities. It's more a finance practice, raising money, loans, some larger corporate loans, primarily equity-type transactions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say raising money and loans, you, as a beginning lawyer, were doing the legal work for institutions that were raising stock by borrowing?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that's correct, raising capital.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you familiar with a bank known as the Madison Guaranty Bank?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did there come a time in April 1985—

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me, sir, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Did there come a time in April of 1984, about 8 months after you came to the Rose Law Firm, that you began to work on a matter for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the matter you began to work on?

Mr. MASSEY. The first matter I worked on for Madison Savings & Loan was seeking from the Arkansas savings and loan regulators the authority to create a class of preferred stock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say a class of preferred stock, what does that mean?

Mr. MASSEY. Preferred is a kind of equity. Typically it bears a dividend and oftentimes doesn't vote.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it be fair to say that in April 1985, what you were working on, or you began working on was legal work connected with an effort by the savings and loan to raise additional money by issuing a form of stock to the public?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. To the public. I think our efforts were primarily to raise money through private transactions versus a public offering.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, how did you come to work on that matter?

Mr. MASSEY. Can you help me with the—how did it come about?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, how did you come about to be assigned to work on that matter?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't remember. I've been asked that question many times.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know a man by the name of John Latham?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was Mr. Latham?

Mr. MASSEY. I believe at the time he was the President or maybe Senior Vice President at Madison Savings & Loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How old was he at the time, in 1984 and 1985?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't know. Approximately my age, 25 to 30 years old.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he was a young man at the time.

Mr. MASSEY. I would like to think that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Before you began working on Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, before the firm was retained, did you know Mr. Latham?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you know him?

Mr. MASSEY. I knew him briefly in some classes I took in college. I also helped teach a securities class in Little Rock at a law school there, I helped teach it. John, I think, was auditing the class, maybe he was a student, and he asked—I got to know him in the context of that class.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you a social friend of his?

Mr. MASSEY. Not really, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you consider yourself a friend of his, other than a casual acquaintance at the time?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Latham come to you and offer you work for the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Latham come to you and ask you to help him—come to you directly, that is to say, before you had been assigned to the matter, and ask you to help him with an effort by the savings and loan to issue preferred stock?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't remember that. It could have happened, but I don't remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But he did not come to you and ask you to work for him or to bring the firm in as the representative of the bank?

Mr. MASSEY. It could have happened, but I don't remember it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, almost anything could have happened. What we have to try to do is determine what did happen.

Mr. MASSEY. I understand. I'm trying to help.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Latham come to you and offer you work at Madison Guaranty—for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan in the spring of 1985?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, it was 11 years ago. I'm not prepared to tell you that—definitively that that did not happen. I don't have any recollection of that happening. That's the best answer I can give you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you sign him up as a client?

Mr. MASSEY. In terms of engagement letter or—no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you reach an agreement with Mr. Latham on your own to do work for the Madison Guaranty Bank?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Latham ask you to go and help him—let me withdraw the question.

Did you go to Mrs. Clinton and ask Mrs. Clinton to help you with Madison Bank by getting permission from the firm to allow you to represent the bank?

Mr. MASSEY. I have been asked that question before. It's possible that I had a casual conversation with her that I don't remember from 11 years ago, sir, but I don't recall a conversation in which I went to her and asked her to help me bring in the client.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell Mrs. Clinton, again to the best of your recollection—

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I'm trying.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell Mrs. Clinton that Mr. Latham wanted to hire the firm but that you were concerned that certain lawyers at the Rose Firm were opposed to doing any more work for Jim McDougal and that you wanted her to help you arrange for the engagement?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't remember that happening.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask Mrs. Clinton to go to Mr. McDougal in order to arrange for him to pay money on a retainer basis, up front so to speak, so that the firm could do work for the Madison Bank?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't believe I was involved in any negotiations with respect to how the client would be billed or—it would not have been my place as a first-year associate to be involved in that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So given your position as a first-year associate, you would not have gone to Mrs. Clinton and said look, here's a client who wants to come in, there's been a problem with billing in the past, would you speak to Mr. McDougal and see if you can get him to pay money in advance?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't remember that happening, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, did you know Mr. McDougal as of the time you started working on Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. MASSEY. I have been asked that question too. I think to this day I have never met Mr. McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to put up—I know you have a copy of this in front of you in the package, and if you could just take a moment to find it. It is a statement before the Resolution Trust Corporation in the matter of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association, interrogatory responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Mr. MASSEY. Bear with me, please. These are not—it's—

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's marked at the bottom DKS 767.

Mr. MASSEY. I found it now, thanks.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to direct your attention to DKS 800, which begins with interrogatory number 17. It is the next page in your package. It is DKS 800. And I'm going to ask you to begin reading with me along the second paragraph. Now, this is not your statement; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you ever seen this before?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you consulted by anyone in terms of preparing an interrogatory response on behalf of the First Lady to the RTC?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Begin reading: "To the best of my recollection, the president of Madison Guaranty, John Latham, who was a friend of an associate at the Rose Law Firm, Richard Massey, became interested in having Madison Guaranty issue some kind of preferred stock to raise capital. Latham had spoken to Massey about doing the related legal work." Do you remember Latham having spoken to you about doing the related work before the firm was retained by—

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. I'm sorry, I interrupted you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —before the firm was retained by Madison?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, as I think I testified earlier, Mr. Latham was auditing our—a student in a class in which I was a participating lecturer, I guess you should say, and he asked a lot of questions relevant to raising capital, preferred structuring, preferred stock, how to market preferred stock. I think you see in the time records, a lot of the questions we ultimately did research on. So some of the questions in conversations we had in advance, I think, of April 23, 1985. We had had some conversations about these matters.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's in the capacity when you were teaching the class?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So he was asking you questions as a student?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, continuing: "In the spring of 1985, Massey came to see me," "Me" being Mrs. Clinton. "Because he had learned that certain lawyers at the law firm were opposed to doing any more work for Jim McDougal or any of his companies until he paid his bill." Is that your memory of this?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. [Continuing.] "And then only if Madison Guaranty agreed to prepay a certain sum to the firm once a month to cover fees and expenses." Is it your recollection that you discussed with Mrs. Clinton having Madison Guaranty prepay a certain sum to the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I have heard that there were discussions, that there was some disgruntlement, and discussions like this could have gone on. I don't believe I was a party to them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the reason, as you said before, that you were not a party to it is that it's not the kind of a thing a first-year associate would be doing at a law firm; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Not even at my law firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to continue down to the next paragraph: "I believe Massey approached me about presenting this proposal to Jim McDougal because he was aware that I knew him." Did you approach Mrs. Clinton about presenting this proposal to Jim McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. As I said before, we could have had—if I may, I would like to give you a bit of a backdrop.

When John Latham was a student in this class, I had—in fairness I should say for the record that I had asked him to lunch—I'm sorry, I had asked him to lunch one day—sorry, Mr. Chairman—and pitched the business, asked for their work. They were a growing S&L. We liked working for companies like that, so I pitched the work. The response that I got was, gee, I'd like to think about hiring you but it's not up to me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In other words, Mr. Latham told you it wasn't in his power to give work out from the bank.

Mr. MASSEY. That is correct. Now, it is possible—and I think I knew at that time that Mrs. Clinton had some relationship with Mr. McDougal, and so it's possible that I could have had a casual conversation with her in a hallway and said, gee, we would really like to try to get these folks' business, and maybe you could have a word with Mr. McDougal. It's very possible.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But the question here is different. The question here is, did you go to Mrs. Clinton with a proposal in hand to work for Madison Guaranty and ask her to go to see Mr. McDougal to arrange for a prepayment?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't remember that, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to continue: "I visited him at his office." "Him" being Mr. McDougal. "On April 23, 1985, and told him that I understood Latham wanted Massey to do some work for Madison Guaranty, but that our firm would not let Massey proceed until the previous bill was paid and some kind of prepayment arrangement was worked out for new work the firm might do." Now again, just to be clear on this, Mr. Latham did not come to you and say he wanted to give you some work; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. She may be relating in this interrogatory the luncheon that I had where he said, gee, I'd like to hire you, but it's not up to me, but that's—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's not speculate about someone else's mind. I just want to ascertain the facts here. The fact is you did not—am I correct that you did not go to Mrs. Clinton and say I have a proposal to do work, can you go to Mr. McDougal and get him to agree to prepay?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't have a recollection of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because, in fact, Mr. Latham didn't even have the power to award you the contract to do the work for Madison.

Mr. MASSEY. John told me it was up to his boss. It was up to Mr. McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would like to turn to another document, and I will pause for a moment to find it for you. It is an Official Record of Interview, and it's page 1 of 5, "Official Record of Interview, Office of Investigations, Office of Inspector General." Why don't we pause for a moment and let you find it.

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, who is the interviewee?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Participants: Senior Special Agents, Hillary Rodham Clinton, and David E. Kendall.

Mr. MASSEY. You are a lot quicker with these than I am. I am trying, bear with me. I have it now, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would like to ask you to turn to the third page, and the beginning of the second full paragraph, which begins "Mrs. Clinton was asked several questions."

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I will say the left margin has clipped a lot of it off.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Follow along with me in the middle of the paragraph. "Mrs. Clinton indicated she did not consider herself to be the attorney of record for Rose's representation of Madison before the ASD and presumed it to be Rick Massey." Were you the attorney of record on the representation of Madison before the Arkansas Securities Department?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I'm not sure. "Attorney of record" is a term I think that is used in litigation. I don't know what "attorney of record" means. I'm not trying to evade your question. I drafted the correspondence that you see in the files to the Arkansas Securities Department, and I did have conversations with him, and I think I probably had most, if not substantially all—I noticed that there were a few in the time records—with the ASD for the two matters during the time that I was involved.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who supervised you?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I had—I worked with partners within my section and lawyers within my section with respect to technical matters. Mrs. Clinton was the billing attorney. She—as you'll see in the time records, she would fairly regularly contact me, ask me for updates on what was going on with the matters. She oftentimes would review draft documents that I had intended to submit at the time to the ASD.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To be clear, you said she would contact you for updates on the matter and she would review documents that you were preparing on the matter. We're talking about the application to make a preferred stock offering and the application for broker-dealer license.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. Those are the two matters in which I was doing most of the work.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me continue. The next sentence reads, "She recalled Massey came to her and asked her to be the billing attorney which was a normal practice when an associate was handling a matter." Did you approach Mrs. Clinton and ask her to be the billing attorney on the Madison account?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I beg your pardon?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm sorry, I don't recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You've already indicated that he did not bring in the Madison matter. My question to you was——

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, that's something that I—it's outside my knowledge as to whether I brought the Madison matter in or not. We've talked about this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand. You can't go into Mr. McDougal's mind and know whether he knew you existed.

Mr. MASSEY. That's exactly right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To be more careful, you did not come to Mrs. Clinton with an engagement in hand, contract in hand to do the Madison work?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't recall that happening, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did not come to Mrs. Clinton and say in substance, the firm has been hired, they have hired me to do work on this securities matter, would you be the billing attorney?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't have a recollection of that happening.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That didn't happen?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't recall that happening, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you would agree with me, I take it, that Mrs. Clinton did do work supervising you with respect to this Arkansas securities preferred stock offering issue.

Mr. MASSEY. If I could, I'd like to characterize my belief as to the relationship that I had with Mrs. Clinton during these two matters in which I was—again, I was primarily doing the work.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What were the two matters?

Mr. MASSEY. It was the preferred stock matter that you mentioned earlier, and a somewhat related matter of attempting to have the Arkansas Securities Department approve the operation of a brokerage, i.e., to sell their own securities. So they in effect wanted to market their own securities in this capitalization with the preferred stock, and they were related. I say two matters.

Now, during these matters, Mr. Chertoff, I can't tell you whether I initiated contact with her or whether she initiated contact with me, but as you probably know, in firms with the billing attorney, they need to be knowledgeable about the status of matters for the particular client so that if a client calls and wants to know, then she can pass that along. I think that is the nature of the contacts that I had.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you participate in a telephone call that Mrs. Clinton made on April 29, 1985, the day before you submitted the application on the behalf of Madison to Beverly Bassett Schaffer? Did you participate in a telephone call that she had with Mrs. Schaffer?

Mr. MASSEY. May I look at these?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, it is DKS 28934. It is a bill or an invoice covering the month of April, and it has—I will read you the last entry, "April 29, 1985, H. Clinton, telephone conference with B. Bassett, Securities Commissioner; telephone conference with R. Massey."

Mr. MASSEY. Bear with me, please. I have seen these. I received them on——

Mr. CHERTOFF. You probably received them very shortly after we got them.

Mr. MASSEY. Actually, I got them on Monday. Excuse me. May I look at these?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. If we can pause for a moment and let the witness——

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you participate in this call?

Mr. MASSEY. It's hard to definitively say from this. I'm doing my best to remember things from 11 years ago.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand.

Mr. MASSEY. I don't record time for a conference with Ms. Bassett. I have no reason to dispute these records, so I apparently did not—could have happened and I may not have recorded the call, but I don't have a recollection of being on a call with Ms. Bassett.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, this is important. Recognizing that occasionally everybody slips, was it your regular routine practice to record your time for telephone conferences or work done on client matters?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your timesheets, within the limits of what's humanly possible, would accurately reflect the work that you did with respect to this matter?

Mr. MASSEY. As I said, I don't have any reason to doubt these records.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you come to learn, by the way, that Mrs. Clinton in 1986 did work on drafting an option agreement in relation to a piece of property that had been acquired by Seth Ward, between Seth Ward and the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. MASSEY. Have I come to learn that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you come to learn it?

Mr. MASSEY. Within the past few days, from reading the records and looking at the documents, that appears to be true, but I don't have any knowledge of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During 1985 and 1986, were you aware generally that Mrs. Clinton was doing some work involving transactions having to do with Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I'll say, again I want to be as helpful as I can and I'll be happy to familiarize myself with matters in which I was not involved, but my involvement with Madison dropped off, as you can tell from the time records, about the end of 1985. I had some involvement thereafter. I was not aware frankly of any of these transactions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there ever any discussion in the firm considering how usual or unusual it would be for Mrs. Clinton as a litigator to be doing work on transactional matters?

Mr. MASSEY. Litigators, as a general observation—and I practice with a lot of firms around the country. I'll just say my own anecdotal experience is that litigators in Little Rock, and maybe some other small towns, many have a bit broader practice than litigators in Washington or New York. So would it have been uncommon for Mrs. Clinton or any other litigator to have some involvement in transaction work? Not in my opinion. Uncommon, it probably was not the focus of their practice as it was mine, but it wouldn't have been uncommon.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you knew Mr. Thrash was working on some Madison matters as well; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't have any recollection of any of these matters other than what I actually worked on. I worked on two things, I dropped off and I wasn't involved.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What department was Mr. Thrash in?

Mr. MASSEY. Tommy is in the commercial department and I think has been since he came to the firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would like to bring you forward a little bit now to 1992, in particular during the period of time when the campaign was underway in February and March 1992. Did there come a time that you had a conversation with Vince Foster concerning your own records, your own file, regarding the work you had done on Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me, February 1992?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sometime in early 1992 or at any time in 1992, pardon me.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember when that was?

Mr. MASSEY. February of 1992 is about as precise as I can get. Middle to late February.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did that conversation come about?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't remember the precise words or circumstances, but it was generally he came to me and told me that he was putting together a firm response. There was, you are a learned lawyer and you have looked at a lot of the press and you can see that there was a lot of misinformation about a lot of these matters at that time. He said he was distressed by that, he wanted to put together a firm response and asked me for my files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he ask you for original records?

Mr. MASSEY. I think he asked me for my files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you give him?

Mr. MASSEY. I think I gave him copies.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a discussion with Mr. Foster about whether you had given him originals or copies?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you still have in your possession a copy of your file regarding the work that you did on this transaction?

Mr. MASSEY. I can say this, that before I appeared today, I reviewed every document—if I can, I will tell you what I did in 1992 and tell you what I have done since. In 1992, I carefully went through personally the Madison files. Those were my work files. I'm not saying that these were the firm's Madison files. These were my work files, and you have seen the matters that I worked on.

I copied those, many of them personally copied them, and when they had been copied, I compared them page by page to make sure that what I handed him I was retaining. I can say that the contents of my files in 1992, which frankly was the first occasion that I had had to look at those files since 1985, the contents of those files have all been delivered to this Committee.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you deliver them yourself? In other words, did the Rose Law Firm deliver them?

Mr. MASSEY. To the Committee or to Foster or——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me withdraw the question. Was there a point in time that you received copies of the files that were originally your files back from Mr. Kendall in Washington?

Mr. MASSEY. I think the firm received them. Now, did I receive them? No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the firm received the copies of the documents that the firm received from Mr. Kendall relating to the work on Madison Guaranty. Those were originally in your files; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. To be honest with you, sir, I have not reviewed——maybe I should have but I have not reviewed the files returned to us from Mr. Kendall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was your work though; right?

Mr. MASSEY. They appear to be mine, yes, sir. They appear to relate to the things that I worked on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Apart from the files you got back from Mr. Kendall, did you have your own separate set of work files relating to Madison that you kept in your possession continuously from 1992 to the present?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where were those kept?

Mr. MASSEY. I kept them in my office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether what the firm got back from Mr. Kendall was original files?

Mr. MASSEY. No, as I said, I haven't reviewed Mr. Kendall's files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, with respect to printouts, billing printouts, did you have a set of billing printouts in your file?

Mr. MASSEY. I would not have had them. I did not have them. I was not a billing attorney and wouldn't ordinarily come into contact with bills when you're a first-year associate.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You've obviously seen documents now which have been furnished to you in the last few days beginning with number DKSX 28928, which are copies of files relating to the billing. Do you know where the original printouts are that comprise the printouts on these documents?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Still keeping you in the spring of 1992, did you ever have a conversation with Mr. Hubbell, Webster Hubbell, in which you said to Mr. Hubbell that you would say you brought the client in, referring to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. MASSEY. I would say that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, absolutely not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Has anyone since the beginning of 1992 had any conversations with you whatsoever concerning what you would say about who brought in the work on Madison Guaranty, excluding your personal attorneys?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you ever said to somebody that you would say that you had brought in the work on Madison?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, nobody has ever asked me to say I took the work. Nobody has asked me to say that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You never told Mr. Hubbell you would say that?
Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, absolutely not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, are you familiar with the direct investment ruling?

Mr. MASSEY. Not really.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it refresh your memory if I were to tell you the direct investment rule was a rule that limited the amount of money that a savings and loan could invest directly in real estate operations?

Mr. MASSEY. I understand the rule. I understand what the rule means only because my recollection has been refreshed from looking through timesheets, and from some of my correspondence.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you in the summer of 1985, while you were working for Madison Guaranty, do any research work on or have any discussion regarding the direct investment rule?

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me, I will refer you to a document. I think there was a July 10 letter. It may or may not be in the package that I was handed, sir. In that letter, it was Mr. Handley of the Arkansas Securities Department who asked if Madison Guaranty's investment in the broker-dealer involved the direct investment rule. I realize I'm paraphrasing.

I looked at that rule. It was a Federal statute. I looked at that rule for purposes of giving him a reasoning that that rule was inapplicable with respect to the investment in the broker-dealer. That is the totality of my career in the direct investment rule.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you also have a conference or a discussion with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board regarding the direct investment rule?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't think so. I think that's a double entry, sir. I know the entry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just so we are all on the same document, it is DKS N 28962, it says, "July 1 conference with S. Hawkins and FHLB regarding brokerage activities and direct investment rule." What does that relate to?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, it was a 40-minute conversation a long time ago, and I wish I could tell you more. Sarah Hawkins was an officer at Madison. She was—in my memory, she was primarily the officer responsible for regulatory compliance. Most likely this—if you will look, Mr. Handley asked in his June letter to me, June 1985 letter to me, Mr. Handley asked about—to list their subsidiaries and the amount of investment they had, Madison Guaranty had, in each of these subsidiaries for purposes of their determination as to whether Madison was in compliance with that rule.

I would have had to get that information from Madison. My recollection is this coincided with the preparation of my July 10 letter in which—or July 17 letter in which we include information about their investment in subsidiaries.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was part of your work on this application to the Arkansas Securities Department; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. My work was not calculating or opining as to whether that business was in compliance with that rule. It was outside of my area of expertise.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you did not work in what has been described as the Industrial Development Corporation acquisition; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir. I saw one time entry, and I don't think I had any involvement in that other than that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was nothing in your files concerning that?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, absolutely not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The time records indicate that Mrs. Clinton had a series of telephone calls with Seth Ward in December, November–December of 1985 and in early 1986. Do you know what those were about?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With respect to the limited partnerships, that was an area you did work in; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There is a time reference there to a call or two to Susan McDougal. What was Susan McDougal—that was Mr. McDougal's wife?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I think if you look at the history, and I don't want to give you a hair-splitting answer, Susan McDougal, it's my knowledge that I think she was Jim McDougal's wife, OK. The history of this engagement was the first matter entered was, as you will see, the preferred stock matter.

The second matter was a matter called limited partnership. Primarily the work within that, at least during my involvement, was on the broker-dealer matter. I think these matters became billing matter catch-alls, if you will, until new matters could be opened. I have no recollection of Mrs. McDougal's involvement in either any limited partnership work or the broker-dealer matter. This could very well have been something totally unrelated to those things.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you have no idea why Mrs. Clinton would have had a conversation with Mrs. McDougal that she would have been billing to Madison?

Mr. MASSEY. She was the wife of the principal stockholder and she may have been an officer, but I have no personal knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I see my time is up, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, Mr. Massey. My name is Richard Ben-Veniste. We have not met prior to today, have we?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, you were not called to give a deposition to this Committee prior to your testimony; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I was not. Actually, I was called and I think we had scheduling problems and I did not give a deposition prior to this time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you about the question Mr. Chertoff began with, and that is the issue of client development some 10 or 11 years ago vis-à-vis the Madison Bank.

Now, if I understand your testimony, sir, it is correct that you had a relationship with Mr. Latham; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who was Mr. Latham vis-à-vis the bank?

Mr. MASSEY. As I testified earlier, I am not exactly sure of his title. He was either the President or an Executive Vice President of the bank. He was a senior officer.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You knew that he was a senior officer of the Madison Bank.

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is it correct, sir, that in your capacity as an instructor at law school in a course in which Mr. Latham was in attendance, that from time to time Mr. Latham had come to you with questions relating to securities law and that you had provided answers?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And knowing that Mr. Latham was both a student and an officer of a corporation, you characterized your advice to him in the student category and did not send Madison Bank any bill for the time spent conferring or the advice that you had given to Mr. Latham?

Mr. MASSEY. In the course of my career, I have given a lot of free advice.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We lawyers in private practice understand that sometimes casting that kind of bread upon the waters gets you some returns back in goodwill and business from the people to whom you give that advice; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And it was your hope, was it not, that Mr. Latham and the Madison Bank would consult you on an official basis in your private capacity as a lawyer with the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. As I testified earlier, I actually pitched the business to him. I think the pitch was basically, gee, I'm—you are asking me all these questions. Why don't you hire us and put us to work on some of these things.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So very clearly you had it in mind that all of this advice would lead someday to signing up by the Rose Law Firm of this bank client?

Mr. MASSEY. I had hoped that, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, Mr. Latham told you in words or substance that he wouldn't object to that kind of relationship but it was not his decision to make?

Mr. MASSEY. That was the sense I got from the meeting, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And if I understand your testimony, you may have had a casual conversation with Mrs. Clinton about these circumstances, knowing that she was acquainted with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, very possibly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. McDougal was the person to whom Mr. Latham referred as the decisionmaker on retaining a client?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So putting all of this together, there's no real mystery, is there, that there was an issue relating to securities work that you were being consulted on, on an informal basis, by Mr. Latham about that work, that you wanted to regularize that relationship to be an attorney-client relationship between the Rose Firm and the bank, that you may have mentioned it to Mrs. Clinton and that eventually the Rose Firm was retained by the bank to provide the service?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now going forward on that, you mentioned that things were being said about the Rose Firm in relationship to Madison Bank, back in the 1992 campaign, much of it inaccurate and unfair. I'm paraphrasing.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. One of the things that was focused on, indeed it seemed to me to be the principal thing that was focused on, was the notion that somehow there was a cozy relationship between the Rose Firm and particularly Mrs. Clinton and the Securities Commissioner, Mrs. Bassett Schaffer; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And——

Mr. MASSEY. That was one of many inaccuracies, in my opinion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That must have rankled you because you were the person who performed the legal work in connection with that matter?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. First, let's go ahead to the question of whether there was impropriety in the suggestion that it would be within the framework of the law in Arkansas, as you understood it, for the Madison Bank to be in a position to issue preferred securities.

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, there is no better form of capital than cash, and we were trying to raise cash for the institution. Regulators, I think, were recommending preferred stock issuance.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Please pull that microphone closer to you.

Mr. MASSEY. Regulators, both Federal and State, were recommending preferred stock issuances by S&L's at the time. It was due to a quirk in State law that created an issue as to whether preferred stock could actually be issued. Going through the time records, I will say it's my recollection that I believe that one of the officers told me that it was a Federal and FHLB employee, or maybe the supervisor, that had recommended that they issue the preferred, and it was certainly something that was being done all over the country.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So there was precedent for it all over the country, your understanding was through an informal conversation that the Federal regulators were recommending it quite clearly, it was being recommended that the Madison Bank increase its equity, and through this means, and you set out to research and determine whether in fact everything that you had heard and read was accurate and appropriate so that you could provide legal advice?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. Inherent in your question was whose idea was it, and I don't think it was our idea. I think it was either the regulators or the bank officers' idea, and it was a good idea.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Clearly this had been something that had been done in other parts of the country and had come to the attention of lawyers specializing in this matter. Much had been written about it in the trade publications and so forth, so without getting into the intricacies of banking law and Arkansas securities law, can you give us the bottom line? At the time you thought it was entirely appropriate that the bank could in fact raise funds through this mechanism. Has there been anything that has come to your attention in the 10 or 11 years since that would change that contemporaneous opinion of yours with respect to the appropriateness of this procedure?

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I haven't had an opportunity to research the issue, but at the time I believed it was a slam dunk. I think it was an easy, easy piece of legal work. I think that they agreed with us because they really didn't have much choice. It was a pretty simple analysis.

Senator SARBANES. Actually, you took the position that they had little, if any, discretion to disagree with your interpretation of the statute, did you not?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I agree with that.

Senator SARBANES. So that from your point of view, the law was very clear on this matter?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to Mrs. Bassett Schaffer and her approach to the Madison Bank question—and indeed, I would expect that at some point we will have Mrs. Bassett Schaffer before this Committee, sometime soon I hope, since she would be in a position obviously to answer any questions about what occurred in the conference call that is referenced in the time records that were alluded to previously. You had no specific recollection of being in that conference call.

Let me ask you, as a matter of procedure at the Rose Law Firm, if two attorneys are conferring with one another or conferring with a client, was there a practice about whether the client would be billed for both attorneys' time?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, probably.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't know that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who would be the best person to provide the answer as to the practice of the Rose Law Firm with respect to such billing matters?

Mr. MASSEY. Probably the managing partner in the firm who is here with me today.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That would be Mr. Clark who is sitting here in this room?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now——

Mr. MASSEY. I will be glad to ask him if that's appropriate. Whatever the protocol is.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, we have his testimony and I can tell you that his testimony is that the firm practice was not to double-bill the client, but perhaps at some point, we will hear directly from Mr. Clark.

Mr. MASSEY. Double-bill? Well——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to Mrs. Bassett Schaffer and her approach to the firm, we've heard the figure——

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Could I interrupt for just one second? Mr. Chairman? Mr. Chairman? If I could interrupt one second, why don't we have Mr. Clark join Mr. Massey at the panel here? We have his documents. We are asking questions, someone is sitting in the room, he has been deposed, he can shed light on the matter. Why don't we have him sit at the table so we can get the benefit of having—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Dodd, we addressed this before, and the reason is we are going to examine Mr. Clark very thoroughly, very comprehensively, and we have other witnesses who have important information, and Mr. Massey is going to be here for awhile. If there are questions we want to raise with Mr. Clark, we will do it, but we are not going to do it today. We are not prepared, to be quite candid. Our investigators have more work and others to interview.

Now let me say this. If Mr. Massey cannot tell you about a particular incident with respect to the billing, that's fine, we accept that. We can still proceed. So there may be areas which are beyond, those are open questions, we will get to them.

Senator DODD. But Mr. Chairman, if we have, with all due respect, a more knowledgeable witness in the room who can shed light on the particular question, why wouldn't we ask that witness?

The CHAIRMAN. Again, you know what? I think we understand one of the areas that we are looking at, and the question is, did Mr. Massey bring in Madison as some have indicated or as the First Lady has contended. I mean, that is really the issue. In terms of how much work did he and/or the First Lady do, who is responsible for bringing Madison in as a client, that's what we're going to concentrate on, and we're going to spend some time on this.

Senator DODD. He's already testified, Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. We're not finished. And the fact of the matter is, I think Mr. Massey, you indicated you didn't know Mr. McDougal, did you?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You've never met him?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I've said that.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't sign a $2,000 retainer agreement?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm not sure there even was one.

The CHAIRMAN. So you had no knowledge about this, did you?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, my point in the question—

The CHAIRMAN. We're going to have a time—

Senator DODD. Let me just make a point. Last evening I watched the news, and the nightly news, this morning's news, this morning's newspapers, sort of hyping the hearing that we were going to have a witness here that was going to contradict Mrs. Clinton. That was the news before the witness even appeared here, that we were going to have direct conflict on testimony. We have Mr. Clark here, who goes through and understands the billing process. He's been deposed. We all have the benefit of his deposition. Why not have him at the table here so when the questions are asked if he can offer some additional information, we have the benefit of that?

The CHAIRMAN. I know we're not prepared to examine Mr. Clark, but I think the question is whether, as claimed in depositions and statements, Mr. Massey was responsible for bringing in the business, and that's what we're examining. Now, Mr. Massey has indicated he was not responsible for bringing in the business.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. We're going to proceed on that. If we finish examining Mr. Massey, and there are other areas and we have time, then, we'll get into that, but this is the witness. The witness is not Mr. Clark. This is the way we're going to proceed.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I am not suggesting that, but this witness was never deposed. At least we have the deposition of the other witness potentially.

The CHAIRMAN. But I am not interested at this time in terms of what Mr. Clark does or doesn't know. I am interested because, number one, it's been alleged that Madison became a client of Rose Law Firm, as a result of Mr. Massey's acquaintance with various people. We're attempting to find out whether there was a friendship and Madison retained this law firm as a result of Mr. Massey.

And I believe we have heard his testimony but we are going to examine how much work he did and under whose supervision.

Then we will bring in and address some very specific questions with Mr. Clark relating to the records and the handling of the records—whether, for example, after a period of time a law firm regularly reviews and throws out old files or whether it was unusual. We'll get to that and we'll spend a lot of time with Mr. Clark, but not now.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I'm sorry to hear that. With all due respect, it seems to me if we're trying to get at the answers here, we have the benefit of discussing this matter, to get the managing partner of the Rose Law Firm, a deposed witness sitting in the room here who could possibly shed some light on this entire process, and frankly I'm just mystified over why we wouldn't take advantage of that opportunity here with people from the law firm to ask them questions.

The CHAIRMAN. He was not scheduled——

Senator DODD. It doesn't make sense to me.

The CHAIRMAN. He wasn't scheduled. Number two, if we get into those areas relating to his billing and if we have time the Chairman might consider bringing Mr. Clark up at the end and if there are pertinent questions, I will consider having another panel here today and we can examine it, but understand that we will bring him back then again in light of the fact there is still information that we have to look for.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, that would be fine. We need to develop this matter in an orderly fashion. You had one of your Counsel on national television last night saying Mrs. Clinton's lawyer should be worried about a perjury charge. There's no basis for that in the record. That's judgment first and facts later, and we need to develop the facts here and we need to develop a comprehensive and thorough picture.

Mr. Massey is here on a number of issues, including these billing records, and we need to find out what happened. We get these wild allegations being made, then when we finally get the facts we find that the wild allegation was never substantiated, but you never catch up with it because it's out there. And I understand that game. We had a smoking gun here about these Madison records, that they came out of Foster's office, Kendall was fortunately here that day and said no, they came from Hubbell, end of that smoking gun. Now all I'm saying is I want——

The CHAIRMAN. Let me indicate something——

Senator SARBANES. I want to get the facts and I don't want to make judgments until we have the facts. Now when we have all the facts, I'm prepared to make the judgments, tough judgments if they have to be made, but I want the facts first. And this business of, in effect, reaching conclusions and then putting those conclusions out before we ever have the facts is backward. That's not the way to do a fair, thorough hearing, which is what you indicated you've been committed to doing. And to put Counsel on national television making those kind of statements is clearly a violation of an orderly process.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me make an observation so that you can continue. Number one, Mr. Clark was not involved in the underlying Madison work. I mean, that's a fact. Number two, he was not the managing partner in 1985-86. Number three, we have other facts that we are developing so that when we bring Mr. Clark in, we know exactly where we're going. Number four, if there are some pertinent questions concerning Mr. Massey's testimony, if we have time, I'm willing to bring up Mr. Clark today. However, I want to serve notice that that does not mean we're not going to bring him back again, because—and particularly our questions about the handling of the files, the Madison files in particular, not these billing records or not circumstances under which the Rose Law Firm came to represent the Madison Bank. We are here particularly to find out whether Mr. Massey did bring in the business as claimed. That's what we're going to pursue.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, may I respectfully request that 15 minutes be put back on my time.

The CHAIRMAN. No, but I am going to give you additional time. We're certainly not going to cut you off. Go ahead.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

I was asking about Beverly Bassett Schaffer and her approach to the Madison issue, and we heard earlier today a reference being made to a $60 million loss occasioned by Madison Bank when it was finally taken over. Now, you were familiar contemporaneously with events that went on regarding regulation of the bank, if not in terms of the actual work you did but certainly as an interested spectator to events?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, my only knowledge would have come from the newspapers.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Mr. MASSEY. But it was a pretty big event in Little Rock.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you aware of the fact that Mrs. Bassett Schaffer had recommended that the bank be taken over back in 1987 but that the FDIC did not have the funds to make good on the depositors' interests; and, therefore, for 2 years following Mrs. Bassett Schaffer's recommendation, the bank remained open?

Mr. MASSEY. I've read that in news articles.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And have you also learned that as a result of the 2-year delay from the time Mrs. Bassett Schaffer recommended that the bank be closed until the time it was actually closed, some $75 million of the loss is attributable?

Mr. MASSEY. I can't testify to that. I've read that in the papers.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that this $80 million figure and the cost to the taxpayer is a much more complicated question, would it be fair to say, involving national politics, the whole savings and loan fiasco that occurred in the mid- and late-1980's?

Mr. MASSEY. My own impression, sir, is that the State had little regulatory authority with respect to this or any other State-chartered S&L, that their primary regulator were Federal authorities.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But as far as Mrs. Bassett Schaffer was concerned, she was prepared to have and, indeed, had recommended that the bank be taken over 2 years before it actually happened?

Mr. MASSEY. That's certainly possible.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let me go to the question of the documents which were received from Mr. Kendall. If I understand your testimony here today, you had a complete set of all of the work that you had performed for the Madison Bank in your possession continuously at the Rose Law Firm.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that any implication that the only records relating to the work performed by the Rose Law Firm for the Madison Bank had been spirited out in the dead of night and that there were no more copies of those records is false to your knowledge?

Mr. MASSEY. To my knowledge.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you compare—

Mr. MASSEY. I can speak with absolute certainty with respect to my files.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And so there was no question whatsoever that a full record of the work performed by you was, in fact, intact and available to any investigators duly authorized to ask for that material?

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me, I'm sorry?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That it was available to any investigators duly authorized to ask you for that material?

Mr. MASSEY. Sure.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now—

Mr. MASSEY. And presented to them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As I understand your testimony further given today that no one asked you to make up any story about your work for Madison Bank, including how that matter was generated, the work that you did, how it came into the firm, or any other such thing.

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you aware of the fact that a billing recap was created by the Rose Law Firm reflecting the work done for Madison?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I've seen it in the hearings.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed in our hearings and particularly Senator Bennett had paid close attention to that document. Do you have it before you, sir? Let me give you another copy to save time. Here's another copy of that billing recap. This is the document I believe that Senator Bennett and others referred to earlier in these proceedings some weeks ago. Do you know who prepared that document?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I believe Mr. Clark did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The managing partner who is here?

Mr. MASSEY. I believe he did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know whether since the actual computer printout had been located, whether there has been a comparison made to determine the accuracy of that recap by comparing it to the actual billing records?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm not aware of that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you aware that Mr. Clark has done that?

Mr. MASSEY. Not aware of that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Only Mr. Clark would be in a position to provide us that evidence?

Mr. MASSEY. I sure can't. I would be happy to do it, but it would probably slow you down.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, can't we ask Mr. Clark that? He's in the room here.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me again indicate that is not the area that we are exploring.

Senator DODD. But the question has been asked though, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I do not believe that we indicated that we were going to call Mr. Clark today. He was just deposed Friday. Indeed, we just received yesterday the transcript of the deposition, given the weather conditions. I guess there was a little delay. We will examine Mr. Clark but we are not prepared to do so at this time.

Now if this is an attempt to bring in someone to detract from our examination of Mr. Massey—I hope that is not the case—and to address areas that are not relevant, that the witness—because to be quite candid with you, we're not examining him on records that he is not familiar with. If he says he's not, we leave it.

We will hear from Mr. Clark, but we're not going to split this up. We're going to examine this witness, he is key, he is important, because again it was alleged that he's the person that was responsible for bringing in the Madison account, and that's where we're going. We will address the work that he personally did, not whether he knew about the recap and when the recap was made. We will get to that and Mr. Clark will have an opportunity, but not now.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. Chairman—

Senator DODD. The point I'm trying to make, Mr. Chairman, is the question has been raised by Counsel here. He asked the question. We have a witness in the room who has been deposed.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it's very easy to ask a question that is not relevant or that is outside the scope of his knowledge and then we could get two or three or four different people in. I mean, that's just not what we are going to do. We are not prepared to call Mr. Clark in today. Indeed, I don't know why he's here. I don't think that we called him to be here today or indicated that he was going to be here today, so I think it's quite unusual.

It might not be insofar as he may have wanted to accompany his partner and his associate here to these hearings to provide comfort, but under no circumstances were we prepared to go forth with his information. We just got the deposition back yesterday, so we have not had an opportunity to prepare ourselves to examine Mr. Clark. We will ask Mr. Clark questions about the methodology of record-keeping, how records were kept, who gave the orders for the dissemination of various files, or for the destruction of files, and was it done in the ordinary course of business? So we will spend some time examining him.

Yes, Senator Moseley-Braun.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. Chairman, in the first instance, Mr. Massey has never been deposed and yet we're proceeding with an examination of him, and it seems to me that in terms of economy, that if Mr. Clark were asked questions today, that's not to preclude a more thorough and comprehensive examination of that witness at a later time, but I would make the basic point, Mr. Chairman, that if we are to conduct these hearings as actual fact-finding and not just political theater, I think it is important that we are able to wrap a ribbon around and conclude a particular line of questioning when the resources are available to us.

The fact that Mr. Clark is here, it seems to me again—obviously he can be called more than once. It would not preclude him being called at a later time if he were to fill in and answer that which Mr. Massey as a witness, again not having been deposed, can fully answer at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. There were no surprises about Mr. Massey being called today, and I don't think that my friends and colleagues on either side would proclaim that to be the case. Mr. Massey has given and we have received two sworn statements which are the subject of our review, statements that have been made about him, statements that have characterized his work, and I will not allow our focus to be diverted from what Mr. Massey knows, what he did, what business he conducted, how the business came about. We will focus on that.

Mr. Clark may be the managing partner but we are not interested right now in his testimony because we have not even begun to prepare our questions for him. We know he will be here, but to bring him in today would distract us from our main task, to ascertain the truthfulness of the statements and the characterizations that have been made concerning Mr. Massey's role in bringing in the Madison business and we will remain on this topic.

Now, I don't know what Mr. Clark can testify about with regard to bringing in the business. Maybe he is going to say that he knew that Mr. Massey was the reason they brought in that business. Well, he will have an opportunity to say that, but not at this time.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, one of the issues that's been raised very publicly by a number of people on the Majority side is the billing question as between Mr. Massey and Mrs. Clinton. That has been worked over heavily in the press.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Massey has testified—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Massey can address that and Mr. Clark can address that, and we could get that straightened out on this billings question which you're constantly making reference to, and I think inaccurate references are being made and misrepresentations, but I would like to get people at the table who can lay that out for us.

The CHAIRMAN. I'll be very happy to set aside sufficient time next week for Mr. Clark to come in and to answer any of those questions that remain open which Mr. Massey was not able to address. To be quite candid with you, I'm not interested in the recaps of the billing records because Mr. Massey indicates he has no knowledge of them. That's fine, and we're not going to waste the time of the Committee in an area that will divert attention from our main focus, which is what does he really know.

Senator SARBANES. I assume he knows about his billing in relationship to Mrs. Clinton's billing.

The CHAIRMAN. He knows about his billings and certainly he has testified about his billings. There is no question as to the records he has and billings he has. As it relates to the recaps, that is something he's not familiar with, and we will address that when Mr. Clark is called. That's no problem, and furthermore, we will bring him in here next week.

Senator SARBANES. Of course one way to address the recaps is to go behind them to Mr. Massey and other relevant persons.

The CHAIRMAN. That's fine. Mr. Massey certainly can and should answer, and I know he will, any question about his actual billings that he put down and he's responsible for. But you can't ask him questions about another witness. Why not ask him questions and say well, another partner knows about that so let's bring that partner in. So let's stay on the issue.

Again, we will bring Mr. Clark in. As a matter of fact, if he's here, we'll see if we can work out a time to accommodate him and his schedule for next week, possibly next Thursday. If he wants to do that, we'll be happy to have him here next Thursday, so we'll have ample time to get to all of the questions about the recap on the billing.

I think you should be accorded additional time obviously, so why don't you continue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were asked about the direct investment rule and information that you had learned about that rule. Now, Mr. Thrash at the firm was the partner who had been involved in the matter, to some extent, called IDC; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. That's apparent from the record, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you ever, to the best of your knowledge, have any conversation with Mr. Thrash about the direct investment rule?

Mr. MASSEY. As I testified earlier, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right. So there was a disconnect, to the best of your knowledge, as between any conversations that you had, in the context that you had them, about the direct investment rule and any work that Mr. Thrash may have been doing?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, we didn't give Madison regulatory advice as far as I know. We weren't their outside regulatory counsel.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think that is an important question that hasn't been addressed yet. It is correct, is it not, that the Rose Law Firm was not the principal outside lawyer for the bank; is that right?

Mr. MASSEY. It's my understanding, from the conversation that I have referred to in my testimony earlier with Mr. Latham, that another firm in town had a much more prominent relationship with the S&L.

Senator SARBANES. The bulk of the work was done by lawyers and other law firms, not the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't have personal knowledge of that, but that's my understanding.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the question that has been raised about document retention and files that are either existent or missing, these are transactions which occurred 10 and 11 years ago; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you aware—and this is a very important issue—are you aware from your own personal knowledge as to whether the detailed bills that went to the Madison Bank, relating to the matters that the Rose Law Firm worked on in 1985 and 1986, are in existence?

Mr. MASSEY. No, I'm not aware of their existence.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know that Mr. Clark or others at the Rose Law Firm have been advised or shown the records——

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —relating to the Madison bills?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Not just the time records that are before you, but prior to the discovery of the time records, do you have reason to believe, on the basis of your conversation with your managing partner and others at the firm, that those records have been shown by either officials of the FBI or the Independent Counsel to members of the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I'm not sure if those records are comprehensive and speaks to all of the bills, I'm not sure if that's correct, but I understand that some of the bills are in the possession of the various regulatory agencies that have been investigated.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. My question was not meant to say that every single bill for every month and every matter, but are you aware on the basis, not of your direct knowledge—I want to make that clear—but on the basis of what you have been told by others in your firm, including Mr. Clark, that these records, at least in part, are in existence and have been shown to members of the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. A question has been raised about the procedures for document retention in the firm; that is, every firm at some point will destroy records or put them on microfilm or do something else with them. Are you the person who could best inform us about what the procedures were, and are, at the Rose Law Firm with respect to document retention?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, my partner behind me has probably spent the better part of his life understanding and testifying as to document retention at our firm and his knowledge of it eclipses mine.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You're referring again to Mr. Clark?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, you were asked about other matters that Mrs. Clinton may have been working on. There have been statements by individuals associated with this Committee to suggest that the time reflected in—either timesheets or billing records of Mrs. Clinton reflects work done by Mrs. Clinton on the Castle Grande project.

Let me ask you, sir, whether you are the best person to interpret those time records from the Rose Law Firm among the partners who could provide information to this Committee regarding the interpretation of those bills as they relate to work done or not done on the Castle Grande matter?

Mr. MASSEY. I had no involvement in Castle Grande, so I would be happy to try to understand those entries and interpret them. Frankly, I think those are outside of my personal knowledge.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Massey, I want to raise questions about the issue of how Madison came to be a client, and also, who did certain work. The way I would like to begin, frankly, is to show a video of a press conference of the First Lady on the Whitewater affair on April 22, 1994, and then we'll work from that.

Senator DODD. So we get to have the First Lady here but not Mr. Clark; is that how it works?

PRESS CONFERENCE BY FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

THE WHITE HOUSE, APRIL 22, 1994

[FOLLOWING ARE EXCERPTS RECORDED BY THE NEW YORK TIMES]

Question: Since Whitewater's been in the news so much, I feel it's fair to ask you the same question I put to the President some time ago—and you were, are, a co-partner: Do you know of any money that could have gone from Madison to the Whitewater project or to any of your husband's political campaigns?

Answer: Absolutely not. I do not.

Question: Actually on this same theme, with your commodities profits, you know, it is difficult for a layman and probably for a lot of experts to look at the amount of the investment and the size of the profit. I mean, is there any way you can explain how you—

Answer: Well, I can certainly tell you what happened. And I appreciate your asking me about it, because I've tried to follow the accounting in the press about it, and I want to explain as clearly as I can what occurred.

Back in 1978, in October, one of our best friends, Jim Blair, who had been a friend of my husband's and mine for some time, talked to me about what he thought was a great investment opportunity. He is someone who has been an investor ever since he was a teenager with usually very good results. And he had followed closely what had been happening in the cattle market. And I only knew a little bit about that, although living in Arkansas, particularly northwest Arkansas, as I did, I was familiar with a lot of ranchers and people who were in the cattle industry. And when Jim said, "I think there's going to be a great opportunity to make money," and explained why and asked me what I thought we could afford to invest, I told him $1,000. So I opened an account at his very strong recommendation and proceeded to trade over the next months, until July.

You know, not all my trades made money. Some of them lost money. I talked to Mr. Blair very frequently. In fact, Jim would call me on a regular basis, and I would make a decision whether I would or would not trade. And then the trade would be placed. Often he placed it for me. And there was nothing wrong with that. He was on the spot. He was often in the offices of the broker.

I stopped trading in July 1979. And I did stop trading in large measure because I could not keep up with it. It takes a lot of nerve to be in the commodities trading, and I'd just found out I was pregnant. And so when he called again, I said, "You know, I just don't want to do this anymore." And I think he may have even called a few more times, saying: "You know, it's really still doing well. Trade again." I didn't, and I'm glad I didn't because he and other friends of mine who were trading ended up losing money. So it was a good investment offered by somebody who knew a lot who could provide a lot of good advice, and I was lucky and made the decision to stop when I did.

Question: Do you understand this—if maybe your broker might have, because of your position or your husband's, might have given you some kind of unfavorable or, you know, favored advantage?

Answer: There's really no evidence of that. I didn't believe it at the time. As I said, you know, I made and lost money in that commodities account. It was my money, it was at risk. The account was in my name, I got the reports. We've released all of the documents we could find from that period from that account. So, no, I had no reason to believe that. And as Mr. Leo Melamed, the former head of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, said when he looked at all of my trading records, there isn't any evidence that anybody gave me any favorable treatment. And even Mr. Blair, who ended up losing money, I think would find it very hard to argue that he got any favorable treatment. I just don't think there's any evidence there.

Question: Mrs. Clinton, you said you stopped trading in July of 1979. Could you talk about the second account that was opened?

Answer: Sure.

Question: There was a second account with the Stephens Company in which I think you invested $5,000. And at first the White House claimed you lost money on it, but later you put out documents showing you actually made $6,000 on it and didn't close it until a few months after Chelsea was born.

Answer: That's right. And I'm glad you asked that, because I really want to clarify it. I think there's been a lot of confusion. There were two accounts. The first account, the one that I was just talking about, was the Refco account. I traded in that from October 1978 to July of 1979, when I found out I was pregnant and I stopped trading. Now, I closed that account for good in October of 1979, and I took some of the money that I had made and put it into an account at Stephens. And at that point, I made that a discretionary account. My Refco account was a nondiscretionary account, which meant that I had to approve and give the go-ahead for every trade. In the discretionary account at Stephens, my broker made most of the decisions. I think he did a good job for me. He diversified the money that I gave him and put it into money markets and stocks and bonds, and $5,000 into some commodities.

Now what happened then is—in retrospect, as I've been able to reconstruct it now—is that my broker made these decisions. He checked with me maybe a couple of times a month, but because it was discretionary he did not have to get my approval. And so money would be moved from one investment to another investment. And during the course of the time between October of 1979 and probably May of 1980, he had me in and out of three different commodity accounts in much smaller numbers than what I had been in charge of doing in my Refco account.

In February of 1980, my daughter was born, at the very end of the month. And I remember talking to my broker sometime after that and said, "You know, I just want to get out of commodities altogether. I don't ever want to have to worry about it." So he got me out of the positions that I had been in, so that by May I was no longer doing any kind of commodity trading in the Stephens account. Now what happened, though, is that he took the money that I now know I made—I really didn't think I'd made any money in commodities—and he bought some stock, and he did some other things for me.

Now in the fall of 1980, my husband lost his election. We moved. So by 1981, when I gathered all my documents together to give to my accountant, I had a year-end statement from Stephens which did not report anything about commodities. I had a year-end statement from the Peavey Brokerage Company which reported a loss, and I had no year-end statement from either Clayton or the company called ACLI. So I think what happened is we bundled all of the documents we had, because I took all of the reports that I had, gave them to the accountant, and I believe that in the absence of a year-end statement the accountant and my husband and I missed the fact that we had actually made some money in the ACLI account.

Question: Do you remember that profit?

Answer: No. I did not remember that profit. I did not. And in fact, as you said, when some people looking at the records for me began looking at it originally, they looked at the records and they thought I'd had a $5,000 loss. And they came to me and said, "We think you had a loss which you didn't report." And I said, you know, I just don't remember. I thought I basically got out with what I put in. And then they went back and relooked at it again with, you know, more accountants, and they came up with the gain. So it was hard to find, apparently.

Question: With regard to the Refco account, just how did the procedure go? Did Mr. Blair basically recommend to you the transactions which you either said yes or no to? Or was it based more on knowledge that you had gained—as some of your staff have suggested—from reading the papers, or whatever? What happened?

Answer: Well, Brit, it was primarily Jim's suggestion. But I also did try to educate myself. You know, I did try to read some things. He actually gave me a few documents to read. Because he had this theory that because of the economy in the early part of the 1970's, a lot of cattle herds had been liquidated, so that there was going to be a big opportunity to make money in the late 70's. And he gave me things to read about that. And I did occasionally read, you know, publications like The Journal and others and, you know, I tried to educate myself because I took the responsibility seriously. But I relied primarily on his advice, because he really spent an enormous amount of time studying the market and talking to many more people than I ever could have—people who, you know, ran feedlots or bought beef for large supermarket chains. So he would talk to me, and he'd say: "Here's what I think is going on. What do you think?" Now, I did not make every trade he recommended. And certainly, by July—when I began to, you know, get nervous about it—I stopped taking his recommendations, because I just couldn't bear the risk anymore.

Question: Did it concern you at the time that because of his position with the company that he represented, that there was an ethical question raised by your accepting this level of assistance in a financial matter from him?

Answer: No, it did not. And the reason it didn't is that he and his wife are among our very best friends. My husband performed their marriage ceremony. I was the best person at the wedding. We are very close friends. And I found it a little bit surprising that anyone would suggest that, because in 1980, right during the time that this was all going on, when my husband ran for re-election, Tyson supported his opponent. So there's really no basis for suggesting it was anything other than what it was, which was a friend who made a suggestion—and not just to me, but to a number of people—which I think was, you know, very fortunate for me.

Question: You said that there was no preferential treatment in all of this. The records indicated that your account was short of money at various points. Were there margin calls? And did you meet any of those calls? And were you aware at any time that Refco was coordinating trades to drive prices up or down?

Answer: No, I was not aware of that, Andrea. I was told that after I stopped trading some months later. And I know there were lawsuits filed alleging that. I don't think any of that was ever proved, at least that I'm aware of. And when my position was under margin, I would either close out my position or use the equity that I had—and I think Mr. Melamed said, based on his review of the records, there were a couple of occasions when I was under margin. Nobody ever called and asked me for anything. They just, I guess, took the money that I had in the account and closed out the position. But that was the responsibility of the broker. And from what I know, they were doing so many trades and there was so much volume going through that I was a relatively small customer. I mean, it was very big money for me and my family, but it was a very small account, and I don't think they paid any attention to my particular situation.

Question: Why do you think that they gave you this treatment with you being such a small customer? Don't you think that was preferential treatment—

Answer: No.

Question: —based upon who you were and who your husband was?

Answer: No. I really don't believe that. I don't think there's any evidence of that. You know, from what I know about commodity trading and what I know about the cattle market during that period of time, they were just buying and selling on a huge basis, day in and day out. And I think that they may have not gotten around to the paperwork. They may have not thought it was worth it. They may have seen that I was a regular customer and that I covered my losses, that there was never an occasion when they really had to be concerned about it. I can't read their minds or speculate, but I had absolutely no reason to believe that I got any favorable treatment. And the fact that I closed the account out and took my money, whereas the people whom I knew were much bigger traders like Jim Blair and others—they lost money—and why would Jim Blair try to help me get favorable treatment that he couldn't get for himself? I mean, it doesn't make any sense to me at all.

Question: Mrs. Clinton, one of the things that has made all of this so controversial is the shifting accounts of what happened. Because initially the White House explained that you were consulting Blair and many others and reading The Wall Street Journal, and then later had to correct that. And we found out that Mr. Blair was in fact most often placing your trades for you, phoning the trades in. Why was the account—why did the account have to be corrected? Why was it not explained accurately the first time?

Answer: Well, Linda, I think it is because, you know, we're trying to reconstruct events of, you know, 15, 16, 17 years ago. There are a lot of people who are trying to help. But until relatively recently there wasn't any one person in charge of trying to get everything together and get the, you know, information as accurate as possible. I think the people in the White House did the best job they could. I think that we did the best job we could trying to remember things and oftentimes having to search to see whether we had any records. I mean, I don't know how many of you keep, you know, records from 1978 or 1979, but, I mean, we went through a lot of effort to try to see whether we had anything so that we could answer questions and then make things available. Sometimes we'd find part of something. Sometimes we'd then find the rest of it. So I appreciate and understand the concern about, you know, why we would have to add information or go back and say, "Well, this needs to be corrected."

But the fundamental facts have not changed. I mean, the fundamental facts are, as I have said: I opened an account with my money. I made the trades. It was non-discretionary. I took the risk. I was the one who made the decision to stop trading. And that I did rely on Jim Blair. I used some other advice as well, but he was my principal adviser in this.

Question: But that wasn't a question of documents, that particular fact, the fact that he was really driving the trading for you. I guess I wanted to re-ask that question again. Why—that would be something you would remember or not remember without documentary support—so, why was that fact not made clear? And were you essentially riding on his coattails when you traded?

Answer: No, I wasn't. I was riding on the money I invested. You know, I don't know how any of you make investment decisions, but I like to listen to people I know and trust who I think know what they're doing. And he was somebody who I very much thought knew what he was doing and was more than willing to share his information, not only with me but with many people: Members of his family and other of his friends. And it was for all of us a decision to put ourselves basically at the mercy of the market. And as Jim Blair found out, he wasn't always right. He lost a lot of money. And I was lucky—I didn't. But that was my decision.

Question: Mrs. Clinton, a number of your old friends in Little Rock—Warren Stephens, who I guess is an old friend; Curt Bradbury, Bill Bowen, people like that—had a meeting on March 31. And they decided that really Arkansas has taken a beating—portrayed, in the words of one of them, as a moral and ethical backwater—basically because people hear us saying, "It was done that way in Arkansas." How do you feel about what's happening down there and what's happening to those people who feel they're being hurt by events out of their control? And they feel that they're not really being—the State is not really being—defended by you and your husband. I wonder if you'd address that.

Answer: Well, I feel very bad about it, because I think Arkansas is a wonderful place and filled with some of the best people I've ever been privileged to know or work with. And I do think that many of the charges have been very unfair and have really lacked any historic or realistic context. I don't think it's necessary to point fingers at any other State in the Union to say that, you know, every place there are people who have problems and there are people who cause problems. And I think that, you know, the State of Arkansas is a place that has, you know, just so much to be proud of. So I hope that we can get back to a more realistic assessment of what goes on there.

Question: May I follow?

Answer: Sure.

Question: They've said—and specifically Bradbury and Mr. Stephens have said—that to a certain extent they feel you've brought this on yourself, the two of you, because of campaign statements about a decade of greed and just things that they feel, in their words, make it look like hypocrisy: That you were into go-go trading. You were trying, as you said, an opportunity to make money, just as they were. And they felt like they had been condemned by you—that people like that had been condemned by you during the campaign and that now you were being shown to be doing the things you spoke against.

Answer: Well, Curt and Warren have never said that to me, so I'll have to take your word for it. But I do think you raised an important question that I would like to talk about a little bit. You know, I was raised to believe that every person had an obligation to take care of themselves and their family. And that meant, you know, earning an income and saving and investing. I was raised by a father who had me reading the stock tables when I was a little girl, and I started doing that with my daughter when she was a little girl. I don't think you'll ever find anything that my husband or I said that in any way condemns the importance of making good investments and saving or that in any way undermines what is the heart and soul of the American economy, which is risk-taking and investing in the future.

What I think we were saying is that like anything else, that can be taken to excess. When companies are leveraged into debt, when loans are not repaid, when pension funds are raided—you know, all of the things that marked the excess of the 1980's are things which we spoke out against.

I think it's a pretty long stretch to say that the decisions that we made to try to create some financial security for our family and make some investments come anywhere near there. I also think that my husband and I made different choices than to concentrate on making money during the 1980's. We obviously wanted enough financial security to send our daughter to college and put money away for our old age and help our parents when we could. But we were primarily interested in, in his case, trying to provide opportunities for people in Arkansas and make a difference in their lives. What I tried to do both to help him and to work on behalf of children or education reform was what was really important to us. I think that is, you know, something that needs to be put again in a proper perspective.

Question: In the same vein, somewhat in the same vein, you were reported to have opposed a special prosecutor, at least in the beginning—and some of the release of tax documents—on the basis of privacy, that you felt you had a right to privacy. Do you think that that helped to create any impression that you were trying to hide something?

Answer: Yes, I do. And I think that is probably one of the things that I regret most and one of the reasons why I wanted to do this, because I've had to really do a lot of thinking the last couple of months. You know, again, I was raised to really believe that what was important was what you thought about yourself and how you measured up to the standards you set for yourself. And I think if my father or mother said anything to me more than a million times, it was don't listen to what other people say, don't be guided by other people's opinions, you know, you have to live with yourself. And I think that's good advice. I mean, I'm glad I got it as a girl growing up, and I've passed it on to my daughter. But I do think that that advice and my belief in it, combined with my sense of privacy—because I do feel like I've always been a fairly private person leading a public life—led me to perhaps be less understanding than I needed to of both the press and the public's interest as well as a right to know things about my husband and me.

So you're right. I've always believed in a zone of privacy. And I told a friend the other day that I feel after resisting for a long time, I've been re-zoned. You know, and I now have a much better appreciation of what's expected, and not only what I have done—because I am extremely comfortable and confident about everything that I have done—but about my ability to communicate that clearly and to give the information that you all need.

Now, to your other question, about the special counsel. I was not the only one of my husband's advisers who questioned the idea of a special counsel. I think that those of us who did were concerned about the precedent that would be set by having such an appointment made when none of the existing standards that had always been in place had been met. There was no credible allegation—you know all of the things that usually are required. So I was questioning of that. But the President made the decision that we needed to get on with the business he came to Washington to do and that this was an important step to take, and I respected that decision.

Question: Mrs. Clinton, do you know anything about Mr. Foster's death? Do you know what he wanted to tell the President that he didn't get to tell him?

Answer: You know, I don't know that he wanted to tell the President anything. That's the first I've heard of that. My memory is that the President actually talked to Vince Monday night, before he died, and when I talked with the President afterward he was stunned because the conversation was a very normal kind of a conversation. So I don't know.

Question: Well, I understood they made an appointment to talk not the next day but Wednesday, and that would have been the day after he died.

Answer: I don't know. I don't know.

Question: Mrs. Clinton, my question—I'd like a follow-up too. The first one has to do with Susan McDougal. She said that she brought the document of Whitewater over to you at the Governor's mansion. Did you receive all the documents? And if so, what became of them?

Answer: I don't believe that we received all the documents in that way. Over the past several years, we have made a very deliberate effort to try to obtain documents. And every document that we have obtained has been turned over to special counsel, no matter where it came from.

Question: My follow-up has to do with the death of Mr. Foster, the way his office was sealed or the people who were in it. There's been a lot of criticism of the papers in Mr. Foster's office—that some may have been removed.

Answer: Well, I know there's been a lot of concern and criticism about that. I cannot speak to that in any detail. But I know that the special counsel is looking into the circumstances surrounding Mr. Foster's death, and I assume he will issue a report about that which I hope will put all these matters to rest once and for all.

Question: You said that—just now—that you'd decided that $1,000 was as much as you could risk. Can you tell us what your understanding was of how much you could be at risk with the little amount of money that you and your family had then? We were told earlier that $1,000 was what you were asked to put in. And second of all, can you give us some explanation—given that a cattle contract at the time, just one contract, was $1,200—for the mystery of the $5,300 that was made really in the course of one day, or at least a few days, in the first trade?

Answer: No, I can't. I do not remember any of those details. I've given you every record that I have about that. The $1,000 was what I wanted to start with. And it was what I thought was a good beginning, a good investment for me. And once I had made the initial return that I did, I reinvested that. This was a roller coaster, and what I believed was that I was getting very good information and that I would end up making money. But there were a couple of days when I lost money. And I knew that I would be responsible for any losses that I suffered. But I did reinvest, and I covered the losses by closing positions. And then I eventually stopped trading.

Question: But when you first started with $1,000, did you believe you were putting at risk more than $1,000?

Answer: I believed that was certainly possible, yes.

Question: Then why did you take such a risky investment?

Answer: Because I didn't think it was that big a risk, because I thought that Jim and the people he was talking with knew what they were doing. And, you know, I've read a letter to the editor that somebody sent me from one of your newspapers, I think, which talked about a woman who invested $1,000 during the same time and made $750,000. Well, she had a stronger stomach than I did. I couldn't do that.

Question: The Whitewater development was set up, as you say, as a 50–50 partnership between the Clintons and the McDougals, meaning that you were liable for 50 percent of the losses or 50 percent of the gains. Yet, by your own accounting, you lost half or even maybe a third of what the McDougals lost. This is according to the Lyons Report. Doesn't that discrepancy represent some sort of a gift or gratuity?

Answer: No. And let me say that, yes, the ownership of the corporation was 50–50. The liability on the underlying debt was 100 percent for each one of us. I mean, there was no gift in that. When my husband and I signed that mortgage, and when we re-signed guarantees, we assumed the whole responsibility. I mean, if Jim had gone into bankruptcy early on, if Susan had left, we would not have only 50 percent of the obligation; we would have 100 percent of the obligation.

Question: But why was it that the McDougals lost so much more money than you did? I don't understand it.

Answer: I can't answer that. I mean, we gave whatever money we were requested to give by Jim McDougal. I mean, he was the one who would say: "Here's what you owe on interest. Here's what your contribution should be." We did whatever he asked us. We saw no records. We saw no documents. He was someone that my husband had known a very long time. He was someone who had been in the real estate business with many people we knew, including Senator Fulbright, and we just assumed that whatever he needed he would ask for. And we didn't have any information to the contrary.

Question: It's just that given that you were jointly and separately liable for all the debt and that you and your husband are both lawyers, that you would be so passive about a fairly substantial investment.

Answer: Well, we were not real estate developers, and Jim had a track record. And I wasn't a cattle expert; I trusted Jim Blair, and it worked out for me. And I wasn't a real estate expert, and we lost money. Those things happen.

Question: Mrs. Clinton, just to get back to Linda's earlier question. One of the things that has been driving this is either the lack of explanations or the shifting explanations. And in terms of the way that your commodities trading was first described: That you did the trades, you relied on some advice from Mr. Blair. Later it was revealed that Mr. Blair placed most of the trades, if not all of them. Can you explain what happened? Did you have a new recollection? Why the shift?

Answer: Well, if you just listen to what you said: I did the trades. They were my trades. I was responsible for them.

But I did them on the advice of Jim Blair. And very often he placed them for me. I'm not in any way excusing any confusion that we have created. I think we have created it because I don't think that we gave enough time or focused enough. I have been traveling, and I'm more committed to health care than anything else I do. I probably did not spend enough time, get as precise. Different people heard different things that I said, or by the time it got passed to the third or fourth person, or one member of the press would call somebody in the White House but somebody else would call another person. So I think that the confusion was our responsibility. We did not give you a focused place to come, and we did not spend the time necessary. There's not really a contradiction in what you said and what I said. But I can understand how somebody might assume that.

Question: Now that we're clearing up a lot of confusion, I'll ask you about one other thing that I've had problems with. During the campaign—I think it was right after the primary debate between Jerry Brown and your husband—you made a statement in, I think, a Chicago restaurant that you never did any regulatory work for Madison Guaranty. When the letter went to Beverly Bassett Schaffer about perhaps the legality of offering preferred stock, your name was at the bottom of that letter.

Answer: Right.

Question: Could you explain that?

Answer: Yes. I'm glad you asked that, because that's another thing that I feel has gotten confused in the telling. Let me just try to describe what happened there. When in 1985, I believe, maybe 1986, there was an effort made on the part of various financial institutions around the country to increase their capital net worth, they began looking for ways to do that. There was a very bright young associate in our law firm who had a relationship with one of the officers at Madison, a young man whom he had known. They began talking.

And if you'll remember what happened when the S&L's were deregulated, many States were left wholly unprepared: They did not have a regulatory system in place, they didn't even really have good laws. All of a sudden there was no Federal regulation to speak of, and so people were asking State governments whether things could be done.

Those two young men thought that it would be legal under Arkansas law for a savings and loan to issue preferred stock. But there was absolutely no law on that, and so they couldn't be sure. But they decided that what they wanted to do was to ask the person who regulated savings and loans whether it was legal—not if Madison could do it; that was the second step. The first step was could you even do it in Arkansas, whether you were A, B, or C, not just Madison.

When they talked about doing that, the young attorney in question needed a partner to serve as his backstop, and that was one of the rules we had in our firm. He knew that I knew Jim McDougal. He also knew that Jim had been a client of our firm in the past. This was not a new representation.

So he came to me and asked me if I would talk with Jim to see whether or not Jim would let the lawyer and the officer go forward on this project. I did that, and I arranged that the firm would be paid a $2,000-a-month retainer. And that was ordinary and customary. That would be billed against, unlike retainers of some really big law firms that if you pay the retainer they keep it, no matter whether they do any work for you. This was really an advance against billing. That was arranged.

The young attorney, the young bank officer did all the work, and the letter was sent. But because I was what we called the billing attorney—in other words, I had to send the bill to get the payment made—my name was put on the bottom of the letter. It was not an area that I practiced in, it was not an area that I really know anything, to speak of, about.

At that point, the regulatory authorities—namely, Beverly Bassett Schaffer—answered the legal question. And the legal question was: Yes, it is permissible under Arkansas law to issue this preferred stock. Then the question moved on to the second phase, in which I had no involvement that I have any memory of, or anyone that I have talked with. That was trying to determine whether Madison could go forward.

And I think that the Securities Commissioner acted absolutely appropriately. She answered the legal question: Yes, it is legal to do this. But as to Madison, she laid out conditions that had to be met for Madison to do it. And Madison could never meet those conditions, and so they never issued preferred stock. So the legal question was answered, but Madison got no benefit at all from the answer of that legal question.

Question: Can you clarify for us what documents were removed from Vince Foster's office after he died, and why they were there in the first place?

Answer: I can tell you what I know, which is I did not know Vince had any of the documents related to our personal business in his office until after his death. What I believe he was doing with them was serving as a coordinator among our private lawyers and accountants and certain Government officials, like the Office of Government Ethics, with respect primarily to our blind trust. Because there were all these questions that had to be answered and he was kind of the, you know, the coordinator. The private lawyers would talk to him; the Office of Government Ethics people would talk to him. I think that's why he had any documents of a personal nature in his office at the time of his death.

Question: Why did your chief of staff, Maggie Williams—why was she involved at all to remove these documents from his office within a day of his death?

Answer: I don't think that she did remove any documents. I think that what happened is that after Mr. Nussbaum reviewed the documents, and after he did so—as I recall; I was not here, I was in Arkansas—but I believe that was done in the presence of officials from the Park Police and maybe some other agencies. Then Mr. Nussbaum distributed the files according to whom he thought should have them. There were files related to ongoing work in the Counsel's Office that needed to be passed on to other lawyers, there were personal files of Vincent's that needed to go to his family, and there were these personal files of ours that went to our lawyers.

Question: Another question about this re-zoning of private and public lives: I'm wondering what kind of a toll, if any, this has taken on you, on your and the President's personal and political lives. And do you ever look in the mirror and wish that you'd just never got into this?

Answer: No, never. Never. I mean, some days are better than other days, but, you know, I think what has helped me in the last couple of weeks—aside from some good friends who have talked with me and helped me get re-zoned, if you will—is my belief that this is really a result of our inexperience in Washington, if you will; that I really did not fully understand everything that I wish now I had known. You know, it's a learning experience, sometimes a difficult one but I think one that both the President and I are anxious to do because we think that the reason he was elected was to deal with the big issues that we want the country to deal with. And so it is a little disappointing if we in any way contribute to a diversion from that. That's something I don't want to have happen in the future, and I'm certainly going to try to be more sensitive to what you all need, and what we need to give you, and do it in a more efficient and effective way the first time.

Because, as I said earlier, I feel very confident about how this will all turn out. This is not a long-term problem or issue in any way. But I don't want anybody to have the wrong impressions of either of us, and I don't want anything to interfere with doing what the people of this country need done.

Question: Mr. Clinton has spoken of the politics of personal destruction. Who do you believe are main perpetrators of that?

Answer: I don't want to get into that. I don't think that that bears any real useful discussion. I think that what's important is for us—not just the President and me but the entire Administration—to keep focused on what really will stand the test of history and what we really are trying to do for the country. And I can't really help it if some people get up every day wanting to destroy instead of build, or wanting to undermine. That's something that I try not to think about or dwell on, and try to do what I'm expected to do, which for me is working on health care.

Question: When was your last conversation with Vince Foster, and what was your understanding of the state of his mind?

Answer: You know, I've thought about that so many times. I don't think I had any conversation with him for at least 3 weeks before he died because, you know, we left for Tokyo somewhere around the Fourth of July is my best memory. And for about a week before that, I was very preoccupied with getting ready for the trip and doing the things you have to do. So I don't have any memory of having talked to Vince, and I never talked to him during the time that I was gone. And like every one of our friends, you know, we relived everything that happened or didn't happen. The people who talked to him, the people who spent time with him, they question whether they said the right thing, whether they could have done something else. The fact that I didn't talk to him makes me wonder whether if I had called him I could have picked up a clue. I just don't have any way of knowing.

Question: It supposedly had been depression, or so we were told, for a considerable period of time. Were you ever aware of that?

Answer: No.

Question: Did you have any clue what was going on?

Answer: No. Neither did people who, you know, spent the weekend with him or saw him in the office that day. You know, one of the things that I've spent a lot of time doing in the last months is trying to educate myself about depression. And my good friend Tipper Gore has been a great help on that, as have the people she's worked with on mental health issues. And I just hope that we get over the stigma that is still often attached to people admitting they need help or that they can't understand what's happening to them. I have no doubt now, in retrospect—and many of my friends now can reconstruct conversations or things they saw in Vince in those last weeks, but they didn't know, they didn't understand. And he didn't either feel comfortable or know himself. So maybe out of all of this tragedy and the aftermath, all of the speculation, maybe once we put to rest once and for all the fact that he committed suicide and that it was a tragic loss of one of the best people we've ever known, maybe it can do something to help other people understand what depression can do to you.

Question: Mrs. Clinton, what was your personal reaction when you learned that Jay Stephens would be representing the RTC in a case against Madison?

Answer: My personal reaction?

Question: About the fairness of that decision by the RTC to hire him.

Answer: Well, I didn't understand it. But I don't know Mr. Stephens, and I assume he will be a very fair and judicious lawyer. I guess that's what I would expect.

Question: You're not concerned about his being a Republican appointee and a U.S. Attorney appointed by President Bush?

Answer: Not if he abides by the Code of Professional Ethics and does his job professionally, I'm not, and you all keep an eye on him.

Question: Mrs. Clinton, do you think, with the benefit of hindsight, that it was improper for you and your law firm to represent the Federal Government against a family friend, Dan Lasater, and against accountants for Madison S&L without fully disclosing that you had been business partners with Mr. McDougal?

Answer: Well, Ann, I don't know what was disclosed and what wasn't. Those were not my cases. Those were cases that came to the firm to other lawyers. I've been told that things were disclosed quite extensively. And certainly in Arkansas, most things are known. And the relationship with Mr. McDougal, the fact that Mr. Lasater made campaign contributions to my husband, was certainly well-known. In both of those instances, I don't think I had anything to do at all with the representation against Madison on behalf of the Federal Government. At least I have absolutely no memory of having done anything on that case.

With respect to the Lasater case: I think out of that entire case I worked 2 hours, as a favor to one of the lawyers who was out of town who asked me to review a pleading. And I have specifically inquired whether there was any ethical conflict with respect to that and have been assured there was not. He was not a client that we had any obligation to. Thousands and thousands of people contributed to my husband. That is not considered disqualification. We were not personal friends or social friends. So I don't see any basis for saying that my work for him, as limited—or against him—as limited as it was, amounted to any kind of conflict.

Question: It's not just the press that has questions—sometimes the American citizens who talk to your husband at town meetings and all. And one young woman in Charlotte asked him a question I'd like to pose to you. She said that in the recent news reports about the First Lady's cattle futures earnings, and with all these Whitewater allegations, many of us Americans are having a hard time with your credibility. How can you earn our trust back? Is there a fundamental distrust of the Clintons in America?

Answer: Well I hope not. I mean, that would be something that I would regret very much. I do think that we are transition figures, if you will. We don't fit easily into a lot of our pre-existing categories. And let me speak just about myself. You know, I came to this role having worked my entire life. I mean, I started working in the summers when I was 13. I always worked. I worked through college. I worked through law school. That's what I did. And after I married, I continued to work. And after my daughter was born, with the exception of the 4 months I took off for maternity leave, I worked. Now, I took time off from work to do volunteer work, like I took a long time off from my law firm work to work on education reform, or I would take time off to work on my husband's campaigns, or I would be in Washington on the Children's Defense Fund. I would certainly take a lot of time, but I was fundamentally working.

And I think that having been independent, having made decisions, it's a little difficult for us as a country maybe to make the transition of having a woman like many of the women in this room, sitting in this house. So I think that the standards—and to some extent, the expectations and the demands—have changed. And I'm trying to find my way through it and trying to figure out how best to be true to myself and how to fulfill my responsibilities to my husband and my daughter and the country. So I do think that there is some of that.

And then additionally, as I have said earlier, I think that my fundamental belief in privacy and my feeling that we were being asked things and demands were being placed on us that had never been demanded of prior inhabitants of this house—unprecedented, in Arthur Schlesinger's words—didn't make sense to me. I couldn't quite figure it out, and I resisted that. And I think I resisted it in ways that may have raised more questions than they answered. And I just don't think that was a very useful road for me to go down, and I'm trying now to better understand how to fit my personal needs and my own personal beliefs and what I want to do with this role for the country and the contribution I want to make into a broader context so that I can be as forthcoming and accessible as you need me to be.

Senator MACK. I couldn't help but notice, at the beginning of that both you and I were grinning somewhat. I guess it was because you were referred to as a bright, young attorney?

Mr. MASSEY. Senator, which part were you grinning at, the bright part or the young part?

Senator MACK. Both.

On the videotape we just saw, Mrs. Clinton makes a very clear distinction about what she did and didn't work on. She expressly states that she had no involvement and no memory of working on the questions and issues about whether Madison could go forward with the preferred stock offering.

I believe that you earlier told us in answer to a question by Mr. Chertoff that Mrs. Clinton supervised and asked for updates on Madison's ability to do a preferred stock offering and their ability to have an in-house broker-dealer arrangement; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Senator Mack, the time records reflect some time on her part that I would attribute to billing attorney-type supervision, and I think it would have involved asking me where we were on particular matters on which I was working, and I'm telling her, and sometimes asking for correspondence.

Senator MACK. But that would include both the preparation, if you will, of the letter, the April 30th letter, and then issues related to preferred stock—the preferred stock in broker-dealer?

Mr. MASSEY. I would have to look at her entries to tell you. There may be an entry where she looked at the letter. I'm just not—is that your question, sir?

Senator MACK. I don't think I have a question about whether she looked at the letter. It's a question of whether she did work on the preferred stock or the broker-dealer. And I think your testimony in response to Mr. Chertoff's question was that she did.

Mr. MASSEY. I'll tell you, my impression which is not varied by the timesheets was that these were primarily one-man jobs, and I did primarily all of the research, writing, drafting, and so forth. Mrs. Clinton had a role—obviously she had a role in those matters. I view it as a supervisory role. In terms of who was in the trenches and doing the work, Senator, it was me.

Senator MACK. I am a little curious about the supervisory role. Why Mrs. Clinton? She also said in the tape we all just saw that this is an area she didn't have any expertise in. Why would she have been the backstop? Why wouldn't you have gone to a partner, for example—I guess, was it a securities section in the firm or transaction section, or what did you refer to it as?

Mr. MASSEY. We called it a security section.

Senator MACK. Why didn't you have an attorney in that section of the law firm as being the backstop?

Mr. MASSEY. Well, I am not sure what she meant by "backstop." I would take it to mean we had a policy. Mr. Chertoff was wise in telling me not to put my words in other people's mouths. These are her words. My impression is she means billing attorney because at the time, in 1985 and today, we had a policy that first-year, second-year lawyers couldn't serve as billing attorney, couldn't open their own matter and bill the clients.

Senator MACK. How many partners outside of your section were billing attorneys in other matters that you dealt with?

Mr. MASSEY. It's—over 11 years, it's hard to count, but it occurred, it occurred. Other people would come to me with areas that involved my specialty—

Senator MACK. I'm thinking now specifically in your case when you were an associate. What I'm gathering from your answer is that it was not uncommon for an associate in the transaction section to have litigating partners being billing attorneys on their work?

Mr. MASSEY. Sure, not uncommon.

Senator MACK. I'm curious again about—you have pretty much said to us, from your perspective, you did not bring this account to the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, what I've tried—and I've testified to this and have told reporters this since this issue came up in 1992, and my position has not changed. I don't have all the facts to make that determination. I think that's what this Committee is here for.

I think it's in the client's—I think it's fundamentally the client's own judgment as to why they came to my firm. And as far as I'm concerned, if the client says they came because of me, they came because of me. If they say they came because we had a pretty building, then they came because we have a pretty building.

Senator MACK. Do associates of law firms make efforts to get accounts?

Mr. MASSEY. I did.

Senator DODD. Absolutely. They better. You are going to be an associate the rest of your life.

Mr. MASSEY. All the associates back home—that's right—to all the associates back home, my answer is yes.

Senator MACK. So I gather from my friends on the Committee who are attorneys that it is something that's expected of associates, to get business for—and it's probably things, then—it's considered to be important, it does have some reflection on whether you become a partner.

Mr. MASSEY. It is more important as a partner than it is as an associate.

Senator MACK. My question would be do you remember the first account that you got for the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Where I knew it was mine? Yes, sir. Where it was unquestioned, yes, sir, I do.

Senator MACK. So what you're saying, in your mind, this was not your account?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't recall feeling like this was my—that I killed this deer.

Senator MACK. I have been in the banking business as you-all know, and I know that there's an important aspect to the banking business about trying to get new accounts. I also remember when I was responsible for bringing business into the bank, and so that was why I was curious as to whether it was important and it was something that you would remember. And basically by what you've said, as far as you're concerned, this was not your account?

Mr. MASSEY. I didn't have a big part when they came in. Maybe I should have.

Senator BENNETT. If I might. I know people who take credit and are absolutely sure in their mind for bringing in business that they didn't bring in, so it's refreshing to have somebody as candid as Mr. Massey not try to take that credit.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator MACK. If I could—and I would gather, then, though, that your paycheck did not reflect that this was your account?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, we didn't—we weren't compensated as associates based on whether we brought work in or not. It sort of depended on the will of the partners.

Senator MACK. And if the Chairman will indulge me one moment more.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator MACK. The other thing—I had to leave the room a moment ago so I may have missed the point, but I think there was the issue raised about—and I think your response was something like it was a slam dunk, having to do with this was a straight legal question and there's really no question about whether this could be done or not. And I guess that was all done, and, again, I apologize for not being here at that particular moment.

I guess the question was being raised to show there was no attempt on the part of Mrs. Clinton to influence Ms. Bassett with respect to the letter that would come back to the firm, and here's my point. I really again just draw this on having been in the banking business for a number of years prior to coming here. I must say to you it's been my experience that there never is such a thing as a slam dunk when it comes to dealing with regulators.

Mr. MASSEY. That's a fair point.

Senator MACK. I suspect that's an experience that you've developed over the years, that there isn't. I guess what I'm saying here is I can't help but think as there were discussions in the firm about how to proceed with the issue of getting approval, that there were questions asked about well, what can we do that can be most effective in getting the kind of answer we want for our client. And so I don't think it is beyond question that there was the possibility that when Mrs. Clinton made that call to Ms. Bassett, it was just kind of a way of saying to someone who, only 4 months prior to that, had been appointed to that position by her husband, oh, by the way, there's something coming down from our law firm that's fairly important to our client.

And that's the reason that I raised that, and again, it is only from the perspective that there never is a slam dunk. There is always a way that regulators are going to raise questions.

Mr. MASSEY. Senator Mack, I have clients back home to whom I have told things have been slam dunks before and had those words back in my face. I'll say that I agree with that. I do believe with respect to the preferred stock matter, it was, as I testified, I believe that it was—granted, there's always discretion, but I believe that it was a pretty easy, easy answer, and I also believe that the broker-dealer matter, the other matter that I worked on for Madison, I would have told you I thought it was a slam dunk, and we had a real hard time with the regulators.

Senator MACK. All right.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Dodd.

Senator DODD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I'm going to take, if I can, just a couple minutes to express some general comments and thoughts. I appreciate the testimony of our witness here who is, as I see it and listened to over the last hour or so and sum it up, that the person in the trenches, to use your own language, on this matter was the witness before us who did a one-man job basically with Mrs. Clinton providing some supervisory role here.

A lot has been made of the 60 hours, as I calculate it, and a rough calculation, billable hours over 15 months by a law firm on an individual basis could be in the neighborhood of 3,200, 3,500 hours, maybe a little less, but roughly in that category. Sixty hours is not exactly what you'd call extravagant at all.

And then, in terms of how the client came into the law firm, it's unclear. As you pointed out, Mr. Massey, that would largely depend on how the client saw the matter. You don't recall specifically bringing it in, but you don't deny that you might have been involved and somehow had some influence on the client's decision to seek out the Rose Law Firm. That's the sum and substance of what I've heard you say here this morning.

Senator SARBANES. You did talk to Latham about it, didn't you?

Mr. MASSEY. I pitched the business to Latham.

Senator SARBANES. Pardon?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I did.

Senator SARBANES. You made a pitch to Mr. Latham?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I did.

Senator DODD. I didn't hear that earlier. So you did make a pitch to the client?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator DODD. Well, Mr. Chairman, I thought with the beginning of the new year here, I would express some general views because so much has happened in the last couple of weeks.

In addition to a real blizzard in town, we have had a blizzard of allegations that have been made back and forth, and I would be less than candid, Mr. Chairman, if I didn't express my deep concern over the direction that the Committee has taken in the last couple of weeks. There's no doubt in my view as we move deeper into the Presidential campaign season, the Committee has become more partisan. The accusations made by some of the Majority and some employed by the Majority have grown consequentially wilder and more vituperative. Unfortunately, the recent pattern seems to be that as soon as the public attention starts to drift from these hearings due to a lack of any new revelations or any new evidence of wrongdoing, reckless charges and accusations have been made in order to generate new headlines.

Never mind that virtually in every instance, in every instance, the facts turn out to prove these accusations false or so overblown that the original allegation bears little resemblance to the truth. Perhaps in normal times we might write this exercise off to politics as usual in this town, but as so many in the Majority are fond of pointing out, these are not normal times.

I think that it says something about the priorities of those who are running Congress today that we have managed to find time to have more than 30 hearings on Whitewater, hundreds of hours, while there's been a grand total of one hearing, one hearing, on the proposed cuts in the Medicare program. While we spent 7 months poring over the minutia of events, 2 to 15 years ago in some instances, we cannot seem to find the time for Congressional hearings to review Medicaid cuts that will affect health insurance for millions of children. Nor do I think I'm alone in finding it just a little distasteful that thus far, we have spent nearly $30 million, $30 million, for all the sundry investigations while Congress cannot seem to find the will to fund many vital programs or keep the Government open.

Mr. Chairman, I have tried and I know you have for over 7 months to join together to avoid allowing these hearings to become a political sideshow. But the course that this Committee has taken in the last several weeks leaves no doubt that we have abandoned any attempt at impartial fact-finding and are now fully engaged in the Presidential election battle.

The Majority's recent outlandish allegations and innuendoes about the First Lady in the press are but the latest, and perhaps the most repugnant, of a long series of dry holes that we have dug since July.

First, there was the Helen Dickey phone call which turned out never to have happened. Then there was the mystery phone number that turned out to be a trunk line for the White House to be used when the main number was busy. Then there were allegations last December of the new Vince Foster files which turned out to have been in the possession of the Committee all along. Then there were the allegations that the SBA had interfered with the indictment of David Hale when, in fact, the SBA moved aggressively with its investigation and Hale was indicted in record time.

I have also been dismayed by the Committee's unwillingness to release the results of the so-called Stephens' Report, prepared for the RTC after nearly 2 years at a cost of $4 million by a prominent Republican, in which the Clintons were exonerated of any civil liability with regard to the failure of Madison.

Last, there was the long-anticipated testimony of Jean Lewis, who was supposedly going to show that she was muzzled by the Clinton Administration. In fact, her testimony showed that she was biased against the President from the start, and that her motivations were questioned as early as 1992 by the Republican U.S. Attorney in Little Rock, the FBI, and more recently, by the Independent Counsel.

Almost a month ago, Mr. Chairman, I requested and obtained unanimous consent to have the Stephens' Report made a part of this Committee's public record. However, I found out this morning that the Committee has been unwilling to release the report to the press. I find it a little odd, to say the least, that the Committee makes much ado about supposed failures of the White House to turn over documents while it refuses to release voluminous documents that strongly buttress the Clintons' statements about Whitewater.

In light of this information vacuum created by the Committee, I will take this opportunity to read some of the reports' conclusions into the record at this time. I quote from the report:

Therefore, on this record, there is no basis to assert that the Clintons knew anything of substance about the McDougals' advances to Whitewater, the source of the funds used to make those advances or the source of the funds used to make payments on bank debt.

On this record, there is no basis to charge the Clintons with any kind of primary liability for fraud or intentional misconduct. This investigation has revealed no evidence to support any such claims. Nor would the record support any claim of secondary or derivative liability for the possible misdeeds of others.

To hold one liable for conspiracy or aiding and abetting, the RTC must plead and prove the elements of these theories. These elements include a general awareness of the wrongful acts being committed by others and an intention to assist in the commission of the primary offense. There is no evidence here that the Clintons had any such knowledge or intent.

And I underscore the point that they made.

Therefore, pending the results of the criminal case, it is recommended that no further resources be expended on the Whitewater part of this investigation.

I would also like to ask, Mr. Chairman, unanimous consent that the Committee make the report available to the press at the conclusion of this hearing. If there are confidentiality concerns, then I would request that the Chairman and the Ranking Member and their Counsels meet with the appropriate officials to develop a process which can allow the report to be made public.

We should pay careful attention to the key phrase of that conclusion: No evidence, no knowledge, no liability. The bottom line of this report points to one thing. No motive. While this report does not necessarily constitute the final word on Whitewater, no one has disavowed its findings which indicate that there's no reason for the Clintons to have covered up, obstructed, misled, delayed, or been anything less than forthright and cooperative.

Without a motive, Mr. Chairman, there's nothing to hold these conspiracy theories together, other than political or personal enmity against the President and the First Lady. And this leads me to my last point, and that is the most recent, outrageous accusations made on national television against the First Lady by some of the Majority staff of this Committee.

I commend you, Mr. Chairman, in refusing to engage in name-calling and for maintaining a basic level of respect of the First Family that is due them regardless of political party. And I also commend you, Mr. Chairman, for avoiding on Larry King, Tuesday night that you will—avowing rather that you will continue to operate with the dignity for which you have been rightly praised.

Yet that same night as you were making that avowal on Larry King's show, Majority Counsel appeared on ABC News, and on Nightline, stating, and I quote him, "The First Lady's fingerprints are all over the transaction which bank regulators said was fraud."

Mr. Chairman, the evidence in our possession leads us to no such conclusion, and it is certainly unfair to make any kind of conclusions before we've had a single day of hearings on the subject matter. But perhaps the Majority staff has prejudged this matter without a hearing of a single witness to testify, in which case we should adjourn these hearings now and simply allow the staff to file its report, since they seem to feel there's nothing to learn from any of these further hearings, especially if it is exculpatory.

But if the Majority staff has gone beyond what the Chairman has concluded, and have wrongly represented the views of the Majority Members, then I hope that my colleagues will take this opportunity to correct those staff statements and to set the record straight.

Mr. Chairman, you know that I have the highest respect for you as a colleague and a friend, and I certainly wish that I didn't have to start off the new year on this note. But the Committee's recent history leaves no doubt to this Member that we are no longer impartial Senators serving on a Senate panel, but we have become players in the opening act of the 1996 Presidential campaign. Mr. Chairman, I will yield back my time to Mr. Ben-Veniste if any remains.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, with regard to the RTC report, we certainly have no objection to asking that that be made part of the record. As it relates to its release, I believe that it has already been widely circulated, and if there is no objection, I will ask that it be released. As it relates to the findings contained in the report, I believe that it is rather clear that it does not exonerate anyone, but only makes some determinations about whether pursuing possible litigation would be cost-effective.

In addition, I would note that various witnesses were not available, and more importantly, that key documents, documents that have just recently come into our possession, were not available to the RTC. As a matter of fact, I believe the report should be put out—

Senator DODD. As you know, Mr. Chairman, there have been requests for the report and we have been told by the Committee that it could not be released.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe at this time, given the wide circulation, whether officially or unofficially, that the entire report should be released.

Senator DODD. You understand my point, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly I do.

Senator DODD. A lot of accusations get made. Here is a $4 million report by a Republican law firm out there spending 2 years on it, and all these other accusations get made. Here's a report that says something else they concluded. It doesn't end up in the public domain.

The CHAIRMAN. It does. However, so that we remove that, and people will have to make their own judgments about what the report concludes and the basis for its conclusions, and I would indicate to you that there are reservations. And one of the things that I will ask is that we forward—and I'm certain that they already have the documentation that has recently come into our possession, but we will indicate to the RTC our hope that they would review this matter because the new documents give them additional information that they did not have.

I believe there may be certain legal rights that they may have now that they didn't have at that point in time. I don't want to go further because that could be characterized as unfair to people, but we will ask them to examine whether this new documentation would provide them with the basis to make a recommendation to pursue some course of legal action for recovery.

Let me also indicate that I am not suggesting against the First Family, but I do believe that there is some possibility of liability. I don't want to go further, but I think we should make it part of the record, and we certainly will make it available.

Let's see. Senator Shelby and then Senator Bennett.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR RICHARD C. SHELBY

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Chairman, thank you, and I appreciate you continuing with these hearings.

Mr. Massey—

Mr. MASSEY. Good morning.

Senator SHELBY. —how long were you working at the Rose Law Firm before you came in contact with Mrs. Clinton on a work project?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I came to the firm for a few months in May 1984.

Senator SHELBY. Was this 1984 when you came to the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. I passed the bar and got on the letterhead in August 1984.

Senator SHELBY. 1984.

Mr. MASSEY. And so the matter—the time records indicate that the first matter was in April 1985, so that would be approximately 8 months.

Senator SHELBY. About how many lawyers were in the law firm at that time in your best judgment?

Mr. MASSEY. Forty, 45.

Senator SHELBY. Forty lawyers more or less?

Mr. MASSEY. Forty-five.

Senator SHELBY. That's partners, associates, and so forth?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, total lawyers.

Senator SHELBY. What was the first matter that you worked with Mrs. Clinton on?

Mr. MASSEY. I think this was it.

Senator SHELBY. And this being the Madison Savings?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I'm sorry. The preferred stock issue with respect to Madison Savings & Loan, I believe was my first one.

Senator SHELBY. How did this come about? Did she ring you, come to your office, or you go to hers?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, as I've testified earlier, I would like to be more help on the chronology of the events, but I don't recall precisely how that all worked. Whether I got called, whether she called me, whether she came to my office, whether I went to her office, I don't have a recollection.

Senator SHELBY. When you worked with her, did you work under her supervision, so to speak?

Mr. MASSEY. With respect to this, I would say technically, that's correct.

Senator SHELBY. She was a partner, you were a new associate at that time; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. So in any law firm relationship like that, you have a partner that you are working with. In this case, was it Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, as the time records indicate, and again, I have no reason to doubt them, Senator Shelby, there were other partners within my section on whom I think I relied for technical advice. As you'll see, I had conferences, and there were experts on statutory interpretation in my section, there were experts on Regulation D, various matters relevant to this issue. Mrs. Clinton was the billing attorney and had a relationship with me such that she needed to know what I was doing so she could be prepared to update the client at any time.

Senator SHELBY. She needed to know at all times what you were doing, did she not? You were a young attorney under her supervision. She was the partner, and as you just said, the billing attorney, the one that billed out the money or the time to get the money back in the firm——

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I'm fortunate enough to have——

Senator SHELBY. —is that right?

Mr. MASSEY. I would like to give you a bit more thorough answer. I'm fortunate to have clients with whom I have a billing relationship, and I would say a lot of it depends on the matter and the lawyer working on it. Sometimes I'll let a lawyer work, a senior associate very skilled at a particular matter. I frankly don't keep much track of them. Sometimes I'll let him run. Sometimes I keep a pretty tight rein.

Senator SHELBY. During the time you were working on Madison under the supervision of Mrs. Clinton as a senior partner and the billing partner, how many times a week would you talk with her about what you were doing, or what she had you doing for Madison?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I would like to give you specific numbers. I think the timesheets or the time in these memoranda shows that I had a number of conversations with her about the Madison matter as I was working on it.

Senator SHELBY. And would you call it a substantial number of times?

Mr. MASSEY. The numbers are the numbers, sir. I mean——

Senator SHELBY. What was your impression of Mrs. Clinton? You were a young associate, she was a partner, well-educated woman. Would you agree to that?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Was she detail oriented?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Was she—you'd say very bright?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. A good memory?

Mr. MASSEY. I would expect so.

Senator SHELBY. You would not expect——

Mr. MASSEY. She's a very smart person.

Senator SHELBY. And very detailed?

Mr. MASSEY. I would expect so, yes, sir. I would say I haven't practiced with her enough to give you a definitive answer on that, but I think so.

Senator SHELBY. You worked with her for how long during this time under her supervision?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, my involvement——

Senator SHELBY. A year or so?

Mr. MASSEY. Less than that. I think my involvement began in April, and I think it tapered off after about December, so it was about 8 months. There was some time afterwards, of course.

Senator SHELBY. If the billing records that you keep referring to as the definitive thing here——

Mr. MASSEY. I have no reason to doubt them. They're better than my memory.

Senator SHELBY. Billing records are basically definitive in any law firm, are they not, as far as you go back and you see what you have done, and what you did for whom?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that would be the place I would look.

Senator SHELBY. If the billing records showed that a person did about 60 hours of work over 15 months, including contacts with 68 of a company's executives, other lawyers in the law firm and State regulators, would you call that substantial work?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, that's a—"substantial" relative to one of our large clients?

Senator SHELBY. Sure.

Mr. MASSEY. Understand, this was never a large client of ours.

Senator SHELBY. This would not be minimal work. It's not something you'd brush aside, is it?

Mr. MASSEY. I would prefer to say that the numbers are the numbers. In my own mind, it's a significant amount of time. Is it substantial or minimal, I don't really——

Senator SHELBY. Thank you. Sure. So if Mrs. Clinton said that she didn't spend any time to speak of on Madison, this would be contrary to the billing records, would it not?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm not aware of all of her statements with respect to her matters——

Senator SHELBY. But if she did say that?

Mr. MASSEY. The records indicate she had some time——

Senator SHELBY. The records speak for themselves, don't they?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. The records show, as you have indicated, a substantial amount of work for Madison Savings and billed by Mrs. Clinton; that's the record, isn't it?

Mr. MASSEY. The record shows a number of hours that can be quantified.

Senator SHELBY. Last, you would think—your judgment would be Mrs. Clinton had an excellent memory for detail?

Mr. MASSEY. I would expect so.

Senator SHELBY. Well, you worked with her.

Mr. MASSEY. She's a very, very smart lady; very smart person.

Senator SHELBY. She asked good questions, tough questions, supervised you well?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. My experience with her is she is a top drawer lawyer.

Senator SHELBY. Very detailed?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, as are all top drawer lawyers.

Senator SHELBY. And an excellent memory?

Mr. MASSEY. I would expect so.

Senator SHELBY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ROBERT F. BENNETT

Senator BENNETT. Don't we go to the other side, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. No, we still have some time.

Senator BENNETT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Massey, you made an interesting comment which I want to follow up on. When pressed as to why the account came in, you said it is up to the client to say why they hired the firm. And the client, I suppose, here is ultimately Mr. McDougal; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I am not—I want to go back over a couple of points in my testimony. My contact was with John Latham, and when I asked him for the business, he said McDougal is the guy to decide. So my judgment would be yes, he was ultimately the owner of the institution, and he was the client.

Senator BENNETT. I'd like to read from The Los Angeles Times the first public statement of Mr. McDougal as to why he hired the firm, and I will try to be fair and read the entire relevant portion. Quoting from The Los Angeles Times, the matter first became an issue during last year's Presidential campaign when it was disclosed that Hillary Clinton had represented the savings and loan in an appeal for favorable action by the State Securities Commissioner, an appointee of her husband, the Governor. What had not been previously reported was McDougals' explanation for hiring the Governor's wife. He provided this account in a recent interview with the Times.

Early one morning about 9 years ago, McDougal answered a knock at his office door from a winded and sweating Clinton, out on one of his morning jogs. Clinton was then struggling to retire campaign debts and to make ends meet on his $35,000-a-year salary. The Governor expressed concern about his family's financial condition and told McDougal that "things were tight," requesting that the savings and loan send some business to Hillary Clinton through her law firm.

"I asked him how much he needed, and Clinton said 'about $2,000 a month,'" McDougal said. Later that day, the Madison Guaranty owner said, he directed an S&L executive to immediately put Hillary Clinton's Rose Law Firm on retainer for that amount.

"I hired Hillary because Bill came in whimpering they needed help," McDougal told The Times. He said he had no specific legal work in mind when he hired Hillary Clinton.

McDougal said he recalled the event vividly because he was so uncomfortable in the meeting—not over the retainer issue, but because throughout that morning conference, Clinton sat sweating in McDougal's new leather desk chair, an expensive gift from his wife.

There is no dispute that Hillary Clinton subsequently went on retainer for Madison Guaranty at $2,000 a month. But White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton never sought business for his wife.

"The President had nothing to do with it," Myers said. "He never solicited business for the Rose Law Firm or his wife. This never happened."

So we have a dispute as to whether Mr. McDougal is telling the truth, but Mr. McDougal at least is on record with reporters from The Los Angeles Times as saying he made the retainer because Mr. Clinton requested it.

Now, Mr. Massey, as the newspaper report states, there's no dispute that the retainer was paid?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Senator BENNETT. And the billing records that I have seen and have focused on have said that that portion of the retainer that was charged directly to Mrs. Clinton's billing hours was approximately $7,200. I've added that up before. We don't need to take the time to add it up again. I think it's still going to add up the same way it has; $2,000 a month for 15 months comes to $30,000.

From the billing records I have seen, $7,200 is the highest figure out of that $30,000 attributed to any one individual. I added up that which was attributed to you, and it is about $5,500. The two of you clearly dominate. After that, there are other lawyers who have lower amounts, but the number one amount is $7,200 out of $30,000, and not 60 hours out of 3,500 hours, but $7,200 out of $30,000, and in your case, $5,500 out of $30,000. Between the two of you, you come close to 50 percent of the total billings.

I see you're scrambling around here. Is this—I don't want to try to leave an impression that's not true. I want to establish, is it, in fact, true that roughly 50 percent of the time billed for this retainer was put in by either you or Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. MASSEY. I haven't looked at the numbers so I trust your math, trust it is probably better than mine. The only thing that rung a bell in my mind was the reports we've now received, I think, a total fee of $21,000.

Senator BENNETT. Of $21,000—

Mr. MASSEY. Some of the retainer ultimately was returned.

Senator BENNETT. OK. So the $7,200 for her constitutes a third of the total billed?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator BENNETT. The largest amount billed by any attorney. Well, I just have one observation, and I appreciate the Chairman's indulgence.

At the time this deal was made, no one thought Mr. McDougal was a crook. At the time the retainer was accepted, no one thought that this deal was going to go sour or that Mr. McDougal was going to be in the kind of legal trouble he's in. This is a legitimate deal with a legitimate client. The rainmaker presumably is Mrs. Clinton and to me, it's logical that Mrs. Clinton would do most of the work and bill most of the time.

And I have the suspicion, watching the replay of the tape that Senator Mack put up, that some very bright political consultant after the fact recommended that you try to downplay Mrs. Clinton's involvement here and pretend that it wasn't as big as it really was because now we know that McDougal is a crook, and we don't want Mrs. Clinton to look like she had anything to do with him.

If I had been advising the Clintons on the case, I would say at the time the deal was made, it was a legitimate client and a legitimate deal and she did legitimate work for it and she's not about to apologize for it. And I think somebody led her astray and caused her to say statements that are currently now coming back in the kinds of journalistic attack that she's seen.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Massey, in terms of the number of hours put in, you were by far the lead attorney on these Madison matters that you dealt with, not the billing, the number of hours; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, with respect to the broker-dealer and preferred stock issues; as you know, there were six matters in all——

Senator SARBANES. But with respect to the matters on which——

Mr. MASSEY. —but with respect to these two matters, I'm sure that's true.

Senator SARBANES. Of course, you billed at a much lower rate?

Mr. MASSEY. That's right.

Senator SARBANES. You were a first-year; right, first-year or second-year associate?

Mr. MASSEY. First year. I think I was billing at, according to the records, $65 an hour.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Moseley-Braun.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Massey, I don't know if this question has been asked or not, I don't think it has, but as a junior associate, your billing rate was a lot less than Mrs. Clinton's; is that not correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Senator, according to the records, hers was approximately $120 during this time period and mine was approximately $65.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. So the dollar numbers wouldn't exactly work out, if you both billed the same amount in dollars, that would represent a lot less work on her part than on yours; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. That would be the math, yes, ma'am.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. According to the billing records, on the two matters on which you both worked, the stock offering and the joint partnership, which were the two that you both worked on together among these, according to that, you put in some 75.4 hours, and Mrs. Clinton put in 18.5 hours; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. If that's what the records say, ma'am. I'm not looking at them now. That sounds about right.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. So really, on the issues that you both worked on together, you put in four times the number of hours and a great deal more time?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, ma'am.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. And so, I guess it's kind of difficult to ask you about the analysis of the time records because Mr. Clark, who actually was involved with these records hasn't been allowed to testify today, and he really is in a better position to analyze the numbers of who did what and when; would you agree with that?

Mr. MASSEY. Can I say something? There was an exchange a minute ago that, just for the record, there was an implication—I don't remember how it came about—that Ron's presence, the managing partner of my firm's presence was somehow improper. And just for the record, I want the Committee to know Ron is here at my request. He and I discussed this. We wanted to make every—we knew that the records had just come out. We knew that they might become an issue, and we wanted to make him available to answer questions that I couldn't answer because we want to help you get to the bottom of all these things. So Ron is here representing the Rose Firm to help answer questions, and that's the only motivation as far as I'm concerned—

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. In your mind, he would be helpful to this Committee in its work if he were to testify, at least to answer our questions that you can't answer?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm not saying that—I'm not the Chairman of the Committee and you have your agenda and you want to cover some issues today. I just wanted to say that Ron was here so that we, as the Rose Firm and we are the only two partners here who are partners of the Rose Firm, that we could between the two of us answer any questions you might have. I think we are both still available to do that. Now, if you choose to avail yourself of us or not, that's your choice.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I will say that we have had something to do with that process. Two days ago we began to make the request that Mr. Clark be added to the panel. And since Mr. Clark was willing to come to Washington, we thought it would be a good idea and have had an interchange which Senator Moseley-Braun probably is not aware of as between the Minority and the Majority staff on this issue.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. That's good. I just want to ask one final question of Mr. Massey, and it goes to the question of "significant amount of time," what was or was not a significant amount of time, and certainly that is, when you put the word "significant" in, you're talking about a judgment in many instances—

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, ma'am.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. —a value judgment or subjective judgment. But in your own mind, would you say that you put in a more significant amount of time than Mrs. Clinton on this issue?

Mr. MASSEY. Sure, that is what the records show, on these two issues.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Thank you.

Mr. MASSEY. I have not disputed, Senator—and I think the billing records again are indicative that I did most of the work, and it's my opinion that I did all of the really substantive work or substantially all of it.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Thank you very much, Mr. Massey.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Senator.

Mr. Massey, allow me just a moment.

A statement was made about Mr. McDougal not being a crook at the time that the Rose Firm was asked to represent the bank, and I have the highest respect for Senator Bennett, as Senator Bennett knows. Mr. McDougal has been acquitted once, and he is presently under indictment. I think it's probably a better idea not to so refer to individuals in that circumstance, again, with the prejudgment.

Senator BENNETT. I accept the judgment, and I thank Counsel for it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, sir.

With Judge Hale who had been referred to somewhere as a crooked judge, he had pleaded guilty to two felonies, so perhaps, that description would be appropriate in that case.

But let me get back to the issues of this representation. And we have done some math, $2,000 a month retainer—and as you mentioned, a portion of that was returned to the bank—divided by 40 or so lawyers at the Rose Law Firm would come to about $50 per lawyer per month.

You have indicated that, in your view, and I guess Mr. Clark could speak to that more authoritatively, that this was not either a big client or a big matter in the relative scheme of things at the Rose Law Firm back 10 years ago?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir. They were a relatively minor client.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And according to my math, Mrs. Clinton spent about 15 hours or so in connection with the securities matters, and you spent something like 85 hours. Have you done that arithmetic to total up the—

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I haven't.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, that's the math that we've done to try to put this into some perspective.

And with respect to the issues of who wrote the letter to Beverly Bassett Schaffer, you indicated that you believe Mrs. Clinton probably reviewed the letter. Is there any question about who wrote the letter?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I believe I wrote it. The first one to seek approval for the preferred stock issue, yes, sir, I wrote that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No question about that; A, it is completely appropriate to have written such a letter—

Mr. MASSEY. I have so testified and represented that to the regulators, I wrote that letter.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And B, with respect to Mrs. Clinton's input or supervision, you were a first-year associate. She was the partner in charge of the matter in connection with, liaison with the client as billing partner, completely inappropriate in your view for you to have put her name on the letter?

Mr. MASSEY. I believe I put it on there because she was the billing partner.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In addition to the preferred stock and related matter of whether the bank would get a broker-dealer license to be able to engage in these transactions from Mr. Massey, you said that there were other matters or it's been brought to your attention that there were other matters that the Rose Law Firm was handling. Do you know how many different lawyers were handling matters that accumulated this $21,000 in bills?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I could tell you with some time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who were the lawyers that you can identify?

Mr. MASSEY. Besides myself and Mrs. Clinton? Tom Thrash. It appears that there were entries for Herb Rule. Sir, if you'll bear with me, I can do that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Sure.

Mr. MASSEY. Dave Thomas, Gary Speed, Gary Garrett, Rick Donovan, several paralegals. That looks to be it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now that's about seven lawyers, and then a bunch of paralegals as well?

Mr. MASSEY. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There have been many statements made in recent days outside the walls of this hearing room relating to whether Mrs. Clinton was involved in a transaction known as Castle Grande. Are you in any position to testify about whether the billing records reflect involvement by Mrs. Clinton in the Castle Grande transaction?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And I take it, again, Mr. Clark would be the best person from the firm now to address that issue?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't know if he would be prepared to testify to those matters either. I just know that I'm——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That you're not?

Mr. MASSEY. —that I'm not your man. I'm happy to help, but——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the other matters that were ongoing during the course of this representation, there were two regulatory matters, were there not?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. One involving the question of whether certain land was considered within a county that had a requirement that no liquor could be sold and a county that would permit the sale of liquor?

Mr. MASSEY. You know more about it than I do, sir. Again, the time entries——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that's an issue that's reflected in the time entries but about which you are not the best Rose Law Firm witness to provide the testimony?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to the other regulatory matter that's reflected in Mrs. Clinton's billing, there's something to do with whether this particular property could be considered in some sense a utility for purposes of water and sewer. Are you in any way able to answer our questions relating to the firm's representation on those issues?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I have no personal knowledge of that matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Massey, I would like to focus back on this conversation that Mrs. Clinton had with Beverly Bassett Schaffer. The records show that Mrs. Clinton had that conversation with Ms. Bassett, who was the Arkansas Securities Commissioner, and again a Clinton appointee, and that conversation, as I understand it, took place the day before the additional request for Madison stock offer was sent by the Rose Firm.

Mrs. Clinton's characterization of that conversation, and I am quoting now from an interrogatory response to the RTC when she said, "I may have made one telephone call to the Arkansas Securities Department to find out to whom Mr. Massey should direct any inquiries regarding an S&L matter. I do not remember to whom I spoke."

I think most people today conclude that that conversation took place with Beverly Bassett Schaffer, but beyond that she does not recall any conversations about Madison's financial condition with State regulators. Did Mrs. Clinton tell you to address the letter to Handley?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't believe so. I don't believe so. I don't know.

Senator MACK. I mean the question of who to address the letter to is a pretty straightforward—

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, it's 11 years ago. She could have—

Senator MACK. Let me finish my comment. I wasn't trying to be critical of your response. What I was saying is it's a fairly straightforward question, who specifically should receive a letter. It is a little surprising to me, frankly, that the billing partner would be making that kind of a call. Frankly, if that was happening in my office, I'm sure that probably one of my staff folks would be asking one of the interns to make that kind of a phone call, so it doesn't make a lot of sense to me that that was the purpose of the call. And all I'm trying to lay out here is it seems to me there must have been some other purpose for her making that call. Do you remember anything again with respect to that phone call?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I testified earlier, I don't remember being on the call. It's possible, but I don't have a time record that shows that. It's not uncommon to let an agency or regulatory body know that you have an application in the mail. Just sort of a heads-up, let them know that it's coming.

Senator MACK. Let me start specifically with you. Were you concerned at all about Mrs. Clinton calling, making that kind—or making a phone call to the commission, again given—I gather that she had some concerns and I think she maybe voiced those about the impression of the impropriety of making that kind of a call to someone her husband had appointed to that position.

Mr. MASSEY. Again, I'm not sure I was a party to the call, but I don't remember having any concern about it.

Senator MACK. Today you would not have any concern about that?

Mr. MASSEY. I probably, I probably would interpose a lawyer.

Senator MACK. I'm sorry?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, I probably would. Personally, I would not want the appearance of any—not even for there to be a question about whether or not there was any influence on it.

Senator MACK. I think most people would agree with that.

Mr. MASSEY. I wouldn't consider it a matter of ethics. I just would not want to put the regulator on the spot. I think the reaction the regulator has when you try to use political influence oftentimes is that it backfires on you. I wouldn't want it to backfire. It wouldn't serve the client's interest.

Senator MACK. It seems to me that Mrs. Clinton wouldn't want to subject herself to a question of impropriety based on a phone call strictly to find out who to address the letter to.

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I wasn't—I wish I could help you. I hear what you're saying.

Senator MACK. Again, back to the question about her name appearing on the letter, is it common that associates would have the billing partner's name on all letters? Give me a sense about whether this was a usual practice, unusual practice. I mean again, just so—there are those of us who are skeptical, again, as to why her name would appear, why she would be making a phone call, all really kind of sending that subliminal message that this is an important issue for me, so I'm trying to get a sense of is it common? Did associates put the billing partner's name on letters that they sent out? And if we went back through records, is that what we would find?

Mr. MASSEY. Well, it's a—the answer to that is, was it common? I would say that with respect to this—now again, I'm testifying as to why I did something 11 years ago, so this was our first matter with this client, and she was the billing attorney. And in my mind, it would be appropriate to show that we have done this, we have taken this first step as an associate. I would have routinely included the billing partner's name on the first letter written on the first engagement for this client, and without regard to who that partner was.

Senator MACK. Do you recall any discussions at that time about whether that itself would be some impropriety?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Senator MACK. Again, you were fairly strong a minute ago about your feeling that she shouldn't make that call. What is the difference between having made that call and putting her name on that letter? Isn't there some kind of implication there by her name being on the letter, this request to the Commissioner?

Mr. MASSEY. You obviously have one. I mean you take a—

Senator MACK. No, I'm really asking you that. I'm really not trying to be that judgmental.

Mr. MASSEY. I can only tell you what I think I was thinking when I put her name on the letter, which was—

Senator MACK. I understand that, but I'm now trying to ask you again—you gave me a fairly strong opinion about the phone call, that really that was something that shouldn't have been done.

Mr. MASSEY. No, I think I said I would have interposed somebody just to protect everybody's interest.

Senator MACK. All I'm asking you is what is the difference? Why would you have any less concern about the actual letter that goes to the Commissioner appearing to be a letter that's coming from Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. MASSEY. Can't argue. That's a fair point.

Senator MACK. If you had to do it over again, do you think you would not have her name on that letter?

Mr. MASSEY. I wish I had it all to do over again, but maybe not.

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MASSEY. I'm trying to be candid with you.

Senator MACK. No, I understand that. And I am merely asking for information based on my own lack of knowledge, frankly, so I thank you for your input.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me see in the few minutes that are left if we can't touch on something. We have passed down to Counsel, I think you have it, an RTC, Office of Inspector General, Office of Investigation Report, and this was an interview conducted on July 16, 1995, of John Latham, you have it in front of you, don't you?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. I see it on the screen.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. Now, Mr. Latham described you met while you were giving instructions. You indicated, and I think this may—would you start with the third paragraph, read with me if you would: "Latham said that at one time, date not recalled, James McDougal suggested that Madison Guaranty use Rose for some of the legal work at the institution." Do you read that?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It then goes on and says, "Latham said that"—this is Latham saying this—"McDougal had friends over there, he suggested we use them." And then it goes on, "Latham said when asked who the friends were that it was Hillary Rodham Clinton and others." So when we ask you, are you responsible for bringing the business, and you said I don't recall, would this not comport with the fact that really you did not have anything to do with bringing in the business?

Mr. MASSEY. Pretty strong. It's pretty strong.

The CHAIRMAN. Pretty strong that your friend, Mr. Latham, did not go there and say, "Hey, give this business because I have a friend, Mr. Massey," right?

Mr. MASSEY. I have no reason to argue with this.

The CHAIRMAN. Right. This statement is made by Mr. Latham.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. I've never seen it before, but—

The CHAIRMAN. OK. So this would comport with what you said. You would like to take credit if you bring in business into the company you work for or the law firm, and that's understandable as a young partner. But you had no real recollection of that really being the case, did you?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir. That's been my testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. If you read on, it says, "Massey said that he also was familiar," let's be fair, "with a Rose attorney."

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. Chairman, I think that should be "Latham said."

The CHAIRMAN. That's right. "Also was familiar with a Rose attorney, Richard Massey, with whom he attended college," and that comports with your memory, "at the University of Central Arkansas. Latham said that he did not specifically recall the manner by which Rose was paid." He didn't even know the manner in which it was paid. He wasn't the guy who brought in the business, "but knew that at some point," so at some point he finds out that the first retainer that he heard about was $2,000 a month. "Latham said that he did not know who the billing attorney at Rose was."

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Massey, I suggest that you go on and read the next paragraph, or let me read it to you. "Latham said that he recalled Rose working on only one matter for Madison Guaranty. He said that the issue Rose worked on concerned a broker-dealer operation that was purchased by Madison. He said that he recalled that Rose worked either on the acquisition of the broker-dealer operation, or on legal aspects of the acquisition after it had been done. Latham said that Massey worked on the matter because he had specifically asked for him to do so. Latham could not recall any specifics of what the services performed by Rose in the matter were, except that he did recall one occasion when he and Massey met with Beverly Bassett of the Arkansas Securities Department." And so apparently your friend Mr. Latham did ask that you work on the particular matter.

The CHAIRMAN. If I might ask you to suspend, and hold the clock. I say to my colleague, and I beg your indulgence too, in terms of who got the work, given the statements in the quotes by Mr. McDougal, given the statements which Senator Bennett alluded to, given the statements by Mr. Latham who indicated how this business came and how he was told about it, it is quite clear, and that's the point this Senator wanted to make, that Mr. Massey was not the person who originated this business.

Mr. Latham wasn't even aware of the retainer agreement, which further supports this. It comports with the memory of Mr. Massey, who says well, I don't recall being responsible for bringing in the business. And I think with some clarity, we have a duty to determine who was responsible for bringing this business in.

Now as it relates to what junior associate handled day-to-day matter and under whose supervision, we'll look to the records and we take Mr. Massey's testimony, but I was not contesting the fact that Mr. Massey did substantial work, as well as what the record indicates with respect to other attorneys. I thank my colleague for giving me the opportunity to make that observation, and I would ask that we put the clock back and give you whatever additional time you want.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, the observation is important because no one has contested that Mr. Massey is the one who did all the work. It's important because Latham said Massey worked on the matter because he had specifically asked for him to do so.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think that there's any—

Senator SARBANES. You had Mr. Massey there at the table thinking that his friend Mr. Latham didn't respond to his plea to get some work, and here we see clearly in the next paragraph that Latham did exactly that, according to this statement, at least.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it certainly doesn't go to the issue of who brought in the work, and clearly given at least two of the statements, one made by Mr. McDougal, the other by Mr. Latham taken by a Federal investigator, it's quite clear that Mr. Massey was not the source of, or the origin of the Rose Law Firm being retained.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Simon? I don't think that is clear, Mr. Chairman, but we—

Senator SIMON. Mr. Chairman, first of all, we are talking about what happened 11 years ago, and Mr. Massey, and I don't say this disrespectfully, in his responses to Mr. Chertoff used over and over and over again the words, "I don't recall." We spend an inordinate amount of time here asking people for details of what happened 11 years ago or phone calls made 2½ years ago, and "I don't recall" is an answer legitimately given by people over and over again.

And I think the point made by Senator Dodd about how much time we're spending on this, the almost $30 million, is worthy of repeating. He mentioned that we've had one hearing on Medicare this session. I asked my staff to find out how many hearings we had on health care in the Congress 2 years ago. We're approaching as many hearings on this as we had on the fact that 41 million Americans don't have health care.

You know, we have to at some point get some sense of priority in this business. We are not U.S. Attorneys, we haven't been appointed the Special Counsel. At some point we have to say what really is our business in responding to the wishes of the people and the needs of the people of our country. What are our needs here and what should we be doing? I think we've lost some sense of perspective.

I would also like to enter into the record, Mr. Chairman, a letter that came to me, and I assume came to all Members of the Committee. It is a letter from David Kendall, the attorney for Mrs. Clinton. Let me just read the first paragraph:

An article in yesterday's Washington Post suggests that the recently discovered Rose Law Firm billing records "may contradict" Mrs. Clinton's sworn statements to the RTC. This innuendo is wholly false. Mrs. Clinton has accurately described her limited work on the law firm's representation of Madison Guaranty, and the billing records confirm her previous statements about that work.

And then the letter goes into substantial detail. I will not read the detail.

Much of the question, Mr. Massey, here is regarding preferred stock that might be issued by the savings and loan.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that's correct.

Senator SIMON. So that we get some sense of perspective again, at this point savings and loans nationally were in some trouble; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that would be my understanding of the background.

Senator SIMON. Isn't it true that the Federal Government, in order to protect the taxpayers, was encouraging savings and loans to build up their equity so that there would be less risk for the taxpayers of the country?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely.

Senator SIMON. So we are not talking about some kind of sleazy deal that was unethical that might hurt the taxpayers of the country; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely, yes, sir. Had we been successful in raising $3 million or $5 million for the institution, I can't project they wouldn't have failed, but I expect that you could sure argue that or you could argue that the losses of the taxpayers would have been reduced.

Senator SIMON. And I thank you for that answer.

Now in an interview with you on October 4, 1994, the Office of Inspector General of the FDIC states: "Massey recalled attending one meeting with the ASD," that's the Arkansas Securities Department, "concerning the preferred stock or broker-dealer issue. John Latham and Charles Handley attended the meeting but he does not believe Hillary Clinton was at the meeting." Why wasn't Hillary Clinton at the meeting, do you recall?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Senator SIMON. But could it have been that she felt that might be going beyond the bounds of what she should be doing as the wife of the Governor?

Mr. MASSEY. You would have to ask her why she didn't attend but certainly that would be a possibility.

Senator SIMON. Yes, in this whole operation, and you spent more time on this than any other member of the firm, did she do anything at any point that at that time you felt was unethical?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Senator SIMON. And then in regard to the questions about the billing attorney that have been raised here several times, the person who can answer those questions is Mr. Clark; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. He would have more knowledge than I do, sir.

Senator SIMON. All right. I thank you, Mr. Massey. And thank you, Senator Sarbanes and Mr. Chairman. I yield the balance of my time to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I ask that these interviews of Mr. Massey we discussed be entered in the record.

The CHAIRMAN. So ordered and we'll have—

Senator SARBANES. There are two of them as I understand it.

The CHAIRMAN. We'll have Mr. Latham's interview also entered into the record at the same time.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

With respect to the billing records as regards Mrs. Clinton's telephone conversation with Mrs. Bassett Schaffer, I would like you to turn your attention to the billing records that reflect April 29, 1985.

Mr. MASSEY. That's DKSX 028934?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 43. It's in the printout.

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me. OK. Yes, sir, I'm there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that's 43. Are you with me?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I'm with you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There have been statements made outside the walls of this hearing room that suggest that Mrs. Clinton spoke for 1 hour on the telephone with Mrs. Bassett Schaffer. If you will look at the billing record for that telephone conversation, are you able to say how much time Mrs. Clinton spent on the telephone with Mrs. Bassett Schaffer?

Mr. MASSEY. There really are two entries there, sir. There is the conference with Ms. Bassett and then there is a conference with me, and I couldn't tell you today how you would allocate that 1 hour of time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So there are two things that comprise an hour, and on the basis of looking, unless you have a recollection of how much time you actually spent with Mrs. Clinton that day discussing this matter, the total amount of time on that matter spent by Mrs. Clinton that day would be an hour, including the time she spent on the phone with Mrs. Bassett Schaffer; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't have a recollection of how much time I spent with her that day.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It's 11 years ago, and we understand that that would be very unusual for you to have such a detailed recollection, but we have Mrs. Schaffer's—Bassett Schaffer's statements with respect to that telephone conversation, and if I may be permitted to, I would read from page 8 of the transcript of a CNN interview given by Mrs. Bassett Schaffer, and I would hope that this Committee would deem it advisable to take her deposition and to call her before the Committee so that we may have her recollections. She said was there any—in response to the question:

Question: Was there ever any direct contact by Hillary Clinton with your office?

Answer: She made one telephone call early in the process, probably sometime after we had received their letter but before I wrote my letter to the Rose Law Firm. And it was perfunctory, very brief, nonsubstantive conversation, basically consisting of "we've sent something out there, we have a letter, who should we work with."

That was Mrs. Bassett Schaffer's response.

And similarly with respect to the statement with respect to the appropriateness of raising funds for the bank through a stock offering, Mrs. Bassett Schaffer was asked this question, also at page 8:

Question: Whitewater allegation number two, that Beverly Bassett Schaffer as Arkansas' top banking regulator approved what news reports have repeatedly described as "novel" financing to help Madison Guaranty, a proposal by Hillary Clinton's Rose Law Firm to sell preferred stock?

Answer: Selling stock to raise capital is done every day. I can't imagine suggesting that it's a novel proposal to issue stock to raise capital. In fact——

By the questioner, Mr. Camp:

Question: In fact, documents show Federal regulators knew about the stock sale proposal and hoped it would save Madison from collapsing.

Answer: It wasn't unusual at all. I mean, in the national network of thrifts, you would find a lot of stock savings and loans——

And it goes on.

Does that comport with your understanding of the appropriateness of the transaction?

Mr. MASSEY. I have testified, sir, earlier that it is my impression that has sort of been refreshed by going through the time records that I think the Federal regulators even recommended that the S&L issue preferred stock. It was clearly the cash—cash capital is the best capital for a thrift.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask one final question if I may with respect to the issue of which came first, the chicken or the egg, in connection with the Rose Firm's representation of Madison. You had your conversations with Mr. Latham as you've described, and you pitched the Rose Law Firm to Mr. Latham as being an appropriate firm to handle the securities business that you were providing advice on.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now prior to the time that you did that, had you heard anything about the Rose Firm being retained by the Madison Bank in connection with these matters?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And so the very first billing record reflecting anything done for the Madison Bank appears to be a meeting between Mr. McDougal, yourself, and Mrs. Clinton. Do you remember that?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, at this—the time records show a meeting with—a conference. Now that could have been a telephone conference, with McDougal and Latham, and then if you will see, my entry on the same day—just want to focus on the records because I'll tell you, they're better than my memory. It says, "Research on preferred stock offering, conference with John Latham, conference with Hillary Rodham Clinton."

Now, I didn't have a conference or meeting. As I have testified and have consistently testified for 4 years, I don't think I have ever met Jim McDougal, so there was a meeting apparently that involved Mr. McDougal, according to the time records—I'm not personally aware of it—that I didn't attend.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And presumably that was when the firm was retained. The very next item has to do with your work on the securities matter.

Mr. MASSEY. That appears to be the sequence.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So there was no lapse of time whatsoever between any initial or seminal event relating to the retention of the law firm and your direct involvement in the matter?

Mr. MASSEY. There's no lapse of a day of time. Now, leave it to speculate as to what time of day, but—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What time of day 11 years ago something happened, yeah, I agree with that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, before I give it to Mr. Chertoff, let's go over something quite clearly, because we all can do this at times.

You never met Jim McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. Never met Jim McDougal.

The CHAIRMAN. You have no reason to believe what Mr. Latham said in his affidavit or in his statement that he gave to the investigators, that Mr. McDougal said there are friends over there and wants to give them business?

Mr. MASSEY. I believe John Latham is an honest guy, and if he said it, that's probably true.

The CHAIRMAN. And then he went on to say Mr. McDougal said it's Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Mr. MASSEY. I have no reason to dispute that, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. There was a conference, but you didn't attend that initial conference with respect to Latham and McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, if there was a meeting, I didn't attend it.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

This issue about the stock, by the way, this was the first application for permission to do this in Arkansas?

Mr. MASSEY. I am not aware of that. I think we had not found that a State-chartered S&L had ever been authorized to issue preferred stock. Now, I am not prepared to say that one had never been done, had been authorized.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At the time you started work at the firm up until and through April 1985, you were aware that Mrs. Clinton and Mr. McDougal did know each other?

Mr. MASSEY. I had—I believe—it's difficult but I believe I had—they knew each other.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know they had a business relationship?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that they had a joint investment in something called Whitewater?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To your knowledge, did anyone at the firm during that period of time, 1984 and 1985, know that Mrs. Clinton had a business relationship with Jim McDougal involving Whitewater?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm not aware that anybody knew.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you tell us when was the first time to your knowledge someone at the firm learned about that relationship?

Mr. MASSEY. I can only speak to my knowledge, Mr. Chertoff. Again, we are a lot of lawyers and we all have our separate dealings, and I wasn't particularly situated to know what her investments might or might not have been, and there were some who were closer to her than I was. With respect to me, I learned about it during the 1992 Presidential election, in the newspapers, as most of you did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mrs. Clinton ever say to you that in connection with her discussions with you about your work on this assignment, that she had a separate and distinct financial relationship with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So she never discussed or disclosed to you the existence of that separate investment relationship?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the records indicate for April, the one we have just been looking at, that the first activity with respect to this matter, Madison, is a conference between Mr. McDougal and Mr. Latham and Mrs. Clinton; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that's her first entry and that's—that's the first entry on the page.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You are not part of that.

Mr. MASSEY. I never met Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You then come in later when Mrs. Clinton has a conference with you. That's the second thing that happens?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that's what it appears to be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And again so we don't obscure this point, we had both on the television monitor and in the statement that I read to you at the very beginning of this examination a description by Mrs. Clinton of what she contended happened here, that you went to her with a proposal to do work with John Latham at the bank on this issue involving preferred stock, that you went to her and said we're having a problem with the billing, I understand there's a problem with the billing, can you go and work it out so that we can take on this client, and it is your testimony that that is not what happened to your knowledge?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, so that my answer is not obscured, I would like to say two things. One, what you just said, that is not my recollection. I do not remember, as you said earlier, a proposal in hand to her and discussing with her that there were partners in the firm that were dissatisfied with McDougal and here is a proposal and let's work it out. I have no recollection of that.

It's possible that I had a conversation with her about gee, I think we might be able to get these folks' work, you know McDougal, maybe you could go talk to him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you never came to her with any kind of agreement or proposal or deal with Latham to go ahead and do some work?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't remember that, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did not originate this client?

Senator DODD. He doesn't recall that, I think is the answer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think he's gone further than that, most respectfully. You did not originate this client; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Tell me what "originate" means and I will answer the question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did not come to Mrs. Clinton and say John Latham has said he wants to hire us, we are going to be retained but we have a problem with respect to the billing?

Mr. MASSEY. That I can speak to. That I will say I don't have any recollection of that. I don't believe it happened that way.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And in fact you know that Mr. Latham didn't have the authority to make such a deal with you?

Mr. MASSEY. That's why my recollection is different.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, your recollection is completely consistent with Mr. Latham's statement which he made to the investigators that it was Mr. McDougal who made the decision to have the matter referred because of his friendship with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the issue has also come up—by the way, you don't know anything about how the Rose Law Firm was retained to work on the IDC matter; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Obviously from reviewing the bills you know that at some point after you began your work, there was a separate matter involving this land transaction for the bank called IDC.

Mr. MASSEY. There were four matters that followed my involvement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you also aware that part of this IDC property was a portion of property eventually called Castle Grande?

Mr. MASSEY. That's what I read in the papers. That's my best knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you didn't work on that?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's discuss the issue of what exactly was the work done by Mrs. Clinton on this matter that you worked on, which was the preferred stock.

Mr. MASSEY. OK. I can help you there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. According to the piece we saw on the television screen, that portion from the press conference, Mrs. Clinton indicated that this was not an area that she practiced in. Is that consistent with your recollection?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She says, "The young attorney, the young bank officer, did all the work." Did she do some work on this?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She then goes on to say, she makes a distinction between some earlier work in general about whether it's permissible to have this kind of stock offering, and then she says, "The question moved on to the second phase in which I had no involvement that I have any memory of or anyone that I have talked with that was trying to determine whether Madison could go forward, specifically Madison." In fact, Mrs. Clinton was involved specifically with you in doing legal work on whether Madison in particular could go forward; isn't that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I would almost prefer to look at the records. I think your characterization is correct. I am not prepared to talk about the——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll help you out a little bit. DKS 28943.

Mr. MASSEY. Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's the printout for the first week of work on this, which is the week right before the application goes in. It indicates, very first day, there's 2 hours of work Mrs. Clinton bills on this matter.

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me, 28943?

Mr. CHERTOFF. DKS 28943.

Mr. MASSEY. I see that's a stock offering.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right, that stock offering.

Mr. MASSEY. Now that I believe is relative to the preferred stock, not the broker-dealer matter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct.

Mr. MASSEY. I'm sorry, I misunderstood you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what she indicated. She indicated as to the issue about whether Madison could go forward with issuing the preferred stock, she indicated she had, "No involvement in it." So let's look at the record on the issuing of the preferred stock. The first day she spent 2 hours on that; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. According to the records, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now then we go down here, there's an entry for April 25, 1985, half an hour, "Review of subscription agreement; conference with R. Massey." What was the subscription agreement?

Mr. MASSEY. We were looking ahead to—after receipt of approval which we expected, as I have testified, we were looking ahead to the actual marketing of the preferred stock and the document whereby an investor would purchase the preferred would be a subscription agreement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You gave that to her to review?

Mr. MASSEY. Apparently so, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And she reviewed it?

Mr. MASSEY. That's what she says.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, these time records, these are records which are submitted, they are the backup for the bills that are submitted to this client; right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And a lawyer has an ethical obligation to be accurate in those records?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, as I'm sure you're aware, there can even be a legal obligation to be accurate in the records?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I'm aware of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So I won't push that any further.

Mr. MASSEY. Thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me go down now to the bottom where it says, "Telephone conference with B. Bassett, Securities Commissioner." Again, that is a matter that Mrs. Clinton chose to list on her time records as work done on behalf of Madison; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She also listed a telephone call with you, and that's for a total of an hour; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Actually there's—yeah, as I said earlier, I can't allocate the hour. There was a call with me, there was a call with Ms. Bassett.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again we're still trying to compare these records which were made contemporaneously under an obligation, a legal obligation to be accurate, with the statement that we saw on television that Mrs. Clinton had no involvement in the effort to determine whether Madison could go forward with the preferred stock.

Let me turn your attention now to——

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, again, your quote was they did all the work versus there was no involvement.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually there were two quotes. Quote number one is, "The young bank officer did all the work," or, "The young attorney, the young bank officer did all the work." Quote number two, "Then the question moved on to the second phase in which I had no involvement that I had any memory of or anyone that I had talked with that was trying to determine whether Madison could go forward." I'm comparing that against what the records are here.

Now let me turn your attention to DKSX 28960. It's another printout.

Mr. MASSEY. I'm there, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is still stock offering; right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's the matter, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And then it says under June 17, 1985, for half an hour—or rather three-tenths, that's what, 18 minutes?

Mr. MASSEY. Three-tenths of an hour, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "Review of application amendments." What were the application amendments?

Mr. MASSEY. Presumably that would relate to the broker-dealer application, although again, I worked on two matters. We were—during this period of time we were amending our—or modifying our application in response to comments from the Arkansas Securities Department, so I would expect that that's what this relates to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again that application was specifically on behalf of Madison to get an approval from the Arkansas Securities Department; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. To operate a broker-dealer, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And what these records indicate is that you submitted the application amendments for Mrs. Clinton for her review and that she reviewed them; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The reason you submitted documents like the subscription agreement and the application amendments to Mrs. Clinton was because you needed to have a partner look at this work; isn't that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I am frankly unwilling to testify as to what reasoning I had 11 years ago, and the reason I say that is there are references here and throughout these billing records where I worked technically with partners within my section, so I might have asked her to look at it. She may have asked me to look at it, for all I know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Fair enough. You don't know whether she asked you to look at it or you asked her to look at it. What is clear is you submitted it to her and she reviewed it?

Mr. MASSEY. She was a good lawyer, and another pair of eyes over a document was a help to me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Absolutely. And she was careful; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And she reviewed it; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. Can't argue with the records.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She didn't just stick it in a file; right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's what it looks like, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because she represented in her records and bill that she had reviewed it.

Mr. MASSEY. That she had reviewed them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I know my time is up, but there's a statement here again in the press conference when Mrs. Clinton is talking about how the young attorney did all the work, how she had no involvement in this. She says here, "The question moved on to the second phase in which I had no involvement that I have any memory of or anyone that I have talked with," and this was of course—this press conference, this wasn't one of these situations where the press catches you on the way to the airplane. This was a prepared press conference, so the question arises, since you were obviously the person who had worked on this, putting aside the fact that the billing records were not around, you had your own memory of your interaction with her, did Mrs. Clinton or anyone on her behalf come to you at any point in time and say Rick, Mrs. Clinton is trying to remember what happened with respect to her work on this project. Can you help us, can you talk with her or talk to someone else and give her the benefit of your memory?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think my time is up.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Senator DODD. Well, just briefly if I can. Mr. Chairman, this is almost mind-numbing to go through this. I mean you were talking about events in 1985, now 10 years ago, and people trying to recall statements they made. With all due respect, it is perplexing to me to see us kind of literally splitting the hairs on something here.

Let me just go back and review if I can, Mr. Massey, with you, and I see you're in conversation there, but we witnessed here this press conference in April 1994. Now there Mrs. Clinton says, and I'm quoting here now, "The young attorney, young bank officer, did all the work, and the letter was sent because I was what you call the billing partner. In other words, I had to send the bill to get the payment made. My name was put on the bottom of the letter. It was not an area that I practiced in. It was not an area that I really know anything to speak of about." Now that's April.

In September 1994, in response to the FDIC question limited to the Madison work performed by Mrs. Clinton before the Arkansas Securities Department, "While I was the billing partner on this matter, the great bulk of the work was done by Mr. Richard Massey, who was then an associate at Rose, and whose specialty was securities law. I was not involved in the day-to-day work on the project." In response to the RTC, Mrs. Clinton says, "During the early part of Massey's work he kept me generally advised of what he was doing and may have sent me drafts of the documents he was preparing."

My point is if you take the press conference, the response to the RTC, the response to the FDIC, we are getting down to nuances here, Mr. Chairman, truly we are. I mean I realize put the press conference on here is the most—the statement is well, they did all the work. Then you have the RTC and FDIC, and it's the bulk of the work. I mean I find the Committee dwelling on this particular aspect here for some nuance that somehow is going to say gotcha, caught you in a terrible lie here.

I don't see that. I see someone trying to respond to events that occurred 9 or 10 or 11 years ago involving 15 hours of work, about 2 days worth of work on a minor client in this law firm to be really stretching.

Now, Mr. Massey, is there anything in the April statement, the statement to the FDIC and the RTC, that Mrs. Clinton has made, that you would fundamentally disagree with here, basically as you read those statements, sort of describing pretty much the situation?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I am happy to answer that, but that's a broad question, and I haven't read all of those. And so—

Senator DODD. I'll have you look at them here because those are the three that we have. The Majority is focusing on the press conference, and I understand why they want to do that, but also you have to look at the RTC statements and FDIC statements made basically in the same year within months of each other.

Mr. MASSEY. I have never seen those. I am happy to help but that's—

Senator DODD. Let me ask, Counsel, put those—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you this question, Mr. Massey, if I may. It's fair to say, and I believe you've testified earlier this morning, that the securities and related matters that you worked on, sir—is it fair to say that the securities matters that you worked on relating to the Madison Bank were essentially a one-lawyer operation?

Mr. MASSEY. I've testified to that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And by saying that they were essentially a one-lawyer operation, is it not a fair conclusion for us to draw as a Committee that basically you did all the work with respect to those matters?

Mr. MASSEY. "All the work" is a term that your Committee is obviously arguing.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If we say literally all the work we know it's not true because—

Mr. MASSEY. Literally all the work is not true. All the substantive work, all the research.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If you say essentially all of the work, that would be truer, would it not?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't have recollection of anybody working on these matters of any substance other than myself.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now here we have gone again right to the capillary. Three-tenth hours were spent on June 17, 1985, with regard to a review of application amendments by Mrs. Clinton. Do you even recall what it was that you showed Mrs. Clinton on that day?

Mr. MASSEY. No. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know whether Mrs. Clinton gave you the work back and said Mr. Massey, I have a problem with the work you've done, go back and do it over and do it better?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there any sort of substantive direction that Mrs. Clinton gave to you in her capacity as billing attorney and generally overseeing the work that you did that leads you as you sit here now to suggest that on this wholly appropriate representation, that she pulled some substantive or in connection with the work done for Madison.

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, the records are better than my memory. She said she reviewed applications. I don't know what that means. She may have read them, may have read them for comments, may have provided comments. I don't have a recollection of—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nothing stands out in your mind—

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —in terms of any substantive direction or work performed by Mrs. Clinton on these matters?

Mr. MASSEY. Well, that's—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of your recollection.

Mr. MASSEY. Well, I have now gone through the timesheets, so I'm not prepared to generally characterize something that might be contradicting the timesheets. They speak for themselves. I have no reason to doubt them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right. So in terms of your own recollection and her review of the matters, and it's obviously important at Weil, Gotshal, at my law firm, partners will review work done by associates that goes out the door. That's the way you do it in a topflight firm where you are responsible. I'm not taking issue with that. And I'm not taking issue with the literal suggestion that clearly you did not do all of the work. We know that's not correct. But in terms of the substantive drafting, the legal research, the material that was presented for ultimate review, that was done by you?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, I consulted with other lawyers within my section on technical matters, but with respect to the substance of the work, I did it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now in terms of this great issue of who gets credit for bringing in the work, it is a matter of coincidence, is it not, that just at the time you are pitching the executive at Madison who has asked you for all of this gratuitous legal advice, that the client comes in the door and asks the Rose Law Firm to provide advice on just the very issues that you have been talking to Mr. Latham about? Isn't that so?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, you said that my pitch came at the time we got the work.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You pitched it before you got the work.

Mr. MASSEY. I pitched it before. How much before, I don't know, but there was some time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is it a matter of months or a matter of weeks or days?

Mr. MASSEY. It was sometime in the—sometime in the first quarter of 1985.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. So you are with Mr. Latham, you are his instructor, professor at law school in this securities course, you are asked by Mr. Latham what do you think about this, what do you think about that, you provide him the advice, and at the same time you are saying to him, you know, you really ought to come to the Rose Law Firm where we can provide you legal advice and we can do this stuff for you; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Sure, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And then at some point, coincidentally, the Rose Law Firm is asked by Madison Bank to perform exactly the kind of legal work on the legal matters that you and Mr. Latham have been discussing; isn't that so?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. Coincidentally, I don't think the work came to us coincidentally.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I don't think so either, on the basis of the circumstances that you have described. There was a need for representation, you made your pitch, you may have had a conversation with Mrs. Clinton as you have testified wherein you said look, they are looking for representation on these securities issues, I have talked to this fella, maybe we can bring the client in the door. You may have had such a conversation; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then the client appears, and you are immediately plugged in to providing the service you've discussed with Mr. Latham? Is that a fair capsulization of what occurred 11 years ago?

Mr. MASSEY. I pitched the business, I was told that it wasn't up to him. Sometime later, months or weeks, I wish I could tell you, hours, days, I believe it was weeks, at least weeks, we got this piece—the first piece of work for Madison, which was the preferred stock issue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Hatch.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR ORRIN G. HATCH

Senator HATCH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Massey, glad to have you here. I would like to just follow up on some of the questions that have been asked earlier today, if I can. Mr. Massey, prior to your involvement with Mrs. Clinton on the Madison Guaranty work, had you worked with her on any other matters?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't think so, sir, no.

Senator HATCH. This is the first time you had worked with her?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I believe so.

Senator HATCH. How long had you been at the Rose Law Firm before you started working on the Madison Guaranty issues?

Mr. MASSEY. Approximately 8 months, Senator Hatch.

Senator HATCH. So it had been less than a year, approximately 8 months, before you got on to the Madison matter. Do you recall having brought in any substantial clients up to that point?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Senator HATCH. None.

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Senator HATCH. Did you have the authority as a first-year associate to agree to represent a particular client on behalf of the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Not without a billing partner.

Senator HATCH. So you would not have had the authority?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, not by myself.

Senator HATCH. I understand that you are presently a partner with the law firm.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I am.

Senator HATCH. When you worked with Mrs. Clinton, however, you were a first-year associate?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Senator HATCH. As you mentioned earlier today, you billed at a substantially lower rate than Mrs. Clinton did?

Mr. MASSEY. I think it's $65 versus $120.

Senator HATCH. I see. The term billing partner has been used a number of times today, most notably with reference to Mrs. Clinton's work for Madison Guaranty, and I take it that a billing partner is a fairly senior attorney in the firm; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Now or then? Now we probably have junior partners—

Senator HATCH. I'm talking about then.

Mr. MASSEY. Probably more likely than now, yes, more senior.

Senator HATCH. When a client receives a bill from the Rose Law Firm, I would imagine that the billing partner's name would be prominently featured on that bill?

Mr. MASSEY. It would be—if you were—it would be the billing partner that would actually transmit the bill.

Senator HATCH. They would know the billing partner?

Mr. MASSEY. Usually under a cover letter.

Senator HATCH. And the billing partner would be the attorney ultimately responsible for the client; is that right?

Mr. MASSEY. Ultimately responsible for—

Senator HATCH. To the client.

Mr. MASSEY. With respect to the bill, yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. If Madison, for example, had been unhappy with the Rose Law Firm's work, it would have complained to the partner in charge?

Mr. MASSEY. That's a fair statement. I would say that's not invariable, but that's a fair statement.

Senator HATCH. But as I remember, not to the first-year associate working with the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Latham, if my relationship with Latham at the time was such that if he were unhappy he might have complained to me, but I would say as a matter of protocol, yes, the client would refer to the billing attorney.

Senator HATCH. You don't recall him complaining to you?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir. I did everything right.

Senator HATCH. To the best of your knowledge, are the billing records for Madison Guaranty that we looked at today, are they accurate to the best of your knowledge?

Mr. MASSEY. Best of my knowledge, yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. As far as you are aware, the billing records correctly represent the amount of time and thus the amount of billable hours spent by you and Mrs. Clinton on that client?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. And the bill then accurately represents the proper fee to be charged Madison at the time, which at that time was a Federally-regulated institution?

Mr. MASSEY. Federal and State regulated, yes, yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. Both Federal and State. And as a partner of the Rose Law Firm, it's been mentioned here that you are familiar with the rules governing the practice of law in Arkansas, so you are aware that overbilling or misbilling attorneys' fees to a client might involve serious violations of both Federal and State law?

Mr. MASSEY. I am aware of that.

Senator HATCH. For example, if a lawyer misbilled or overbilled a client, he or she would be in violation of the Model Rules of Professional Responsibility which have been adopted by the Supreme Court of Arkansas, as I understand it, to regulate the ethical conduct of attorneys; is that right?

Mr. MASSEY. We take our billing very seriously, sir.

Senator HATCH. I know you do. I'm just establishing—

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, you're correct.

Senator HATCH. Isn't it true that someone who represented that they did a certain amount of work for a client and billed that client at a partner's rate but did not actually do that work would have overbilled the client?

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me, can you repeat that?

Senator HATCH. If someone represented that they did a certain amount of work for the client and billed the client at a partner's rate but actually they didn't do the work, then they would have overbilled the client; is that right? It goes without saying.

Mr. MASSEY. There may be other definitions of overbilling, but claiming one has done work that one hasn't done is overbilling.

Senator HATCH. I guess my concern here and the thing that worries you here is that Mrs. Clinton has said that she did not do much work on Madison Guaranty issues. She stated that you, Mr. Massey, were the principal attorney or the primary attorney in charge of the Madison work. But the billing records suggest that she was the partner in charge of this matter and that she did do the work for Madison, and I personally find it pretty hard to believe that a first-year associate would be put in charge of a client like Madison Guaranty, so either the billing records are accurate and Mrs. Clinton really did—let me rephrase that.

Even if the billing records are inaccurate and Mrs. Clinton really did not do much work for Madison Guaranty, or perhaps Mrs. Clinton's recollections are faulty, and I think it's important that we clear this up, and I think that's primarily what's been the issue here today, a lot more than some of the other issues that have been raised.

Mr. MASSEY. Senator Hatch, I'm happy to help you clear that up as much as I can.

Senator HATCH. I know, I know you are. I think you've been very forthright here and I commend you for it. Let me just say this. Not every record of an attorney's time is billed to the client; right?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, that's—yes, sir, that's correct.

Senator HATCH. Not every second. Not every second of your time is billed to the client. You indicated you might have missed a phone call or two here that you didn't put down.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. Is it fair to say that the Rose Law Firm would not permit a first-year associate's work to go out without a partner's approval, at least at that time and probably today?

Mr. MASSEY. Senator Hatch, as I said, there might be matters and there might be a lawyer that—and there might be matters where we trust them to do work, some fairly routine matters, but matters—

Senator HATCH. Not something like this where you have Federal and State—

Mr. MASSEY. I would say this is a matter that if it were in-house today, we would want some partner review.

Senator HATCH. And it was probably true then, wasn't it?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. That was your experience?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. That was your experience in this matter?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator HATCH. I think what I am saying is that a first-year associate's work at that time or even today in the Rose Law Firm or basically any major law firm would not—that work would not go out without a partner's approval?

Mr. MASSEY. This kind of work—

Senator HATCH. Certainly that kind of work?

Mr. MASSEY. Probably the broker-dealer application, we would in all cases have a partner review.

Senator HATCH. But the bottom line, and I think what bothers a lot of people here, is that Mrs. Clinton was ultimately responsible for this work, the work we're talking about for Madison Guaranty; right?

Mr. MASSEY. She was definitely ultimately responsible for billing the work, and as you say, she most likely would have been the person, Senator Hatch, who would have been responsible for answering inquiries about what was going on with the client, how much were you going to charge me for this matter, that's generally in my experience in my firm the role of a billing partner.

Senator HATCH. And a billing partner would have reviewed your work that you did as a first-year associate and would have approved it or disapproved it?

Mr. MASSEY. Senator Hatch, I don't want to give you an answer that is without variation because I'd say generally that's true.

Senator HATCH. Sure, there's always some exceptions, perhaps, but in this case, with a State- and Federally-regulated institution, you would have been particularly careful in those matters?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, some of our larger clients will have a multiplicity of partners responsible for the relationship.

Senator HATCH. I think that's all, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you, Mr. Massey, given statements that were made—I don't want to go over them again—that which Mr. McDougal made, given the statements in the RTC, Mr. Latham made with respect to how the business came, given the fact that indeed Mrs. Clinton was the billing partner on this matter; is that correct? She was the billing partner on this matter?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. She was the partner who supervised this matter; is that true?

Mr. MASSEY. She billed the matter, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. She supervised your work on that?

Mr. MASSEY. She supervised my work.

The CHAIRMAN. I have no further questions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And she took, as Mr. Ben-Veniste pointed out, she took responsibility for your work—

Mr. MASSEY. I didn't hear your whole question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As Mr. Ben-Veniste observed to you, she had responsibility for your work as billing partner?

Mr. MASSEY. She would have been answerable to the client. Customarily with the billing partner, she would have been answerable to the client for questions about my work.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let me ask you, by the way, before I resume on the issue—

The CHAIRMAN. Your time is just about to run out. I want to see if we can, in the interest of the Committee Members here, conclude this before we go for lunch. So I'm going to turn to Senator Sarbanes because I don't want to have you in a situation where you go well over.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, as I understood it, at the conclusion of Mr. Massey, we were going to have Mr. Clark come to the table?

The CHAIRMAN. That is not my—

Senator SARBANES. That is what I thought you said to Senator Dodd.

The CHAIRMAN. No, I said we would review this. Now, I have no real objection myself, but let me say that we have not had an opportunity to review, Counsel informs me, the depositions. If we go into that, we will go well into the afternoon. It would be my intent, then, to suspend, to take at least an hour, come back with Mr. Massey and then go to Mr. Clark. I really don't see a useful purpose in that because we are really not prepared—you may have certain questions you want to ask him, but we're really not prepared to go forth with that.

I don't want to argue about that anymore, but this is your time, so if you have any further questions to ask Mr. Massey, why don't you do that. If not, then I'll have Mr. Chertoff continue his line of questioning.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, just as a process question, because there have been issues raised about billing practices here. And this is for many of us here on the Committee who have practiced law, however limited the time, this is fairly routine, to understand billing partners and the process within a law firm. I suspect to an awful lot of people, this is a rather arcane subject matter 60 hours and 15 hours and so forth, the dollar amount, $7,200 and the like, can be a bit confusing to people.

It might be helpful in the context of trying to explain and put in layman's terms the general process of billing and how it works. We have the availability here of Mr. Clark who is the managing partner of the law firm, who is familiar with this process, because there has been a lot of confusion about this, that we take advantage of his presence here. The fact he has been deposed ought to make it somewhat—at least short-circuit the process a bit.

I understand the Chairman's point and I appreciate his making it, but it seems to me since we've spent at least a third of our time talking about these billing records, there have been a lot of accusations about how they, all of a sudden, appeared and so forth, it seems to me we ought to take advantage of this. This is an opportunity to shed some light on this, take a look at what it means, how it works, so that the public at large can have a deeper appreciation of what was going on here.

Senator SARBANES. A lot of assertions have been made in the public forum about those billing records and billing practices. It's important, I think, to try to develop what the facts are. Mr. Clark is in a position to help the Committee to do so. Now if no one had raised various assertions about them, if the Committee and its staff were in a sense saying well, we're going to lay it all out in the normal course and under the proper process, that would be one matter. But given that these assertions have been made, allegations have been raised off of them, it seems to me important for the Committee to try to come to grips with it and develop the facts as best it can. We have to stop this process of accusation and judgment first and facts later. We need to lay the facts out, and then we need to make judgments.

So there's a process now at work—I know there's a great desire to get out the First Lady on the part of some people, but indeed, it's not fair to her or anyone else not to develop the facts in an orderly process. And the Committee has an opportunity to do that here today and it seems to me we should take advantage of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, again, let me say I want it to be understood that the Majority has not had an opportunity to review the testimony of Mr. Clark. Now, Mr. Ben-Veniste, I don't contradict you generally. The fact is we have not had an opportunity to do so. We just got the transcripts yesterday. Second, he was not scheduled to be a witness. Obviously, the Minority had some contact with him, you indicate you had, and he came in when we were not prepared to examine him. Third, he was not the billing partner at the time. He was not the managing partner at the time. He is the managing partner now.

I will, in an effort to attempt to accommodate and to preserve the comity that Members of this Committee have demonstrated repeatedly, notwithstanding the highly-charged nature of these hearings, permit you to examine Mr. Clark for let's say, an hour.

I am going to limit it because he will be back and we have not had an opportunity to prepare. I am going to continue the examination of Mr. Massey.

We will adjourn for lunch for an hour, during which time I would hope that our staff would begin to review the depositions that we just received yesterday, and we will then bring him back for those purposes. So you can continue to examine Mr. Massey and we have some additional questions that we're going to ask him, then we will adjourn for lunch, and then we will take Mr. Clark. OK?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, it should be pointed out that our staff took the deposition—

The CHAIRMAN. I don't know how much more accommodating I can be. You want an opportunity to examine Mr. Clark, and we will do that. We want to conclude with the examination of Mr. Massey, and then we'll take Mr. Clark after a lunch break. My intent was to finish Mr. Massey and adjourn for the day. Obviously, the Members of the Committee feel strongly that they have questions that they would like to put to Mr. Clark. In an effort to accommodate them and be fair, I will do that. But under no circumstances will this be considered a full examination because there are other people that we also must examine in connection with the methodology for storing and maintaining records.

I think this is highly unusual, very presumptuous, but since you may have specific questions concerning the billing, I've attempted to accommodate you. Also, other Senators who are not here may want an opportunity to raise questions. Plus, our investigators are in the process of gathering information relating to the files, the manner in which the files were maintained, et cetera.

Having said that, for the limited purpose of discussing some of the methodologies or some of the questions concerning the billing, I will permit this to go forward in this manner. I don't know how much more accommodating the Chair can be, and if you want to accept that, please do. In the meantime, if you have any other questions you wish to pose to Mr. Massey, I suggest you do so.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I have an observation, and then I do have a question. First, it is not either unusual or presumptuous. And it seems to me if the Committee is going to do its work well, it needs to do it in a cooperative way which includes involving the Minority in trying to help shape the hearing schedule. We clearly understand that—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes, I am attempting to do that.

Senator SARBANES. I understand that.

The CHAIRMAN. This is the first I heard about Mr. Clark wanting to appear today. I have agreed with you that we'll do it. I told you though, that under no circumstances will this be considered to be the entire examination because there are other areas that we will explore. He is the managing partner now—and I don't know if it goes back to 1992 to 1994—there would be questions we wish to pose to him, so—

Senator SARBANES. I'm not suggesting that this would then be the end of Mr. Clark. If people want to have him for further questioning, I think that's fine. I have no problem with that.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Senator DODD. Let's make it clear, too, as well. This wasn't a desire on the part of Mr. Clark to want to testify here today. This is a desire on the part of those of us up here, when it comes to the issue of what is substantial work and billing partners and literal work and supervisory work because so much is being made about Mrs. Clinton's statements regarding her involvement with this matter for the limited hours that have been agreed upon here.

The point is we have the managing partner here at a law firm who can give us, I think, some information and shed some light as to how this generally works. That's the value of it. This is not a desire on the part of the witness, at least to the best of my knowledge, to appear here on the witness stand before this Committee. That's the reason I brought it up earlier because I thought it made some sense.

We deposed him, as I understand it. Mr. Giuffra, the Counsel for the Majority did the deposition. So it's not as if the Majority is unfamiliar with what Mr. Clark is going to say, I presume, in a number of areas, unlike Mr. Massey who was not deposed before he came here.

So I hope we can get to it here. We don't need to belabor the point, but the reason for it is simply to try and deal with this set of facts and information in its totality with the presence in the room of someone who can shed some light on it. That's all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have no further questions for Mr. Massey. I think he has been very thoroughly questioned on matters within his personal knowledge.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bennett, do you have any additional questions of this witness?

Senator BENNETT. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Then I'll turn to Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Massey, I want to go back to where we were before we digressed here and talk about your initial summary of how it is that this matter came in. I think you indicated that you had had a lunch with Mr. Latham. You had discussed with him, jeez, in substance, wouldn't it be great if we could do some business. And then, as I think you said weeks, perhaps months, later, this matter comes in?

Mr. MASSEY. Some period of time, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know how Mrs. Clinton came to be the billing partner?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't ask her to be the billing partner?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't recall asking her to be the billing partner.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it's not the kind of thing—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Massey, I think you have been very cooperative. If you asked Mrs. Clinton to be the billing partner, wouldn't that be something—notwithstanding that it was 10 or 11 years ago—that you would recall?

Mr. MASSEY. That's fair.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that fair?

Mr. MASSEY. That's fair.

The CHAIRMAN. In the interest of preserving your credibility and clarifying your testimony, when you say, "I don't recall," you mean, you did not ask her to be the billing partner; isn't that true?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, 11 years ago——

The CHAIRMAN. I'm trying to be fair, but we just established this would be something that you would recall; yes or no?

Mr. MASSEY. That's true.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ask her to be the billing partner?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't think so.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. That's better than I don't recall.

Mr. MASSEY. I should remember it. It could have happened. I don't think I did. That's the best I can do.

The CHAIRMAN. It could have happened. I mean, Mr. Massey, you get this matter. Mrs. Clinton is not in your section. Now explain to me why that is not consistent. She doesn't do securities work. She's not in the general area of the firm that handles this work; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. No, she was not.

The CHAIRMAN. So that's correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. So consequently, if you asked her, a partner outside of this area, to be the billing partner, wouldn't you recall that?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Now bearing that in mind, we also got into the question of to what extent Mrs. Clinton actually reviewed this area, whether you did most of the work. I take it you did the legal research; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You hit the books; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's typically what an associate at a law firm does; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You would expect an associate at the firm, at the time you were an associate at the Rose Firm, to be doing most of the initial drafting; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And as you've already told us, Mrs. Clinton was not an expert or someone with knowledge about the area of securities law involved here; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. She was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what she's acknowledged. And therefore, it would not make much sense for you to have her doing a lot of library work on this matter, would it?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now if we look at the work she actually did, most of the work she did was on the telephone; isn't that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. I'll be glad to review the records, but that appears to be——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Take your time.

Mr. MASSEY. That would be my general reaction to it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't want to rush you.

Mr. MASSEY. On which matter now?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We are on the preferred stock matter, DKS N 28943. We'll give you some time to——

Mr. MASSEY. 28943? Are you taking conferences as telephone conferences?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, when it says "telephone conference," I'm taking it as telephone conference. I take it in your view, conference without telephone could be either a telephone conference or a nontelephone——

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct. At least that's the way I do it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, who is W. Gregory?

Mr. MASSEY. W. Gregory——

Mr. CHERTOFF. On the first entry.

Mr. MASSEY. Watt was the practice manager—he was the manager of the securities practice at that time. He was sort of—let's call him a managing partner of the securities section.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was an attorney?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, he was a senior partner in the firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't have a conference with Mr. Gregory, did you?

Mr. MASSEY. Well, he's showing that I had one with him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where does it show that you had a conference—where does that show up?

Mr. MASSEY. It doesn't show up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I beg your pardon?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't see a reference to the conference by me with him. That's not to say I didn't have one.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All we have here is Mrs. Clinton, and she has a conference with Mr. McDougal and Mr. Latham. That's the client; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yeah, which reference are you——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm at the very top line, "HRC, April 23"?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's the first entry on this matter; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She has a conference with Mr. McDougal and Mr. Latham. That's the client; right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She has a conference with you?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She has a conference with Mr. Gregory who's the lawyer at the head of the practice; right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you work with Mr. Gregory on this?

Mr. MASSEY. Could have, some.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you see it on the time records?

Mr. MASSEY. No. On this page, I don't see any reference to a conference with Mr. Gregory. It is very possible, I'll tell you, that I had some discussions with him and I think there are entries in here, in the time records, in which I did have discussions with Gregory.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But not in this initial phase of putting——

Mr. MASSEY. It doesn't appear that that happened.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then the next day for an hour and a half, she has a telephone conference with you and John L., and then Davis Fitzhugh. Who is Davis Fitzhugh?

Mr. MASSEY. Davis Fitzhugh was another senior executive at Madison Guaranty.

Mr. CHERTOFF. With these records in mind, I mean, this conference here on the second day, what was Mr. Fitzhugh's role in this stock offering issue?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know what his role at the bank was?

Mr. MASSEY. He was a lawyer. He worked with me on the broker-dealer side of the transaction. He was more involved in that. I'm not sure what his responsibilities were in 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On this day, there was a conference that Mrs. Clinton is having with you and some of the bank officials; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me, sir, where are you again?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm still on the second day, April 24th.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then we move to the next day, April 25th. She reviews the subscription agreement and has another call with you; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. That's what it says.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you have on your record for the same day a conference with John Latham and Hillary Rodham Clinton. Now, I see there that you have John Latham, Hillary Rodham Clinton. Was it your custom when you did your bills if you had multiple people in a single conference to have commas between them, but if you had separate events to have a semicolon for that?

Mr. MASSEY. I wish my practice were that precise. But I can't say that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You can't tell us——

Mr. MASSEY. I said that's the way I would like to have it done, but I can't go to every billing record and say that's the way I have done it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The next entry she has on this page is April 29, where she has a telephone conference with Beverly Bassett; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember participating in that conference?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember her telling you what transpired in the conference?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did know that Mrs. Clinton knew Beverly Bassett?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm not sure of that, other than maybe casually, but I at least knew Beverly Bassett.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your understanding at the time that Mrs. Clinton had any kind of relationship with Beverly Bassett?

Mr. MASSEY. Probably.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Probably?

Mr. MASSEY. Probably some kind of relationship.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you knew, of course, that Governor Clinton had appointed Beverly Bassett?

Mr. MASSEY. I have been asked that before and I am not sure if I knew that in 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mrs. Clinton ever discuss with you whether she ought to be dealing directly with Beverly Bassett?

Mr. MASSEY. Did I discuss that with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did she ever say to you, you know, maybe it's not a great idea for me to be in direct contact with Beverly Bassett?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I don't remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you don't know how long her telephone conference with Beverly Bassett is on this day?

Mr. MASSEY. I do not know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You can't tell us why she felt a need to pick up the phone and deal directly with the Commissioner, with the head of the department?

Mr. MASSEY. I wasn't on the call. I'm not sure why she did it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who did you deal with at the department for the most part when you were working on this issue?

Mr. MASSEY. Actually, we didn't have many dealings with the department in the preferred stock issue. But the person in charge of savings and loan regulatory matters within that department at that time was a fellow by the name of Charles Handley.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that's the person you dealt with?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, primarily on the broker-dealer applications, you'll see in the correspondence.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said you didn't have many dealings with the department on the preferred stock issue, and again, just to understand, that's the request for permission to issue preferred stock?

Mr. MASSEY. To create a class of preferred.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why was it that you didn't feel a need to have conversations with the department about that issue?

Mr. MASSEY. As I said before, I thought that this was a pretty easy legal issue. I didn't think there was a lot of controversy about it. It wouldn't be one, in my opinion, where—it was my understanding that the Arkansas Securities Department had had discussions, and I think it's in the records we've produced, had had discussions with the securities—that Madison officials, I think Davis Fitzhugh, had had discussions with the securities department prior to 1985 about issuing preferred. They had generally—this is—I don't have the documents in front of me, but they had generally agreed, but they wanted a legal opinion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your understanding is that the bank had raised the possibility of issuing this stock as early as 1984?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, it's not. I don't have a date on it. I just understand that, prior to our engagement to render a legal opinion, there had been some discussions, and I believe there's a memorandum that we produced, Mr. Fitzhugh—reflecting a conversation between Fitzhugh and Charles Handley, that basically recites some discussion or conference or meeting with regard to this preferred, and his recitation was Handley generally agrees with us—again, I'm paraphrasing. I don't have the documents—Handley generally agrees with us, but he wants a legal opinion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Handley is the regulator who was actually the hands-on regulator; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he was being cautious; right?

Mr. MASSEY. He was very cautious.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He wanted to have a legal opinion; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. That's the way I'd do it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So from your standpoint, as you understood the law, this issue—at least the first step of this—I gather the second step of getting the broker-dealer is a little more complicated; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Actually, the second step would have been going back to the—to be technically correct, and I know it's late, but for the record, the second step would have been to receive the approval of the Arkansas Securities Department with respect to a specific issue of preferred to a particular investor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would be more complicated?

Mr. MASSEY. That would require a great deal, in my opinion, more discretion on the securities department's behalf.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So although this initial legal question was, in your mind, cut and dried, you could see down the line that issues of discretion by Beverly Bassett would become significant issues, she would have to make judgments that were discretionary judgments down the line?

Mr. MASSEY. I can say that now. If I could see that as an 8-month associate, I should have seen it, yeah, but I don't know that I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you had a partner working on the case who had more experience, and that was Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. MASSEY. She had been a lawyer a lot longer than I had.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So although at these initial stages when you were first putting together this legal opinion, you didn't see a need to have direct contact with the Arkansas Securities Department. The record does reflect that Mrs. Clinton felt a need, that first week, to pick up the phone and talk with Beverly Bassett. You'll agree with that; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. She obviously had a call.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you discover that Mr. Handley was the person you should deal with at the department?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't know. My impression is—and it's only an impression because again, I'm talking about a long time ago—is that I was told that by Latham or Davis Fitzhugh.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In other words, the bankers themselves——

Mr. MASSEY. Again, the memo that I recited to you earlier was handed to me at the initial—one of these initial meetings, and I believe it was reflective of a conversation that Davis Fitzhugh had, and it said Handley. I think I would have known to address——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is Mrs. Clinton at this initial meeting you're talking about?

Mr. MASSEY. Initial meeting with——

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say you were handed this memo?

Mr. MASSEY. I'd have to refer to the timesheets, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Take a moment and look. I don't want to push you.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, while the witness is doing that, it might be worthwhile to point out, what has Ms. Bassett said about all this, and in response to a question almost 2 years ago on CNN, Ms. Bassett was apparently asked about the phone conversation.

I'm quoting Ms. Bassett now in response to this general line of questioning. She said Mrs. Clinton, "Made one telephone call earlier in the process probably sometime after we had received their letter but before I wrote my letter to the Rose Law Firm. And it was a perfunctory, very brief, nonsubstantive conversation basically consisting of we have sent something over there, we have a letter. Who should we work with?"

Now that's Ms. Bassett in response to the same line of questioning. It seems to me that that might be helpful to the Committee to know exactly what her memory is on this rather than just referring to time records here. So I think—I mean that's how she describes it as the regulator.

The CHAIRMAN. And that has been part of the record, and we will ask Ms. Bassett to come in.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you identify which entry relates to this first meeting where you got this memo?

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. Chertoff, it probably—and again, I'm going to do the best I can—it probably would have been the 4/23/85 entry, "Research on preferred conference with Latham, conference with Clinton, conference with Baledge." That's probably when it would have been. It would have been early on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your belief is, as of the time you started the project, you get information from the people at the bank, they have already been dealing with the regulators?

Mr. MASSEY. They have clearly had a discussion with the regulators.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you knew coming into this, before you put this letter together, you knew to whom to direct your correspondence because you had it from the bankers?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't want to go that—I would say I think I did. I think this memo said conference with Handley. I wish I had it in front of me, and I would be better at it. But yeah, I think I probably knew.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't need Mrs. Clinton to call up Beverly Bassett, the Commissioner of Arkansas Securities, in order to get an address or the name of a person because you had a prior—the bank had a prior course of dealing with Mr. Handley; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't have an explanation for the call on the 29th. I don't have a recollection of being involved in it, and I can't help you—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask Mrs. Clinton to call up the Arkansas Securities Department and say a letter is coming over?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't think so. It would be more likely for a partner to ask an associate to perform a task.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, I assume that when you were an associate during those years, 1984, 1985, maybe 1986, from time to time, you did perform that function of picking up the phone, calling a regulator and saying something is on its way over?

Mr. MASSEY. As you can tell from the records, from the time records, eventually, I became conversant with Mr. Handley and dealt with him directly. And I think the correspondence and time records show that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because given the fact that an associate bills at a cheaper rate than the partner, you would expect the associate to do the perfunctory calls and the partner to do the more serious, substantive calls; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. That's pretty much the way it works.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would like to put up on the Elmo what has been marked as Bates RS 537. I think you have it in your package.

Mr. MASSEY. Oh, I'm sorry. I was waiting to see it on the screen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's a copy of a letter to Hillary Rodham Clinton at the Rose Law Firm, May 14, 1985, Dear Hillary.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you seen this letter before?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is the letter that came back in response to your request for a favorable opinion from the Arkansas Securities Department on this issue; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you see this letter for the first time?

Did Mrs. Clinton call you in and show it to you?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't recall, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There's no cc or indication you have been copied on the letter?

Mr. MASSEY. No. Nobody was copied on the letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No one was copied. The only letter—the only copy of this that came into the firm was the original, which went to Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct. That's what it appears.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then I want to put up what has been Bates stamped as 84. It's on Rose Law Firm stationery. It's to Mr. Jim McDougal, May 23, 1985, signed by Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. I've seen that, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have seen this. It says, "Enclosed is a letter for your files from Beverly Bassett approving the proposed authorization and issuance of a class of nonvoting preferred stock. We appreciate the opportunity to work for you and look forward to continuing success in resolving whatever questions arise as you pursue your plan for growth."

Did Mrs. Clinton discuss with you whether you ought to sign this letter or she ought to sign the letter?

Mr. MASSEY. I dare say I didn't know the letter was going out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It does indicate you got a copy of it. Do you remember getting a copy?

Mr. MASSEY. It does indicate it, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the enclosure?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I assume it was this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you assume—

Mr. MASSEY. I'm sorry. I assume it was the letter from the Arkansas Securities Department to Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you assume that Mrs. Clinton—and this I assume is based on your experience—you assume that Mrs. Clinton sent to Mr. McDougal a copy of the letter she had received from Beverly Bassett saying Dear Hillary, it's approved; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Well, you don't assume it. That is what the letter says, doesn't it?

Mr. MASSEY. I guess—yes.

Senator SARBANES. You don't have a copy of the letter?

Mr. MASSEY. It doesn't say—

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "Enclosed is a letter from Beverly Bassett"?

Mr. MASSEY. It doesn't refer to a date of the letter. I assume there might be another letter but—

The CHAIRMAN. I think we can all assume that it's the same letter in question.

Mr. MASSEY. I can't argue with that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to direct your attention to the period in 1992 when Mr. Foster asked you for your documents. That was in February 1992?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, as I told you before, it was around the time the articles began to come out in the paper because the purpose for—the stated purpose for Mr. Foster's visit to me at that time was there's a lot of bad stuff in the press. We need to correct this, and I'm putting together a firm—these aren't exact words, and it's been a few years—but basically, I'm putting together a firm response, and I'd like your files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Massey, you had in your files copies of your work with respect to the stock offering and with respect to the broker-dealer application?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, my work files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had nothing with respect to IDC; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir—yes, sir, that is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had nothing with respect to any option between Seth Ward and the Madison Guaranty?

Mr. MASSEY. I did not have those files, no, sir. Those would not have routinely been kept with me. What I'm talking about are files in which I was the primary worker bee, and I had the involvement. And these were my files that were kept on my floor of the firm, in my section and under my control.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have drafts of documents and notes that you had prepared also in your files?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't think so. I don't think there were. Whatever was produced was in my files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you collected—

Mr. MASSEY. I think there may have been a few drafts.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you collected the material together? You collected this material—

Mr. MASSEY. I got the files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You made copies?

Mr. MASSEY. I made copies.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You made them yourself?

Mr. MASSEY. I made most of them myself. I was very busy at the time, and I don't think I finished the job, and I asked my secretary, I think, or maybe a file clerk, to do it. But when I got them back, I took the stack of documents that had been copied, and I took my files, and I compared them page by page.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you give us a sense of how big the volume of documents was?

Mr. MASSEY. Inch and a half.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You took those documents into Mr. Foster?

Mr. MASSEY. He came to me. He came to me the next day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You gave him the copy—one set of copies; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he ask you whether you were keeping a copy?

Mr. MASSEY. He asked—I don't want to give you a lawyerly answer to that question. He asked me why it was taking so long for me to get the files, and I told him I was copying them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was his attitude?

Mr. MASSEY. He was impatient.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was impatient?

Mr. MASSEY. He was seemingly impatient, he wanted the records.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he express frustration over the fact that you had made copies?

Mr. MASSEY. He expressed frustration over the fact that I wasn't prepared to hand off the files without having a complete set of copies in my possession.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did he express that frustration?

Mr. MASSEY. He was just—he was—I have a picture of it in my mind. It's hard to give you a word that expresses it. Vince was not a particularly outgoing person. He sort of stoved up and walked off. He just—he was—kind of walked off.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And he walked off with the set of files you were given?

Mr. MASSEY. No, he walked off without my files first because I hadn't completed copying them and verifying that what I was going to hand him and what I had were the same things.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But your understanding, your impression was that he was frustrated you were making copies of these things?

Mr. MASSEY. That was my general impression; about making copies, he was frustrated. Now whether he was frustrated because he was having to wait for the files, whether he was frustrated because I was making copies; he was frustrated that he had asked me for the files, he came back the next day, I didn't have them. I told him I wasn't done, I wanted to finish copying them, and he stomped off.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How much later did you get him the files?

Mr. MASSEY. I think that was a morning in 1992—that was a morning, and I think I got them to him later in the afternoon after I had a chance to go through my packet and the packet I was handing him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During that period of time, did you have occasion to see a run of timesheets like the ones we've been looking at here that were printed out?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I can say with certainty that I have not seen this pack of documents until Monday.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me also ask, and I want you for purposes of this, to—

Mr. MASSEY. And I also want to say with certainty, just so it is clear, everything in my files in 1992 has been produced to this Committee, to various regulatory bodies, to the Independent Counsel. I am comfortable that what I had and what I compared have been—all those papers have been produced.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is again—we want to make sure you are not putting yourself on the hook for something you can't take responsibility for—

Mr. MASSEY. I appreciate you looking out for me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You're talking about your personal set of files?

Mr. MASSEY. These are my files, yes, sir. The firm's files, I don't have personal knowledge as to how those were dealt with.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would exclude billing records because you wouldn't have kept billing records?

Mr. MASSEY. The billing attorney usually kept those.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk to any other lawyers at the firm at this time who had been back at the firm in the mid-1980's about—during the time you were making these files for Mr. Foster about whether they were being asked to produce copies of documents to Mr. Foster?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I don't think so. I don't recall a conversation like that. It is possible, but I don't think so. The people that I worked with primarily—I was the only guy in my section who had any Madison files, and I don't believe I had any discussions, but it's possible.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, it had to be a pretty extraordinary event in your life to have a former partner in your firm, or current partner in the firm, being part of a Presidential campaign as the potential First Lady; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. It was and continues to be an event in my life.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It had to have been a subject of discussion around the firm; is that fair to say?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When Mr. Foster came to you and said I want these documents, we have to prepare a response, you were aware of what had been appearing in the press?

Mr. MASSEY. With respect to the Madison representation?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, I was painfully aware of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you probably discussed that with other lawyers in the firm; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, there was a lot of general discussion about it, casual type discussions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Of course, by that time, you knew that Mr. McDougal had already been through a trial where he was indicted and ultimately acquitted, you knew that?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At that time, in 1992, you learned about, for the first time, about the Whitewater deal?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have conversations with anyone at the firm at that point in time about whether it was appropriate for Mrs. Clinton to be doing legal work for Mr. McDougal's bank and having a side business deal with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. It's very possible. There were a lot of—I was in the center of this fire storm, and I had—it was an important issue to me. I think it was an important issue to a lot of my partners, and I would be less than candid with you if I said this didn't raise a lot of discussions. This causes one to be introspective about your practice.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your own view? Was it your view that you were disturbed that Mrs. Clinton had been representing Mr.

McDougal's bank and had not disclosed, at least to you, that she had a separate business relationship with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. Disturbed is strong. I was a little surprised, I was disappointed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In 1992, is it fair to say that you were aware, as most other lawyers were, of what was going on—what has been described as the savings and loan crisis?

Mr. MASSEY. Sure. I mean, generally aware.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you were aware that one of the issues that sometimes came up was professional liability?

Mr. MASSEY. Sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That meant the liability on the part of lawyers or accountants or other professionals who had rendered services to savings and loans; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did you—let me ask you—

Mr. MASSEY. As a matter of fact, we have experts in our firm that did that kind of work, so yeah.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In 1992, did you discuss with Mrs. Clinton at all the work you had done and she had done with respect to Madison?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I can tell you with the highest degree of certainty, looking you straight in the eye, I have not had any conversations with Mrs. Clinton about this representation since we did it in 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now still focusing your attention on this period of time, in 1992, trying to get your state of mind, and frankly the state of mind of people at the firm, would you say people at the firm were generally aware of the issue of professional liability, that is to say law firm liability with respect to savings and loans?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, you're asking me—again, I want to be careful about testifying as to what other people's mental state was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To the best of your knowledge, what was discussed—

Mr. MASSEY. Of course, it is common knowledge that lawyers and accountants for S&L's get sued for malpractice. It's common knowledge. Now whether a particular individual might have been aware of that, I assume that anybody in my firm would know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have told us what you felt was disappointment at the fact that Mrs. Clinton had not disclosed to you, when you were working with her and representing Madison, her separate business arrangement with respect to Mr. McDougal. Did you ever discuss that disappointment with anybody else at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. MASSEY. Probably.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have any idea who?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk to the managing partner?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk to the partners in your own section?

Mr. MASSEY. Probably, just casually, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, what is your best recollection of who you spoke to?

Mr. MASSEY. It would have been some partners in my section, but again, I don't have a recollection of specific conversations. I said probably because it was new, I think, to most of us, this investment, how it affected the public's image of us, our relationship with State regulators. It was new to us. We were taking a lot of heat for it.

I was disappointed. I think a lot of people were disappointed in the way it was—in the press that we were getting. But I'll tell you, I don't think I can recall for you specific conversations with specific individuals.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have a firm policy concerning investments by lawyers with clients for whom they're doing work?

Mr. MASSEY. We do today, yes, sir, we do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that a policy that has been put into effect since 1992?

Mr. MASSEY. Can I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure, if you want to refresh your memory.

[Witness conferred with counsel.]

Mr. MASSEY. I think the question is what was the policy in 1992. I'm not prepared to tell you what that would have been.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The question is whether there is a new policy since 1992.

[Witness conferred with counsel.]

Mr. MASSEY. Ron tells me there is not a new policy since 1992.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have any understanding, from either your own knowledge or from your discussion with others within the firm, as to what the firm's policy was, whether it be written or unwritten about whether a partner who was taking on a representation of a client to whom the partner is supposed to be giving dispassionate legal advice, whether there was a conflict if that partner has a private business relationship with one of the officers of—

Mr. MASSEY. Are you asking me if that's a conflict of interest?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm asking if there was any policy about having an intermingling of those relationships, representing a bank or client on the one hand as a lawyer at a firm and having private business with one of the principals or one of the owners or officers of that client?

Mr. MASSEY. Policy in the sense of—I want to be candid with you. Did we have a promulgated written policy in 1992 with respect to the kind of investment that we know she had as of that time that would have required disclosure or prohibition?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. MASSEY. I don't think so, but I am really hesitant without having an opportunity to review those. To be honest with you, I would love to tell you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Putting aside a formal policy, just as a matter of—I mean, how big was the Rose Law Firm in the 1980's?

Mr. MASSEY. As I said before, 40 lawyers, maybe 25 partners.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it is not a large law firm like my law firm is or Richard's law firm is?

Mr. MASSEY. We were pretty small.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were real partners and you were a small group?

Mr. MASSEY. We were a pretty small group with a few partners.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And amongst yourselves you had to have a sense of a certain obligation of trust and candor and trust as partners?

Mr. MASSEY. I expect that from my partners.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You expect partners to inform you about matters that might in any way cast a shadow upon the appearance of propriety at the law firm; isn't that right?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, you're asking me my expectations?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. Is it fair to say in 1992 after you discovered, after having worked on this very project involving Madison, that there was a separate business relationship between Mrs. Clinton and Mr. McDougal that you were upset because you felt it was inconsistent with your own view about how partners ought to deal with each other?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, this is again sort of a resegment of your earlier question. I told you I was disappointed. The water is under the bridge. It had happened. We were taking heat for it. What my mental state was was disappointment. I was disappointed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let me focus this back on the discussion we've had with respect to the turning over of these documents and what was going on at the law firm with Mr. Foster in 1992 when the documents were being collected. You understood that Mr. Foster was collecting these documents on behalf of the campaign?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir. I told you—

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was on behalf of the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. On behalf of the firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is this because the firm felt a need to have some kind of a public position that the firm was going to take with respect to this matter?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, it was a very frustrating time. We were—there was a lot of—there were a lot of newspaper articles. There were a lot of them that grossly misstated the facts. Some of us, including me, had attempted to try to set the record straight with some reporters, and it didn't work, so it was not a bad idea in my mind.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you initiate the idea, or did you learn about it when Mr. Foster raised it?

Mr. MASSEY. He came to me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he the designated person who was responsible for handling this on behalf of the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. That was my understanding that he told me. Now could he have been designated by other people, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The reason this is important and the reason I'm—

Mr. MASSEY. I want to—just for a second, designation in terms of firm management asking Vince to do this work, I'm not sure of that. It could very well have been that he decided to take it on himself or—I don't remember my impression.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The reason I am asking you about your mental state is because I am trying to get a picture of what's going on in the firm at the time these records are being collected.

Mr. MASSEY. I understand.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell me if I'm correct in substance in my understanding of what's going on. These stories are appearing in the newspaper, and they are frankly news to you; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Certainly, the business relationship between Mrs. Clinton and McDougal is news to you and many of your partners?

Mr. MASSEY. Mischaracterization; new news.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you feel, professionally as well as personally, that the firm ought to take some steps to put its side of the story or at least to collect the facts?

Mr. MASSEY. I was happy to accommodate that effort.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, your understanding is that Mr. Foster was collecting the documents for purposes of handling the firm's—

Mr. MASSEY. That was my understanding. That's the impression I got from him when he came to me for the records.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He did not come to you and say we are going to take these over to the campaign?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have any understanding that there was a point in time in which Mr. Foster was going to—

Mr. MASSEY. I want to emphasize. I would not have let him have records—I would not have given him my files had I known they were going to leave the firm. I wouldn't have done it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why is that?

Mr. MASSEY. Because they are our files. They didn't belong to the campaign. It wasn't the campaign's—it wasn't their property. That's my own opinion. I'm being candid with you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me explore that with you a little bit. Actually, to the extent that the files reflect correspondence or work done on behalf of the client, am I correct that actually the client is really the owner of the files?

Mr. MASSEY. Sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In this case, the work that you did on Madison, for example, Madison was the client; right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, it wasn't Mr. McDougal personally, but it was the bank, the savings and loan?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And when the savings and loan was taken over by the RTC, the RTC essentially became the owner of the client?

Mr. MASSEY. That's a fair—in my understanding, that's a fair statement. It's not my area, but it sounds right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it fair for me to say that in addition to the feeling you had from the standpoint of the law firm, that law firm files shouldn't go outside the law firm. You also had an understanding that files belonging to a client should not be disseminated or should not be transferred out of the firm without the client's permission?

Mr. MASSEY. Well, I take files to my house to work on them. You mean without—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't mean physically out of the building. I mean, out of your custody as a law firm.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You can take them home or to the beach but you're not supposed to transfer them to another organization without the client's permission?

Mr. MASSEY. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Mr. Foster never said to you or indicated to you that these files that came out of your personal files were going to be taken anywhere outside of the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir. Again, he never indicated to me that he was going to give them to the campaign or to any third party.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And had he indicated he was going to do that, you would have refused to give him the files?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was the first time you learned that your files did wind up in hands outside of the law firm?

Mr. MASSEY. I think the same time you did. I think I happened to be watching the hearings the day that we learned about that small set of files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that was within the last, I guess, couple of months?

Mr. MASSEY. Yeah, and if you're going to ask me did I know anything about the Williams & Connolly—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm about to, but I'm going to put it up first. It is RS 381.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, I'm there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are these file folders with the files—and if you want to look at the files, actually, I have them here. Are these your files?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't know. I saw this letter during the hearings.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we have somebody bring this down, peruse them and see if they are the files.

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. Chertoff, are you asking me are they my files?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are they copies of the files that you turned over to Vincent Foster?

Mr. MASSEY. Without saying that these are all of them, because, again, I've never seen this set—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand that. Let me be more precise. Are these documents at least portions of the documents that you turned over to Mr. Foster.

Senator SARBANES. Take your time, Mr. Massey.

Mr. MASSEY. I'm sorry?

Senator SARBANES. Take your time. Don't feel rushed.

Mr. MASSEY. I don't mean to take up all your time. I would like to answer your current question and also the one you asked me an hour ago.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's take the current question.

Mr. MASSEY. The current question is these appear to be without going through page by page, these appear to be the contents of my work files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there something you want to supplement from earlier?

Mr. MASSEY. I mentioned to you earlier I had a recollection of a memo in which Davis Fitzhugh had approached Charles Handley and said—and asked him about the preferred stock and I told you I had read something about that. I have it. It is RS 000700.

That's the memo that mentions that Fitzhugh first approached the Securities Commission and asked them about the preferred stock issue. I digressed to the line of questioning we had earlier.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that the memo? It's a handwritten memo dated April 3, 1985?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. It says can a State-chartered S&L issue preferred stock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A copy of this memo had been sent to Mr. Fitzhugh and he gave it to you?

Mr. MASSEY. I think so, yes. It looks like he got a copy of it and he brought it to me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you knew as of the time you began the assignment that Charles Handley was, in fact, the person to whom you needed to be in touch—

Mr. MASSEY. This refreshes my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's correct, all right. Let's get back now to 1992. Having identified these files as being substantially what you had in your files, maybe some things more, maybe some things less, do you have any idea how these files came to be in the possession of Mr. Kendall, the President's—

Mr. MASSEY. I do not. I absolutely do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that Mr. Hubbell at a point in time had possession of these files?

Mr. MASSEY. Do I have any personal knowledge of that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Putting aside what you have learned, as we have, as we go along, did you have any idea before we started these hearings that Mr. Hubbell had these files in his house or in his basement when he was Associate Attorney General?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I have to ask you this, it's a little embarrassing but because of what's emerged, I think I'm obliged to do it. In fact, your law firm was in a substantial dispute with Mr. Hubbell in 1993 over his behavior as a partner?

Mr. MASSEY. That's putting it mildly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that ultimately led to Mr. Hubbell leaving—being convicted of a crime?

Mr. MASSEY. That was part of the dispute, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct in my understanding that you would have vigorously objected to Mr. Hubbell having possession of these documents of the firm when he was Associate Attorney General?

Mr. MASSEY. That's fair.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know how long Mr. Foster kept custody of these documents?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, the chain of custody outside of my hands, I have no knowledge of.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But what is clear is that, from your standpoint, you had authorized Mr. Foster to have these files only for purposes of serving the firm and only in the custody of the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. And I want you to know, I think I gave him copies. My files were copies. I don't think it's material. I think I gave him the copies as opposed to the originals, but yes, when I let him go, if you want to describe it in terms of a bailment, in my mind, they were for the firm.

Senator SARBANES. The question was whether you authorized him only for that purpose—

Mr. MASSEY. There was no authority.

Senator SARBANES. —and as I understand your answer, you made no authority. You made an assumption as to why he was receiving the files; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that's correct. We did not have a discussion about you can only use them for these purposes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He told you that he was using these for purposes of the Rose Law Firm handling its own defense, as it were?

Mr. MASSEY. The phrase that comes to mind is firm stories, putting together a firm story.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he ever come back to you—did Mr. Foster ever come back to you and say we want to use these files for the campaign or for any other purpose?

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mr. Hubbell ever—

Mr. MASSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did anybody else working on the campaign come to you and say we want to use these for any other purpose?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No further questions, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, let's go back into this sort of new area that has come up about what occurred back in 1992 with respect to these documents. There had been allegations in 1992 that the firm and/or its partners had done something inappropriate in connection with the representation of Madison Bank; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. That was one of many, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I notice you're looking at your watch. We've all gone a long while without eating or possibly other requirements of the human body.

Mr. MASSEY. Many of my friends will doubt that I've been able to sit still for 5 hours.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If you need a break, let us know, but I think we're close to wrapping up on this line, but this is not meant to be torture for anybody.

At the time these issues came up, Mr. Massey, did you think it not unreasonable for the firm and its partners involved in these transactions to review the records, and to try to go back now 7 years, to determine what the facts were?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Very reasonable?

Mr. MASSEY. I was glad—my reaction when he asked, I was glad he took the initiative to do it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Even 7 years after. It's now 10 or 11, but 7 years was a long time to try to recall, without looking at the records, what had occurred; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Seven years is a long time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So now Mr. Foster asked you, because there had been some urgent press inquiry, to get what information you could to him so that could be part of the process; is that right?

Mr. MASSEY. That was the—that's a bit different than my characterization, but that's more or less true. As I told you, he came to me and said I'm putting together a firm story and I want your work files. That was the general reaction. That was a general statement.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, he came to you on one day and then the next day, he came in the morning, I take it——

Mr. MASSEY. And I said OK, I'll put them together and you come get them the next day.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the interim between the time he made the request of you and the time he came back, you hadn't either begun or at least concluded copying the files; is that right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You told him well, I haven't gotten to it yet, in substance?

Mr. MASSEY. I said——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You said I've been very busy, I haven't gotten to it. And he seemed to be frustrated with that response because clearly he was interested in resolving these questions as soon as he could?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't know. Again, I'm trying not to testify as to what was in somebody else's mind.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right, but it didn't strike you as unreasonable, did it, that given the level of interest that had been expressed in these matters, he'd want to get on the situation as soon as possible and be able to get all the facts accumulated?

Mr. MASSEY. That is one interpretation of his behavior, sir. I'm trying not to—I'm trying to use objective facts.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You are not suggesting here, are you, because we're dancing around this implication, that Mr. Foster was in some process to try to get the original files of the firm into somebody's hands so they could be destroyed? Was that the impression that you got?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely not. That was not my impression.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Because that seems to be the implication of some of the questions and you may not perceive that sitting down there but——

Mr. MASSEY. I don't perceive that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —we'll see that sliced and diced and appearing in the newspaper in some other context tomorrow unless we are very clear about it, so I want to make it very clear in my question to you as to whether you took Mr. Foster's request to you as implying that something untoward or improper was about to happen to these files?

Mr. MASSEY. I told you, again as I said earlier, my impression was he was putting together a—I have no reason to disbelieve him, he was putting a firm story together.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, in point of fact, Mr. Foster knew that you had made a copy of all of your materials at the time that you gave him the copy because you told him that?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Going to the substance of the documents themselves, and we heard some testimony about this when this erupted the last time, when this was a smoking gun issue as to original files from the Rose Law Firm spirited away and possibly damaging information for the purpose of making sure that they would never see the light of day. If we go back and look at that, number one, they weren't the original files; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Whatever was in our files was copies, so the original correspondence and so forth were—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Second, with respect to the documents that were in your files, did they reflect in any way, shape or form, Mr. Massey, any improper or untoward, much less illegal, conduct?

Mr. MASSEY. We did nothing wrong in connection with the matters on which I worked, and there was nothing untoward in those files. I told you, everything—you can be your own judge—everything in my files has been produced.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Finally—and I guess at some point we're going to conclude with your testimony. At some point these files came into the possession of Mr. Hubbell. Now, in terms of the time records or the original bills that went to the Madison Bank, is it your understanding that, apart from the records that have just been discovered and made available to this Committee, that is the computer generated time records reflecting work done for Madison, that there were bills sent to Madison by the Rose Law Firm that reflected, in substantial substance, the same work which is reflected in the detailed billing records?

Mr. MASSEY. The bills that I've seen seem to do that. Now there are some blocked bills, there are some itemized bills. And substantial, again, we've talked about that through the day, is in the eye of the beholder. I'd say they generally reflect the entries and they would have been sent to Madison.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So now the issue again is—and we need to be very careful in asking the question so that those who will interpret this or report on it are clear in their thinking—it is the case that the same material that was contained in the detailed time records has been made available to the Independent Counsel so far as your partners were aware; is that correct, sir?

Mr. MASSEY. Can you repeat that? I'm not sure if I followed it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is a convoluted question with a lot of prefatory language that could be dropped.

Mr. MASSEY. I have been here a long time. Those are the kind I can't answer.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Were you aware, as a result of conversations with your partners who have been questioned by many regulators and agencies over the years about these matters, were you aware that the bills that were sent to Madison Bank, which cover the same ground as these detailed computer generated records, had been presented to the Independent Counsel's Office?

Mr. MASSEY. May I talk to my counsel a second?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Certainly.

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me.

[Witness conferred with counsel.]

Mr. MASSEY. I wanted to make sure I'm not stepping on anybody's toes. It is my understanding that the Independent Counsel has copies of the bills.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of the bills that went to Madison?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes. I don't know about all of them. I think I was asked that earlier.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We don't know either because we don't receive information back from Independent Counsel about what they have. But in terms of any notion that there has been some destruction of records so that we can't tell what was done for Madison, clearly those records were presented, at least in substantial part as far as you know, to the Independent Counsel and now we have another way of looking at the time that was spent as a result of the computer generated records that have been located by the White House and turned over to this Committee; correct? We have those records now; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. I can speak with personal certainty with respect to my records.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, and you have seen the records that have been recently located and turned over to this Committee, and they appear to be a computer generated record of time spent by attorneys at the Rose Law Firm back in 1985?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If you look at those records, there is a top sheet to the records that reflects that it was generated in summary form in 1992, February; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. 2/12/92.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that would have been around the time, would it not, that this issue heated up during the campaign?

Mr. MASSEY. That's my recollection.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it would be a fair inference, would it not, that somebody went to the Rose Law Firm computer to generate the information so that they would get on top of this situation in 1992?

Mr. MASSEY. That's what it appeared to me—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let's go to the underlying records. Can you tell when those records were generated?

Mr. MASSEY. "Underlying," you mean the actual bills?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Not only the actual bills but the actual time records.

Mr. MASSEY. The time entries, the time summaries?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. MASSEY. They appear to have been generated sometime around the time the bills were sent or the time was collated, I guess is the right word.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That would have been in 1985 and 1986.

Mr. MASSEY. There is an 1981 bill in here from the Bank of Kingston. Yeah. They seem to—again, without—very generally, they seem to have come from a time in which they were rendered.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, you say you haven't had the opportunity to compare the billing summaries which were prepared by the managing partner and the underlying time records. We have done that and found that they are substantially—we haven't gone word for word, but they are substantially identical, that the work reflected was, in fact, reflected in the underlying time records.

Without going through this in excruciating detail to show that that's the case, I wonder whether we can at least get the confirmation from Mr. Clark that that process has gone forward and that our observations are substantially the case. If you wish to consult, you may do so with the Chairman's—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, if you are indicating that the Committee staff has reviewed them and found them to be substantially the same, that's good enough. We'll accept that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We're not the witnesses.

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir, that's my understanding. I haven't done it myself, but in my understanding, that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, I understand that in view of the impending next blizzard—

Senator DODD. You're talking about the weather now, aren't you?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes, the weather, that blizzard, yes, which is scheduled to bury Quebec Street beyond recognition since it hasn't been plowed, Mr. Mayor, if you're listening, up to this point. But as a serious matter, these gentlemen have plans to go back to Little Rock and probably not have plans to stay over this weekend and have now—

Mr. MASSEY. I'm happy to stay as long as you have questions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'd ask for our indulgence—

The CHAIRMAN. I think we have several more questions for Mr. Massey, and then we can conclude. Of course, if you want to say anything else.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Massey, I want to address this issue that we have just talked about regarding the billing records. What you have just talked about was a fee recap prepared by your law firm; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, you're asking about 013, RLF 03030?

Mr. CHERTOFF. The document that was just addressed. That's a summary of the bills that were sent out to Madison.

Mr. MASSEY. I didn't prepare it. I wish I could tell you what that is. It appears to be a summary of allocations. I'm not sure it's a summary of time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Allocations means allocations on a monetary basis?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm getting beyond my knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you don't really know what bills Independent Counsel has; right?

Mr. MASSEY. I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you seen any bills that anybody else has at the Independent Counsel's Office?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't think so personally.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you been informed since this matter has been opened up that people at your law firm have been shown some bills by the Independent Counsel?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know what the bills are?

Mr. MASSEY. I have some general idea, but I don't know what all of them are.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know if they have been shown all the bills?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir. As I said earlier, I do not know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know where the Independent Counsel got the bills?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They didn't get them from the Rose Law Firm, did they?

Mr. MASSEY. If they are there, they can get them, but I'm not sure where they got them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But they did not get them from the Rose Law Firm, did they?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now this is important because even assuming the Independent Counsel has bills, when we're talking about bills, we're talking about the bills that went out to Madison, there is information on the printout, Mr. Massey, that is not contained on the bills; isn't that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. On the printout?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. If you compare the bills——

Mr. MASSEY. The fee recap of 1992?

Mr. CHERTOFF. No. If you compare the package of bills we have put before you, which we have been working with all day, which lists dates and then who does work and what the work is done on each date, if you compare those to the printout, the printout contains the exact time, amount of time worked on each matter, the bill doesn't tell us that, does it? Do you want to do a comparison here?

Mr. MASSEY. Well, I think you could probably do the math.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's do a comparison. DKS 28934, which is the April bill.

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. Chertoff, I'm going to tell you, I'm happy to work with you on these, but we're dangling on the outside of my area of expertise.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is just a question, Mr. Massey, of reading two things and comparing.

Mr. MASSEY. Sure, OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The bill, 28934, some of which you believe the Independent Counsel may have, shows the names of individuals and shows the work they do; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Excuse me, just excuse me. You're looking at the billing—your question was?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Bill DKS 28934, part of that package of bills that we've been working with.

Mr. MASSEY. Bear with me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Containing your work in April 1985.

Mr. MASSEY. Sure. We have 5/21/85 on there. The one I have is not stamped.

The CHAIRMAN. She is going to give this to you right now, Mr. Massey, or to your counsel.

Mr. MASSEY. I do have it now, excuse me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. However many of these bills the Independent Counsel has, these bills do not indicate the amount of time an attorney spent on each task; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. The bill what I'm looking at, 28934, does not reflect time values.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It just gives a dollar value for the bill and a list of tasks; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. It gives a total amount and list of tasks, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the printout, you have no reason to believe the Independent Counsel ever had the printout?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't know what they have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The printout contains the actual amount of time spent on each task; isn't that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So there's information on the printouts that is critical to understanding who did what and how much time they spent on it that you can't determine if you just get the bills that went to Madison; isn't that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. If you were—to put it in my own words, if I can, if you wanted to quantify the time spent on matter 1 for the month of April, you couldn't tell from the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Who did the work?

Mr. MASSEY. Well, you could see entries that reflect some efforts.

The CHAIRMAN. But it doesn't tell you which attorneys?

Mr. MASSEY. It tells you two. It doesn't tell you how much time they spent.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To know how much time is spent you have to get those printouts; right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Those printouts were printed out in February 1992, as Mr. Ben-Veniste asked you?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm confused. Can you repeat your—

Mr. CHERTOFF. The printouts, Mr. Ben-Veniste asked you a few moments ago, the printouts were printed out along the top, they were run and printed out in February 1992; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. The very—the top printout, the summary. Now this printout that follows the bill was printed out apparently in 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, no, the printouts that Mr. Ben-Veniste asked you about were run off the firm computer in February 1992; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. I would prefer, before I testify, that we identify the documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you this. Let me—

Mr. MASSEY. It appears to have been printed out February 1992. DKS 028928.

Mr. CHERTOFF. 28929?

Mr. MASSEY. 28928, 28929—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Fine. These printouts were generated on February 12, 1992; correct?

Senator DODD. That's the summary.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Mr. MASSEY. No, no, sir. It's not the summary. I want to identify the document so that we're not confused. So that I'm not confused, anyway. I'm talking about DKS 028928. It is a fee client billing and payment history that appears to have been printed out at 8:41, I assume a.m. on 2/12/92.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. And you were asked by Mr. Ben-Veniste whether that was when all these newspaper articles started to appear about Madison and the Rose Law Firm. Isn't it a fact that the—to your knowledge, and I'm obviously not going beyond the limits of your knowledge, didn't these articles actually start to appear somewhat later than the middle of February 1992?

Mr. MASSEY. My recollection was later, yeah, mid-February, something like that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Later than that?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't—there are a lot of articles.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Foster came to you and asked you for your files—you have to pay attention to me, Mr. Massey. Mr. Foster came to you and asked you for your files to prepare—to respond on behalf of the Rose Law Firm to these press inquiries. Did he ever come back to you and ask you for your recollection of what had happened or to explain to him what was in the files?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now finally, let me just—I want to make sure that there's no dispute on the record about this, because I will tell you, Mr. Massey, in many ways this is probably the most important question we've addressed in your examination, and I don't want to sugarcoat it.

We have two documents, one of which is a sworn document, one of which is an unsworn document but still under color of law, provided by Mrs. Clinton, her answers with respect to how this work came in, and you understand, Mr. Massey, we have Mr. McDougal making a public statement to the press that he gave the work to the firm as a benefit to the Clintons, Mr. Latham indicated that the work came over to the firm because it was McDougal's decision to do something for his friends.

You have seen what Mrs. Clinton's version is, but I want to focus your attention very specifically on some things, and I want you to bear in mind in answering the question that there are certain things which are memorable but certain things are quite memorable in an attorney's career and in terms of what an attorney does.

I want to ask you this in respect to the statement in Mrs. Clinton's interview that she recalled Massey came to her and asked her to be the billing attorney, which was a normal practice when an associate was handling a matter. Did you go to Hillary Clinton in April 1985, or before or afterwards and ask her to be the billing attorney on the Madison matter that you were working on?

Mr. MASSEY. I told you before, I don't believe I did. I have no recollection of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it's something you would recall if you did?

Mr. MASSEY. My brain works in funny ways, Mr. Chertoff. I think I would recall it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go to the sworn statement. The sworn statement says, "In the spring of 1985 Massey came to see me," "me" being Hillary Clinton, "because he had learned that certain lawyers at the law firm were opposed to doing any more work for McDougal or any of his companies until he paid his bill and then only if Madison Guaranty agreed to prepay a certain sum to the firm once a month to cover fees and expenses." Did you do that?

Mr. MASSEY. You asked me earlier the best question, the precise question, which was did I go to her with a proposal, and I don't remember anything like that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will read it to you again. "I believe Massey approached me about presenting this proposal to Jim McDougal because he was aware that I knew him." Did you go to Mrs. Clinton about presenting this proposal to do work for the Rose Law Firm to Jim McDougal?

Mr. MASSEY. I am going to tell you what I said earlier, which is I could have had a conversation with her of this substance. I had talked to Latham, he said it is up to McDougal to get the work. Would you chat with McDougal. That's possible. Now, specifically with respect to that, did I go with a proposal and ask her to be the billing attorney? I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that's because Latham didn't even have the authority to enter into an agreement with you about Rose Law representing Madison?

Mr. MASSEY. Well, and in light of the statements that I have read today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The fact of the matter is, to kind of cut it down to the most common sense issue, you did not reach an agreement with John Latham to have the Rose Law Firm represent Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan in any matter?

Mr. MASSEY. That's broader than I think I'm prepared to testify.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now please listen again. You did not reach an agreement—

Mr. MASSEY. An agreement, what is that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. You did not reach an agreement with John Latham that the Rose Law Firm would represent Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan in any matter; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Again, I want to answer your question, but that's a very broad statement. I agreed to perform services for Madison, OK, and I agreed to do certain things, and that—is that a contract? Is that an agreement?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't mean when you started to work on it after the firm was retained.

Mr. MASSEY. I understand.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did not reach an agreement to have the firm retained, have the Rose Law Firm retained by Madison Guaranty with John Latham; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Therefore, you were not able to bring any such agreement in to Mrs. Clinton to have the fee arrangements?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't have any recollection of that, yes—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Massey, let me say something to you. You were there, a first-year associate, if you had brought in this business, it would have been the first piece of business I think you testified that you brought into the firm; right?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. You would have remembered that?

Mr. MASSEY. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't remember bringing that business into the firm?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Nothing further, Mr. Chairman.

Senator SARBANES. Now, Mr. Massey, as I understand your testimony, you talked to Latham about getting business into the Rose Firm from Madison; correct? Because Latham had been asking you lots of questions about securities matters, and I think you testified here somewhere that Rose was you thought the best regional securities law firm?

Mr. MASSEY. We were one of the best around.

Senator SARBANES. Yes. So you talked to Latham about that?

Mr. MASSEY. Sure.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Latham then told you look, I can't decide that, McDougal decides that?

Mr. MASSEY. That's what he told me, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. You say you may have said to Mrs. Clinton in effect here is a chance to get some business but we need to, as it were, kick it upstairs in order to get the business; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. That's possible, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. It's possible that you did that?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. So the statement that Massey approached me about this proposal, and I don't know what the proposal is, but—

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. Chertoff, I think, is trying to distinguish between did I talk to her with respect to how we were going to bill them, whether we get a retainer, did I have a specific engagement agreement of some kind. Sir, I don't have any recollection of that happening. I don't believe it happened that way. Could I have had a conversation with her, can you have a talk with Mr. McDougal, that's very possible. I want to—that's my testimony.

Senator SARBANES. So the issue really comes down to whether the use of this language "this proposal," whether it reflected some fully developed proposal or whether the reference is to trying to get the business? And in any event—

Mr. MASSEY. I don't know what she meant when she said that.

Senator SARBANES. In any event, either way, I don't see where it's a highly relevant point, to be very candid with you. As I understand your testimony here today, though, is you tried to get the business out of Latham and you may have gone to Mrs. Clinton to try to—for her, saying that this is in the offing, we could get this business, but it needs somehow to be brought to closure. Now, you say such a conversation could have happened; is that correct?

Mr. MASSEY. Could have.

Senator DODD. If my colleague would yield, we are using the word "proposal," and I think to the average person a proposal sounds like something more formal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's actually in Mrs. Clinton's sworn statement.

Senator DODD. I know she used the word "proposal," and I am not arguing about the use of the word, but I think how people interpret the word, and if you hear the word "proposal," it has a note of formality to it, a proposal does. I think what some people are suggesting or at least implying, what you have testified to, Mr. Massey, is this wasn't—you don't recall any formal discussion along these lines?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes, sir. No engagement letter, no engagement agreement.

Senator DODD. Which would be normal in a formal proposal. That's how it would be done?

Mr. MASSEY. Mr. Chertoff asked me did I go to her with a proposal in hand, which I think he read to me from a deposition. My interpretation is something that is specific with respect to what we're going to do and how we're going to bill them and how the engagement is going to operate. That is—when I testified that I don't believe it happened that way, that's what I'm saying. I don't recall that—I don't believe that happened.

Senator DODD. I understand. I appreciate that. And yet if the question is framed with the notion did you go to Mrs. Clinton and say I've talked to Latham, Latham thinks that we can have this business, but it isn't his decision to make, it's McDougal's decision to make, now, that's a different proposal and one that you don't have a recollection of, but you're not denying that it occurred?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm not saying that didn't happen. That's up to you all to decide whether it's a proposal.

Senator DODD. I understand.

Senator SARBANES. Mrs. Clinton actually said, "As I recall, McDougal agreed that Massey could proceed with the work and informed me he would arrange to pay the past due bill." And shortly thereafter you did proceed with the work, did you not?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm not sure the gap of time between when we were engaged and when I started with the work. It looks like by the time records that we were engaged and I started working pretty quickly with one another.

Senator SARBANES. Let me ask you this question. You are now a partner and you supervise associates; correct?

Mr. MASSEY. I do.

Senator SARBANES. You review their work and then you bill for the review, of course the associate who does really most of the work also bills for his work; right?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Would you in some instances, when someone said to you, well, you really did a good job on that, say well, the associate here did all the work? Have you done that on occasion, even though you reviewed his work, but it's basically the associate did all the substantive work. You reviewed it, you're entitled to bill for that review and so forth, but have you done that on occasion?

Mr. MASSEY. Some associates would probably argue with me on that, but on occasion I probably have given associates credit where credit is due.

Senator SARBANES. That's right. Mrs. Clinton may have done that in this instance to you in terms of your work?

Mr. MASSEY. It's possible.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you very much.

The CHAIRMAN. I think Senator Bennett has a question.

Senator BENNETT. Obviously I don't want to prolong this, but one quick question, going back to our earlier exchange, which may now be so long ago that you don't recall it, but—

Mr. MASSEY. At least it's not 11 years, Senator.

Senator BENNETT. No, it is not. I must say I am impressed with your memory. I find it—

Mr. MASSEY. I have nothing to hide. I have a very good memory.

Senator BENNETT. You made the comment that only the client knows ultimately why he hired the law firm, and I read to you what Mr. McDougal has said publicly. My question is this: Without making a judgment as to whether McDougal is right or the President is right in his denial of McDougal, is there anything in the McDougal description of how he decided to hire the Rose Law Firm for this purpose that is contradictory to your experience?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, you mean you're asking me to comment on the so-called joggling story?

Senator BENNETT. McDougal—forgetting the sweating and the leather chair, McDougal says he hired the Rose Law Firm because Governor Clinton asked him to. Do you have any experience—

Mr. MASSEY. I can't contradict. I have no idea and I have no experience.

Senator BENNETT. You have no way of corroborating that?

Mr. MASSEY. No, sir.

Senator BENNETT. But your experience of the way the thing was announced within the firm, nothing would come up that would deny that either?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, I don't recall how it was announced within the firm. Typically the announcement is just a pink sheet, a piece of paper. So guns didn't go off and I don't remember there being a general discussion.

Senator BENNETT. But there was nothing in a conversation you had with Mr. Latham or anybody else that would be mutually exclusive with the McDougal description?

Mr. MASSEY. I can't help you one way or another with that story, Senator Bennett.

Senator BENNETT. Thank you.

That's all, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. At some point in time you were called in and you had a meeting with some of the people at the bank, one of them you knew and one of them had been a student of yours, et cetera. Now you're at the law firm. Who called you in?

Mr. MASSEY. Who called me in?

The CHAIRMAN. Who said to you, Mr. Massey, we have this proposal to work on. Who called you in, do you recall?

Mr. MASSEY. I don't. I've been asked that question a lot of times.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't recall if Mrs. Clinton called you in?

Mr. MASSEY. I tell you this, I know I had a meeting with her very early in the engagement.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't meet with any of the other senior partners, did you?

Mr. MASSEY. Sir, are you asking me did she call me, did I attend a meeting in which she was there?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. MASSEY. It appears I met with her. Did we have a meeting that she told me the work is here? It's possible.

The CHAIRMAN. Did she assign the work?

Mr. MASSEY. It's possible.

The CHAIRMAN. The billing records indicate she had done some work initially before you got started?

Mr. MASSEY. Same day, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. Same day, contemporaneously. If you had brought the client in, you would know that you brought the client in, we went over that. First-year associate, 8 months, you would have known that, it would have been memorable, wouldn't it? Yes or no?

Mr. MASSEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Massey, this isn't easy for us and it must be extraordinarily difficult for you, given the totality of your circumstances in terms of where you work and your relationship with your fellow associates. I want to thank you for your candor and being as honest as possible. Some of us have different interpretations. Some will speculate about what certain people were thinking, but you can't testify to people's state of mind, so that really places you in a difficult position. So you certainly handled yourself well, and I certainly want to thank you for your cooperation.

Senator Sarbanes, if you have anything?

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, just let me observe that the report of the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro on this retainer, and the suggestion that the retainer was paid because the Clintons wanted the money rather than for services rendered, and the report then refutes that assertion. I mean this is the McDougal story about Clinton, and it goes on and sets out three reasons why this suggestion would be wrong. They analyze it as an advance fee payment if services were rendered, that the unused portion was returned, as I understand it, from the law firm to McDougal, and third, that in light of the failure for them to have paid previous bills, they could hardly be blamed for seeking advance payments for agreeing to represent McDougal once again. But this report, I gather, has now been released and is now publicly available. This is the one I think that cost what $4 million to the RTC to have done?

The CHAIRMAN. I think we overpaid them.

Senator SARBANES. Actually it addresses a preferred stock offering on the brokerage work which Mr. Massey has been talking about here today.

Senator DODD. If my colleague would yield on that, let me tell you, if this report that they spent 2 years on at the cost of $4 million had reached a different conclusion, we would be gagging on it, it would have been literally disseminated everywhere. That's the point here.

Here is a report that exonerates them at least on the civil side of this, and it is sort of buried away instead of trying to get it out. That's the difference here. That's why I raised the issue earlier. I mean, we all know as a matter of fact, had that firm, the Stevens' firm, charged the Clintons with illegality in these areas, this would have been absolutely everywhere in the country, all over the place. The fact that it exonerates them, we don't hear about it. That's the concern.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Just one last point which seems obvious to me. How many people were in the securities area of your firm back at the time this matter came in?

Mr. MASSEY. People—lawyers?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. MASSEY. Associates, partners—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Partners and associates.

Mr. MASSEY. Bear with me—12 to 15.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Twelve to 15 and you were more or less at the bottom of the food chain?

Mr. MASSEY. Absolutely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yet when the matter came in, there wasn't any question but that it was going to be Rich Massey who was going to get this matter to work on; correct? So there can be no inference other than there was a direct relationship to the conversations that you had had with Latham, the fact that immediately you go and you get guidance from one of the senior partners in your firm on the very first day that any work is done on this, correct, from Mr. Baledge, is it?

Mr. MASSEY. Baledge was a senior associate at the time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senior associate at the time, that you were going to get the responsibility for this matter from the securities group standpoint. That wasn't a coincidence in your mind, was it?

Mr. MASSEY. I'm sorry, I don't follow you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were assigned to the case, even though you were at the bottom of the food chain in the securities department; correct? It isn't as though—

Mr. MASSEY. I was assigned because I was at the bottom of the food chain? I'm sorry—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No. It isn't as though this was the luck of the draw, some lottery, the Rose Law Firm lands a new client, Madison Bank, and they say let's spin the wheel and see which person of the dozen in the securities department gets assigned this matter. Quite clearly, it went immediately to you.

Mr. MASSEY. I'm just going to say that Latham, which this is the first time I saw this testimony, he said he asked for me.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And quite clearly all of this came together on the basis of the fact that you had pitched Latham for the business, Mrs. Clinton had had the relationship with McDougal and the case came in and you were assigned to do the work? Fair?

The CHAIRMAN. Don't open that door. He has already answered that question. The record is pretty clear, Counselor, as it relates to his answers.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Don't answer my question.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, if you assume that we will go right back and ask again to look—

Mr. MASSEY. Would you repeat the question?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Isn't it a fair conclusion to reach that on the basis of your relationship with Mr. Latham and the free advice that you had given him before, the fact that you pitched Mr. Latham for the business on behalf of the Rose Firm, the fact that Latham said he didn't have the relationship with Mr. McDougal—that he did not have the decisionmaking authority, that that was Mr. McDougal's bailiwick, that you knew that Mrs. Clinton had an acquaintance with Mr. McDougal, given all of those circumstances, isn't it a fair conclusion that this was a team effort to bring a new client into the firm in which you played a not insignificant role?

Mr. MASSEY. "Team effort" meaning there was more than one person trying to get the work?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. MASSEY. Sure.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nothing further.

Mr. MASSEY. I have testified that I pitched the business, and—so I can answer the question. I testified that I pitched the business, so I guess if Mrs. Clinton asked for the business and I asked for the business, that's a team effort.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There you go.

Mr. MASSEY. That's your definition. That's fine.

The CHAIRMAN. We're not going to pursue that any further, and again Mr. Massey, I want to thank you for your candor. The Committee will have to hear the testimony of others, and then consider all the testimony. You must listen to all the other testimony in order to make those judgments. I'm not going to ask you to make that judgment.

I thank my colleagues. Mr. Clark, we will try to accommodate your schedule, as well as the Committee's to give you an opportunity to testify. We will work with the Minority. I don't think the Minority wants to break now and then come to you but we are certainly willing to receive your testimony.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, we understand these folks need to catch a plane, otherwise they run the risk of being snowed in given the weather forecast, and we have gone much, much longer than I ever anticipated. We do want Mr. Clark here.

The CHAIRMAN. I agree.

Senator SARBANES. We will work with you to get him, I assume next week if possible.

The CHAIRMAN. If we can do it next week.

Senator SARBANES. I think his testimony is relevant and pertinent at this point in time.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we work it out with the Committee's schedule as well as Mr. Clark's so that he does not come next week and then the following week. There are several witnesses that we still want to examine so that when we do examine Mr. Clark, we can be as thorough and comprehensive as possible and complete it in one sitting, but I'll leave it to the Committee staff to work—

Senator SARBANES. I think we need to give some thought to it. I don't think we ought to have the situation in which we have a witness at the table who can't give an answer and a lot of to-do is made about the not being able to answer, when if Mr. Clark was here, he could provide the answer, in terms of an orderly process.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me simply say that the issues of most concern certainly were within Mr. Massey's but not Mr. Clark's knowledge, so Mr. Massey was the proper witness to examine, and that's why he was scheduled. He knows what he said, he knows what work he did, he knows how this work to the best of his ability came about, and he knows who brought the client in and who didn't. He testified to the best of his ability. I don't think Mr. Clark, unless he's going to tell us next week, will testify that he brought the client in or that he knows anything different. He certainly—

Mr. MASSEY. He better not, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I didn't think he was going to, so that's why we tried to limit this particular panel. As I said, we would be willing to take a break and come back but obviously the weather is such that both Mr. Massey and Mr. Clark want to catch a plane and get out of here and not get snowed in, but we'll give you an opportunity and try to do it within your schedule, Mr. Clark.

Mr. CLARK. Senator D'Amato, I will say, I will certainly work with the Committee with my schedule. I was here for one reason and one reason only and that's because I am Chief Operating Officer of the Rose Law Firm and one of my partners was called to testify. I intend to be here when any one of my partners testify. I was not here to testify, I was here for Mr. Massey.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Very good. That was our understanding. We did not know or think that there would be any need to go into anything that would be particularly within your knowledge.

Having said that, we will certainly look to those areas that we might be examining for you and the other members of the firm and we will try to work cooperatively with you so that we don't have you coming back and forth.

The Committee stands in recess.

Senator SARBANES. When will we meet again, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Tuesday.

Senator SARBANES. What time?

The CHAIRMAN. At 10 a.m.

Senator SARBANES. And the panel?

The CHAIRMAN. Kennedy, Eggleston, and Lindsey.

Senator SARBANES. I understood you're going to have hearings on Wednesday and Thursday as well?

The CHAIRMAN. Thursday as well.

Senator SARBANES. Not Wednesday?

The CHAIRMAN. Thursday, Carolyn Huber.

Senator SARBANES. Could I suggest that Counsels meet, Mr. Chairman, to try to project forward the hearing schedules? I think we need to do some careful work on this.

The CHAIRMAN. I agree. We stand in recess.

[Whereupon, at 3:36 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to reconvene at 10 a.m., on Tuesday, January 16, 1996.]

[Appendix supplied for the record follows:]

CONFIDENTIAL

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
 RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION
 WASHINGTON, D. C.

IN THE MATTER OF:

Madison Guaranty Savings
 & Loan Association (7236)
 McCrory, Arkansas

ORDER OF INVESTIGATION
 (Feb. 4, 1994)

INTERROGATORY RESPONSES OF
 HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

Interrogatory No. 1: DESCRIBE each and every occasion before August 1978 on which YOU:

(a) Bought real estate;

In late 1976, my husband and I purchased a residence at 5419
 L Street in Little Rock, Arkansas.

(b) Obtained bank financing for a real estate acquisition;

My husband and I financed the 1976 purchase of our Little Rock home with a mortgage loan from Capital Savings & Loan Association of Little Rock.

(c) Sold real estate;

I can recall no such occasion prior to August, 1978.

(d) Invested in real estate (including any investments in corporations and partnerships that dealt primarily in real estate). In answering this interrogatory, be sure to DESCRIBE the real estate transactions referred to in documents DKRT900707,
 DKRT900715 and DKRT900716.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For ease of reference, I attach to these interrogatory responses the documents which the RTC appended to its interrogatories. These documents are marked with tabs

DKSN000767

CONFIDENTIAL

Interrogatory No. 17: With respect to the Rose Law Firm's representation of MADISON GUARANTY in 1985 and 1986:

(a) ~~Was Mrs. Clinton the lawyer responsible for obtaining this business for the Rose Law Firm? If not, who was?~~

The Rose Law Firm had first represented Jim McDougal in about 1981 with respect to litigation arising out of his purchase of the Bank of Kingston. I did not work on the 1981 matter, but I recall that Jim disputed the amount of his final bill and refused to pay the entire amount requested.

To the best of my recollection, ~~the~~ president of Madison Guaranty, John Latham, who was a friend of an associate at the Rose Law Firm, Richard Massey, became interested in having Madison Guaranty issue some kind of preferred stock to raise capital. Latham had spoken to Massey about doing the related legal work. In the spring of 1985, Massey came to see me because he had learned that certain lawyers at the law firm were opposed to doing any more work for Jim McDougal or any of his companies until he paid his bill and then only if Madison Guaranty agreed to prepay a certain sum to the firm once a month to cover fees and expenses. Under such an arrangement, the firm could be assured that Madison Guaranty was staying current with regard to paying for the new work that the firm might do for it.

I believe Massey approached me about presenting this proposal to Jim McDougal because he was aware that I knew him. I agreed to go see McDougal. I visited him at his office on April 23, 1985, and told him that I understood Latham wanted Massey to

DKSN000800

OFFICIAL RECORD OF INTERVIEW
OFFICE OF INVESTIGATIONS
OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

CASE NUMBER: I094-096

PARTICIPANTS: [REDACTED], Senior Special Agent, FDIC OIG; [REDACTED] Senior Special Agent, FDIC OIG; Hillary Rodham Clinton; David E. Kendall, Esq.; Nicole Seligman, Esq.

DATE/TIME/LOCATION: November 10, 1994; 0930 to 1030; The Treaty Room, White House Residence, 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.

INTERVIEW CONDUCTED: XXXX In Person ____ By Phone ____

PURPOSE: To interview Mrs. Clinton regarding her former employment at the Rose Law Firm, Little Rock, Arkansas

RESULTS: The interview of Mrs. Clinton began after SSA [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] identified themselves orally and by displaying their credentials. At the outset of the interview, Mrs. Clinton declined to be placed under oath regarding the information to be discussed. It was also explained that the interview was intended to obtain clarification or supplemental information to a sworn affidavit Mrs. Clinton executed September 16, 1994. The affidavit was provided in response to a number of questions previously provided to Mrs. Clinton by the FDIC OIG.

Mrs. Clinton was asked when and under what circumstances she met Dan Lasater. Mrs. Clinton acknowledged having met Mr. Lasater on approximately two occasions but was uncertain as to the exact circumstances. She recalled that it may have been in conjunction with a school function involving her daughter Chelsea and one or more of Mr. Lasater's children who attended the same school in Little Rock. Mrs. Clinton indicated she had no professional or business relationship, including any legal representation at any time, of Mr. Lasater. She stated she had no way of knowing what, if any, relationship President Clinton may have or have had with Mr. Lasater.

Mrs. Clinton was asked regarding Mr. Lasater's private airplane and usage of that aircraft. She stated she never travelled on Mr. Lasater's airplane and had no knowledge of President Clinton having travelled on Mr. Lasater's plane. Mrs. Clinton was shown flight logs for Mr. Lasater's plane which included then Governor Clinton and others; Mrs. Clinton stated she had no collection of these trips. Mrs. Clinton also indicated she had no knowledge of Roger Clinton having travelled on Mr. Lasater's plane. Shown some of the passengers names, Mrs. Clinton identified Dick Kelley as the husband of President Clinton's mother, Virginia Kelley; she also identified Linda Lasater as Dan Lasater's wife.

Mrs. Clinton indicated she had no knowledge or recollection regarding Mr. Lasater having sold his company in 1986 and did not recall having performed any legal work relating to the Lasater and Company lawsuit involving First American Savings and Loan. Specifically, she indicated having no recollection participating in the settlement negotiations related to this lawsuit or ever having discussed this matter with Mr. Lasater. She stated she never performed any legal services work for Mr. Lasater. Further, Mrs. Clinton indicated she did not ever discuss the lawsuit with anyone outside the RLF.

Mrs. Clinton was asked several questions related to the First American Savings and Loan Association v Lasater and Company suit which was filed in October 1985. Mrs. Clinton stated she had no recollection of that litigation but had been informed, probably by Mr. Kendall, that Vincent Foster handled the matter. Mrs. Clinton was shown a copy of the document and asked why she signed a pleading and a motion on behalf of Mr. Foster instead of Michael Bennett, an attorney who normally assisted Mr. Foster. Mrs. Clinton was uncertain as to why she signed the documents and did not even recall having done so but indicated it was normal RLF practice for a partner to sign such documents and Mr. Bennett was an Associate. Mrs. Clinton related she had no knowledge or recollection of the issue of an amended complaint or the original complaint and, accordingly, was unable to provide any information regarding these issues.

Mrs. Clinton stated she was unaware of any information regarding Mr. Lasater having sold his interest in Lasater and Company before the time she worked the two hours which were billed to the FSLIC. Further, in response to the question of whether Mr. Foster had done so, Mrs. Clinton stated she did not recall whether Mr. Foster circulated a memorandum to RLF attorneys querying the staff regarding possible conflicts of interest. She stated her opinion would be that whatever procedures were normally followed at the RLF were probably also followed in the First American matter which was principally handled by Mr. Foster.

Mrs. Clinton was asked to describe her relationship with Ms. Patsy Thomasson. She stated she met Ms. Thomasson at the time of Mrs. Clinton's arrival in Little Rock, probably in the late 1970's. She stated Ms. Thomasson was active in the Arkansas Democratic Party politics where she was working for Senator David Pryor. She recalled that she and Ms. Thomasson used the same hairdresser and they became friends. Mrs. Clinton learned that Ms. Thomasson was working for Dan Lasater although Mrs. Clinton was unaware of any RLF attorney, including herself, having ever provided her, Mr. Lasater or the company any legal advice or representation. She recalled that Ms. Thomasson had a position of apparently great responsibility with Mr. Lasater's company and that it occasionally became stressful for Ms. Thomasson particularly during the time when she was caring for her elderly mother who was very ill and later died.

Mrs. Clinton stated she was unaware if Ms. Thomasson had power of attorney file Mr. Lasater was in prison in 1987. She stated she never discussed the First American v. Lasater lawsuit with Ms. Thomasson or Mr. Lasater.

5. Clinton was asked several questions relative to RLF work regarding Home Federal Savings. Mrs. Clinton indicated she had no knowledge or collection regarding any matters involving Home Federal and is unaware of ever having done any work on this matter or having been involved in any settlement negotiations. She stated she does not recall ever discussing the Home Federal case with anyone, particularly Mr. Lasater or Ms. Thomasson. She had no recollection regarding Tom Mars, a former RLF attorney, being substituted as counsel for United Capital after Mr. Lasater gained control of the company.

6. Clinton was then asked several questions regarding the RLF doing work regarding Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association and related actions with RLF attorneys. First, Mrs. Clinton was asked whether Webster Hubbell sent a memorandum to other RLF attorneys regarding conflicts of interest prior to agreeing to litigate the Madison lawsuit against Frost. Mrs. Clinton said she did not specifically recall this having been done although this would be the normal practice and probably what was done in this case. Mrs. Clinton indicated she did not consider herself to be the attorney of record for Rose's representation of Madison before the ASD and presumed it to be Rick Massey. She recalled Massey came to her and asked her to be the RLF attorney which was a normal practice when an associate was handling a matter. She said that she believed Madison (then as Madison National Bank) had been a client of the RLF since 1982 and that Vincent Foster had been the responsible attorney. Later, in 1985, Mrs. Clinton recalled that an (individual unknown) approached Rick Massey regarding a preferred stock offering in an effort to raise capital.

Regarding Rose working on the Frost litigation, Mrs. Clinton stated she did not think it was a conflict of interest because of Rose's prior work on litigation involving the Arkansas Securities Department. Mrs. Clinton indicated that it would have been normal to advise Webster Hubbell regarding her work involving the Arkansas Securities Department although she has no memory of doing so. She believed that Rick Massey probably advised Hubbell about this issue. Regarding the Frost litigation which was handled by RLF, Mrs. Clinton was asked if she recused herself from this matter. She did not recall recusing herself from this matter although she did recuse herself from all matters involving the State of Arkansas because of her husband's position as governor. Mrs. Clinton stated she does not believe Rose had a conflict of interest regarding Madison.

Clinton indicated she has known Beverly Bassett Schaeffer (Arkansas Securities Department) and her family for approximately 20 years. When Rick Massey prepared a letter to Ms. Bassett Schaeffer, Mrs. Clinton's name was used as the RLF contact because she was a partner and Massey only an associate.

Clinton was shown a January 30, 1986 RLF bill to Madison Guaranty for $70,000; she did not recall the matter but presumed her name was listed as a billing partner.

Clinton was shown a January 23, 1986 memo from Rick Donovan re Madison

Guaranty v. IDC. She recalled the issue pertained to researching townships and the topic of "wet/dry" licensing approval for alcohol consumption. She stated this matter was handled by Rick Donovan.

Mrs. Clinton was asked regarding discussions with RLF attorney Carol Arnold and a client who had painted a portrait for Madison Guaranty. She stated she did not recall any discussions regarding this matter.

Regarding Webster Hubbell and the Ward family, Mrs. Clinton said she knew Seth Ward as Mrs. Susie Hubbell's father. She did not know what Deta Corporation was but acknowledged knowing that P. O. M., Inc. was a Rose client. She indicated Webster Hubbell and other lawyers at the firm did work for POM. She said she believed Hubbell also represented Seth Ward as an individual on many issues. Mrs. Clinton stated she did not recall ever having personally worked with or for Webster Hubbell on any issues involving POM, although she stated Mr. Kendall told her she probably did do some work on it. She stated she was unaware of Mr. Hubbell being a corporate official of POM and was unaware of any "firewall" which may have been arranged at the RLF regarding Mr. Hubbell and Ward. Further, she stated she was unaware that Mr. Ward had filed suit against Madison.

Mrs. Clinton was asked when was the last time she spoke with Mr. Hubbell. She indicated it was several weeks ago when he attended a surprise birthday party for her at the White House. She stated she has never discussed any issues regarding Madison Guaranty or other matters currently being investigated.

Mrs. Clinton was asked about her relationship with Harold Ickes. She stated she has known him for approximately 20 years. She did not recall how he may have been involved in any POM issues but opined she may have referred some legal work to Mr. Ickes' New York firm.

Regarding Patricia Heritage, Mrs. Clinton indicated she knows her and that she had been hired by the RLF Commercial Section. She, however, was not a part of any conversations which may have been conducted at the RLF involving whether or not to hire Ms. Heritage.

Mrs. Clinton was asked about Ms. Jenny Baldrige Speed. She acknowledged knowing her as Gary Speed's wife but stated she was unaware Ms. Speed had been a part owner of Madison.

Mrs. Clinton was also asked questions about having worked on Penn Square Savings and Loan and Savers Savings and Loan; she stated she did not recall having worked on either of these institutions. Specifically, regarding Penn Square, she has no recollection of ever working on a lawsuit involving Southwest Drilling Associates.

Mrs. Clinton was asked about Lee Bowman and First South Savings and Loan Association; Mrs. Clinton indicated she had no recollection of this matter although she stated she does know Mr. Bowman.

Regarding Babcock loans and Madison Guaranty, Mrs. Clinton stated she only had a vague recollection of this matter and that it was somehow related to Madison.

Mrs. Clinton was asked if she ever represented Jim Guy Tucker and she said she had not; she was also asked about the Castle Grande sewer project and indicated she was familiar with the name but had no other knowledge of the matter.

Regarding FirstSouth Savings, Mrs. Clinton recalled there were issues involving C. Joseph Giroir, a former Rose partner, but was unaware of what those issues may have been. She stated she had no involvement with the FSLIC and any negotiations involving FirstSouth or Mr. Giroir.

Mrs. Clinton was asked to describe her present contacts with the RLF and/or attorneys assigned there. She stated that she has had no professional or business dealings with the RLF or any of its attorneys since coming to Washington in January 1993. She has had occasional personal contacts on a few occasions with a few of the attorneys. For example, she said she met with Carol Arnold recently while she (Mrs. Clinton) was in Seattle.

Mrs. Clinton was asked if she had any other information she would like to relate regarding any of the subjects discussed or described in her affidavit. She indicated she had no further information to relate and the interview was concluded at 10:33 a.m.

END OF RECORD OF INTERVIEW; PAGE 5 OF 5

Prepared by: [REDACTED]

Date: 12/6/94

Concurred by: [REDACTED]

Date: 12/6/94

LAW OFFICES OF
ROSE LAW FIRM
 A PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATION
 120 EAST FOURTH STREET

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201

CLIENT: 90203

PHONE (501) 378-9131

MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS/LOAN
 CO. JOHN LATHAM, PRESIDENT
 10TH AND MAIN
 LITTLE ROCK, AR 72201

INVOICE # 4

PLEASE MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO ROSE LAW FIRM (TAX ID #71-0458814) - RETURN THIS STUB WITH YOUR CHECK

FEDERAL LEGAL SERVICES RENDERED IN CONNECTION WITH PAID 2018.00

MATTER: (1)

CK #

DATE: 5-21-85

STOCK OFFERING

04/23/85 H. CLINTON

04/23/85 L. BALEDGE
 04/23/85 R. MASSEY

04/24/85 H. CLINTON

04/24/85 S. GRIMES

04/24/85 R. MASSEY

04/25/85 H. CLINTON

04/25/85 R. MASSEY

04/26/85 W. GREGORY

04/26/85 R. MASSEY

04/29/85 H. CLINTON

CONFERENCE WITH J. MCCUGAL AND J. LATHAM; CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY; CONFERENCE WITH W. GREGORY; CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY; RESEARCH ON PREFERRED STOCK OFFERING; CONFERENCE WITH JOHN LATHAM; CONFERENCE WITH HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON; CONFERENCE WITH LES BALEDGE; TELEPHONE CONFERENCES WITH R. MASSEY, JOHN LATHAM, DAVIS PITTHUIS; CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY; REVIEW DRAFT DOCUMENTS; DRAFT MINUTES, RESOLUTIONS TO AMEND CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION TO CREATE CLASS OF PREFERRED STOCK PER R. MASSEY'S INSTRUCTIONS; RELATED RESEARCH; PREFERRED STOCK OFFERING; RESEARCH STATE & FEDERAL LAW ON STOCK AUTHORITY; DRAFTING DOCUMENTS; REVIEW OF SUBSCRIPTION AGREEMENTS; CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY; DRAFTING & REVISE DOCUMENTS; CONFERENCE WITH JOHN LATHAM AND HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON; CONFERENCES WITH R. MASSEY REGARDING CAPITAL - RAISING PLANS; REVIEW OF CONSENT ON DRAFT SUBSCRIPTION AGREEMENT; CONFERENCE WITH JOHN LATHAM REGARDING CLASS; RESEARCH ESOLIC REGISTRATION STATEMENT; DRAFTING DOCUMENTS; TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY; TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY

ROSE LAW FIRM

DKSN028934

Recap of fees from Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan
FINAL RECORD

1983 None

1984 None

1985 January - None

Feb./Mar./April '85
None

May '85
Baldridge	Madison Guaranty			82.50
Massey	Madison Guaranty			695.50
S. Grimes	Madison Guaranty			250.00
Clinton	Madison Guaranty			840.00

June '85
Clinton	Madison Guaranty			60.00
Massey	Madison Guaranty/stock offering			146.00
Massey	Madison Guaranty/stock offering			819.00

July '85
G. Thomas	Madison Guaranty/Stock			90.00
Giroux	"	"	"	55.00
Massey	"	"	"	1,191.00
Law Clerks	"	"	"	210.00
Clinton	"	"	"	144.00

Aug/Sept/Oct. '85
None

Nov. '85
Thrasn	Madison Guaranty/IDC			550.00
Thrasn	"	"	"	283.50
Thrasn	"	"	/Stock offering	155.50
Speed	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering			12.50
Massey	"	"	"	552.50

Dec. '85
Gary Garrett	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering			585.00
Giroux	"	"	"	100.00
Giroux	"	"	"	225.00
Massey	"	"	"	555.00
Massey	"	"	"	437.50
Massey	"	"	"	214.00
Clinton	"	"	"	88.00
Clinton	Madison Guaranty			232.50
Donovan	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering			90.00

RLF2 01010

0000103
- 111 111

1986

January 86
Donovan	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering & IDC		98.71
Cave Thomas	" " " "		79.41
Massey	" " " "		982.50
Massey	Madison Guaranty/General Partnership		155.00
S. Grimes	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering		62.00
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering & IDC	1	731.25
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/General Partnership		62.50
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering		502.50
March 86
Donovan	Madison Guaranty/IDC Stock offering		225.00
B. Arnold	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering		80.00
April 86
B. Arnold	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering		255.00
Donovan	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering		112.75
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/Stock Offering		12.50
Clinton	" " " "		252.50
May 86
Clinton	Madison Guaranty		82.25
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/Securcx	1,050.00
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/IDC		70.00
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/General		297.11
Massey	Madison Guaranty/General		112.50
B. Arnold	Madison Guaranty/IDC		48.00
July 86
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/General		56.00
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/Securcx		108.00
October 86
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/Securcx Loan		84.00

1987

September 1987
Clinton	Madison Guaranty/General		500.00

RLF2 01011

MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS & LOAN
AND WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT COMPANY, INC.

A SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT TO THE RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION

Prepared by

Pillsbury Madison & Sutro LLP
San Francisco, California

With financial and economic analysis support from

Tucker Alan Inc.
Seattle, Washington

December 13, 1995

CONFIDENTIAL—PRODUCED BY THE RTC TO THE
SENATE SPECIAL COMMITTEE

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
I. INTRODUCTION .....	1
II. SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS OF NEWLY RECEIVED INFORMATION PERTAINING TO THE TRANSACTIONS PRESENTED IN THE PRELIMINARY REPORT .....	4
A. The applicable legal standard .....	4
B. Analysis of damages .....	4
C. Analysis of liability .....	8
1. Transactions benefiting West-Ark Construction .....	9
a. Transaction 1 (chart 8), August-September 1984 .....	9
b. Transaction 3A (chart 9), November 1984 ...	12
c. Analysis .....	13
2. Transactions benefiting Madison Marketing .....	13
a. Transaction 3B (chart 10), November 1984 ...	13
b. Transaction 9 (chart 13), October-November 1985 .....	15
c. Analysis .....	17
3. Transaction benefiting Bill Henley: Transaction 6 (chart 11), January 1985 .....	20
4. Transactions benefiting the McDougals (charts 12, 12A and 14) .....	22
a. The $30,000 bonus paid in April 1985 (chart 14) .....	22
b. Transaction 8 (charts 12 and 12A), April 1985- April 1986 .....	28

i.	The $75,949 bonus paid to Jim McDougal in January 1986 .....	29
ii.	The $300,000 loan made to Susan McDougal in April 1986 .....	33
5.	Summary .....	34
D.	Analysis of possible claims .....	35
1.	Common law fraud .....	35
a.	The $30,000 McDougal bonus .....	35
b.	Transaction 8 .....	36
c.	The other traceable transactions .....	36
2.	Conversion .....	37
3.	Breach of fiduciary duty .....	39
4.	Check kiting .....	39
5.	Conspiracy .....	40
6.	Aiding and abetting .....	41
E.	Cost-effectiveness .....	43
III.	SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS OF NEWLY RECEIVED INFORMATION PERTAINING TO THE CLINTONS .....	45
A.	Background to Whitewater .....	45
B.	1978-1982: The initial phase of the project .....	46
1.	1978-1979: The original purchase of the land and the creation of the company .....	46
2.	Whitewater, the corporation .....	48
3.	Project marketing and management .....	50
4.	The investors' expectations .....	50

C.	1979-81: The years of land sales .....	51
1.	Operations and cash flow in fiscal year 1980 .....	52
2.	The bank debt as of August 1980 .....	52
3.	Developments in the fall of 1980 .....	54
4.	Whitewater after three years .....	55
D.	1982-1985: The years of minimal sales and negative cash flows .....	55
1.	The sale of lot 13 to Hilman Logan and the repayment of Mrs. Clinton's Madison Bank loan .....	55
2.	The Clintons' loan from Citizens Bank of Jonesboro ...	56
3.	Renewal of the Citizens Bank mortgage loan and origination of the Citizens Bank interest funding loan ..	57
4.	Problems at Madison Bank .....	58
5.	The refinancing of Mrs. Clinton's Madison bank loan using money that Governor Clinton borrowed from Citizens Bank of Paragould .....	58
6.	Operations and cash flow for fiscal year 1984 .....	59
7.	Madison Guaranty's examination and supervisory agreement .....	60
E.	Investigation of the possible flow of funds from Madison Guaranty to Whitewater .....	60
F.	Investigation of other possible connections between Madison Guaranty and Whitewater .....	61
1.	1985: The McDougal bonus and the payments to Senator Fulbright .....	61
2.	1985: Contributions to the Clinton campaign .....	61
3.	1986-1988: David Hale and the International Paper deal .....	62

G.	1985-1992: Whitewater after the land was gone . . . . .	64
1.	The bulk sale to Ozark Air and its assumption of some of the debt . . . . .	64
2.	The decline in the recourse debt . . . . .	65
3.	Operations and cash flow in fiscal years 1985 and 1986 . . . . .	65
4.	The Lyons report . . . . .	66
5.	The 1986 examination of Madison Guaranty, the cease and desist order and McDougal's final removal from Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial . . . . .	67
6.	Mrs. Clinton's work on matters related to Whitewater after Jim McDougal ceased to manage Whitewater's financial affairs . . . . .	68
7.	The Clintons sell their remaining interest to McDougal . . . . .	69
H.	The Clintons' knowledge . . . . .	70
I.	Analysis . . . . .	76
IV.	RECOMMENDATION . . . . .	78

CONFIDENTIAL—PRODUCED BY THE RTC TO THE
SENATE SPECIAL COMMITTEE

I. INTRODUCTION.

On February 4, 1994, the Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC") issued an Order of Investigation in the matter of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, McCrory, Arkansas ("Madison Guaranty"). The Order of Investigation stated (among other things) that the investigation would seek to determine whether former officers, directors and others who provided services to, or otherwise dealt with, Madison Guaranty . . . its successors or affiliates, may be liable as a result of any actions, or failures to act, in connection with or which may have affected Madison, its successors or affiliates . . . .

The Order was issued consistent with 12 U.S.C. § 1441a(b)(14), as modified by the RTC Completion Act of 1993, Public Law 103-204. That statute extended the limitations period applicable to RTC claims arising from fraud, intentional misconduct resulting in unjust enrichment and intentional misconduct resulting in substantial losses to the institution.

The focus of the investigation was shaped by several factors. First, a number of the officers, directors and other people involved with Madison Guaranty and related entities had been released from liability or discharged in bankruptcy, or had only minimal assets to satisfy any judgment that the RTC might obtain against them. Second, the losses associated with a number of the real estate loans and projects were, standing alone, too small to make it likely that litigation could be cost-effective. Third, it became apparent that funds had been transferred among individuals and entities associated with Madison Guaranty or with Madison Guaranty's principal owners, Jim and Susan McDougal, in ways that could not readily be justified or explained.

In light of these factors, (1) the investigation of real estate loans and projects focused primarily on the two transactions presenting the strongest combination of facts and possible sources of recovery (Castle Grande and 1308 Main Street, Little Rock); (2) the investigation of other real estate loans and projects looked for patterns and practices of misconduct that might make it cost-effective and not unduly complex to add these transactions to any litigation that might be brought based on Castle Grande and 1308 Main Street; and (3) the investigation of Whitewater included an effort, using forensic accountants, to trace funds back to Madison Guaranty and, in so doing, to look for patterns and practices of misconduct in the funds transfers among individuals and entities associated with Madison Guaranty or with Jim and Susan McDougal.

The Whitewater part of the investigation resulted in a Preliminary Report on Whitewater dated April 24, 1995 (the "Preliminary Report"). This report supplements that Preliminary Report. Other reports cover the other parts of the investigation.

The Preliminary Report was based principally upon an intensive review of the available documentation on Madison Guaranty, on Whitewater and on various other entities owned or controlled by the principal shareholders of Madison Guaranty, Jim and Susan McDougal. In addition, the Preliminary Report was based upon depositions and interviews of Jim Clark, David Capes, Steve Cuffman, Don Denton, Pat Harris, Sarah Hawkins, Charles James, Bob Keller, Charles Peacock III, R. D. Randolph, John Selig, Sue Strayhorn, Tommy Trantham and Chris Wade.

Efforts have been made to obtain information from those most closely associated with Whitewater, including the Clintons, Charles James, the McDougals and Chris Wade. Before the completion of the Preliminary Report, James and Wade were interviewed, and the McDougals both declined to be deposed, basing their refusal on the Fifth Amendment. Since the completion of the Preliminary Report, President and Mrs. Clinton each have answered extensive sets of interrogatories, and their counsel, David E. Kendall, has supplemented his earlier document productions. Efforts have been made to interview Chris Wade in more depth. He has refused, basing his refusal on the Fifth Amendment. Efforts also have been made to take statements from David Hale and John Latham but they remain unavailable due to the ongoing Independent Counsel investigation.

Part II of this report supplements the Preliminary Report with newly received evidence regarding the flow-of-funds investigation presented in part VII of the Preliminary Report. This evidence consists chiefly of additional documents obtained from the RTC's Kansas City office and additional interviews of former Madison Guaranty employees Paul Castleberry and Greg Young. The Preliminary Report sought to trace funds from Madison Guaranty to Whitewater but did not determine whether such funds transfers actually damaged Madison Guaranty; the new evidence helps determine whether Madison Guaranty was damaged. For some of the traceable transactions, no basis was found to conclude that the transaction damaged Madison Guaranty. For other transactions (transaction 8 presented in part VII of the Preliminary Report and the $30,000 McDougal bonus presented in part VIII.A of the Preliminary Report), the new evidence suggests that the transaction did damage Madison Guaranty. Overall, the new evidence tends to confirm the Preliminary Report's observation that the movement of funds among McDougal-controlled entities and from them to Whitewater was not unique, but instead was one example of a broader pattern of funds transfers by the McDougals between and among entities they owned or controlled, apparently motivated by the McDougals' need for funds with which to pay their debts.

Part II also analyzes whether the RTC can state a claim against anyone based on the Whitewater part of the investigation. The conclusion reached is that no cost-effective claim can be asserted except possibly as to one aspect of transaction 8. This aspect is a subject of the indictment brought by the Independent Counsel against the McDougals and Jim Guy Tucker; it has only a tangential connection to Whitewater. This conclusion does not necessarily mean that the other transactions discussed in the Preliminary Report have been proved legitimate or that the evidence exonerates anyone; it simply means that no basis has been found to sue anyone, or in some instances that litigation would not be cost-effective.

Part III of this report supplements the Preliminary Report with newly received evidence pertaining to the Clintons. This evidence consists chiefly of the interrogatory responses of President and Mrs. Clinton, additional documents received from Kendall in late May 1995 and the documents mentioning Whitewater that Kendall received from the White House in July 1993 (the documents from the office of the late Vincent W. Foster, Jr.).<sup>1</sup> This evidence has been examined against the previously available evidence both for points of consistency and for points of inconsistency. With minor exceptions, the new evidence is consistent with the previously available evidence.

Part III also addresses the questions posed but not fully answered in the Preliminary Report as to whether the Clintons knew about the McDougals' advances to Whitewater, about the source of the funds used by the McDougals to make those advances or about the source of the funds used to make payments on bank debt. The conclusion reached is that no such knowledge can be demonstrated.

Finally, part IV of this report contains recommendations that no further resources be expended on the Whitewater part of the investigation and that a final decision with respect to Transaction 8 be postponed until the criminal proceedings brought by the Independent Counsel are resolved.

---

1 The documents received from Kendall in May 1995 bear the prefix "DKRT11" (meaning box 11 of the DKRT documents) followed by six digits. The documents received from Kendall in July 1995 (the Foster documents, described by Kendall as "all documents mentioning Whitewater in the files this firm received from the White House on July 27, 1993") bear the prefix "DKSN" followed by six digits. The additional documents received from the RTC's Kansas City office bear the prefix "RTCKC" followed by numbers starting with 44320.

II. SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS OF NEWLY RECEIVED INFORMATION PERTAINING TO THE TRANSACTIONS PRESENTED IN THE PRELIMINARY REPORT.

A. The applicable legal standard.

Congress established the RTC "to contain, manage, and resolve failed savings associations."<sup>2</sup> Congress gave the RTC the statutory duty of "maximiz[ing] the net present value return from the sale or other disposition of institutions . . . or the assets of such institutions . . . [and] minimiz[ing] the amount of any loss realized in the resolution of cases . . . ."<sup>3</sup> The RTC fulfills this responsibility in part by bringing civil actions in appropriate cases to recover damages.<sup>4</sup> Such cases are brought, however, only if there is reason to believe that the litigation will add to the value of the savings association's estate and thus minimize the losses caused by its failure. If there is no reason to believe that litigation will result in a net recovery, then there is no statutory basis to file a case.

This statutory mandate requires the determination of whether the Whitewater part of the investigation has revealed potential claims that can be litigated in a cost-effective manner. Put another way, the issue is whether claims can be stated that have an expected value greater than the expected cost of litigating them.

Part II focuses on the nine transactions presented in part VII of the Preliminary Report plus the $30,000 McDougal bonus presented in part VIII.A of the Preliminary Report. It starts with damages and then turns to liability.

B. Analysis of damages.

The Preliminary Report stated that, between 1982 and 1986 (the years in which Jim McDougal controlled Madison Guaranty), the McDougals and McDougal-controlled entities advanced $134,294 to Whitewater.<sup>5</sup> This occurred through nine separate transactions discussed in parts VII of the Preliminary Report plus the McDougal bonus discussed in part VIII.A of the Preliminary Report.

<sup>2</sup> Section 101(7) of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 ("FIRREA"), Public Law No. 101-73, 103 Stat. 364.

<sup>3</sup> 12 U.S.C. § 1441a(b)(3)(C), as amended by FIRREA § 501.

<sup>4</sup> 12 U.S.C. §§ 1821(d)(2), (k), (l), as amended by FIRREA § 212.

<sup>5</sup> Preliminary Report at 4 (footnote omitted).

This figure of $134,294 places an upper bound on the benefit to Whitewater from funds traceable to Madison Guaranty if liability could be established as to all nine of the transactions plus the bonus. It does not mean, however, that liability, if established, would lead to recoverable damages of this magnitude. There are several reasons for this:

1. The Preliminary Report concluded that $134,294 was deposited by McDougal and McDougal-controlled entities into Whitewater during the years in which McDougal controlled Madison Guaranty. That $134,294 was split into four pieces:

a. $20,752 cannot be traced back to Madison Guaranty because certain Madison Guaranty documents (bank statements, checks and deposit slips) are missing.

b. $25,520 cannot be traced back to Madison Guaranty, again because certain bank statements, checks and deposit slips are missing, but in addition because money is fungible--the accounts through which this money flowed had sufficient balances so that the source of the funds that eventually reached Whitewater cannot be determined from documentary evidence alone.

c. $58,022 can be traced back to Madison Guaranty, subject to the qualifications noted in the Preliminary Report. (This $58,022 covers transactions 1, 3A, 3B, 6, 8 and 9 discussed at pages 71 through 87 of the Preliminary Report.)

d. $30,000 went directly from Madison Financial into the Whitewater account. (This is the $30,000 McDougal bonus paid in April 1985 discussed at pages 94 through 102 of the Preliminary Report.)

Of the four pieces, the first two cannot even be traced to Madison Guaranty. Therefore, it cannot be established that this money caused a loss to Madison Guaranty. The other two pieces (the $58,022 and the $30,000) can be traced to Madison Guaranty, but this does not mean that these transactions caused Madison Guaranty to lose money, or that the loss to Madison Guaranty is equal to the benefit to Whitewater.

2. The Preliminary Report also concluded that $39,474 from other sources paid down bank debt related to Whitewater. In a number of instances, bank debt related to Whitewater was paid back in part out of bank accounts other than Whitewater's. In most such instances the payor is known, but in 11 such instances, totaling $39,474, the payor is unknown. The evidence does not tie these payments to Madison Guaranty, Madison Financial or any of the 39 McDougal-related Madison Guaranty accounts studied as part of the funds-tracing work presented in the Preliminary Report. The source of this money is not known and, accordingly, cannot be tied in any way to Madison Guaranty.

Therefore, it cannot be established that the money caused Madison Guaranty any loss.

To summarize: the Preliminary Report discussed a total of $173,768 ($134,294 + $39,474). Of this, the evidence does not tie $85,746 ($20,752 + $25,520 + $39,474) to Madison Guaranty. Another $30,000 (the April 1985 McDougal bonus) came directly from Madison Financial but did not benefit Whitewater; it simply passed through Whitewater on its way to an unrelated transaction.<sup>6</sup>

This leaves the $58,022 that is traceable. This $58,022 is spread among six transactions (nos. 1, 3A, 3B, 6, 8 and 9). Of these six, only one appears to be potentially actionable. That transaction (transaction 8, discussed below) involved a deposit into Whitewater of $24,456.

The foregoing summary focuses on benefit to Whitewater rather than harm to Madison Guaranty. For most causes of action, however, the best measure of damages would be harm to Madison Guaranty. Using that yardstick, the untraceable $85,746 remains irrelevant, but not so the $30,000 McDougal bonus and transaction 8. If the bonus was wrongful, it caused $30,000 of harm to Madison Guaranty even though it conferred no benefit on Whitewater. Similarly, if transaction 8 was wrongful, it may have caused harm to Madison Guaranty that substantially exceeds the benefit to Whitewater.

The example of transaction 8 illustrates how disbursements out of Madison Guaranty sometimes were significantly larger than the related deposits into Whitewater. This is further illustrated by the following table (the charts listed are attached to this report; all but chart 12A, which is new, were part of the appendix to the Preliminary Report):

---

<sup>6</sup> "To summarize, the evidence suggests that the Deltic/Earth Movers transaction had no substantial relationship to Whitewater. Instead, it appears that $30,000 flowed through the Whitewater account for reasons that appear unrelated to Whitewater, much as funds destined for Whitewater sometimes flowed through the accounts of other McDougal-controlled entities for reasons seemingly unrelated to those entities. Also, nothing seen to date suggests that Senator Fulbright or the Clintons had any knowledge that the $30,000 that Senator Fulbright eventually received had any relationship to Whitewater, Madison Financial or Madison Guaranty." Preliminary Report at 102.

Transaction	Chart	Disbursement Out of Madison Guaranty or Affiliate	Deposit Into Whitewater
1	8	$ 50,545	$ 7,500
3A	9	12,650	12,000
3B	10	68,574	5,566
6	11	46,000	1,000
8	12, 12A	900,949	24,456
9	13	112,872	7,500
Bonus	14	30,000	30,000
Totals		$1,221,590	$88,022

As can be seen, there is not necessarily any relationship between the dollar amount of the disbursement out of Madison Guaranty and the dollar amount of the associated deposit into Whitewater. There are several reasons for this:

First, the movement of funds among McDougal-controlled entities and from them to Whitewater is not unique but only one example of a broader pattern of funds transfers by the McDougals between and among entities they owned or controlled. In these years, the McDougals lacked the money needed to pay their debts, so they moved money between entities as needed to pay obligations to third persons.<sup>7</sup> A desire to deposit money into Whitewater for Whitewater's ultimate benefit cannot be assumed to be the primary rationale behind a particular transaction; other debts may have loomed much larger.

Second, a disbursement out of Madison Guaranty cannot be assumed to have resulted in a loss or damages to Madison Guaranty. Typically, these disbursements were not loans that went unpaid. Instead, typically they were payments to vendors or employees (including McDougal).<sup>8</sup> Because these disbursements were not loans, Madison Guaranty had no expectation of repayment. Therefore, these disbursements caused a loss to Madison Guaranty only if the vendors or the employees were not entitled to receive the money, i.e., if the payments were excessive or undeserved.<sup>9</sup> As discussed below, that seems to be the case only as to two McDougal bonuses--the $30,000 bonus paid in April 1985 and another $75,949 paid in January 1986.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>7</sup> Preliminary Report at 5.

<sup>8</sup> Among the nine transactions and the McDougal bonus, the only disbursement out of Madison Guaranty that took the form of a loan was part of transaction 8. As the table shows, however, the dollar amount of that loan ($825,000) exceeds the sum of the other disbursements.

For these reasons, the damages (if any) to Madison Guaranty from these transactions cannot be calculated without a review of the theories of liability.

C. Analysis of liability.

The RTC is successor in interest to Madison Guaranty. Therefore, to have a meritorious claim against someone, it must establish (1) liability--that is, a wrongful act--on the part of someone and (2) damage to Madison Guaranty caused by that person's wrongful act.

To evaluate whether a transaction has created liability and damages, the best place to focus is the means by which money left Madison Guaranty on its way to Whitewater (assuming traceability can be established). The focus is on money leaving Madison Guaranty because this is the point at which a transaction might have resulted in damages to Madison Guaranty.

To illustrate this point, take, for example, transaction 1: Money left Madison Guaranty in the form of payments totaling $50,545 to West-Ark Construction, a construction company. West-Ark sent $14,690 to Tucker-Smith-McDougal, and Tucker-Smith-McDougal sent $7,500 to Whitewater.<sup>11</sup> Madison Guaranty did not own West-Ark or Tucker-Smith-McDougal. Therefore, if West-Ark lost $14,620 or if Tucker-Smith-McDougal lost $7,500 by this transaction, that is their business; such losses did not affect Madison Guaranty. From Madison Guaranty's point of view (hence the RTC's point of view), the only money that matters is the money that Madison Guaranty disbursed. If that disbursement was legitimate--if West-Ark really had performed legitimate construction services worth $50,545--then Madison Guaranty lost nothing, even if the transactions among West-Ark, Tucker-Smith-McDougal and Whitewater were wrongful. Thus, as receiver, the RTC need determine whether a given transaction's disbursements out of Madison Guaranty (a) were wrongful and (b) damaged Madison Guaranty.

Applying these principles, this section analyzes transactions 1, 3A, 3B, 6, 8 and 9 discussed at pages 71-87 of the Preliminary Report plus the $30,000

---

9 A payment to a vendor may have been completely justified: The vendor may have performed legitimate services at a fair price. If so, the payment caused no damage to Madison Guaranty even if some of the money later ended up in Whitewater.

10 Also as discussed below, there is no substantial evidence that the other transactions were improper or caused a loss to Madison Guaranty.

11 See chart 8.

McDougal bonus discussed at pages 94-102 of the Preliminary Report.<sup>12</sup> Together, these transactions account for all of the potential damages analyzed above.<sup>13</sup>

In the Preliminary Report, these transactions were discussed chronologically, starting with transaction 1 in August-September 1984 and ending with transaction 9 in October-November 1985. For analytical purposes, however, it makes more sense to group these transactions by payee--that is, by the person or entity who first received the money that left Madison Guaranty. If that person or entity was entitled to the money, then Madison Guaranty was not damaged by the transaction. If so, no further analysis is needed: Without damages, the RTC has no claim.

1. Transactions benefiting West-Ark Construction.

West-Ark Construction, which was owned by Jim McDougal's old friend R. D. Randolph, performed construction services at a number of Madison Financial's real estate projects, including Maple Creek. Transactions 1 and 3A involve payments to West-Ark.

a. Transaction 1 (chart 8), August-September 1984.

As noted above, and as chart 8 illustrates, Madison Guaranty sent $50,545 to West-Ark Construction, a construction company. At approximately the same time, West-Ark sent $14,690 to Tucker-Smith-McDougal, and Tucker-Smith-McDougal sent $7,500 to Whitewater. As chart 7 illustrates, Whitewater used the $7,500 to make a $7,500 payment to the Bank of Cherry Valley.

In August and September 1984, the $50,545 left Madison Financial in two checks to West-Ark Construction.<sup>14</sup> One check, dated August 28, 1984, was for $20,545; the other check, dated August 31, 1984, was for $30,000. Neither check states its purpose. Both payments were posted to Madison Financial's general ledger in account 2300, "Reserve for Development."<sup>15</sup>

---

<sup>12</sup> Transactions 2, 4, 5 and 7 can be ignored. None was traceable back to Madison Guaranty. There is no evidence that any caused a loss to Madison Guaranty.

<sup>13</sup> The transaction numbers correspond to the transaction numbers on chart 7.

<sup>14</sup> IC14170, IC14773. Both were signed by Paul Castleberry. Castleberry interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 14-15.

<sup>15</sup> RTCKC44320. Such accounts typically were used to hold expenditures on developing real estate projects that occurred before lot sales began. For accounting purposes such expenditures were capitalized (i.e., added to the basis of the real estate).

An unsuccessful attempt was made to find West-Ark's invoices, Madison Financial's journal vouchers and other documents backing up these two payments. RTC Investigations, which conducted the search, states that "the accounts payable folder for 1984 for this general ledger account [is] missing from the accounts payable information."<sup>16</sup> Such folders typically contain invoices and journal vouchers.

Without such documents, little can be said about the nature and propriety of these payments. At the time, however, West-Ark was performing construction work (typically grading lots and other bulldozing activities) for Madison Financial at several projects.<sup>17</sup>

To the extent that the checks or deposit slips mentioned above were signed, they were signed by Madison Financial's controller, Paul Castleberry, who was interviewed twice. Castleberry served as controller of Madison Financial from mid 1983 until he was terminated in June 1985.<sup>18</sup> This was Castleberry's first full-time job after college; while in night school at the University of Little Rock he had worked at Savers' Savings as an accounting clerk.<sup>19</sup> Among his duties, Castleberry wrote checks for Madison Financial.<sup>20</sup> He says record-keeping at Madison Guaranty was "kind of sloppy" when he arrived.<sup>21</sup>

Q. And could you tell me what the books of Madison Financial were like when you started.

A. When I first started, they were kind of shoebox-like. They were disorganized, not really any type of, per se, records kept. It was a real mess.<sup>22</sup>

McDougal and John Latham (Madison Guaranty's CEO) often gave Castleberry quite detailed instructions. When Castleberry started to organize Madison Financial's records, they helped Castleberry set up the accounts

16 Letter from Albert Kohl to Bruce A. Encson, Aug. 11, 1995, at 1.

17 Randolph interview, Mar. 9, 1995, at 24:21-27:10.

18 Paul Castleberry interview, Apr. 26, 1994, at 1. Greg Young replaced him in the spring of 1985. Id. at 4. Young also was interviewed twice.

19 Id. at 1.

20 Latham and Young also wrote some checks. Castleberry interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 9-10.

21 Castleberry interview, Apr. 26, 1994, at 18.

22 Castleberry interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 6.

because Castleberry had no experience with a real estate subsidiary.<sup>23</sup> Then, as invoices came in, most of the time McDougal and to a lesser extent Latham would tell Castleberry to which accounts he should post the transaction.<sup>24</sup>

When an invoice for a payable came in, McDougal or Latham would approve it, sometimes just orally.<sup>25</sup> Castleberry would cut the check, post the transaction to the accounts and file the invoice.<sup>26</sup> Sometimes McDougal or Latham would ask Castleberry to cut a check without presenting him with an invoice; Castleberry cannot remember how often this happened.<sup>27</sup>

After I was there - I will say this - I don't know where the records are now, but when I was there, the records were right. Because I kept up with, like I said, everything . . . I had a essentially lots - there might be sometime or something that Latham or McDougal might say I need - write me a check for $100 - we've gotta pay some advertising - I gotta pay somebody to do some work - labor - some contract labor or something - there wouldn't - you wouldn't get an invoice made for something like that - but, if it came from a corporation or something - there was generally - there was an invoice. Now, I can't tell you whether that invoice was legit or not. I don't know that. But, we had - when I was there, I tried to do my best to see that we had an invoice for anything, but . . .<sup>28</sup>

Castleberry was specifically asked about the payments to West-Ark summarized above.<sup>29</sup> He confirmed that he signed the checks but emphasized that he did so at the instance of Latham.<sup>30</sup> Castleberry could not say why West-Ark had been hired, how its contracts were negotiated, whether the price was fair or whether the work was performed. McDougal and Latham supervised such matters.<sup>31</sup>

---

23 Id. at 6-7.

24 Id. at 35-36. This conflicts with McDougal's statement that he was not a hands-on manager when it came to the paperwork. See Preliminary Report at 45-47.

25 Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 11.

26 Id. at 11-13.

27 Id. at 13-14.

28 Castleberry Interview, Apr. 26, 1994, at 18.

29 Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 14-26, 36-38.

30 Id.

31 Id. at 23-26.

b. Transaction 3A (chart 9), November 1984.

As chart 9 illustrates, Madison Financial sent $12,650 to West-Ark, West-Ark sent $12,000 to Flowerwood Farms, and Flowerwood Farms sent $12,000 to Whitewater. As chart 7 illustrates, Whitewater used the $12,000 to make part of an $18,000 payment to Citizens Bank of Flippin (transaction 3B contributed the rest of the money).

From Madison Financial's point of view, transaction 3A is similar to transaction 1, except that the available documentation is more complete. Once again, Madison Financial sent two checks to West-Ark.<sup>32</sup> One check, dated October 23, 1984, was for $6,000; the other check, dated October 30, 1984, was for $6,650. Once again, neither check states its purpose.

Both payments were posted to Madison Financial's general ledger but to a different account: account 1600, "Houses at M.C." (Maple Creek Farms).<sup>33</sup> This time check stubs and West-Ark invoices were located. The check stubs confirm the payee (West-Ark) as well as the date, check number, amount and general ledger coding for each payment.<sup>34</sup> A single West-Ark invoice for $12,650, dated September 12, 1984, supports both payments.<sup>35</sup> Addressed to Madison Financial, the invoice bears the description "2900 bales of straw seed, fertilizer and preparation of sites application [$]8980.00" and "brush hogging and trimming [$]3670.00."<sup>36</sup>

West-Ark performed construction work for Madison Financial at several projects, including Maple Creek.<sup>37</sup> Again, Paul Castleberry could shed no light on the bona fides of these transactions; McDougal and Latham supervised the work.<sup>38</sup>

---

32 IC15207, IC25598. Both were signed by Paul Castleberry. Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 20.

33 RTCKC44321. Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 21-22.

34 RTCKC44322, RTCKC44323.

35 RTCKC44324. The invoice was a generic form, on which "West-Ark" was typed, but that is consistent with West-Ark's style of operation.

36 Id. Brush or bush hogging is mowing a field using a mower hooked to a tractor. Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 23.

37 Randolph Interview, Mar. 9, 1995, at 26:13-21.

38 Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 23-25.

c. Analysis.

As a plaintiff, the RTC would bear the burden of proof in any case it filed. In particular, the RTC could not file a complaint unless it could certify that the allegations and other factual contentions have evidentiary support or, if specifically so identified, are likely to have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery . . .<sup>39</sup>

Ten years after the fact, not all of the West-Ark documentation can be located. Even so, the evidence does not provide any substantial grounds to challenge the performance or pricing of West-Ark's services, or any substantial basis for claiming that the transactions caused damage to Madison Guaranty.<sup>40</sup> Therefore, the evidence does not support the assertion of a cause of action against anyone based on transaction 1 or transaction 3A.<sup>41</sup>

2. Transactions benefiting Madison Marketing.

Madison Marketing placed advertisements for McDougal-controlled entities in return for a 15 percent fee; the documents underlying the Madison Marketing invoices are consistent with this understanding.<sup>42</sup> Madison Marketing was owned by Susan McDougal, who operated it out of Madison Guaranty's Little Rock office, in which Castleberry worked.<sup>43</sup> Transactions 3B and 9 involve payments to Madison Marketing.

a. Transaction 3B (chart 10), November 1984.

As chart 10 illustrates, Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial made eight payments to Madison Marketing totaling $68,574; and Madison Marketing sent $5,566 to Whitewater. As chart 7 illustrates, Whitewater used the $5,566

39 Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(3).

40 Given the amounts at issue, further investigation in an attempt to determine whether these construction services were reasonably priced would seem to be a waste of money. Therefore, it is not recommended.

41 This does not necessarily mean that the transactions have been proved legitimate or that the evidence exonerates anyone; it simply means that no basis has been found to sue anyone. This comment applies with equal force to transactions 3B, 6 and 9 (discussed below).

42 Preliminary Report at 78-79; PMS0477 (1986 FHLBB Report of Examination); Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 26-30.

43 Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 26-27. Castleberry does not know who kept Madison Marketing's books; he did not. Id. at 28-30.

to fund the rest of a $18,000 payment to Citizens Bank of Flippin (as noted above, $12,000 came from transaction 3A).

In November 1984, money left Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial in the form of eight payments to Madison Marketing: $7,154, $24,156 and $1,607 on November 2, 1984; $5,932 on November 9, 1984; $3,929 on November 13, 1984; $60 on November 18, 1984; and $25,361 and $375 on November 19, 1984.<sup>44</sup>

Transaction documents were located for two of the payments: the $1,607 payment on November 2, 1984 and the $5,932 payment on November 9, 1984.<sup>45</sup> Deposit slips were located but neither deposit slip was signed, nor did either state the purpose of the transaction.<sup>46</sup> In addition, check stubs, Madison Marketing invoices and supporting documentation were located:

For the $1,607 transaction, the Madison Marketing invoice lists three vendors: a radio station and two publications.<sup>47</sup> Backing up the Madison Marketing invoice is an invoice from each vendor.<sup>48</sup> In each case, the total on the vendor's invoices plus 15 percent equals the amount shown on the Madison Marketing invoice. All four documents state that the services relate to the Green Tree Farms project, not Fair Oaks.<sup>49</sup>

For the $5,932 transaction, the Madison Financial check stub has a manual notation, "#1116 N/R - Fairview per J.M."<sup>50</sup> The Madison Marketing invoice lists four third-party vendors. Invoices from three of the four (all radio stations) are attached; each relates to Green Tree Farms.<sup>51</sup> The missing documentation relates to "Sherwin-Williams $114.60."<sup>52</sup>

44 IC16408, IC16454, IC16506, IC16610, IC25441, IC25529, IC25571.

45 Letter from Albert Kohl to Bruce A. Encson, Aug. 11, 1995, at 1-2.

46 IC16396; IC25583. Bank statements for Madison Marketing's account are not available for November 1984.

47 RTCKC44332. These entities have no known ties to the McDougals. The Madison Marketing invoice supporting this payment is dated October 25, 1987. The year appears to be in error; the underlying invoices are all dated in 1984.

48 RTCKC44333-35.

49 RTCKC44332-35.

50 RTCKC44326. The "J.M." stands for Jim McDougal. As noted above, Jim McDougal directed that this payment be posted to the general ledger in this manner.

51 RTCKC44327-30.

52 RTCKC44327.

Both payments were posted to Madison Financial's general ledger to account 1116: "Notes Receive - Fairview."<sup>53</sup> (The account's name was later changed to "Fair Oaks.") Posting a payable to a note receivable account is unusual. Castleberry explained that he charged the $5,932 payable to this account because McDougal told him to do so. So far as Castleberry understood it, McDougal's theory was that there was a note -- or that there was to be a note that -- in which one of the partners -- or a partner owned that note, as far as would make payments on that note once the development was completed.<sup>54</sup>

Put another way, McDougal's theory for not expensing these payables was that ultimately the partner would reimburse Fairview for the work performed by Madison Marketing; therefore, in the final analysis, Madison Financial would not be out of pocket.<sup>55</sup> On this theory, the disbursements would not be treated as expenses. Therefore, they would not decrease Madison Financial's net income (or, as shall be seen below, McDougal's and Latham's bonuses).

b. Transaction 9 (chart 13), October-November 1985.

As chart 13 illustrates, Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial made three payments totaling $112,872 to Madison Marketing; and Madison Marketing sent $7,500 to Whitewater. As chart 7 illustrates, Whitewater used the $7,500 to make a $7,322 payment to Security Bank of Paragould.

Transaction 9 resembles transaction 3B. Money left Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial in the form of three deposits into Madison Marketing: $48,183 and $37,579 referenced on a deposit slip dated October 25, 1985; and $27,110 referenced on a deposit slip dated October 29, 1985.<sup>56</sup> The deposit slips are unsigned and do not state the purpose of the deposits, although they do list the entities on behalf of which the money ostensibly was paid.<sup>57</sup>

---

53 RTCKC44325.

54 Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 31-33. Many other disbursements that appear to be payables also were posted to this account, e.g., Southwestern Bell, $84.83, Coca-Cola Bottling Co., $76.50, Rabbit Feed Store, $67.40. RTCKC44325.

55 Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 32-35. Castleberry has no idea whether there were such notes, or whether they eventually were paid; he simply followed McDougal's instructions. Id.

56 IC06632, IC07427.

57 IC06632, IC07427.

Additional documentation has been located for the last two of these payments.<sup>58</sup> For both, the documents include entries into Madison Financial's general ledger, check stubs and Madison Marketing invoices with underlying third-party vendor statements.

The payment of $37,579 was recorded into Madison Financial's general ledger in account 2300--"Res. For Dev.--Maple Crk Farms."<sup>59</sup> This type of account accumulates capitalized direct project costs for Maple Creek Farms. This coding is consistent with Madison Marketing's invoice for these costs.<sup>60</sup> Madison Marketing vendor receipts for this invoice, while not complete, are generally consistent with other Madison Marketing payments, including the addition of a 15 percent mark-up on these costs.<sup>61</sup> These expenses covered television, radio and print advertising for the project.<sup>62</sup>

The payment of $27,110 is supported by similar documentation. This payment is distributed on Madison Financial's general ledger in many places: reserve for development accounts for Eden Park (account 2306 for $7,439.35) and Lake Faircrest (account 2307 for $12,914.08); and various advertising expense accounts for Fair Oaks (account 6691-3 for $4,602.36), Brittany Point (account 6691-4 for $71.24) and Timberline (account 6691-5 for $2,082.85).<sup>63</sup> The underlying invoice and vendor support generally appears consistent with these classifications. The documentation is of the same type and detail as the other Madison Marketing payments.<sup>64</sup>

The checks for this transaction, unlike transactions 1, 3A and 3B, were signed by Greg Young. In mid 1985, Greg Young replaced Paul Castleberry, who was fired.<sup>65</sup> Young, an accountant, had worked for the firms now known 58 Letter from Albert Kohl to Bruce A. Encson, Aug. 11, 1995, at 2.

59 RTCKC44355.

60 RTCKC44403.

61 RTCKC44404-26.

62 Whether these types of costs should be capitalized or expensed on Madison Financial's books is irrelevant for purposes of this analysis.

63 RTCKC44356-57.

64 RTCKC44358-400.

65 Castleberry Interview, Apr. 26, 1994, at 4, 19-20. Castleberry was told he "wasn't the right type individual for their organization"; the firing came as a shock. Id. at 19-20. Castleberry once had refused to make an accounting entry that Latham wanted. This occurred within six months of Castleberry's firing, but Castleberry does not know if the incident led to his firing. Id. at 21-25. Young, who was Castleberry's boss and had started to handle some of

(continued...)

as KPMG Peat Marwick and Deloitte & Touche before joining Madison Guaranty in October 1984.<sup>66</sup> Young continued to work at Madison Guaranty until July 1988.<sup>67</sup>

In general, Young claims that accounts payable requests had backup information and supporting documentation, although on occasion McDougal would make oral requests for checks and supply some form of invoice later.<sup>68</sup> These oral requests generally pertained to payables to West-Ark, Madison Marketing or other related entities.<sup>69</sup> Young understood that "all of the advertising dollars ran through Madison Marketing as the agent or contractor or whatever it was. They got an agency fee for placing all this advertising."<sup>70</sup> He does not think that Madison Marketing actually produced the advertisements itself.<sup>71</sup>

c. Analysis.

The Madison Financial payments to Madison Marketing appear adequately documented. While backup documentation was not available for all payments, the files where available include third-party documentation justifying the amount and nature of the expenses. Therefore, the evidence does not support the assertion of any cause of action based on the theory that these expenditures themselves damaged Madison Guaranty.<sup>72</sup>

Nonetheless, Madison Marketing's entitlement to the 15 percent markup might be questioned on the theory that these funds should have gone to Madison Guaranty rather than to an entity owned by Susan McDougal personally. In situations such as this, where a person with a close connection to a corporation (a "corporate insider") profits from business dealings with that

---

65(...continued)

Castleberry's responsibilities before Castleberry left, does not know why Castleberry was fired. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 6-9.

66 Young Interview, May 13, 1994, at 1-2; Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 4-6.

67 Young Interview, May 13, 1994, at 2.

68 Id.

69 Id.

70 Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 10-11.

71 Id.

72 To the extent that these expenditures were posted to "notes receivable" accounts, there may be an accounting issue. That, however, seems better addressed as an aspect of McDougal's bonuses, which are discussed below.

corporation, the law asks several questions. The first is whether the corporate insider should even operate a business that the corporation itself might own. The second is whether the particular business arrangements between the corporate insider and the corporation violate the corporate insider's fiduciary duties to the corporation.

The first question is analyzed under the "corporate opportunity" doctrine. This doctrine, which Arkansas recognizes, holds:

The law imposes a high standard of conduct upon an officer or director of a corporation, predicated upon the fact that he has voluntarily accepted a position of trust and has assumed the control of property of others. . . . Such a person occupies a fiduciary relation to his corporation and "may not acquire, in opposition to the corporation, property in which the corporation has an interest or tangible expectancy or which is essential to its existence." This doctrine of corporate opportunity is but one phase of the rule of undivided loyalty on the part of corporate fiduciaries. It does not preclude a corporate fiduciary from engaging in a distinct enterprise of the same general class of business as that which his corporation is engaged, so long as he acts in good faith.<sup>73</sup>

The corporate opportunity doctrine is principally a rule of disclosure. A corporate fiduciary whose activities are known to and accepted by the corporation will not run afoul of the doctrine.<sup>74</sup> There seems to have been no secret as to Susan McDougal's ownership of Madison Marketing; for example, Castleberry and Young both knew it.

Even if the McDougals did not disclose their interest to other directors, the corporate opportunity doctrine does not preclude a corporate fiduciary from engaging in a distinct enterprise of the same general class of business as that in which his corporation is engaged so long as he acts in good faith.<sup>75</sup> Courts frequently employ a "line of business test" to determine whether a given opportunity belonged to the corporation. Under this test, the corporate opportunity doctrine typically is invoked where there have been egregious 73 Raines v. Toney, 228 Ark. 1170, 1179, 313 S.W.2d 802, 808 (1958) (citations omitted). See also Taylor v. Terry, 279 Ark. 97, 98-99, 649 S.W.2d 392, 392-93 (1983).

74 3 William Meade Fletcher, Cyclopedia of the Law of Private Corporations § 862, at 304 (rev. ed. 1994).

75 Raines v. Toney, 228 Ark. at 1179, 313 S.W.2d at 808; see also Taylor v. Terry, 279 Ark. at 98-99, 649 S.W.2d at 392-93.

attempts to spint business away from a corporation.<sup>76</sup> The doctrine does not typically reach a business relationship with a vendor in another line of business. An advertising agency is not a business "essential to [the] existence" of a savings and loan, nor is an advertising agency "of the same general class of business as that [in] which" a savings and loan or its real estate service corporation is engaged. Therefore, it seems unlikely that Madison Marketing took an opportunity that belonged to Madison Guaranty or Madison Financial.<sup>77</sup>

The second question is whether, even if Susan McDougal could properly own Madison Marketing, her status as a corporate insider made the particular arrangement between Madison Guaranty and Madison Marketing improper. The general rule is that corporate insiders may not profit improperly from their relationship with the corporation. Therefore, a director must account to the corporation or the shareholders for any profits made by the director out of corporate transactions, where the director either concealed or did not disclose the extent to which he or she was making a profit out of the transaction.<sup>78</sup>

This rule does not mean, however, that a director or other insider is forbidden from having an interest in a contract that is fair and in the interest of the corporation. Instead, it means that the RTC would have the burden of proving that the McDougals tried to conceal their interest in Madison Marketing; if satisfied, the burden would shift to the McDougals to establish that the contract was fair and made in good faith.<sup>79</sup>

Even if the RTC could prove secrecy, the McDougals might well meet their burden. Madison Marketing received no more than the going rate of 15 percent; had an independently owned advertising agency placed the 76 This is true of both Raines and Taylor. In Raines, for example, the defendant/appellant attempted to take away all the business of the corporation to which he owed a fiduciary duty and transfer all that business to a partnership he had set up.

---

77 An additional distinguishing factor between the typical corporate opportunity case and the facts presented here is the real question here of whether Madison Guaranty was deprived of the opportunity. If Madison Guaranty could have chosen at any time to place its own advertisements, then the opportunity was never lost to it.

78 Fletcher, supra, § 884, at 363.

79 Fletcher, supra, § 884.70, at 376-77; see also Home Bros., Inc. v. Ray Lewis Corp., 292 Ark. 477, 481, 731 S.W.2d 190, 193 (1987) (recognizing that when contracts between a corporation and its directors are involved, "the burden is upon those claiming under them to prove that they are made in good faith and fair to the corporation").

advertisements, it would have charged a similar commission.<sup>80</sup> The 1986 FHLBB Report of examination points out that "[t]he actual work of advertising, such as the design and production of commercials and providing air time or newspaper space, appears to be performed by others."<sup>81</sup> That might have been true, however, even if an independently owned advertising agency had handled the job. Therefore, unless Madison Marketing manifestly fell down on the job, it seems doubtful that the RTC could demonstrate that the arrangement was unfair to Madison Guaranty. This issue aside, there is no basis to question the expenditures on advertising, at least in the transactions for which documents can be located.

3. Transaction benefiting Bill Henley: Transaction 6 (chart 11), January 1985.

As chart 11 illustrates, Madison Financial paid $46,000 to Madison Real Estate; Madison Real Estate paid $46,000 to Bill Henley; Bill Henley paid $28,500 to Flowerwood Farms; and Flowerwood Farms paid $1,000 to Whitewater. As chart 7 illustrates, Whitewater used the $1,000 to pay $1,000 to Citizens Bank of Flippin.

Bill Henley (who is one of Susan McDougal's brothers) worked as a commissioned real estate salesman for Madison Financial. The 1986 FHLBB Report of Examination indicates Bill Henley was paid $427,683 in commissions between 1983 and 1986. According to this Report, "a substantial portion of these funds were advances against commissions to be earned on future land sales."<sup>82</sup> Transaction 6 involves one payment of commissions to Bill Henley.

In January 1985, money left Madison Financial in the form of a check for $46,000 to Madison Real Estate.<sup>83</sup> Madison Real Estate paid $46,000 to Bill Henley. The $46,000 reached Bill Henley's account on January 10, the day before the check to Henley and the check from Madison Financial were posted to Madison Real Estate's account; both were posted on January 11.<sup>84</sup>

---

80 A number of the invoices from television stations explicitly state the gross billing, the "agency commission" and the net amount due. E.g., RTCKC44408-20.

81 PMS0477.

82 PMS0476.

83 The Madison Financial check to Madison Real Estate is dated January 9, 1985 and was signed by Paul Castleberry. IC17929. A deposit slip dated January 10, also signed by Castleberry, deposited the check into Madison Real Estate's account. IC17776. The deposit was posted to Madison Real Estate's account on January 11. IC01568. The statement was sent to Madison Real Estate c/o Castleberry.

84 IC01568, IC17837. See generally Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 39-47.

There is no backup documentation (accounts payable folder or supporting documentation) for this transaction.<sup>85</sup> There is, however, an entry into Madison Financial's general ledger for $46,000, coded into account 2016, "Accts. Pay. - Comm. To B.H."<sup>86</sup> This entry creates a debit balance of $46,650.68, which appears to be an amount due (receivable) from Bill Henley. This suggests that Madison Financial prepaid commissions to Bill Henley.<sup>87</sup>

Paul Castleberry said that commissions were prepaid but not by more than a few days. He said that sometimes Jim McDougal would direct him to pay commissions to Henley. Typically this would occur only if a parcel had been sold but the paperwork had not yet been arrived at the office.<sup>88</sup> So far as Castleberry knew, this payment was not a disguised loan to Henley. Instead, he understood that a sale had been made but the paperwork had not yet arrived.<sup>89</sup>

There might be liability if the underlying sales were made to insiders on uneconomical terms and therefore were not bona fide.<sup>90</sup> Such a theory would require fairly elaborate proof as to the terms of various transactions and the rationale for the transactions. Even if the commissions were proved wrongful, however, the commissions could not be recovered from their recipient, Bill Henley, because he has been released.<sup>91</sup>

85 Letter from Albert Kohl to Bruce A. Ericson, Aug. 11, 1995, at 2.

86 RTCKC44338. There is no voucher backing up the general ledger entry. Letter from Albert Kohl to Bruce A. Ericson, Aug. 11, 1995, at 2.

87 RTCKC44338.

88 Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 41-47.

89 Id. at 45.

90 See 1986 FHLBB Report of Examination, PMS0477.

91 Between 1987 and 1989, Bill Henley was adverse to Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial in six actions, at least one of which pertained to his real estate commissions. On April 28, 1989, Bill Henley, Glenda Henley, Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial executed a global Settlement Agreement resolving all six actions. Among the six actions was one that sought commissions. Billy Henley v. Madison Financial Corporation, et al., No. 87-422 (Union City. Cir. Ct.), after removal, No. 89-1040 (W.D. Ark.). The mutual release attached to the Settlement Agreement provided for the dismissal with prejudice of this action and the release by all parties of "any and all claims . . . known or unknown . . . relating to" this action (as well as the other five actions). Settlement Agreement at 19, 25-26. These releases would bar the RTC from suing Henley even if the commissions were proved wrongful.

4. Transactions benefiting the McDougals (charts 12, 12A and 14).

There are four such transactions, three benefiting Jim McDougal and one benefiting Susan McDougal. Madison Financial paid Jim McDougal $20,000 in February 1985, $30,000 in April 1985 and $75,949 in January 1986; all three payments are deemed bonuses by what purport to be board minutes. Through the fourth transaction, Madison Guaranty may indirectly have financed a loan to Susan McDougal of $300,000 made by Capital Management Services, Inc. in April 1986.

The $20,000 bonus and the $30,000 bonus are not part of the nine transactions discussed in part VII of the Preliminary Report, but the $30,000 bonus was discussed in part VIII because it was made payable to Whitewater. The $75,949 bonus and the $300,000 loan are part of transaction 8.

a. The $30,000 bonus paid in April 1985 (chart 14).

As chart 14 illustrates, Madison Financial paid $30,000 to Whitewater. The money cured an overdraft created by Whitewater's $30,000 payment to Earth Movers, Inc. Earth Movers had used Whitewater's check to buy a cashier's check for $30,000 that was sent to Senator Fulbright, who accepted it as the first of two payments for a parcel of land west of Little Rock that he had agreed to sell to Earth Movers.

The Preliminary Report discussed this transaction at some length.<sup>92</sup> New interviews and newly obtained accounting documents help augment the discussion in the Preliminary Report, particularly with respect to the characterization of Madison Financial's $30,000 payment to Whitewater as a bonus.

Madison Financial's minutes: To understand the evidence as to this putative bonus, it is necessary to understand the history of the minutes that purport to authorize it. As noted in the Preliminary Report, these minutes are of dubious authenticity, were created many months after the fact and have been found in several inconsistent versions. According to Patricia Heritage, who prepared the minutes under John Latham's direction, the Madison Financial board did not hold formal meetings, but the minutes were prepared as if a meeting had been held.<sup>93</sup> One of the directors, Greg Young, did not know he was a director.<sup>94</sup>

---

92 Preliminary Report at 98-101.

Latham directed Heritage to prepare the minutes in anticipation of the FHLBB examination that began in March 1986.<sup>95</sup> Heritage started creating minutes covering putative meetings held from January 1985 onward. The work of drafting these minutes began in late February 1986, because the examiners were expected to arrive on March 1, 1986.<sup>96</sup> Latham instructed Heritage "that the things that needed to be covered were any bonuses that the corporation had authorized top officers, various other things."<sup>97</sup> Heritage began to research corporate records to see what Madison Financial had done.<sup>98</sup> She also checked with Greg Young--"he was CFO, so he would have known when people were paid bonuses."<sup>99</sup> After taking these steps, she prepared draft minutes for Latham's review. Latham frequently made changes to the drafts.<sup>100</sup> When the minutes were completed, Latham signed the minutes himself but Sue Strayhorn probably signed Jim McDougal's name.<sup>101</sup> The FHLBB examiners asked to see the minutes soon after their arrival, but they 93     Hentage Deposition, Feb. 27, 1991, at 12-14; IG Ex. III-149, at 12-14. Hentage worked at the time as John Latham's assistant. She later completed law school at night, graduating with honors from the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. After that she worked for a time for the Rose Law Firm in its labor law department. Hentage Deposition at 4-8; IG Ex. III-130, at 4-8. As of 1994, she worked as a deputy city attorney for the City of Little Rock. IG Ex. III-152, at 1.

94     IG Ex. III-149, at 15. Young did not learn of his status as a director until after the FHLBB examination that started in March 1986. He said, "I've never attended a Madison Corporation Board of Directors' meeting, ever." Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 15-17.

95     IG Ex. III-149, at 13-14.

96     IG Ex. III-151, at 6 (RIC038825); III-152, at 2. See also Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 20-21.

97     Id. at 15. Compare IG Ex. III-152, at 2, where Heritage says that Latham's instructions were to focus on "major decisions"--investments in major developments and bonuses.

98     IG Ex. III-152, at 3.

99     IG Ex. III-149 at 15. See also IG Ex. III-151, which consists of notes of interviews of Hentage from 1986, 1987 and 1990.

100    IG Ex. III-152, at 2.

101    IG Ex. III-151, at 6; III-152, at 3. Heritage added that McDougal would allow a lot of people to sign his name, but Latham was very particular about it and would not let anyone sign his name. IG Ex. III-151, at 6. Hentage also told how McDougal once asked her to sign his name to a deed, explaining that it was a waste of his time to be signing documents such as this. IG Ex. III-152, at 3.

never asked Hentage when the minutes had been prepared or by whom.<sup>102</sup> For their part, McDougal and Strayhorn moved from Madison Guaranty's offices out to Maple Creek just before the examination began. Strayhorn testified to this in 1988:

Q. Do you know why he moved?

A. Yes.

Q. Why?

A. He did not want to be accessible to the examiners to have to answer any questions at that time.<sup>103</sup>

The bonus plan for 1985: The first mention of bonuses for 1985 appears in the minutes for a board meeting supposedly held on January 21, 1985. There is a draft of these minutes<sup>104</sup> as well as a final signed version.<sup>105</sup> The final signed version reads:

RESOLVED, that the Corporation pay to the following persons salaries and bonuses in the amounts set forth below for the fiscal year beginning January 1, 1985: Jim McDougal - $100,000, plus 10% of the net profits . . .<sup>106</sup>

The $20,000 payment: The next mention of a bonus for McDougal appears in minutes dated February 7, 1985. Again, there is a draft plus a signed final version.<sup>107</sup> The draft awards McDougal $20,000 "in recognition of 102 IG Ex. III-152, at 3.

103 Reporter's Transcript of Trial of Seth Ward v. Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association, No. 87-7580 (Pulaski Cty. Cir. Ct.), at 196-97. The Independent Counsel's indictment of McDougal charges that McDougal and his alleged co-conspirators structured transactions and generated fraudulent paperwork, particularly in late 1985 and early 1986, so as not to attract the attention of auditors and bank examiners and regulators. Indictment filed Aug. 17, 1995 in United States v. James B. McDougal, et al., No. LR-CR-95-173 (E.D. Ark.) (hereinafter, "McDougal Indictment"), ¶ 10, at 7.

104 RTCKC37408-09.

105 IG Ex. III-50, at 1.

106 IG Ex. III-50, at 1. Young understood this to be McDougal's bonus arrangement for 1985. Young does not recall McDougal receiving any large bonuses in 1984, but Young did not start handling payroll until the end of 1984. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 13-14.

107 The draft is RTCKC37420-21; the bonus provisions are handwritten in Patricia Hentage's handwriting. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 17. The final version is RTCKC46950-51.

the high profits ($391,000) earned by the Service Corporation."<sup>108</sup> The final version awards McDougal $50,000 "in recognition of his work which allowed the Service Corporation to earn outstanding profits for the past two years."<sup>109</sup> Nevertheless, the payment actually made in February 1985 was $20,000, not $50,000, and it was accounted for as "salaries - executive."<sup>110</sup>

The $30,000 payment: The next mention of a bonus for McDougal appears in the minutes dated April 17, 1985. There are several drafts of these minutes, each awarding McDougal $30,000 but each containing a slightly different rationale.<sup>111</sup> In February 1986, Latham called Heritage from Colorado to instruct her to change the characterization of Jim McDougal's bonus by deleting the April 17, 1985 bonus of $30,000 and increasing the February 1985 bonus from $20,000 to $50,000.<sup>112</sup> As noted above, the February 1985 minutes were changed in this fashion. Nonetheless, the $30,000 was not deleted from the final version of the April 1985 minutes (signed only by Jim McDougal), which reads:

RESOLVED, that the Corporation pre-pay to Jim McDougal $30,000 of his annual bonus in recognition of the profits of the prior year, and that said bonus is to be paid directly to Whitewater Development.<sup>113</sup>

108 RTCKC37420-21. This is the figure for 1984 profits, not 1985 profits, notwithstanding the provisions of the bonus program set forth in the January 21, 1985 minutes. See RTCKC37421; Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 18-19.

109 RTCKC46950-51. Young does not think McDougal was paid $50,000 in one lump; instead, this represents the sum of the $20,000 paid in February 1985 and the $30,000 paid in April 1985 (discussed below). Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 20.

110 RTCKC44433 (general ledger as of Apr. 30, 1985); Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 31-32. Typically Latham, as opposed to McDougal, instructed Young on how to account for the bonuses. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 17-18.

111 RTCKC37414 ("in recognition of the profits of the prior year and in anticipation of higher profits in 1985"); RTCKC 37419 ("~~his annual bonus of $30,000 of his annual bonus in recognition of the profits of the prior year and in expectation of higher profits in 1986~~") (editing in original); RTCKC37415 ("$30,000 of his annual bonus in recognition of the profits of the prior year ~~and in expectation of higher profits in 1986~~") (editing in original). Young says the handwriting on RTCKC37414 and 374129 is Patricia Heritage's except for the words "annual meeting," which appear to have been written by Sue Strayhorn. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 24-25.

112 Id. at 8. Compare IG Ex. III-152, at 2, in which Heritage confirms the change from $20,000 to $50,000 but claims that Latham instructed her to have the minutes show the $30,000 bonus was paid to Whitewater. See also Preliminary Report at 101.

113 CR0686 (signed by McDougal).

The check for this bonus was cut April 30, 1985 and was made payable to Whitewater. Greg Young explained:

Q. . . . To the best of your recollection, why did you prepare this check [the $30,000 check to Whitewater, which Young signed]? Did someone ask you to do it?

A. John Latham told me to.

Q. And how did he explain what it was for?

A. Quote, "We need to get some money in Jim's hands."

Q. That's all he said?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he give you any sort of documentation --

A. No.

Q. -- to say what it was for?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever get any anything else from Latham explaining what the -- what the money was for?

A. No.<sup>114</sup>

. . . .

Q. Okay.

MR. WAGNER: Greg, you mentioned that John Latham mentioned that he needed to get some money in Jim McDougal's hands. Did he direct you to write it payable to Whitewater Development?

MR. YOUNG: Yes.

MR. ERICSON: Q: I take it it was not your idea to pay it to Whitewater?

---

114 Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 26.

A. Oh, no. I really didn't know what Whitewater was.<sup>115</sup>

Young cannot recall any other occasion in which Latham made a request such as "we need to get some money in somebody's hands."<sup>116</sup>

While the minutes justified the $30,000 payment as a bonus, it, unlike the $20,000 payment, was never accounted for in this way. Instead, it was accounted for in two different ways: first, as a consulting fee; and second, as a capitalized expense attributed to Maple Creek.

At first, Greg Young accounted for the $30,000 as a consulting fee; his journal voucher dated April 30, 1985 (the date the check bears) reads, "pmt to Whitewater Dev. for consulting fee."<sup>117</sup> Young says he did so at Latham's direction:

Q. Now, how would you have decided how to account for -- for this?

A. Because I asked John [Latham] what it was for.

Q. . . . And what did he say, to the best of your recollection?

A. Consulting fee.

Q. Did he provide any further detail?

A. Hmm-mm, no.<sup>118</sup>

Six months later, Latham directed Young to change the accounting for the $30,000. This time, Young's journal voucher backed out the consulting fees and posted it to a "Reserve for Development, Maple Creek Farms account."<sup>119</sup>

---

115 Id. at 27.

116 Id.

117 RTCKC44441 (emphasis in original); the check is CR0264; the deposit slip is DKRT101144; the relevant page of the general ledger is RTCKC44437. Greg Young handled all the bonus payments in 1985 and 1986. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 14, 25-26. Castleberry knew nothing about these documents. Castleberry Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 47-65.

118 Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 30.

119 RTCKC44441A; Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 34-37.

Young is unaware of any consulting or other services provided by Whitewater to any of Madison Financial's projects, including Maple Creek.<sup>120</sup> When asked why Latham would have sought to recharacterize this payment, Young answered:

Q. Greg, you mentioned that Mr. Latham's motivation for the entry might relate to avoiding having this hit the bottom line.

A. Yes.

Q. Why would that have been a motivation?

A. Because of bonuses. Jim's bonus was based on the profit of Madison Financial Corporation; John's bonus was based on net profit of Madison Guaranty after Madison Financial's profits were rolled into Madison Guaranty. So this meant $3,000 for each of them, in essence.

Q. Did he express that explicitly?

A. No, no. No. But it didn't take a rocket scientist to figure that out.<sup>121</sup>

b. Transaction 8 (charts 12 and 12A), April 1985-April 1986.

As chart 12 illustrates, this transaction occurred over the space of a year. The top half of chart 12 covers 1985; the bottom half covers 1986.

In April 1985, Stephens Security Bank loaned $135,000 to Flowerwood Farms; and Flowerwood Farms paid $24,456 to Whitewater. As chart 7 illustrates, Whitewater used this $24,456 to fund most of a $25,000 payment to Chris Wade's Ozarks Realty Company.

In 1986, the loan from Stephens Security Bank was repaid in two installments, one in January 1986 and the other in April 1986.<sup>122</sup> Both payments have connections to Madison Guaranty.

120 Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 35-36. Young said as much to auditors from KPMG Peat Marwick when they questioned the recharacterization during an audit conducted in 1987. PM000003121; Young Interview at 38-39.

121 Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 37. Latham and McDougal each had bonus arrangements awarding them 10 percent of net profits.

122 Because money is fungible, one cannot say which of these funded the $24,456; either, standing alone, was sufficient to do so. See Preliminary Report at 84-86.

In January 1986, Madison Financial paid a bonus of $75,949 to Jim McDougal; and McDougal used $40,000 of that money to repay a portion of Flowerwood Farms' loan from Stephens Security Bank. In April 1986, Madison Guaranty loaned $825,000 to Dean Paul, Ltd. Of this $825,000, $502,000 went to David Hale's Capital Management Services, Inc., which loaned $300,000 to Susan McDougal dba Master Marketing.<sup>123</sup> Of this $300,000, $111,524 went to retire the remainder of Flowerwood Farms' loan from Stephens Security Bank.

i. The $75,949 bonus paid to Jim McDougal in January 1986.

Part of the Stephens Security Bank loan was repaid in January 1986 out of the McDougals' joint account at Madison Guaranty. The McDougals' account would not have had the funds needed to make this payment but for a payment of $75,949 that Jim McDougal received on January 6, 1986 from Madison Financial.

The check, dated January 6, 1986, from Madison Financial to Jim McDougal does not state a purpose for the transaction.<sup>124</sup> The check stub, general ledger entries and Jim McDougal's 1986 W-2 wage statement all state that the payment was a bonus.<sup>125</sup> The check stub is dated January 7, 1986 and indicates the disbursement was "Jim's Bonus."<sup>126</sup> The December 31, 1985 Madison Financial general ledger (a printout run January 14, 1986) has an entry for $78,952 posted to account 6012, "Bonus Expense," bearing the description "Dec 31 85 Jim's Bonus 10%."<sup>127</sup> The $3,003 difference between the $78,952 posted in the general ledger and the $75,949 paid to McDougal is reconciled on McDougal's 1986 W-2 wage statement, which deems this amount "social security tax withheld."<sup>128</sup>

As summarized above, Madison Financial purported minutes for January 1985 state that McDougal had a 10 percent bonus arrangement with Madison

123 The Preliminary Report did not lay out the connection between Madison Guaranty, Dean Paul, Ltd. and Capital Management Services, Ltd. That was the subject of another part of this investigation. See chart 12A for a depiction of the connection.

124 IC42743. This check was signed by Greg Young, who had replaced Paul Castleberry.

125 Young also confirms this. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 39.

126 RTCKC44345.

127 RTCKC44350.

128 RTCKC44352. Young verified the withholding. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 42.

Financial.<sup>129</sup> Even if that is assumed to be true, it is not clear that the bonus was properly calculated. Assume that the "10%" referenced in the general ledger means "10 percent of Madison Financial's net profits." If so, the operative question is whether the amount paid was 10 percent of Madison Financial's net profits.<sup>130</sup> The answer is "no."

No audited financial statement states that Madison Financial had a net income of $789,520 (or anything like that) in 1985.<sup>131</sup> For 1985, two sets of audited financial statements were prepared for Madison Financial. The first, prepared by Frost & Company and dated February 17, 1986, states that Madison Financial's net income for 1985 was $323,960.<sup>132</sup> The second, prepared by Peat Marwick in May 1987, states that Madison Financial had no net income for 1985 and instead lost $2.1 million.<sup>133</sup> Neither set of financial statements supports the bonus, but neither was available as of January 6, 1986, the date by which the bonus was paid.<sup>134</sup>

129 IG Ex. III-50, at 1. As described above, these minutes, like all the Madison Financial minutes dated after December 1984, are of questionable authenticity, as they were drawn up long after the fact.

130 Whether it means before taxes or after taxes is of no consequence, as Madison Financial was not accruing income taxes during this period.

131 Young confirms that the bonus was calculated using unaudited numbers. Young interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 39-41.

132 MG0001621; RLF1 46529. The financial statement is confusing because it mislabels as "1984" the second page of a two-page chart showing Madison Financial's net income for 1985. Nevertheless, a careful examination of the financial statements as a whole show that the chart contains 1985 numbers. The chart's numbers are taken from and can be traced back to 1985 numbers contained elsewhere in the statements; these numbers differ substantially from 1984 numbers. For example, "interest on loans" is $6,202,526 on MG0001620; that number and the comparable number for 1984 ($2,134,279) both appear on MG0001600.

In 1988, Madison Guaranty sued Frost & Company, alleging that its audits for 1984 and 1985 had overstated net income and disguised Madison Guaranty's insolvency. The Frost & Company action originally was styled Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association, et al. v. Frost & Company, No. 88-1193 (Pulaski Cty. Cir. Ct.). After Madison Guaranty failed, the action was removed to United States District Court, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was substituted for the plaintiffs. The action then was styled FDIC v. Frost & Company, No. LR-C-89-0216 (E.D. Ark.). Later still the RTC was substituted for the FDIC, and the case became RTC v. Frost & Company, under the same docket number. Hereinafter, the case will be referred to as "RTC v. Frost & Co."

133 Consolidated Financial Statements and Consolidating Schedules for Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association and Subsidiary, Dec. 31, 1986, June 30, 1986 and Dec. 31, 1985, Schedule 2.

134 Young paid the bonus this early, before receipt of audited financial statements, because Latham instructed him to do so. Young interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 39-41.

Even if Madison Financial had earned (or reasonably was believed to have earned) net income sufficient to justify a bonus of $75,949, there would be an issue as to whether the bonus had already been paid in part. As detailed above and in the Preliminary Report, McDougal received $20,000 in February 1985 and $30,000 in April 1985. The putative rationale for each is ambiguous.

The February 1985 minutes tie the $20,000 to profits "for the past two years," perhaps suggesting that it is not a prepayment of the 1985 bonus.<sup>135</sup> In contrast, the April 1985 minutes state that "the Corporation pre-pay to Jim McDougal $30,000 of his annual bonus in recognition of the profits of the prior year, and that said bonus is to be paid directly to Whitewater Development."<sup>136</sup> It is not clear what it means to "pre-pay" a bonus "in recognition of the profits of the prior year."<sup>137</sup> If this was a payment on account of 1984 profits, it cannot be justified by a plan that starts with fiscal year 1985. If, instead, this is a prepayment of McDougal's 1985 bonus, then it should have been subtracted from the payment he received in January 1986. Young says he never thought of this at the time and would be reluctant to take a position on the issue today because he does not know why McDougal was paid the $20,000 or the $30,000.<sup>138</sup>

Given these facts, the question becomes whether any of the following acts amounts to intentional wrongdoing:

- o Paying and accepting payment of the bonus without waiting for the results of the annual audit.
- o Failing to repay any unearned portion of the bonus.

Not waiting for the audit: The propriety of calculating and paying a bonus before receipt of audited numbers is largely a question of complying with the terms of the bonus arrangement and any applicable bylaw. The minutes

---

135 RTCKC46950-51.

136 CR0686 (signed by McDougal).

137 Madison Financial minutes dated Jan. 21, 1985, IG Ex. III-50, at 1. Young does not recall whether this amount was paid on account of 1984 profits or 1985 profits. Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 21-23. From the text of the minutes, he would draw the inference that it was meant to be a prepayment of the 1985 bonus, but he really does not know what was meant, and he cannot reconcile his inference with the fact that these payments were not deducted from the bonus for 1985 paid in January 1986. Id.

138 Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 43-44.

that purport to establish the bonus arrangement are silent on this point.<sup>139</sup> Therefore, it cannot be said that paying the bonus before receipt of the audit report was wrongful. It was careless not to require an adjustment after the audit, as is customary, but at this point carelessness is not actionable.<sup>140</sup>

Failing to repay any unearned portion of the bonus: There are two theories for saying that part or all of the bonus was unearned:

- o If the April 1985 payment was a prepayment of McDougal's 1985 bonus, then the payment made in January 1986 should have been reduced by $30,000.
- o Once either of the audited financial statements was received--both showed that Madison Financial did not have adequate net income to justify the bonus--the unearned portion of the $75,949 should have been returned.

Under either theory, taking or retaining the unearned portion of the bonus might constitute intentional wrongdoing on the part of McDougal. There is no evidence that McDougal repaid Madison Financial any part of this bonus. A review of Madison Financial's general ledger history and the McDougals' checking account for 1986 does not show any such repayment.

If Jim McDougal's 1985 bonus should have been adjusted for audited results, or if it should have been reduced by $30,000, then McDougal should have repaid Madison Financial the difference. If, as the evidence shows, he did not, the overpayment represents a loss to Madison Financial.

If the $30,000 payment should have been subtracted from the payment, the overpayment obviously was $30,000. If not, but if an adjustment should have been made once the Frost & Company audit report was received, then the overpayment was $42,324.<sup>141</sup> If both are true, the overpayment was

---

139 In general, payment of bonuses before receipt of audited financial statements is unusual but not unheard of. For example, were tax rates about to increase, a company might arrange to pay bonuses before year-end. In such circumstances, audited financial statements would not be available. Typically, however, a company that did this would require an adjustment (either an additional payment, or a return of a portion of the payment) after the books were closed and final numbers were available.

140 See Preliminary Report at 7.

141 Based on Frost and Company's report, net income for Madison Financial was $323,960. Adding back the McDougal bonus expense of $78,952 results in adjusted income before bonus expense--the new starting point--of $402,912. For the bonus to be 10 percent after profits (as is customary), some algebra is necessary. The result is a bonus of $36,628. Deducting the $36,628 from income before bonus of $402,912 results in income after bonus of (continued...)

$69,321.<sup>142</sup> In any event, the $40,000 disbursement from the McDougals' checking account on January 23, 1986, which funded a payment to Stephens Security Bank, was funded by this bonus.<sup>143</sup>

ii. The $300,000 loan made to Susan McDougal in April 1986.

As discussed in the Preliminary Report, in April 1986, Capital Management Services loaned $300,000 to Susan McDougal, dba Master Marketing. The proceeds were deposited into the McDougals' joint checking account at Madison Guaranty.<sup>144</sup> Of these proceeds, $25,000 were used to fund an "earnest money" deposit on certain International Paper Company land purchased in the name of Whitewater Development Company and $111,524 retired the remainder of Flowerwood Farms' debt to Stephens Security Bank.<sup>145</sup>

The Preliminary Report did not explicitly discuss the possibility that Madison Guaranty had indirectly financed the Capital Management loan to Susan McDougal. Another report prepared in this investigation, entitled A Report on Certain Real Estate Loans and Investments Made by Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan and Related Entities, addresses this subject. As described at pages 23-26 of that report: Madison Guaranty made an $825,000 loan to Dean Paul, Ltd. (which was never repaid);<sup>146</sup> Dean Paul, Ltd. used these funds to purchase property from David Hale, owner of Capital Management; after paying off debt on the property, Hale and a trustee were left with $502,000 of the Dean Paul, Ltd. proceeds; the $502,000 was deposited into Capital Management; and the $502,000 enabled Capital Management to

---

141 (...continued)

$366,284. The bonus of $36,628 is 10 percent of $366,284. Thus, the difference between the amount of bonus paid ($78,952), and the proper amount of bonus, based on Frost & Company numbers ($36,628), is $42,324. This would be the amount of excessive bonus if all the stated assumptions are correct.

142 The correct bonus, based on Frost's numbers, was $36,628. Subtract from this the $30,000 and $6,628 is left. The bonus actually paid ($75,949) minus $6,628 equals $69,321.

143 See chart 12.

144 See Preliminary Report at 85-86.

145 Id. at 85-86, 115-22.

146 The RTC recovered a judgment against Dean Paul and Dean Paul, Ltd. of approximately $600,000 (net). The judgment was sold to a joint venture in which the RTC is a venturer. If money is collected on the judgment, the RTC will stand to benefit.

fund the $300,000 Susan McDougal loan.<sup>147</sup> The Independent Counsel's indictment dated August 17, 1995 of Jim McDougal, Susan McDougal and Jim Guy Tucker alleges essentially the same facts and deems this a conspiracy to defraud.<sup>148</sup> Chart 12A, which is new, illustrates this transaction.

The fungibility of money makes it difficult to say which transaction (the January 1986 transaction or the April 1986 transaction) funded the repayment to Stephens Security Bank of the funds that went to Whitewater. Nevertheless, both transactions may have involved intentional wrongdoing (on the part of the McDougals) and both transactions apparently caused a loss to Madison Guaranty.

Transaction 8 resulted in the payment of $24,456 to Whitewater in 1985. The two transactions in 1986 that repaid the Stephens Security Bank loan which indirectly funded the $24,456, however, cost Madison Guaranty much more. The McDougal bonus of January 1986 cost Madison Guaranty at least $42,324 and perhaps as much as $75,949. The Dean Paul, Ltd. loan of February-April 1986 may have cost Madison Guaranty as much as $1.2 million.<sup>149</sup> The relationship of Whitewater to the McDougal bonus and the Deal Paul loan, however, would appear to be tangential at best.

5. Summary.

Traceability has not been established between Madison Guaranty and transactions 2, 4, 5 and 7. There is no reasonable basis to allege that these transactions caused any loss to Madison Guaranty.

While traceability can be established with respect to transactions 1, 3A, 3B and 9, there is no reasonable basis to allege liability or damages. Transaction 6 may raise questions, but its sole beneficiary has been released by the RTC after litigation over commissions.

This leaves only the McDougal $30,000 bonus and transaction 8. The evidence calls into question the bona fides of the $30,000 bonus paid in April 147 Don Denton Interview, June 1, 1994, at 11. Another $150,000 of the $825,000 loan from Madison Guaranty to Dean Paul, Ltd. enabled Capital Management to fund a loan to Castle Sewer & Water Company, which it used to make the down payment to Madison Financial on a purchase of the Castle Grande sewer and water facilities. Id.

148 McDougal Indictment ¶ 16, at 10-12. The Indictment also alleges that Capital Management's receipt of the $502,000 enabled it to seek additional capital from the Small Business Administration. Id. ¶ 16(l), at 12.

149 The figure of $1.2 million is taken from damages calculations performed by RTC Investigations. The RTC has entered into an agreement with Tucker tolling all statutes of limitations.

1985. There also is some basis for believing that the RTC could prove liability and damages with respect to transaction 8. Jim McDougal's retention of the January 1986 bonus may be wrongful and the money came directly from Madison Financial. Susan McDougal's receipt of the $300,000 loan from Capital Management may be wrongful and may be traceable back to Madison Guaranty.

D. Analysis of possible claims.

1. Common law fraud.

To state a claim for fraud, one must have evidence of material misstatements or of material omissions by one who has a duty to make a statement.<sup>150</sup> Under Arkansas law, the elements of common law fraud are:

- o A false representation of a material fact;
- o Knowledge or belief on the part of the person making the representation that the representation is false;
- o An intent to induce reliance upon the false representation;
- o Justifiable reliance; and
- o Resulting damages.<sup>151</sup>

To evaluate a possible claim by the RTC as successor in interest to Madison Guaranty, one must focus on the means by which money left Madison Guaranty. A case for fraud against someone might be made out if, for example, that money was obtained by means of a material misstatement or omission.

a. The $30,000 McDougal bonus.

This looks like fraud. If Greg Young's version of the facts is credited, McDougal needed some money, so he, working through Latham, took $30,000 and rather clumsily papered the record to make the transaction look like a bonus and then a consulting fee and then a capitalized cost of developing Maple Creek. No credible evidence supports the characterization of the payment as a consulting fee or a capitalized cost of developing Maple Creek.

<sup>150</sup> The evidence also must suffice to meet the pleadings requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b), which requires that "the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake . . . be stated with particularity."

<sup>151</sup> Morris v. Valley Forge Insurance Co., 305 Ark. 25, 805 S.W.2d 948, 951 (1991).

Nor does much evidence support its characterization as a bonus. As Madison Financial's "disinterested" directors, Latham and Young could have awarded McDougal a bonus, but Young did not even know he was a director, and Latham's repeated attempts to recharacterize the transaction would undermine any argument that it was bona fide.<sup>152</sup>

b. Transaction 8.

Transaction 8 involves two quite different transfers out of Madison Guaranty. The first is the bonus payment to McDougal made in January 1986. The second is the loan to Dean Paul, Ltd. that, according to the Independent Counsel, funded Capital Management's loan to Susan McDougal; this occurred in several steps between February and April 1986.

The $75,949 bonus: This appears to be wrongful but theories other than fraud seem more appropriate and easier to prove. The bonus was paid on the strength of unaudited financial statements. Both the Frost & Company audit and the Peat Marwick audit revealed that these unaudited financial statements were wrong. Without more, however, the fact that the auditors made corrections, even material corrections, does not prove that the unaudited statements were deliberately false. While the evidence assembled in the various parts of this investigation shows a number of accounting entries that, at the very least, were questionable, proving, one by one, that these were intentionally wrong and then cumulating them to decrease net income materially would be difficult and expensive. Proving that failures to recognize losses were deliberate also would be difficult.

The loans: The McDougal Indictment deems these loans the product of a conspiracy to defraud involving the McDougals and Tucker. The RTC has an agreement with Tucker tolling all statutes of limitation ("tolling agreement").

c. The other traceable transactions.

Transactions 1, 3A, 3B, 6 and 9: Given Castleberry's and Young's explanations of how payables were handled, one could hypothesize that somebody might have forged an invoice or lied about the purpose of a check. The evidence does not support such a hypothesis. The checks and deposit slips do not provide evidence that the transactions lacked a legitimate basis. Nor has other evidence to that effect been located. In each instance, Madison Guaranty or Madison Financial had an existing business relationship with its direct payee (Bill Henley, Madison Marketing, Madison Real Estate or West-Ark Construction). Thus, the record does not allow the RTC to state a claim for fraud with respect to these transactions.

---

<sup>152</sup> Whether a claim such as this could be pursued cost-effectively is discussed in part II.E below.

2. Conversion.

Conversion is the civil-law counterpart to theft. Its essence is the intentional taking of property belonging to another in violation of the owner's rights. It is an intentional tort. Under Arkansas law, the elements of conversion are:

- o The exercise of dominion over the property of another;
- o With the intent to exercise that dominion or control that dominion;
- o In violation of the rights of the owner or person entitled to possession of the property; and
- o Resulting damage.<sup>153</sup>

The $30,000 bonus: Here, property (money) belonging to Madison Guaranty or Madison Financial was taken and given to Jim McDougal personally. The clumsy attempts to mischaracterize this transaction in the record permit an inference that the taking of the money was both deliberate and wrongful.

The $75,949 bonus: Here too, money belonging to Madison Guaranty or Madison Financial was taken and given to Jim McDougal personally. What is less clear is evidence of a wrongful intent. Jim McDougal may argue that when he received this money he believed that Madison Financial's earnings supported the bonus. Whether or not he had such a belief in January 1986, however, by February 1986 the Frost & Company audit showed that Madison Financial had not earned that much money. By then, at least, McDougal must have known that he should return a portion of his bonus. He did not do so.

To be conversion, the taking of property need not be a manual taking or for the defendant's own use but only in exclusion or defiance of the plaintiff's rights.<sup>154</sup> A claim for conversion can be stated against one who came into possession lawfully and then improperly exercised dominion or control over the property.<sup>155</sup> The law does not require a demand for return of the property and a refusal.<sup>156</sup>

---

153 City National Bank of Fort Smith v. Goodwin, 301 Ark. 182, 783 S.W. 2d 335, 337 (1990).

154 McKenzie v. Tom Gibson Ford, Inc., 295 Ark. 326, 749 S.W. 2d 653, 655 (1988).

If, however, the bonus was paid as the result of a mutual mistake or as the result of a unilateral mistake made by Madison Financial, no claim for conversion can be stated:

The general rule is well settled that one who takes and disposes of the goods of another is guilty of a conversion thereof, although he did so under an honest but mistaken belief that the goods were his own. However, the rule does not apply where the mistake is mutual and where the owner's error is solely responsible for the taking and use of the property by defendant.<sup>157</sup>

Nevertheless, it might be possible to state a claim against McDougal for money had and received. Such a claim can be based on mistake.<sup>158</sup> It is more in the nature of assumpsit and thus ex contractu.<sup>159</sup> Thus, intentional conduct is not an element of this claim. Even so, proof of intentional misconduct, coupled with proof of the elements of this claim, might satisfy the extender statute. In the absence of any case law it is impossible to say for sure.

155 In McKenzie, for example, a car dealership that accepted "earnest money" from plaintiff could be liable for conversion when it used that money to pay down a loan plaintiff had co-signed at some earlier time for her son.

156 City Nat. Bank of Fort Smith v. Goodwin, 783 S.W.2d at 340.

157 89 C.J.S., Trover and Conversion, §10. See also Restatement 2d, Torts, § 244. Compare Newhart v. Pierce, 254 Cal. App. 2d 783, 792-93, 62 Cal. Rptr. 553 (1967) (defendants' mistaken belief that they could remove cattle under options to purchase was not a defense to an action for conversion of the cattle).

158 See e.g., General Contract Purchase Corp. v. Clem, 220 Ark. 863, 251 S.W. 2d 112, 113 (1952) ("Restitution does not presuppose a wrong by the person who received the money, and the presence of actual fraud is not essential to the invocation of [a cause of action for money had and received]"). It is an action greatly favored by the courts, less restricted and fettered by technical rules and formalities than any other form of action. Import Motors, Inc. v. Luker, 268 Ark. 1045, 599 S.W. 2d 398, 401 (Ark. App. 1980). A cause of action for unjust enrichment is the equitable counterpart of an action for money had and received but is maintainable only under such circumstances that in equity and good conscience prevent the wrongdoer from keeping the property. Fite v. Fite, 233 Ark. 469, 345 S.W. 2d 362, 363 (1961).

159 St. Paul-Mercury Indemnity Co. v. City of Hughes, 231 Ark. 530, 331 S.W. 2d 106, 109 (1960).

The loans: Here, fraud seems the more apposite theory, but some cases suggest that obtaining a loan under false pretenses amounts to conversion.<sup>160</sup>

Transactions 1, 3A, 3B, 6 and 9: So far as can be determined, services were rendered by the vendors paid through these transactions. There is no evidence of conversion.

3. Breach of fiduciary duty.

As noted in the Preliminary Report, this could be an intentional tort, but only if one can prove a wrongful intent.

The $30,000 bonus: As noted above, one can infer a wrongful intent from the efforts to mischaracterize this transaction.

The $75,949 bonus: Proof of failure to repay this bonus after receipt of financial statements showing it to be excessive might support such a claim.

The loans: If the Independent Counsel proves his allegations of a criminal conspiracy, the requisite intent probably would be established.

Transactions 1, 3A, 3B, 6 and 9: So far as can be determined, services were rendered by the vendors paid through these transactions. The only fiduciary duty issues are the issues raised by transactions 3B and 9. As noted above, those theories are weak.

4. Check kiting.

Check kiting is really a special case of fraud or conversion, or both. As noted in the Preliminary Report, check kiting involves a scheme to create the illusion that one has sufficient money in the bank to cover the requested draws when, in fact, one does not have sufficient money. Two conditions must exist for a successful check-kiting scheme. First, there must be a period of several days in the collection process before the depository bank presents the check to the drawee bank. Second, the banks must be willing to pay checks drawn against uncollected funds.<sup>161</sup> If these conditions are met, one can, at least for a time, pay out money that one does not have and yet not create an overdraft. Put another way, the successful check kite requires the use of two or more banks, between or among which money must be shuttled so as to fool one or more of the banks into thinking that the person who writes the checks has money when, in fact, that person does not have money.

160 In re Strapko, 5 Bankr. Rptr. 443, 445 (Bankr. D. Minn. 1980); In re Blagaich, 67 Bankr. Rptr. 375, 377 (Bankr. S.D. Fla. 1986).

161 See Benton E. Gup, Bank Fraud: Exposing the Hidden Threat to Financial Institutions 25 (Bankers Publishing Co. 1990).

The situation described here does not fit this pattern. Money was not shuttled between two banks; all the money at issue came out of Madison Guaranty and, for the most part, all the money stayed at Madison Guaranty at least until it reached Whitewater and was put to use paying creditors.<sup>162</sup> In addition, nobody seems to have been "fooled" in the sense that one normally is fooled by a kite. As detailed in the Preliminary Report, overdrafts were created or exacerbated all the time; indeed, Madison Financial was chronically in a state of being overdrawn. If this were a kite, it was singularly unsuccessful at forestalling overdrafts.

5. Conspiracy.

In Arkansas, the elements of civil conspiracy are:

- o A combination of two or more persons;
- o To accomplish an unlawful or oppressive purpose or a lawful purpose by unlawful, oppressive or amoral means;
- o One or more overt acts committed pursuant to the conspiracy;
- o Damages caused by these acts.<sup>163</sup>

To state a claim for civil conspiracy, one must be able to identify the underlying unlawful act that the conspirators were aiming to commit. The conspiracy (or agreement) by itself is not actionable unless one can show that it was aimed at the commission of a wrong (here, "fraud, intentional misconduct resulting in unjust enrichment, or intentional misconduct resulting in substantial loss to the institution"<sup>164</sup>). Thus, while conspiracy is sometimes referred to as a claim or cause of action all by itself, it is better conceived of as an alternate way of pleading the underlying tort against a group of people, some of whom did not commit all the elements of the tort themselves and thus would not be directly liable individually absent the allegation of conspiracy.<sup>165</sup>

---

<sup>162</sup> Of the entities mentioned above, only West-Ark Construction seems to have banked elsewhere.

<sup>163</sup> Mason v. Funderburk, 247 Ark. 521, 446 S.W. 2d 543, 548 (1969).

<sup>164</sup> 12 U.S.C. § 1441a(b)(14)(A)(ii).

<sup>165</sup> See Southwestern Pub. Co. v. Ney, 227 Ark. 852, 302 S.W.2d 538, 542-43 (1957); Ragsdale v. Watson, 201 F. Supp. 495, 501-02 (W.D. Ark. 1962).

To state the claim of conspiracy, say, conspiracy to commit fraud or to convert someone's property, one must first be able to state a claim for the underlying offense. As noted above, the RTC might be able to state claims for fraud, conversion and breach of fiduciary duty relating to McDougal's $30,000 bonus paid in April 1935 and to transaction 8.

The $30,000 bonus: The evidence suggests that this may have been a conspiracy on the part of McDougal and Latham. Whether others joined such a conspiracy is difficult to say. It seems unlikely that Heritage or Strayhorn had the requisite knowledge or intent. With regard to Young, the question is much closer as to whether he made the requisite agreement to participate in the conspiracy. This question turns on the factual question of how much knowledge he had of the conduct of McDougal and Latham (which, for purposes of this discussion, is assumed to be deliberate and unlawful). If the finder of fact concludes that Young had knowledge that McDougal and Latham were engaging in unlawful and tortious activity, his participation could lead to the inference of his agreement and could render him liable for conspiracy.<sup>166</sup> There is a significant possibility, however, that he could be viewed as someone who simply did what his boss told him to do without intending to join in a conspiracy.

The $75,949 bonus: The evidence suggests that the bonus was believed to be bona fide when paid. The failure to repay the bonus may be wrongful, but that appears to be the unilateral wrongful act of McDougal. Thus, a conspiracy theory appears inappropriate here.

The loans: The Independent Counsel has alleged that these transactions were undertaken pursuant to a conspiracy involving the McDougals and Jim Guy Tucker. As noted, the RTC has a tolling agreement with Tucker.

6. Aiding and abetting.

Arkansas has expressly adopted the principle of aiding and abetting:

---

166 See United States v. Cohen, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17675, *11-*12 (E.D. Pa. 1990) (denying an accountant's motion for acquittal following his conviction for conspiracy to obstruct the functions of the IRS and aiding and abetting the filing of false tax returns). See also United States v. French, 974 F.2d 687, 696 (6th Cir. 1992) ("[p]roof of a formal agreement is not required; it must only be proven that members of the conspiracy had at least a tacit or material understanding to try and accomplish an unlawful goal), cert. denied, 122 L. Ed. 2d 160 (1993). But cf. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Rowe, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1497, at *29-*33 (N.D. Cal., Feb. 5, 1993) (holding that a title company's participation in a phony loans conspiracy could not be inferred from the title company's recklessness in allowing documents to be removed from the title company's offices and notarized elsewhere).

All who actively participate in any manner in the commission of a tort, or who command, direct, advise, encourage, aid or abet its commission, are jointly and severally liable therefor.<sup>167</sup>

The Arkansas courts have not, however, delineated the elements for establishing aiding and abetting liability in a civil context.

Other courts, in slightly different contexts, have elaborated at length on the elements of aiding and abetting and on the standard to be applied in determining whether the elements have been satisfied. In a leading case, one federal court, relying in part on Restatement (Second) of Torts § 876 (1979), set forth the following elements for aiding and abetting:

- the party whom the defendant aids must perform a wrongful act that causes injury;
- the defendant must be generally aware of his role as part of an overall illegal or tortious activity at the time that he provides the assistance; and
- the defendant must knowingly and substantially assist the principal violation.<sup>168</sup>

Like conspiracy, aiding and abetting is a legal theory used to impose liability on someone who knowingly assists in the commission of a tort but does not perform all the elements of that tort himself. Without the underlying tort, there is no claim for aiding or abetting. As noted above, the RTC might be able to state claims for fraud, conversion and breach of fiduciary duty.

The $30,000 bonus: As noted, the evidence suggests that this may have been a conspiracy on the part of McDougal and Latham. Heritage and Strayhorn may have assisted in the commission of the act, but it is unclear that they did so knowing that they were participating in an unlawful scheme.

Young, however, may be liable for aiding and abetting. The pivotal question as to Young is whether he had the requisite knowledge that he was assisting an illegal or tortious activity. Given that Latham told Young that "We need to get some money in Jim's hands"<sup>169</sup> as the reason for writing the 167 Hinton v. Bryant, 236 Ark. 577, 367 S.W.2d 442 (1963). See also Cobb v. Indian Springs, Inc., 258 Ark. 9, 522 S.W.2d 383 (1975) (applying certain principles of aiding and abetting, i.e., advice or encouragement as substantial factor in causing tort, though not labeling them as such).

168 Halberstam v. Welch, 705 F.2d 472 (D.C. Cir. 1983).

169 Young Interview, Nov. 2, 1995, at 26.

check, Young may have sufficient knowledge.<sup>170</sup> Additionally, the RTC might not have to show that Young had actual knowledge of wrongdoing, but only that he should have known or was reckless in not knowing.<sup>171</sup> Even if recklessness will suffice to establish aiding-and-abetting liability, however, it is an open question whether reckless participation in the intentional misconduct of others will satisfy the statute-of limitations extender statute's requirement of "fraud" or "intentional misconduct."<sup>172</sup>

The $75,949 bonus: The evidence suggests that the failure to repay the bonus was the unilateral act of McDougal.

The loans: The Independent Counsel has alleged that these transactions were undertaken pursuant to a conspiracy involving the McDougals and Jim Guy Tucker. The theory, if proved, also might support an aiding and abetting claim against Tucker.

E. Cost-effectiveness.

As noted above, the RTC brings litigation only if the litigation appears to be cost-effective. Thus, even if a cause of action could be alleged, a case is not worth bringing if the would-be defendants have no money or the expected recovery exceeds the expected cost of obtaining that recovery.

---

170 See United States v. Cohen, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17675, *2-*8 (E.D. Pa. 1990)

171 Under Arkansas law a court might apply a "knew or should have known," standard to determine whether Young is liable for aiding a fiduciary in breaching that fiduciary's duty to Madison Guaranty. See Robertson v. White, 633 F. Supp. 954, 967 (W.D. Ark. 1986). In the securities context, before Central Bank of Denver v. First Interstate Bank of Denver, 114 S. Ct. 1439 (1994) eliminated the private right of action for aiding and abetting a violation of section 10(b) of the Securities Act of 1934, some courts held that recklessness could suffice to establish scienter when a fiduciary is alleged to have aided and abetted a violation of the securities law. E.g., Rolf v. Blyth Eastman Dillon & Co., 570 F.2d 38, 44 (2d Cir.) ("where, as here, the alleged aider and abettor owes a fiduciary duty to the defrauded party, recklessness satisfies the scienter requirement"), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1039 (1978); IIT, an Intern. Inv. Trust v. Comfeld, 619 F.2d 909, 923 (2d Cir. 1980). It may be difficult, however, to persuade a court to apply the rationale of those cases in other contexts. See Resolution Trust Corp. v. Rowe, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1497, at *29-*33 (N.D. Cal. 1993) (rejecting RTC's argument that knowledge could be established from recklessness where fiduciary alleged to have aided and abetted fraudulent scheme was an title company with narrower duties than those imposed by the securities laws).

172 12 U.S.C. § 1441a(b)(14)(A)(ii).

The $30,000 bonus: The only beneficiary, Jim McDougal, filed for bankruptcy and obtained an order of discharge from the bankruptcy court.<sup>173</sup> John Latham was involved in this transaction, but he too filed for bankruptcy.<sup>174</sup> Proving this claim would require discovery from at least five witnesses (McDougal, Latham, Young, Heritage and Strayhorn). Preparing and prosecuting this claim would cost considerably more than $30,000. Thus, this claim is not cost-effective.

The $75,949 bonus: The only beneficiary, Jim McDougal, filed for bankruptcy and obtained an order of discharge from the bankruptcy court. The available evidence does not suggest that anyone else engaged in intentional wrongdoing with respect to this transaction. Proving this claim would require discovery from at least five witnesses (McDougal, Latham, Young, somebody from Frost & Company and somebody from Peat Marwick). Preparing and prosecuting this claim would cost considerably more than $75,949. Thus, this claim is not cost-effective.

The loans: The potential damages here are much larger: approximately $1.2 million. If the Independent Counsel obtains convictions with respect to these matters, a claim based on these loans might be pursued in a cost-effective manner. Alternatively, the RTC could request that the Independent Counsel seek restitution on behalf of the RTC from any parties convicted of a crime; this might avoid the cost and delay inherent in commencing a separate civil action after the resolution of the criminal proceedings. Whether anyone could pay a judgment of this magnitude is unclear. The McDougals and Latham have no money. Who else might be involved, and whether they have money, remains to be determined.<sup>175</sup> From what is known, only Jim Guy Tucker might have the ability to satisfy a judgment of this magnitude.<sup>176</sup>

---

173 Jim McDougal filed for bankruptcy in September 1991 and obtained an order of discharge on January 17, 1992 (PMS0532, PMS0552), well before the enactment of the RTC Completion Act of 1993. The order of discharge could be set aside only if the RTC could prove a fraud on the bankruptcy court; proof that McDougal defrauded someone other than the bankruptcy court would be of no avail. Susan McDougal has not filed for bankruptcy, but the RTC already has a judgment of almost $400,000 against her (as well as Jim McDougal, although the claim against him would be discharged). There is no evidence that either McDougal could satisfy this outstanding judgment, let alone pay something in addition should another judgment be sought and recovered against them.

174 Latham and his wife filed a bankruptcy petition on March 13, 1992. In re Latham, Case No. 92-40703 MDS (Bankr. E.D. Ark.). A "no asset report" was filed by the bankruptcy trustee on May 21, 1992. The debtors were discharged on June 23, 1992. The case was closed on September 17, 1992. The statute of limitations has run. It is now too late to commence proceedings to revoke the discharge.

175 The RTC has a judgment of approximately $600,000 (net) against Dean Paul and Dean Paul, Ltd.

176 As noted above, the RTC has a tolling agreement with respect to Tucker.

III. SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS OF NEWLY RECEIVED INFORMATION PERTAINING TO THE CLINTONS.

The evidence does not suggest that the Clintons played any role with respect to the transactions discussed above. Nevertheless, because these transactions may indirectly have benefitted Whitewater (in the flow-of-funds sense discussed in the Preliminary Report), this part of the investigation has included an examination of what, if anything, the Clintons knew about these transactions when they occurred.

The Preliminary Report said little about the Clintons' knowledge of these matters because at the time little was known. Since then, however, additional information has been obtained: the Clintons' interrogatory responses; additional documents received from the Clintons' counsel, David E. Kendall, in late May 1995; and documents mentioning Whitewater that Kendall received from the White House on July 27, 1993 (the documents from the office of the late Vincent W. Foster, Jr.). This evidence has been examined against the previously available evidence both for points of consistency and for points of inconsistency.

The Clintons' interrogatory responses provide considerable new information about their expectations and approach to their investment in Whitewater. According to the Clintons, they were "passive" investors who left matters to Jim McDougal and who received relatively little information about the project. The May 1995 document production contains little that is not cumulative of documents already received. Only a few of these documents merit mention below. Similarly, the July 1995 production of the Foster documents contains little relevant to this phase of the investigation. Again, only a few documents merit mention below. Most of the Foster documents concern tax issues, mainly with respect to the Clintons' 1992 income tax return. As stated in the Preliminary Report, personal tax issues are not within the scope of the RTC's inquiry.

In the sections that follow, these three sources of information are discussed in the order that topics appear in the Preliminary Report. Wherever possible, the discussion here cross-references the appropriate section of the Preliminary Report.

A. Background to Whitewater.

The Preliminary Report discussed the McDougals' background in real estate activities in the years before the Whitewater project began.<sup>177</sup> The new information supplements this discussion with information about the Clintons' background in real estate activities.

<sup>177</sup> See Preliminary Report at 11-15.

Compared to the McDougals' experience with real estate investments, the Clintons' experience was relatively modest. Before August 1978 (when the Clintons and the McDougals purchased Whitewater), President Clinton had purchased real estate only when he had purchased two personal residences.<sup>178</sup> Mrs. Clinton had never purchased real estate except to purchase one personal residence and had never sold real estate.<sup>179</sup>

Before August 1978, the Clintons made only one real estate investment. In 1977, President Clinton invested in a five-acre parcel of land together with Jim McDougal. The investment may have been made through Rolling Manor, but the Clintons are not sure. As reported on the Clintons' 1978 tax return, the parcel was sold on May 17, 1978 for $5,000, resulting in a capital gain of $2,150. According to President Clinton: "To the best of my recollection, this was a small real estate investment I had had with Jim McDougal, and, while small, it was a profitable one. This experience confirmed my impression that he was capable of putting together successful real estate ventures."<sup>180</sup>

B. 1978-1982: The initial phase of the project.

1. 1978-1979: The original purchase of the land and the creation of the company.

Pages 16 through 19 of the Preliminary Report discussed the Clintons' and the McDougals' purchase of Whitewater and their later creation of Whitewater Development Company, Inc. (referred to here, as in the Preliminary Report, as "the Company"). The Preliminary Report said relatively little about the process by which the investors decided to purchase Whitewater. The new information helps complete that discussion.<sup>181</sup>

President Clinton cannot now remember specifically what he and his wife did before deciding to purchase the Whitewater real estate. As a native Arkansan, he had a general knowledge that there were many profitable land investments in the northern part of the state and that there appeared to be a market for vacation retirement real estate in northern Arkansas. He also had 178 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatories Nos. 1(a)-1(c), at 1.

179 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatories Nos. 1(a)-1(c), at 1-2.

180 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatories Nos. 1-2, at 1-3. See also Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatories Nos. 1-2, at 1-3.

181 The next two paragraphs supplement the Preliminary Report at 16, following n.50.

made a small but profitable real estate investment with Jim McDougal that apparently was closed out on May 17, 1978. He states:

The Whitewater property came to my attention through Jim McDougal, but I can't remember what he said, and I certainly can't recall "each and every conversation" I had with anyone about it or every document I reviewed. My wife and I did not visit the property before buying it with the McDougals.<sup>182</sup>

Neither of the Clintons can recall meeting or talking to representatives of Union National Bank or of Citizens Bank of Flippin about either of the loans used to purchase the Whitewater real estate.<sup>183</sup> Nor can they recall what information (if any) they provided to the banks, but they believe they would have provided whatever the banks deemed necessary to process the loan application.<sup>184</sup>

For the Clintons in 1978, the purchase of Whitewater represented a relatively large investment: they had placed approximately $200,000 at risk, although they had a relatively stable asset (land) to secure their debt.<sup>185</sup> By way of comparison, approximately two months later Mrs. Clinton decided to limit her investment in commodities trading to the much smaller sum of $1,000. In response to a question by the press about her commodities trading, Mrs. Clinton stated that her long-time friend Jim Blair told her about opportunities in the cattle market:

And when Jim said, "I think there's going to be a great opportunity to make money," and explained why and asked me what I thought we could afford to invest, I told him $1,000. So I opened an account at his very strong recommendation and proceeded to trade over the next months until July.<sup>186</sup>

---

182 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 3, at 4-5. Mrs. Clinton incorporated by reference President Clinton's answer to this interrogatory. Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 3, at 4.

183 This paragraph supplements the Preliminary Report at 17 n.59.

184 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 5, at 11-12; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 5, at 7.

185 This and the next paragraph supplement the Preliminary Report at 17 n.62.

186 Transcript of Mrs. Clinton's press conference of April 22, 1994, as transcribed by Federal News Service, at 2.

Later in the same press conference, Mrs. Clinton reiterated the point. Mrs. Clinton was asked a question that started "You said that--just now--that you decided that $1,000 was as much as you could risk . . . ." In her answer, Mrs. Clinton neither confirmed nor denied this statement. She simply said that "The $1,000 was what I wanted to start with, and it was what I thought was a good beginning, a good investment for me."<sup>187</sup>

Investing in land is a very different business than speculating on commodities. Nevertheless, Mrs. Clintons' statement about the amount she was willing to place at risk in commodities trading suggests that the Clintons, in 1978, were not of a mind to place large amounts of money into investments that they believed to be highly risky.

Taken together, the new evidence shows that the Clintons placed a fair amount of trust in McDougal and did fairly little themselves to investigate the investment. They had made money with McDougal on an earlier (albeit smaller) investment, and they believed that real estate prices in northern Arkansas were going to rise.

2. Whitewater, the corporation.

The Preliminary Report noted the formation of the Company but shed little light on why it was formed.<sup>188</sup> The Clintons say it was Jim McDougal's idea to form the Company. Mrs. Clinton says that she does not "recall why he proposed this, but we relied upon his real estate experience and agreed."<sup>189</sup>

The Preliminary Report noted conflicting evidence as to the identities and equity percentages of the Company's shareholders.<sup>190</sup> In her press conference of April 22, 1994, Mrs. Clinton confirmed her belief that the Clintons jointly owned half of the Company:

Q. The Whitewater development was set up, as you say, as a 50-50 partnership between the Clintons and the McDougals, meaning that you were liable for 50 percent of the losses or 50 percent of the gains; and yet, by your own accounting, you lost half or even maybe a third of what the 187 Id. at 11.

188 This paragraph supplements the Preliminary Report at 19-20, following n.75.

189 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 9(a), at 11.

190 This paragraph and the next two supplement the Preliminary Report at pages 20-21, following n.86.

McDougals lost. This is according to the Lyons report. Doesn't that discrepancy represent some sort of gift or gratuity?

MRS. CLINTON: No. And let me say that, yes, the ownership of the corporation was 50-50. . . .<sup>191</sup>

In her interrogatory answers, Mrs. Clinton explained that the Clintons did not receive stock certificates but nevertheless understood that they owned half the equity in the Company.<sup>192</sup>

The Preliminary Report also noted conflicting evidence with regard to who served as officers of the Company. It mentioned two tax reports apparently signed by Mrs. Clinton in June 1990, both of which listed her as president. Mrs. Clinton addresses this in her interrogatory answers:

In 1990, I learned from our personal accountant, Ms. Yoly Redden, that WDC's corporate charter had been revoked for nonpayment of franchise taxes and that state franchise tax reports had not been filed. The identification of me as "President" of WDC on the franchise tax reports which were subsequently filed appears to be simply an informal designation due to my actions on behalf of WDC in 1988-1990, as described above. The forms required the signature of an "officer," and the McDougals were both unavailable. I did not sign these two documents, but I wanted all the appropriate action taken so that WDC would no longer be delinquent. In preparing responses to these interrogatories, I have learned from my counsel that Ms. Carolyn Huber completed these two documents in accordance with instructions she received from personnel in Secretary of State's office when Ms. Huber went there to file the appropriate text paperwork and pay the $345.15 in franchise taxes that were due so that WDC would no longer be delinquent. Ms. Huber was authorized to sign my name.<sup>193</sup>

The question of who signed these June 1990 reports has little significance for this investigation. Madison Guaranty failed in 1989. Mrs. Clinton's work between 1988 and 1990 occurred several years after the McDougal bonuses, transaction 8 and McDougal's removal at the behest of the FHLBB.

191 Federal News Service Transcript at 13.

192 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 9(a), at 11.

193 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 9(e), at 14 (citations omitted).

3. Project marketing and management.

The Preliminary Report noted that an attempt was being made to interview Chris Wade, who had primary responsibility for marketing Whitewater to potential lot buyers.<sup>194</sup> As of this writing, Wade still declines to be interviewed and has stated through counsel that he will invoke the Fifth Amendment if subpoenaed.

The Preliminary Report expressed no view as to how long the investors thought it would take to sell all the lots.<sup>195</sup> The Clintons themselves had no definite idea as to how the project would be sold. President Clinton says: "When my wife and I invested in this venture, we relied upon the McDougals to conduct or supervise sales and marketing." "My wife and I did not have a definite idea of the 'probable sell-off period of the project', and we had no expectation as to the length of time we would be holding the investment."<sup>196</sup>

The Preliminary Report mentioned the preparation of a marketing brochure for Whitewater. The brochure is among the recently produced documents.<sup>197</sup>

4. The investors' expectations.

The Preliminary Report attempts to reconstruct the investors' expectations from the documentary evidence.<sup>198</sup> The new evidence addresses this issue more directly. In particular, the new evidence suggests that the investors' expectations as to project expenses may have been less definite than the Preliminary Report suggested. In his interrogatory answers, for example, President Clinton states:

We had no agreements, expectations or understandings with the McDougals as to what particular improvements would be made to the property, the cost of such improvements, or how long it would take to complete them.<sup>199</sup>

194 See Preliminary Report at 22-23 n.96.

195 This paragraph supplements the Preliminary Report at 22.

196 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 4(b), at 9-10.

197 DKRT11000404-11.

198 See Preliminary Report at 24-27.

199 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 4(c), at 11.

Similarly, President Clinton states that the Clintons "had no written agreement with the McDougals as to how the mortgage loan would be repaid . . . ." <sup>200</sup> The same is true with respect to the project financial and profit-sharing. The Clintons state that their agreement with the McDougals about the financing of the Whitewater project was oral and not formalized by a writing:

There was no particular definition of, nor limitation on, or financial commitment to the project, except that we anticipated that we would share equally with the McDougals in expenses and profits. Jim McDougal explained to us that he believed he could sell enough lots in a short period so that revenues from the escrow contract payments would make the project self financing, and based upon what we knew at the time about trends in Arkansas real estate and Jim's apparent success, we believed he was right. <sup>201</sup>

Similarly, there was no target date for a positive cash flow. The Clintons understood that, in the early period of the project before any lots were sold, before the project generated income, the four investors would have to contribute at least enough money to service the acquisition debt. The Clintons anticipated that we and [the McDougals] would make equal contributions and that any inequalities ultimately would be evened out from revenues of the project or when the venture was sold. The books and records of the project were kept by the McDougals, and I believe that we made contributions whenever they requested us to do so. We relied upon the McDougals to tell us when we needed to make a financial contribution to the venture. <sup>202</sup>

These statements are consistent with the other evidence.

---

200 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 7, at 14.

201 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 4(a), at 5-6.

202 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 4(a), at 7.

C. 1979-81: The years of land sales.

1. Operations and cash flow in fiscal year 1980.

The Preliminary Report mentioned that the Clintons contributed money toward Whitewater debt service in December 1978 by writing a check for $10,130.58 to the Great Southern Land Company.<sup>203</sup> Regarding this check, Mrs. Clinton says:

I believe I made the check out to Great Southern Land Company because Jim McDougal asked me to do so. Whitewater Development Company, Inc. (hereinafter, "WDC") had not been incorporated yet. I was not familiar with the Great Southern Land Company's activities, but I assumed it was a McDougal entity. I also assumed that in the early years of the project the McDougals would contribute their share toward the payment of interest and principal on the acquisition loans, but I had no knowledge of the source or amount of any such payments.<sup>204</sup>

The Preliminary Report noted that Whitewater sometimes lacked the money to pay debt service until just before, or just after, a payment was due.<sup>205</sup> In this regard, both of the Clintons indicate that they knew little before 1992 about Whitewater's lot sales between 1980 and 1985, Whitewater's cash flow between 1980 and 1986, the McDougals' expenditures on the project between 1980 and 1986, or the source of the McDougals' money.<sup>206</sup>

2. The bank debt as of August 1980.

The Preliminary Report stated that McDougal replaced the $20,000 Union Bank earnest money loan that he and Attorney General Clinton had taken out in 1978 with a $20,000 loan from the Bank of Cherry Valley. It also stated that the Bank of Cherry Valley loan, unlike the Union Bank loan, was recourse only to McDougal and not to the Clintons. The Clintons disagree, taking the position that the Bank of Cherry Valley loan was recourse to them. Thus, President Clinton's answer to Interrogatory No. 6 states:

---

203 See Preliminary Report at 28.

204 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 8, at 9-10.

205 See Preliminary Report at 30.

206 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-29; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-32.

I knew at some point that this loan had been shifted to the Bank of Cherry Valley. In my view, any shift of this $20,000 loan from Union Bank to the Bank of Cherry Valley did not affect its character as an acquisition loan, for which my wife and I considered ourselves equally responsible with the McDougals for repayment. Indeed, my name and Jim McDougal's both appear on at least one of the Bank of Cherry Valley extension notes (DKRT100500, dated April 13, 1982, attached hereto at Tab 6A).<sup>207</sup>

President Clinton has no recollection of discussing the shifting of this loan from Union Bank to Bank of Cherry Valley with Jim McDougal or with anyone else.<sup>208</sup>

The Union Bank loan, on which both McDougal and President Clinton were liable, was paid off using funds obtained by Jim McDougal from Bank of Cherry Valley loan no. 25997. The original loan documents mention only McDougal.<sup>209</sup> Thereafter, the Bank of Cherry Valley loan was extended six times.<sup>210</sup> The first such extension is evidenced by a promissory note. The note mentions, and is signed by, McDougal only.<sup>211</sup> The second such extension, loan no. 27572, dated April 13, 1982 and paid off December 9, 1982 by the third extension, also is evidenced by a promissory note. This note bears McDougal's name and address but is signed both by "James B. McDougal" and by "Bill Clinton."<sup>212</sup> So far as can be told from the documents (several of the promissory notes are close to illegible), the third, fourth, fifth and sixth extensions do not refer to, nor were they signed by, President Clinton.

To summarize: The $20,000 Bank of Cherry Valley loan was taken out in June 1980 and finally retired in January 1985. For most of this period, the documentary evidence suggests that only McDougal had any liability on this loan. For the period between April 13, 1982 and December 9, 1982, however, President Clinton may also have been liable, by virtue of having signed the second loan extension.

207 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 6(a), at 12-13.

208 Id., answer to Interrogatory No. 6(d), at 13-14.

209 See BCV0003-04; DKRT800313-14, 800316, 801223-24.

210 BCV0022, 32-34; DKRT100500, 400945-47, 801332.

211 DKRT801332.

212 DKRT100500, 101127, 400947.

3. Developments in the fall of 1980.

The Preliminary Report discussed financing and construction of a prefab house on Whitewater lot 13.<sup>213</sup> According to the Clintons, it was Jim McDougal's idea and not the Clintons' to purchase and install the prefab house on lot 13.<sup>214</sup>

Initially the house was financed by money from Pembroke Manor, a McDougal-controlled entity. Mrs. Clinton says she does not recall the mechanics of the transaction and does not recall knowing anything about the involvement of Pembroke Manor in the financing of the house.<sup>215</sup> Later Mrs. Clinton refinanced the house by taking out a personal loan from McDougal's Madison Bank & Trust Company. Regarding this loan, Mrs. Clinton states that she had no agreement with Madison Bank except as set forth in the promissory note. She explains:

However, as previously stated, my husband's and my understanding with Jim McDougal was that the loan was essentially a corporate one: WDC [Whitewater Development Company, Inc.] would receive the loan proceeds (which I understood were to be used somehow to pay for the prefab house), WDC would receive the down payment whenever the lot and house were sold and the escrow payments thereafter, and WDC would repay the loan at the Bank of Kingston from its operating revenues, including the proceeds and escrow payments derived from the sale of the house and lot.<sup>216</sup>

This explanation is consistent with the Company's later payment of principal and interest on the loan but does not clarify why the loan was taken out in Mrs. Clinton's name in the first place.

The Preliminary Report discussed the sale of Whitewater lot 7 and noted press speculation that the Clintons had expressed an interest in owning the lot, or had purchased it.<sup>217</sup> On this subject, President Clinton's interrogatory

213 See Preliminary Report at 31-34.

214 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 10(a), at 14-15.

215 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 10(c), at 15-16.

216 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 11(d), at 17-18.

217 See Preliminary Report at 35 n.163.

answers state: "We did not plan to keep or to buy any part of the project, although there was some discussion with the McDougals, very early on, about the possibility that, if sales went very well, we and they would each retain one lot."<sup>218</sup>

4. Whitewater after three years.

The Preliminary Report discussed the project's situation after the first three years of operations and noted in particular what the pace of lot sales meant for debt service. As noted above, both of the Clintons indicate that they knew very little before 1992 about Whitewater's lot sales between 1980 and 1985. All they recall hearing is that, as of October 1981, "[t]hings are looking pretty good at Whitewater as our receivables run about equal to what we owe" and that, as of 1986, "the previous summer [1985], he [McDougal] had sold all the WDC property."<sup>219</sup>

D. 1982-1985: The years of minimal sales and negative cash flows.

1. The sale of lot 13 to Hilman Logan and the repayment of Mrs. Clinton's Madison Bank loan.

The Preliminary Report described correspondence between Mrs. Clinton and Madison Bank in the summer of 1982 regarding the past due status of Mrs. Clinton's loan.<sup>220</sup> Mrs. Clinton confirms that she received DKRT700318, a letter dated August 5, 1982, from Ms. Theresa Pockrus at the Madison Bank & Trust . . . [Mrs. Clinton] responded to her letter with [Mrs. Clinton's] own letter dated August 11, 1982 (DKRT400134). . . . This letter reflects [Mrs. Clinton's] understanding, as stated in these interrogatory responses, that the repayment of this loan was a corporate responsibility.<sup>221</sup>

218 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 4(b), at 9-10.

219 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-29; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-32, referring to DKRT900101 (1981) and DKRT200475 (1986).

220 See Preliminary Report at 42.

221 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 11(e), at 18.

2. The Clintons' loan from Citizens Bank of Jonesboro.

The Preliminary Report noted that the Clintons borrowed money from Citizens Bank of Jonesboro and quoted a letter from McDougal stating that the Company had paid off this debt.<sup>222</sup> President Clinton states:

I recall very little about this 1979 loan for $5000, which was repaid in 1982. When my counsel wrote to the bank, the bank responded that "[t]he underlying documents for this loan are no longer in existence due to our record retention policy. I attach at Tab 13A a copy of this letter (DKRT11000800-1000803), which has appended to it the available information about the loan provided to my counsel by the bank. I do not recall what I did with any loan proceeds I may have received, and I do not recall how the loan was repaid. My counsel have located one interest check I wrote for this loan, and a copy is attached at Tab 13A (DKRT800326). I do not recall how the remainder of the interest was paid. It is possible that it was a WDC-related loan and that WDC repaid the loan and paid most of the interest (see my response to no. 13(d), infra).

.....

Please see Global Response to No. 13, supra. As previously indicated, I do not have a recollection as to how the proceeds of this loan were used. I attach as Tab 13A a copy of a letter to me from Jim McDougal, dated March 1, 1982 (DKRT700340), which states:

"I have paid from Whitewater Development Corporation the note you owed Citizens Bank of Jonesboro. You are correct in your belief that the sum of money borrowed was a part of your investment in Whitewater."

The letter does not refresh my recollection about the loan.<sup>223</sup>

President Clinton's answer is consistent with the response that Citizens Bank of Jonesboro made to the RTC's subpoena. This investigation has turned up no other evidence as to the purpose of this loan.

<sup>222</sup> See Preliminary Report at 47-48.

<sup>223</sup> Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 13, at 23-24.

3. Renewal of the Citizens Bank mortgage loan and origination of the Citizens Bank interest funding loan.

The Preliminary Report noted that the Clintons and the McDougals made no payments of principal or interest on the Citizens Bank mortgage loan from August 1981 through November 1982 and that the Company lacked the money to pay the interest that had accrued and was owing as of November 1982 ($20,000). This situation was rectified by renewing the mortgage loan and by borrowing $20,000 via a six-month balloon loan from Citizens Bank (the "Interest Funding Loan"). The Preliminary Report said that both of the Clintons and both of the McDougals signed the papers for the Interest Funding Loan, which was recourse to each.<sup>224</sup>

The Clintons say they have no particular recollection of the Interest Funding Loan and cannot verify that the signatures on the loan documents are theirs. In answer to interrogatories, each stated:

I have no recollection of this loan. It is possible that I signed an application for this loan or a promissory note at the request of Jim McDougal, although I do not recall doing so. I have no knowledge of how or why it was obtained, the terms of the loan, what it was used for, or when and how it was repaid. After receiving these interrogatories, my counsel were able to obtain from the successor to Citizens Bank and Trust Company a copy of what appears to be a promissory note for the loan referenced here, and this document is attached hereto at Tab 14A (DKRT11000809-11000811). The copy is not a particularly clear one, and I cannot be certain that the signature on the note is in fact mine.<sup>225</sup>

If the Clintons did sign the papers for this loan, the need to borrow money to cover their interest obligation might have suggested to them that sales did not suffice to cover debt service. Such an inference, if drawn, might have raised a question in their minds: It would have contradicted McDougal's statement to them in 1981 that "[t]hings are looking pretty good at Whitewater as our receivables run about equal to what we owe."<sup>226</sup> The Clintons say they did not know of any problem covering debt service.<sup>227</sup> In any event, such knowledge as of 1982 would be remote in time and substance from the questionable transactions: the McDougal bonuses and transaction 8 (1985-1986).

<sup>224</sup> See Preliminary Report at 52-54.

<sup>225</sup> Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 14, at 25; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 14, at 25-26.

<sup>226</sup> Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-29; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-32, referring to DKRT900101.

4. Problems at Madison Bank.

The Preliminary Report described an FDIC cease and desist order entered against Madison Bank in April 1983.<sup>228</sup> The Clintons say that neither of them learned of the FDIC cease and desist order until 1995, when they read the order in the attachments to the RTC's interrogatories to them.<sup>229</sup>

5. The refinancing of Mrs. Clinton's Madison bank loan using money that Governor Clinton borrowed from Citizens Bank of Paragould.

The Preliminary Report noted that Governor Clinton borrowed $20,800 from Citizens Bank of Paragould in September 1983 and used that money to pay down Mrs. Clinton's loan from Madison Bank (the loan used to refinance the prefab house on Whitewater lot 13).<sup>230</sup> President Clinton attaches no significance to the fact that he rather than Mrs. Clinton borrowed $20,800 from Security Bank of Paragould in 1983 to replace Mrs. Clinton's $30,000 loan from Madison Bank. The Clintons anticipated that the Company would be responsible for repayment of the loan, since it had obtained the benefit of the loan. The warranty deed to lot 13 was in Mrs. Clinton's name, but when the Company sold the lot and the house to Hilman Logan, the warranty deed to Logan was in the names of both of the Clintons. Both Clintons are listed as borrower in some of the renewal notes from Security Bank, e.g., DKRT200785.<sup>231</sup>

227 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-29; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-32.

228 See Preliminary Report at 54-56.

229 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 11(g), at 20; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 11(g), at 20.

230 See Preliminary Report at 57-58.

231 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 12(a), at 20-21.

Neither of the Clintons recalls why the loan was shifted from Madison Bank to Security Bank, nor do they recall approaching any banks about this matter.<sup>232</sup>

Neither of the Clintons recalls talking to Marlin Jackson about the Security Bank of Paragould loan.<sup>233</sup> Mrs. Clinton, however, confirms receiving several letters from Jackson and also notes a telephone message dated March 2, 1987, DKRT11000402. Mrs. Clinton thinks she also talked to Bill Fisher, President of Security Bank in the period 1987-1988. She does not recall the conversations but the documents suggest that their general topic was the fact that the Company was not making payments on the loan in a timely manner.<sup>234</sup>

The Preliminary Report questioned whether the proceeds of the Security Bank of Paragould loan sufficed to repay the Madison Bank loan in full.<sup>235</sup> President Clinton thinks that the money obtained from Security Bank was sufficient to pay off Madison Bank in full. He cites Madison Bank's real estate mortgage release, DKRT700383, which was a full release.<sup>236</sup> This point need not be resolved; no evidence ties the repayment to Madison Guaranty.

6. Operations and cash flow for fiscal year 1984.

The Preliminary Report noted that Whitewater had a negative cash flow after debt service, which it covered by obtaining money from McDougal-controlled entities.<sup>237</sup> As noted above, both of the Clintons indicate that they knew little before 1992 about Whitewater's lot sales between 1980 and 1985. Whitewater's cash flow between 1980 and 1986, the McDougals' expenditures on the project between 1980 and 1986, or the source of the McDougals'

---

232 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 12(d), at 22; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 12(d), at 21.

233 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 12(e), at 22-23; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 12(e), at 21.

234 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 12(e), at 21-22.

235 See Preliminary Report at 57-58, 65-66.

236 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 12(b), at 21-22.

237 See Preliminary Report at 59-60.

money.<sup>238</sup> Similarly, in response to Interrogatory No. 20, the Clintons state that they have no knowledge of the source of funds that Whitewater used between 1984 and 1986 to pay down bank loans.<sup>239</sup> Except possibly for the Interest Funding Loan of 1982-1983, which is relevant to knowledge of cash flow, no contrary evidence has been found.

7. Madison Guaranty's examination and supervisory agreement.

The Preliminary Report described an FHLBB Report of Examination, issued in June 1984, that was sharply critical of Madison Guaranty.<sup>240</sup> The Clintons state that they were unaware of the 1984 Report of Examination and the 1984 Supervisory Agreement. Neither Clinton recalls reading or learning the contents of either of these documents.<sup>241</sup>

E. Investigation of the possible flow of funds from Madison Guaranty to Whitewater.

The Preliminary Report described a series of nine deposits into Whitewater and analyzed each to see whether it might be traced back to Madison Guaranty.<sup>242</sup> The Clintons were asked a series of detailed questions designed to probe their knowledge (if any) of the facts underlying these transactions. The Clintons answered that they know nothing about these matters.<sup>243</sup>

The available evidence is consistent with this answer. While, as noted, the Clintons might at one point have had cause to question whether the lot sales covered debt service, that event--the signing of the Interest Funding

---

238 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-29; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-32.

239 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 20, at 38-39; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 20, at 49.

240 See Preliminary Report at 63.

241 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 16(b), at 30-31; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 16(b), at 33.

242 See Preliminary Report at 69-94. These nine transactions are analyzed in detail in part II above.

243 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatories Nos. 15, 16, 19, 20, at 27-31, 35-39; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatories Nos. 15, 16, 19, 20, at 27-33, 45-50.

Loan--occurred in 1982. In contrast, the nine transactions started late in 1984 and ended in 1986. The evidence does not suggest that the Clintons had any knowledge of the source of the funds used in the nine transactions.

F. Investigation of other possible connections between Madison Guaranty and Whitewater.

1. 1985: The McDougal bonus and the payments to Senator Fulbright.

The Preliminary Report discussed a transaction by which former Senator J. William Fulbright sold a parcel of land near Little Rock (the "Deltic parcel") to an entity called Earth Movers. The transaction was funded in part by a putative bonus of $30,000 paid by Madison Financial to Whitewater on behalf of Jim McDougal; the $30,000 simply passed through Whitewater, which did not end up with any interest in the land.<sup>244</sup>

The Clintons state that they know nothing about the Deltic transaction, the bonus or the other matters described in this section of the Preliminary Report.<sup>245</sup> No contrary evidence has been found.

2. 1985: Contributions to the Clinton campaign.

The Preliminary Report discussed a campaign fund raiser held April 4, 1985 at Madison Guaranty's offices in Little Rock, at which a number of people associated with Madison Guaranty made campaign contributions to Governor Clinton.<sup>246</sup> In interrogatories, the Clintons were asked about this campaign fund raiser. Mrs. Clinton states that she did not attend this fund raiser, does not know whether Senator Fulbright attended and knows nothing about the contributions made at the fund raiser, including their source and use. She states:

I have no knowledge that any monies obtained directly or indirectly from WDC or any account of Madison Guaranty were ever improperly used to pay any of my or my husband's "personal or political expenses or debts." As indicated in these responses, we anticipated that the WDC venture would be able to repay the acquisition loans and other loans and expenses identified herein,

244 See Preliminary Report at 94-102.

245 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 22, at 43-44; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 22, at 53-54.

246 See Preliminary Report at 102-14.

because, again as previously stated, we expected that the WDC venture would ultimately become self-financing.<sup>247</sup>

Beyond that, Mrs. Clinton indicates that she knows a number of the donors and was probably acquainted with certain others of them, although she would not say that she knew any of them "well."<sup>248</sup>

President Clinton states that he did attend the fund raiser but does not believe that Senator Fulbright attended, although McDougal had scheduled the event in the hope Senator Fulbright would be able to attend. President Clinton recalls nothing about the circumstances of any contribution that Senator Fulbright may have given.<sup>249</sup> President Clinton indicates that he was acquainted with a number of the contributors but he knows nothing about the source of the funds they used to make the contributions, nor does he know how much, if any, of the money obtained through the contributions was used to repay his debt to the Bank of Cherry Valley.<sup>250</sup> No contrary evidence has been found.

3. 1986-1988: David Hale and the International Paper deal.

The Preliminary Report discussed a $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal made by David Hale's Capital Management, Inc., $25,000 of which was used to fund part of a purchase of land from International Paper Realty Company made in the name of Whitewater.<sup>251</sup> The discussion noted press reports that Hale claims President Clinton pressured him into making the loan.<sup>252</sup>

President Clinton states:

I don't know what "alleged claim" David Hale has made. I don't recall any conversation with David Hale about loaning money to Jim McDougal, Susan McDougal, Master Marketing, Madison Guaranty, or any entity owned by the McDougals, and I am certain 247 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 21, at 50.

248 Id., answer to Interrogatory No. 21(c), at 52.

249 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatories Nos. 21(a) and 21(b), at 39-40.

250 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatories Nos. 21(c)-21(h), at 41-43.

251 See Preliminary Report at 115-22.

252 Id. at 115.

I never "pressured" Hale or any company he owned to make any loan.<sup>253</sup>

Mrs. Clinton states that she did not have any conversation with Hale about loaning money to the McDougals or Madison Guaranty.<sup>254</sup> Both of the Clintons state that they had no knowledge of the $300,000 loan made by Capital Management to Susan McDougal dba Master Marketing.<sup>255</sup>

Whitewater bought the International Paper parcel in October 1986. Shortly thereafter, McDougal sent the Clintons a "status report" letter dated November 14, 1986.<sup>256</sup> The RTC's interrogatories asked about this letter. Mrs. Clinton answered and President Clinton incorporated by reference her answer. Mrs. Clinton states that she believes that she and her husband received the letter, but she cannot recall the circumstances. With regard to McDougal's offer to have Charles James go over Whitewater's books with the Clintons, she says that the Clintons relied on McDougal's representations and did not feel a need to review the books. Mrs. Clinton states that she was encouraged by the letter to the extent that it suggested that Whitewater would have sufficient income to settle its affairs and be wound up when the debt was finally paid off.<sup>257</sup>

Mrs. Clinton also describes discussions that the Clintons had with McDougal at about this time about getting out of Whitewater:

I don't recall whether we had specific discussions with Jim McDougal about his letter, but I know that we did have discussions with him at about this time concerning our getting out of WDC. As I recall these discussions, Jim asked us to surrender our equity in the company to him or to him and Susan, because he believed they could use the company's losses for "tax purposes," as his letter says, although I do not know what those "tax purposes" were. My husband and I were not averse to doing this, since WDC by this time was a venture in which we had spent 253 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 23(a), at 44-45.

254 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 23, at 54-55.

255 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 23(c), at 45; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 23(c), at 55.

256 See Preliminary Report at 119-20.

257 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 24(a), at 56-57.

a great deal of money and received no return, but we did not want to be in a position of losing whatever equity we had in the company while still being personally obligated on the mortgage loan at Citizens Bank in Flippin and on the Lot 13 loan which was, as of this time, at the Security Bank of Paragould. As I recall our discussions, it proved impossible to get my husband and me released from these loans, so we ultimately declined to surrender our equity in WDC to the McDougals. During these discussions, neither of the McDougals suggested that we should contribute more money to the venture.<sup>258</sup>

Mrs. Clinton says that at no time before 1989 did she know anything about the purchase by Whitewater of 810 acres of land from International Paper Realty Corporation; to the contrary, she believed that Whitewater was in the process of winding up its affairs.<sup>259</sup> No contrary evidence has been found.

G. 1985-1992: Whitewater after the land was gone.

1. The bulk sale to Ozark Air and its assumption of some of the debt.

The Preliminary Report discussed the bulk sale of Whitewater's remaining lots to Chris Wade's Ozark Air in May 1985 and the periodic reduction thereafter in the amount owing on the Citizens Bank mortgage loan, culminating in its final repayment in May 1992.<sup>260</sup> Asked why between July 1986 and May 1992, the Clintons did not repay the Citizens Bank mortgage loan, Mrs. Clinton answered:

As previously indicated, it was always intended that this mortgage loan would be repaid by the income stream generated by the escrow contracts from lots that had been sold. We saw no reason to prepay the mortgage personally. The mortgage was ultimately paid off completely, as were all the WDC bank loans which my husband and I signed for at the Union Bank, the Bank of Cherry Valley, the Bank of Kingston (Madison Bank and Trust), and the Security Bank of Paragould. To the best of my knowledge, my husband and I never signed for a WDC loan at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan or any other savings and loan association.<sup>261</sup>

258 Id., answer to Interrogatory No. 24(b), at 57-58.

259 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 24(c), at 59-60. President Clinton incorporated by reference his wife's answer to this interrogatory. Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 24, at 46-47.

260 See Preliminary Report at 123-25.

The reference to "prepay[ing]" the mortgage is puzzling. The loan was a series of one- or two-year notes. It was not a long-term amortizing mortgage.

2. The decline in the recourse debt.

The Preliminary Report discusses the partial conversion of Whitewater's debt from debt that was recourse to the shareholders to debt that was nonrecourse. It noted that the advances from McDougal and McDougal-controlled entities effected this change; they, instead of the banks, became the project's principal creditors.<sup>262</sup> In its interrogatories, the RTC asked the Clintons why, between the end of fiscal year 1981 and fiscal year 1986, the Clintons spent essentially nothing on Whitewater. Mrs. Clinton responded:

We made a financial contribution to the project whenever we were requested to by the McDougals. There were many years in which the McDougals did not ask for a contribution. As already indicated, however, we expected the project to be essentially self-financing when the requisite number of lots had been sold. Indeed, Jim McDougal wrote to us in 1981 that "[t]hings are looking pretty good at Whitewater as our receivables run about equal to what we owe." DKRT900101, attached hereto at Tab 26(A). Please see my response to No. 7(c), supra.<sup>263</sup>

As noted above, the Interest Funding Loan, if signed by the Clintons, might raise a contrary inference, but that inference would apply to 1982-1983. The recourse debt did not decline significantly until 1985-1986.

3. Operations and cash flow in fiscal years 1985 and 1986.

As noted above, both of the Clintons indicate that they knew little before 1992 about Whitewater's lot sales between 1980 and 1985, Whitewater's cash flow between 1980 and 1986, the McDougals' expenditures on the project

261 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 26(f), at 68 (emphasis added).

262 See Preliminary Report at 125.

263 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 26(b), at 67.

between 1980 and 1986, or the source of the McDougals' money.<sup>264</sup> Similarly, in response to Interrogatory No. 20, the Clintons again state that they have no knowledge of the source of funds that Whitewater used between 1984 and 1986 to pay down bank loans.<sup>265</sup> Asked whether the Clintons knew at any time between 1978 and 1986 that they had not spent nearly as much on the Whitewater project as had the McDougals, Mrs. Clinton answered: "We did not know, in this time period, precisely what our and the McDougals' respective financial contributions to the project were."<sup>266</sup> No contrary evidence has been found.

4. The Lyons report.

The Preliminary Report discussed the conclusions of the Lyons Report and reconciled the Lyons Report's calculation of the Clintons' total investment in Whitewater ($46,137) to the total investment figure presented in the Preliminary Report ($35,970).<sup>267</sup> In her interrogatory answers, Mrs. Clinton presented numbers that differ slightly from those presented in the Preliminary Report. Based on her review and her counsel's review of the available records, she said she believes that the Clintons spent over $46,600 on Whitewater, as follows:

the $37,849.93 which we had expended through calendar year 1986 (please see my response to No. 15(d)(3) and 15(d)(8), supra), $2561.33 in interest payments on the Security Bank of Paragould Loan in 1987, $1473.60 in interest payments on that loan in 1988, $1275.15 in real estate taxes in 1988, $291.35 in real estate taxes in 1989, $345.15 in franchise taxes in 1990, and $2839.24 in 1991 for accounting work to prepare various tax filings for WDC.<sup>268</sup>

---

264 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-29; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-32.

265 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 20, at 38-39; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 20, at 49.

266 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 26(c), at 67.

267 See Preliminary Report at 129-31.

268 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 26(a), at 66-67.

For the most part, any inconsistency between these numbers and those that appear in the Preliminary Report is more apparent than real.<sup>269</sup> In their interrogatory answers, the Clintons used calendar years. For the most part, the Preliminary Report uses Whitewater's fiscal year. That one difference explains several of the apparent inconsistencies.<sup>270</sup>

The remaining apparent inconsistencies between Mrs. Clinton's interrogatory answers and the Preliminary Report also can easily be reconciled. Apart from timing differences explained above (fiscal versus calendar year), the sole difference between Mrs. Clinton's statement and the Preliminary Report about advances in 1981 is that the Preliminary Report excluded $243.82 paid to Citizens Bank of Jonesboro, whereas Mrs. Clinton did not.<sup>271</sup> The same is true with respect to Mrs. Clinton's answer about advances through 1986: The sole differences are timing differences (fiscal versus calendar year) plus the $243.82 paid to Citizens Bank of Jonesboro.<sup>272</sup> Finally, Mrs. Clinton includes the $1,000 received from Jim McDougal in 1992, whereas the Preliminary Report did not.<sup>273</sup>

5. The 1986 examination of Madison Guaranty, the cease and desist order and McDougal's final removal from Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial.

The Preliminary Report summarized the events leading to McDougal's removal from any connection with Madison Guaranty and Madison Financial.<sup>274</sup> The Clintons state that they had no knowledge of the 1984

269 The same is true of inconsistencies between the numbers in the Preliminary Report and numbers found on the Vincent Foster "documents mentioning Whitewater in the files this office received from the White House on July 27, 1993." Letter from David E. Kendall to Bruce A. Encson, dated July 27, 1995, at 1. Those documents contain some numbers that differ from the numbers in the Preliminary Report. E.g., DKSNO000058, DKSNO000068-71. The differences, however, do not seem material. Nor is there anything in these documents that suggests the Preliminary Report overlooked anything of consequence.

270 If one adjusts for the differences between a calendar year and a fiscal year, there are no inconsistencies whatsoever between the numbers set forth in Mrs. Clinton's answers to Interrogatories Nos. 15(d)(1) and 15(d)(7) and the numbers in the Preliminary Report.

271 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15(d)(2).

272 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15(d)(8). The report excluded this $243.82 because no definitive connection between this loan and Whitewater has been made.

273 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15(d)(3).

274 See Preliminary Report at 131-32.

Report of Examination; the 1984 Supervisory Agreement; the 1986 Report of Examination; and the 1986 Cease and Desist Order. Neither Clinton recalls reading any of these documents or learning about its contents. Furthermore, Mrs. Clinton says that, as of July 17, 1986, she was unaware of the meeting in Dallas at which FHLBB officials instructed Madison Guaranty's board of directors to remove McDougal from his offices.<sup>275</sup>

6. Mrs. Clinton's work on matters related to Whitewater after Jim McDougal ceased to manage Whitewater's financial affairs.

The Preliminary Report discussed the Clintons' repurchase of Whitewater lot 13 after its purchaser, Hilman Logan, went bankrupt.<sup>276</sup> In 1988, when the Company was unable to make payments on the Security Bank loan, the Clintons personally repaid the loan by buying lot 13 out of Hilman Logan's bankruptcy and then reselling this real estate. Mrs. Clinton explains:

At some point in 1987, I learned that Hilman Logan had declared bankruptcy, and I asked a bankruptcy lawyer at the Rose Law Firm, Allen Bird, to assist us in determining how to assure that our rights under the escrow contract were protected. In the 1987-1988 period, it became evident to us that WDC might not be able to pay off the Security Bank loan. In 1988, Mr. Bird was able to negotiate with the Hilman Logan estate and with the federal bankruptcy trustee in Mississippi an arrangement whereby my husband paid $8000 of our own funds into the Bankruptcy Court and personally acquired the Logan estate's equity in lot 13. . . . In the meantime, the Ozarks Realty Company had negotiated for us the sale of Lot 13 to John and Marilyn Lauramoore for $27,500. . . . After this sale, my husband and I were able to pay off the remaining principal and interest at the Security Bank, pay the seller's closing cost on the transaction, recover our $8000 personal investment, and realize $1640, which we reported as a capital gain on our 1988 tax return.<sup>277</sup>

The documentary evidence is consistent with this explanation.

275 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 16(b), at 30-31; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answers to Interrogatory No. 16(b), at 33, and Interrogatory No. 17(g)(5), at 38.

276 See Preliminary Report at 133-36.

277 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 12(f), at 23-24 (citations omitted).

The Preliminary Report also discusses Mrs. Clinton's efforts in 1988 and thereafter to tend to Whitewater's affairs and, in particular, its delinquent taxes. It mentioned Mrs. Clinton's efforts to obtain a power of attorney from Jim McDougal.<sup>278</sup> In her answer to interrogatories, Mrs. Clinton describes at great length her attempts to obtain a power of attorney from the McDougals in 1988 and the difficulties she had reaching them and attempting to straighten out the affairs of Whitewater.<sup>279</sup>

7. The Clintons sell their remaining interest to McDougal.

The Preliminary Report discusses the transaction in 1992 by which the Clintons sold their remaining interest in Whitewater to McDougal for $1,000.<sup>280</sup> Mrs. Clinton states that the purpose of the agreement was to divest all of the Clintons' interests in Whitewater. The document was negotiated by Jim Blair and drafted by Vincent Foster. When Mrs. Clinton signed the agreement, she did not know that the McDougals had signed a document purporting to assign McDougals' Whitewater stock to Jim McDougal's mother, Lorene McDougal, if indeed they had. The Clintons also were unaware of the International Paper litigation.<sup>281</sup>

The Clintons did not attend the closing meeting of December 22, 1992, at which McDougal bought the Clintons' interest in Whitewater for $1,000. President Clinton states that, until he answered the RTC's interrogatories, he had not seen Vincent Foster's memorandum of this closing meeting.<sup>282</sup> Mrs. Clinton cannot recall seeing the memorandum either, but she thinks she may have seen it or one like it.<sup>283</sup> Regarding Jim McDougal's purported minutes, which Foster received in silence, Mrs. Clinton states that she had not previously seen the minutes and, she says, the purported minutes are inaccurate since [she] did not either personally or through counsel, attend a meeting of the Board of Directors of WDC on December 22, 1992,

---

278 See Preliminary Report at 136-37.

279 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 25(a), at 60-63.

280 See Preliminary Report at 137-38.

281 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 25(e), at 64-65.

282 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 25(c), at 48.

283 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 25(d), at 64.

at which "a discussion of the old business of the corporation was held, and all actions of the corporation up to and including this meeting were ratified."<sup>284</sup>

H. The Clintons' knowledge.

The Preliminary Report posed but did not answer the question whether the Clintons knew about the McDougals' advances to Whitewater, about the source of the funds used to make those advances or about the source of the funds used to make payments on bank debt. In light of the evidence received since the completion of the Preliminary Report, the RTC is in a better position to address these questions.

The Clintons answer these questions by stating that they had no knowledge of these matters. For example, in response to Interrogatory No. 15, both of the Clintons indicate that they knew little before 1992 about Whitewater's lot sales between 1980 and 1985, Whitewater's cash flow between 1980 and 1986, the McDougals' expenditures on the project between 1980 and 1986, or the source of the McDougals' money.<sup>285</sup> Similarly, in response to Interrogatory No. 20, the Clintons state that they have no knowledge of the source of funds that Whitewater used between 1984 and 1986 to pay down bank loans.<sup>286</sup>

Interrogatory No. 19 asks the Clintons about their knowledge of certain facts detailed at length in the various parts to this interrogatory. The Clintons do not provide any such information. Instead, in identical "global responses" they say they do not know whether the facts are accurate or not, and they also assert:

As previously indicated, the McDougals exercised control over the management and operations of WDC for the period of its active existence. My wife and I signed extensions or renewals of various WDC-related bank loans, but we did not receive annual reports or regular financial summaries and were not informed of all the actions taken in the name of WDC. We did not know what expenditures the McDougals made on WDC's behalf, the sources

---

284 Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 25(f), at 65.

285 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-29; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 15, at 27-32.

286 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 20, at 38-39; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 20, at 49.

of these expenditures, or their nature. As was contemplated from the inception of the venture, we were passive investors and relied upon the McDougals to manage and operate it.<sup>287</sup>

Putting aside for the moment the legal significance of the phrase "passive investor,"<sup>288</sup> the evidence is essentially consistent with this assertion. For the relevant period (ending in 1986), the evidence suggests that the McDougals and not the Clintons managed Whitewater. The evidence does not suggest that the Clintons had managerial control over the enterprise, or received annual reports or regular financial summaries. Instead, and as the Clintons suggest, their main contact with Whitewater seems to have consisted of signing loan extensions or renewals.

This point can be demonstrated by presenting a chronology of the documents identified in this investigation that are addressed to or written by the Clintons pertaining to Whitewater.<sup>289</sup>

Date	Document	Description
1978
06/19/78	DKRT900145	Union Bank promissory note.
07/27/78	DKRT900179	Letter from Wade to the McDougals and the Clintons (but addressed only to the McDougals) regarding the closing on the Whitewater property.
08/02/78	DKRT900087	Citizens Bank of Flippin promissory note.
08/02/78	DKRT801033	Citizens Bank mortgage.
09/07/78	DKRT900180	Letter from Wade to the McDougals and the Clintons regarding the closing statement and a survey.

287 Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 19, at 35-36; Interrogatory Responses of Hillary Rodham Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 19, at 46.

288 See pages 77-78 below.

289 Some press accounts have included chronologies that list contacts between the Clintons and the McDougals other than those listed below. Because no evidence has been found that these conversations pertained to Whitewater, they are not listed here.

12/29/78	DKRT801348	The Clintons' check to Great Southern Land Company for $10,130.58.
1979
06/19/79	DKRT900147	First extension of Union Bank note.
08/06/79	DKRT800433	Demand notice from Citizens Bank of Flippin to the McDougals and the Clintons (addressed only to the McDougals' address).
09/17/79	DKRT900151	Second extension of Union Bank note.
09/30/79	DKRT800938-39	Warranty deed from the McDougals and the Clintons to the Company.
11/09/79	CBF0271	Extension agreement for the Citizens Bank mortgage loan.
12/17/79	DKRT900155	Third extension of Union Bank note.
12/29/79	DKRT801346	The Clintons' check to McDougal for $237.50, reimbursement of interest paid.
12/29/79	DKRT801344	The Clintons' check to Citizens Bank for $4,752.88.
1980
01/15/80	DKRT900157	Letter returning canceled second extension of Union bank note.
08/05/80	DKRT800529	Extension and modification agreement with Citizens Bank.
08/21/80	CBF0274	Affidavit warranting the purpose of the Citizens Bank mortgage loan.
08/23/80	DKRT801342	Check for $9,000 made out in blank and ultimately given to Citizens Bank.
12/16/80	MBT000000087 DKRT900163 DKRT900019	Mrs. Clinton borrows $30,000 from Madison Bank.

12/28/80	DKRT900021	Warranty deed transfers lot 13 to Mrs. Clinton.
1981
02/17/81	DKRT400932	The Clintons' check for $243.82 to Citizens Bank.
06/30/81	DKRT800762	The Clintons' check for $300 to Madison Bank.
08/01/81	DKRT800742	The Clintons' check for $300 to Madison Bank.
08/05/81	CBF0282	Extension agreement for the Citizens Bank loan.
09/26/81	DKRT800762	The Clintons' check for $300 to Madison Bank.
10/06/81	DKRT900101	Letter from McDougal to Mrs. Clinton enclosing an extension agreement for signature. The letter states that "Things are looking pretty good at Whitewater as our receivables run about equal to what we owe. The only problem is our inability to sell the house on the property because of high rates."
10/12/81	DKRT900100	Letter from Mrs. Clinton to McDougal enclosing a signed copy of an extension agreement for the Citizens Bank mortgage loan.
11/10/81	DKRT900044	Letter from Wade to the Clintons confirming that lot 13 had been sold to Hilman Logan.
11/23/81	DKRT800758	Letter from Chris Wade to President Clinton enclosing a warranty deed for lot 13.
12/09/81	DKRT800748-50	Escrow contract for lot 13.
12/27/81	DKRT800763	The Clintons' check for $600 to Madison Bank.

1982

02/20/82	DKRT101036	The Clintons' check for $20,744.65 to Madison Bank.
03/01/82	DKRT400989	Letter from McDougal to President Clinton confirming that the Citizens Bank of Jonesboro loan is part of the Clintons' investment in Whitewater.
04/13/82	DKRT100500	Extension agreement for the Bank of Cherry Valley loan.
08/05/82	DKRT700318	Letter from Theresa Pockrus, EVP, Citizens Bank, to Mrs. Clinton.
08/11/82	DKRT400134	Letter from Mrs. Clinton to Pockrus.
11/01/82	DKRT400134 CBF0222	Interest Funding Loan promissory note.
11/01/82	CBF0322	Extension agreement for the Citizens Bank Mortgage Loan.

1983

09/19/83	DKRT100934	Letter from Mrs. Clinton to McDougal enclosing a tax statement for lot 13.
09/30/83	DKRT400136-37	Letter from Security Bank of Paragould to President Clinton enclosing proceeds of the loan.
09/30/83	DKRT400155	Promissory note signed by President Clinton.
09/30/83	SBP0081-82	Loan application (unsigned).
10/14/83	DKRT700112	Extension agreement for Citizens Bank Mortgage Loan.

1984

09/30/84	DKRT200764	Extension agreement for Security Bank of Paragould loan.
----------	------------	--

10/01/84	DKRT700556	Letter from Mrs. Clinton to McDougal regarding a notice of final payment received from Security Bank of Paragould.
10/04/84	DKRT101073	Letter from McDougal to Mrs. Clinton enclosing a check for Security Bank of Paragould.
10/04/84	DKRT500917	Whitewater check for $4,811.19 to Security Bank of Paragould.
10/05/84	DKRT400142	Security Bank of Paragould's notice of past due loan payment addressed to President Clinton.
10/15/84	DKRT700388	Security Bank of Paragould's notice of past due loan payment addressed to President Clinton.
10/22/84	DKRT100735	Letter from Mrs. Clinton to McDougal regarding unpaid property taxes.
11/05/84	DKRT500941	Whitewater check for $143.65 to Mrs. Clinton relating to property taxes paid on lot 13.
11/21/84	DKRT700307-08	Letter from McDougal to Mrs. Clinton, which reads in full: "I urgently need your personal financial statement to renew the Whitewater note at Flippin."
11/26/84	DKRT700113	Extension agreement for the Citizens Bank Mortgage Loan.
12/12/84	DKRT700414	Memorandum from McDougal to Mrs. Clinton asking the Clintons to sign their financial statement.
1985
03/26/85	DKRT800557	Memorandum to President Clinton regarding arrangements for the campaign fund raiser to be held at Madison Guaranty.

04/04/85	-	Date of the campaign fund raiser, which President Clinton attended.
10/11/85	DKRT200358	Extension agreement for the Security Bank of Paragould loan.
1986
02/03/86	DKRT700305	Letter from Security Bank of Paragould to President Clinton enclosing a statement of interest paid.
06/23/86	DKRT700341-45	Note from Carolyn Huber to Mrs. Clinton: "I did not get to speak to Jim. The lady in his office told me you sold the property late last year. She asked that I send the bill to Jim--so I did today." See DKRT700334.
10/22/86	DKRT700334-35	Memorandum from Carolyn Huber to Mrs. Clinton regarding property tax issues on lot 13.
11/14/86	DKRT200475	Letter containing a "status report" on Whitewater sent to McDougal to the Clintons.
11/20/86	DKRT700302	Notice of payment due, sent by Security Bank of Paragould to President Clinton.
12/06/86	DKRT200683	Letter from McDougal to the Clintons regarding the Citizens Bank mortgage.
12/30/86	DKRT400999	The Clintons' check for $1,635.51 to Security Bank of Paragould.

I. Analysis.

The foregoing list contains essentially all of the documents regarding Whitewater that seem to have been addressed to, or written by, the Clintons.<sup>290</sup> These documents do not disclose much of substance about Whitewater's sales or its sources and uses of funds. At most, they show that the Clintons signed some checks and bank documents. If such documents were signed in the presence of the McDougals, these occasions could have led to conversations in which questions were asked about Whitewater. That, however, is speculation; in fact, the documents and the interviews reveal no evidence of such conversations. Therefore, on this record, there is no basis to assert that the Clintons knew anything of substance about the McDougals' advances to Whitewater, the source of the funds used to make those advances or the source of the funds used to make payments on bank debt.

In particular, there is no evidence that the Clintons knew anything of substance about the transactions as to which the RTC might be able to establish liability as to people other than the Clintons: the $30,000 McDougal bonus and transaction 8. There is no evidence that the Clintons knew anything about the bonus. As for the Dean Paul/David Hale/Capital Management transactions that apparently funded Capital Management's $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal, there is nothing except an unsubstantiated press report that David Hale claims then-Governor Clinton pressured him into making the loan to Susan McDougal.<sup>291</sup> President Clinton has denied this.<sup>292</sup>

The press and others have focused to some extent on the question of whether the Clintons were "passive investors." From a legal point of view, their general status as passive investors (or, for that matter, as active investors) is not the issue.<sup>293</sup> To state a claim against the Clintons (or anyone else), the 290 No attempt has been made to include documents created after December 31, 1986 or received by the Clintons after December 31, 1987. There is no evidence of any possible flow of funds from Madison Guaranty to Whitewater after November 1985. By July 1986, McDougal's control of Madison Guaranty had ended.

---

291 See Preliminary Report at 115. The RTC has not been able to depose or interview Hale.

292 "I don't know what 'alleged claim' David Hale has made. I don't recall any conversation with David Hale about loaning money to Jim McDougal, Susan McDougal, Master Marketing, Madison Guaranty, or any other entity owned by the McDougals, and I am certain I never 'pressured' Hale or any company that he owned to make any loan." Interrogatory Responses of William Jefferson Clinton, May 24, 1995, answer to Interrogatory No. 23(a), at 44-45.

293 The term "passive investor" receives occasional use in the case law, mainly in tax and securities cases. E.g., Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 692 (1985) (rejecting the notion that the securities laws were designed to protect only "passive investors"); United Fibertech, Ltd. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 976 F.2d 445, 446 (8th Cir. 1992) (holding that a passive investor cannot deduct research and experimental expenses in connection with a trade or business); Casali v. Schultz, 292 Ark. 602, 607, 732 S.W.2d 836, 838 (1987) (securities case; dissenting opinion); Schultz v. Rector-Phillips-Morse, Inc., 261 Ark. 769, 783, 552 S.W.2d 4, 11 (1977) (securities). The Tax Reform Act of 1986 also added the phrase
(continued...)

RTC must plead and prove "fraud" or "intentional misconduct."<sup>294</sup> Knowledge and intent are essential elements of these offenses; absent proof of such knowledge and intent, no claim can be stated.

On this record, there is no basis to charge the Clintons with any kind of primary liability for fraud or intentional misconduct. This investigation has revealed no evidence to support any such claims. Nor would the record support any claim of secondary or derivative liability for the possible misdeeds of others. As set forth in part II above, there is evidence that the McDougals and others may have engaged in intentional misconduct.<sup>295</sup> There are legal theories by which one can become liable for the conduct of others--e.g., conspiracy and aiding and abetting.<sup>296</sup> On this evidentiary record, however, these theories have no application to the Clintons.

To hold one liable for conspiracy or aiding and abetting, the RTC must plead and prove the elements of these theories. These elements include a general awareness of the wrongful acts being committed by others and an intention to assist in the commission of the primary offenses. There is no evidence here that the Clintons had any such knowledge or intent. Accordingly, there is no basis to sue them.

IV. RECOMMENDATION.

As part of its Madison Guaranty investigation, the RTC deemed it necessary to determine whether Whitewater caused losses to Madison Guaranty and, if so, whether anyone could be sued cost-effectively to make good those losses. Those tasks have been accomplished.

As stated above, the RTC has no cost-effective claims against anyone unless the Independent Counsel's prosecution of the McDougals and Tucker leads to convictions with respect to the loans described as part of transaction 8. Therefore, pending the results of the criminal case, it is recommended that no further resources be expended on the Whitewater part of this investigation.

---

293(...continued)

"passive activity" to the tax laws. 26 U.S.C. § 469, added by Pub. L. 99-514, Title V, § 501(a), 100 Stat. 2233. None of these usages has any significance for present purposes.

294 12 U.S.C. § 1441a(b)(14)(A)(ii). See Preliminary Report at 7.

295 As noted, the McDougals and Jim Guy Tucker have been indicted for an alleged criminal conspiracy involving the Dean Paul, Ltd. loan that is part of transaction 8. See McDougal Indictment ¶ 16, at 10-12.

296 See Preliminary Report at 9-11. See also part II.D above.

CONFIDENTIAL
TENTATIVE & PRELIMINARY
PREPARED AT THE DIRECTION OF
ATTORNEY - COUNSEL

Madison Guaranty
McDougal Payments
April 1982 - May 1986

This chart must be read together with the accompanying text.

Date of Deposit into Whitewater (Deposit Used To Fund Payment To - Amount)	Flowerwood Farms	Tucker-Smith- McDougal	Pembroke Manor	Madison Marketing	Smith-McDougal Land	Rolling Manor	Smith-Tucker- McDougal	Jim McDougal, Trustee	Link to Madison Guaranty
									Amount of Deposit	Traceability Not Established	Traceability Can be Established	Not Reversed
1. September 10, 1984 (Bank of Cherry Valley - $7,500)		X							$7,500		$7,500
2. October 26, 1984 (Security Bank - $4,811)			X		X		X		$3,050	$3,050
3A. November 7, 1984 (Citizens Bank - $18,000)	X								$12,000		$12,000
B. November 20, 1984 (Same as 3A.)				X					$5,566		$5,566
4. December 7, 1984 (Citizens & Cherry Valley Bank - $9,276)		X	X			X		X	$9,310	$9,310
5. January 10, 1985 (Bank of Cherry Valley - $5,071)	X	X	X		X		X		$4,660	$4,660
6. January 28, 1985 (Citizens Bank, Escrow Account - $1,000)	X								$1,000		$1,000
7. March 12, 1985 (Wade and others - $5,625)		X	X			X	X		$5,800	$5,800
8. April 9, 1985 (Ozarks Realty - $25,000)	X								$24,456		$24,456
9. November 8, 1985 (Security Bank - $7,322)				X					$7,500		$7,500
10. Other Fiscal Year 1986 Deposits (2)									$2,700	$2,700
11. Fiscal Year 1983 and prior									$2,168			$2,168
12. Fiscal Year 1984									$18,584			$18,584
Total									$104,294	$25,520	$58,022	$20,752

Note: Whitewater also received $30,000 from Madison Financial (the McDougal bonus) on May 1, 1985. This payment has been linked to an earlier $30,000 payment by Whitewater to Earth Movers, Inc. on April 23, 1985.

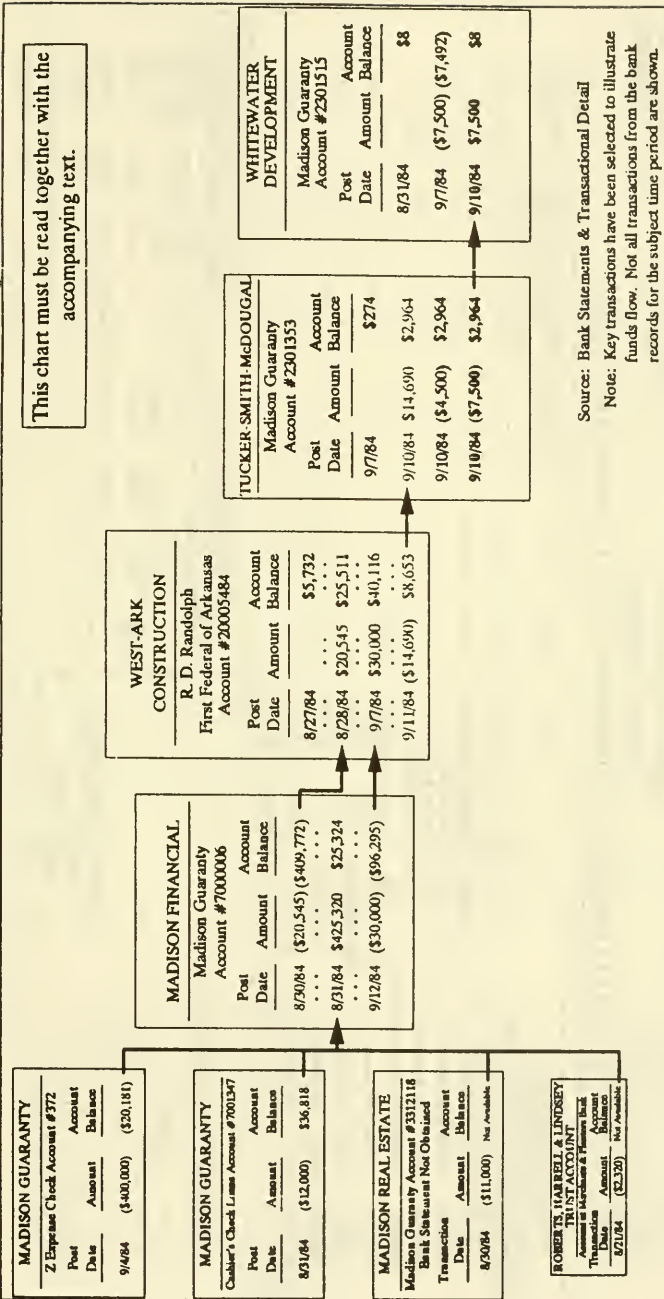

September 1984
Transaction

CONFIDENTIAL
TENTATIVE & PRELIMINARY
PREPARED AT THE DIRECTION OF
ATTORNEY - COUNSEL

Madison Guaranty Funds Tracing

$7,500 Deposit to Whitewater From Tucker-Smith-McDougal

This chart must be read together with the accompanying text.

Source: Bank Statements & Transactional Detail

Note: Key transactions have been selected to illustrate funds flow. Not all transactions from the bank records for the subject time period are shown.

CONFIDENTIAL
TENTATIVE & PRELIMINARY
PREPARED AT THE DIRECTION OF
ATTORNEY - COUNSEL

November 7, 1984
Transaction

Madison Guaranty Funds Tracing $12,000 Deposit to Whitewater From Flowerwood Farms

This chart must be read together with the accompanying text.

MADISON FINANCIAL CORPORATION
Madison Guaranty Account #7000006
Transaction Date	Amount	Account Balance
10/23/84	$22,300	Not Available
10/23/84	$1,027	Not Available
10/23/84	($6,000)	Not Available
10/24/84	$1,000	Not Available
10/26/84	$10,000	Not Available
10/26/84	$600,000	Not Available
10/30/84	($6,657)	Not Available

WEST-ARK CONSTRUCTION
R. D. Randolph First Federal of Arkansas Account #20003484
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
10/23/84	$6,000	$10,942
10/30/84	...	$6,028
10/31/84	...	$21,855
11/6/84	($12,000)	$8,991

UNDETERMINED DEPOSITORS
Amount
($9,993)

FLOWERWOOD FARMS
Madison Guaranty Account #2301361
Transaction Date	Amount	Account Balance
11/5/84	$12,338	Not Available
11/6/84	($12,000)	Not Available

WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT
Madison Guaranty Account #2301515
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
11/2/84		$792
11/6/84	($18,000)	($17,708)
11/7/84	$12,000	($5,708)
11/14/84	$285	($5,423)
11/15/84	($15)	($5,581)
11/15/84	($143)	($5,581)
11/20/84	$5,566	($15)
11/27/84	$144	$129

INDIVIDUAL DEPOSITORS
Transaction Date	Amount
11/5/84	($238)

Source: Bank Statements & Transactional Detail

Note: Key transactions have been selected to illustrate funds flow. Not all transactions from the bank records for the subject time period are shown.

CONFIDENTIAL
TENTATIVE & PRELIMINARY
PREPARED AT THE DIRECTION OF
ATTORNEY - COUNSEL

November 20, 1984
Transaction

Madison Guaranty Funds Tracing

$5,566 Deposit to Whitewater From Madison Marketing

This chart must be read together with the accompanying text.

MADISON GUARANTY
Z Expense Check Account #372 (Bank Statement Not Available)
Transaction Date	Amount	Account Balance
11/2/84	($7,154)	Not Available
11/13/84	($3,929)	Not Available
11/18/84	($60)	Not Available
11/19/84	($25,361)	Not Available

MADISON FINANCIAL CORPORATION
Madison Guaranty Account #7000006 (Bank Statement Not Available)
Transaction Date	Amount	Account Balance
11/2/84	($24,156)	Not Available
11/2/84	($1,607)	Not Available
11/9/84	($5,932)	Not Available
11/19/84	($375)	Not Available

WHITENER & ASSOCIATES
Madison Guaranty Account #330750 (Bank Statement Not Available)
Transaction Date	Amount	Account Balance
11/5/84	($12,254)	Not Available
11/13/84	($5,035)	Not Available

CAMPOBELLO PROPERTIES
Madison Guaranty Account #7000081 (Bank Statement Not Available)
Transaction Date	Amount	Account Balance
11/2/84	($4,500)	Not Available
11/5/84	($2,181)	Not Available

MADISON MARKETING
Madison Guaranty Account #7011872 (Bank Statement Not Available)
Transaction Date	Amount	Account Balance
11/5/84	$45,171	Not Available
11/5/84	$2,181	Not Available
11/15/84	$4,500	Not Available
11/16/84	$14,956	Not Available
11/19/84	$25,736	Not Available
11/19/84	($5,566)	Not Available

WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT
Madison Guaranty Account #2301515
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
11/2/84	($144)	$292
11/6/84	($18,000)	($17,708)
11/7/84	$12,000	($5,708)
11/14/84	$285	($5,423)
11/15/84	($15)	($5,581)
11/15/84	($144)	($5,581)
11/20/84	$5,566	($15)
11/27/84	$144	$129

Source: Bank Statements & Transactional Detail

Note: Key transactions have been selected to illustrate funds flow. Not all transactions from the bank records for the subject time period are shown.

CONFIDENTIAL
TENTATIVE & PRELIMINARY
PREPARED AT THE DIRECTION OF
ATTORNEY - COUNSEL

January 1985
Transaction

Madison Guaranty Funds Tracing

$1,000 Deposit to Whitewater From Flowerwood Farms

This chart must be read together with the accompanying text.

MADISON FINANCIAL CORPORATION
Madison Guaranty Account #7000006
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
1/14/85	($46,000)	($54,688)
1/16/85	$117,456	$29,041

MADISON REAL ESTATE
Madison Guaranty Account #3311596
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
1/11/85	($46,000)	$6,036
1/11/85	$46,000	$6,036

BILL HENLEY
Madison Guaranty Account #3311634 (Bank Statement Not Available)
Transaction Date	Amount	Account Balance
1/9/85	$46,000	Not Available
1/23/85	($28,500)	$2,109

FLOWERWOOD FARMS
Madison Guaranty Account #2301361
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
1/21/85	...	$867
1/23/85	$28,500	$29,267
1/24/85	($3,500)	$25,767
1/25/85	($6,202)	$19,565
1/28/85	($1,000)	$15,065
1/28/85	($3,500)	$15,065

WHITewater DEVELOPMENT
Madison Guaranty Account #2301515
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
1/24/85		$446
1/28/85	$1,000	$446
1/28/85	($1,000)	$446

WHITewater DEVELOPMENT
ESCROW ACCOUNT
Citizens Bank Account #3175
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
1/25/85	$1,000	$1,478
1/29/85	$262	$1,740
2/1/85	$196	$1,936
2/4/85	$146	$2,082
2/5/85	$241	$2,323
2/6/85	($2,304)	$19

Source: Bank Statements & Transactional Detail

Note: Key transactions have been selected to illustrate funds flow. Not all transactions from the bank records for the subject time period are shown.

CONFIDENTIAL
TENTATIVE & PRELIMINARY
PREPARED AT THE DIRECTION OF
ATTORNEY - COUNSEL

April 1985
Transaction

Madison Guaranty Funds Tracing $24,456 Deposit to Whitewater From Flowerwood Farms

1985

This chart must be read together with the accompanying text.

STEPHENS SECURITY BANK
Transaction	Date	Amount	Amount
Trans-action	4/1/85	($135,000)
			(Loan)

FLOWERWOOD FARMS
Madison Guaranty Account #2301361
Post Date	Account	Amount	Balance
4/2/85		$1,551
4/3/85	$135,000	$136,551
4/9/85	($24,456)	$98,740	....

WHITewater DEVELOPMENT
Madison Guaranty Account #2301515
Post Date	Account	Amount	Balance
3/29/85		$544
4/1/85	($25,000)	($24,471)	...
4/9/85	$24,456		($15)

OZARKS REALTY COMPANY
Transaction	Date	Amount	Amount
Trans-action	3/22/85	$40,000
			$25,000

MADISON FINANCIAL CORPORATION
Madison Guaranty Account #7000006
Post Date	Account	Amount	Balance
1/10/86	($75,949)	($1,435,283)	....

CAPITAL MANAGEMENT
Transaction	Date	Amount	Amount
David Hale	4/3/86	($300,000)

JAMES B. McDUGAL
Madison Guaranty Account #424
Post Date	Account	Amount	Balance
1/6/86		($18,777)
1/7/86	$75,949	$43,731
1/23/86	($40,000)	($1,824)
4/8/86	$300,000	$65,018
4/8/86	($122,460)	$65,018
4/8/86	($111,524)	$65,018
4/15/86	$111,524	$163,641

MADISON GUARANTY
Cashier's Check Account #7001312
Post Date	Account	Amount	Balance
4/8/86		$122,460	$291,638
4/10/86	($111,524)	$255,595
4/17/86	($10,936)		$153,407

STEPHENS SECURITY BANK
Transaction	Date	Amount	Amount
Trans-action	1/21/86	$40,000
	4/7/86	$111,524
			(Repayment of Loan)

Source: Bank Statements & Transactional Detail
Note: Key transactions have been selected to illustrate funds flow. Not all transactions from the bank records for the subject time period are shown. Statements have not been obtained for the entities and accounts at other banks, and therefore account balances are not available.

CONFIDENTIAL
TENTATIVE & PRELIMINARY
PREPARED AT THE DIRECTION OF
ATTORNEY - COUNSEL

Madison Guaranty Dean Paul, Ltd. Loan - Flow of Funds

November 1985
Transaction

Madison Guaranty Funds Tracing

$7,500 Deposit to Whitewater From Madison Marketing

MADISON GUARANTY
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
10/28/85	($48,185)	($67,642)

Whitener & Associates Madison Guaranty Account #2007750 (Bank Statement Not Available) Transaction Date Amount Account Balance
10/25/85	($1,533)	Not Available

MADISON FINANCIAL CORPORATION Madison Guaranty Account #7000006
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
10/28/85	($2,000)	($414,219)
10/28/85	($17,068)	($414,219)
10/28/85	($37,579)	($414,219)
10/28/85	$30,000	($414,219)
10/28/85	$70,000	($414,219)
10/28/85	$500,000	($414,219)
10/30/85	($27,110)	($424,637)

Campobello Properties Madison Guaranty Account #7000081
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
10/31/85	($14,375)	($314,334)

MADISON MARKETING Madison Guaranty Account #701872
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
10/25/85	$89,295	$162,864
...	...	...
10/29/85	$27,110	$141,861
...	...	...
10/30/85	$14,375	$131,770
...	...	...
11/8/85	($7,500)	$23,837

WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT Madison Guaranty Account #2301515
Post Date	Amount	Account Balance
10/31/85		$12
11/8/85	$7,500	$7,512
11/14/85	$285	$7,797
11/15/85	($7,322)	$475

This chart must be read together with the accompanying text.

Source: Bank Statements & Transactional Detail
Note: Key transactions have been selected to illustrate funds flow. Not all transactions from the bank records for the subject time period are shown.

CONFIDENTIAL
TENTATIVE & PRELIMINARY
PREPARED AT THE DIRECTION OF
ATTORNEY - COUNSEL

Madison Guaranty The $30,000 Bonus Paid to James McDougal

Resolution Trust Corporation
Office of Inspector General, Office of Investigation

JOHN LATHAM, LATHAM & ASSOCIATES, was interviewed on July 12, 1995 at Little Rock, Arkansas by Special Agent E.P. HUSOK, RTC Office of Inspector General, and Special Agent SCOTT MALLON, FDIC Office of Inspector General. Also present during the interview was LATHAM's attorney, JAMES RHODES, of the law firm DOVER & DIXON. LATHAM was advised that he was to be interviewed relative to his knowledge of the ROSE Law Firm representation of the former MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS and LOAN and the 1985 purchase of property owned by the INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT COMPANY (IDC).

LATHAM said that he began working at MADISON GUARANTY as the Executive Vice President in 1983. He said that he was also a member of the Board of Directors of MADISON FINANCIAL CORPORATION, a subsidiary of MADISON GUARANTY.

LATHAM said that at one time, date not recalled, JAMES MCDOUGAL suggested that MADISON GUARANTY use ROSE for some of the legal work at the institution. LATHAM said that, "MCDOUGAL had friends over there, he suggested we use them." LATHAM said when asked who the friends were that it was HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON and others. MASSEY said that he also was familiar with a ROSE attorney, RICHARD MASSEY, with whom he had attended college at the University of Central Arkansas. LATHAM said that he did not specifically recall the manner by which ROSE was paid but knew that at some point the firm was on retainer which he heard was $2,000 per month. LATHAM said that he did not know who the billing attorney at ROSE was.

LATHAM said that he recalled ROSE working on only one matter for MADISON GUARANTY. He said that the issue ROSE worked on concerned a broker/dealer operation that was purchased by MADISON. He said that he recalled that ROSE worked either on the acquisition of the broker/dealer operation, or on legal aspects of the acquisition after it had been done. LATHAM said that MASSEY worked on the matter because he had specifically asked for him to do so. LATHAM could not recall any specifics of what the services performed by ROSE in the matter were, except that he did recall one occasion when he and MASSEY met with BEVERLY BASSETT of the Arkansas Securities Department (ASD). He could not recall details of that meeting.

LATHAM was asked whether he recalled anyone from ROSE working on a preferred stock offering contemplated or proposed by MADISON GUARANTY. He said he did not. LATHAM said that he recalled that at some time in 1985, the institution was considering every possible means of increasing capital, and that a preferred stock offering was considered along with other means. He recalled that the decision was eventually made to raise capital by a subordinated debt offering. LATHAM said that he did not recall anyone from ROSE working on that issue, rather he recalled that JOHN SELIG of the law firm of MITCHELL, WILLIAMS, SELIG, JACKSON worked on the matter.

By: E.P. HUSOK	Date prepared: July 16, 1995	File No: WA-94-0016
----------------	------------------------------	---------------------

LATHAM said that he did not recall ROSE working on any other legal matters at MADISON. He specifically said that he did not recall ROSE working on any real estate or participation loan matters. LATHAM said that he recalled that at some point in 1986 the institution received correspondence from HILLARY ROOHAM CLINTON indicating that the firm was returning retainer funds or terminating the retainer agreement that had been in effect because the firm was uncomfortable in receiving a retainer when performing little or no legal services for the institution. LATHAM said that he was not aware of any discussions between anyone from the institution and ROSE concerning the end of the retainer arrangement, and did not know of any work ROSE performed for the institution after that time. He said that he believed that he would have advised MCDOUGAL of the correspondence after he received it, but had no specific recollection of having done so. LATHAM said that to his knowledge, the ending of the retainer agreement had nothing to do with the financial situation of the institution at the time.

LATHAM was asked his knowledge of the hiring of FROST & COMPANY by MADISON GUARANTY. He said that in the previous independent auditing firm hired by MADISON GUARANTY had been inexperienced and were taking longer and asking more questions to complete the institution audits than should have been necessary. LATHAM said that he and others at the institution, which was growing at the time, were attempting to straighten out the finances at the institution. LATHAM said that SELIG recommended FROST. He recalled meeting with JIMMY ALFORD and MICHAEL ROBINSON of FROST, and that the firm was hired to do the independent audits and tax work for the years of approximately 1984-1985.

LATHAM was shown a July 10, 1985 letter from MASSEY to the ASD concerning an application to engage in broker/dealer activities. He said that he had no recollection of the letter. He reviewed the attachments and said that some of the materials in Exhibits A-B appear to be institution balance sheets and consolidated income figures. He could not tell who had generated the figures in Exhibits A-B. He said that Exhibit C appeared to be a work sheet about which he had no knowledge. He noted that the materials at Exhibit D concerned the broker/dealer acquisition and were signed off on by institution employee GREG YOUNG.

LATHAM was shown a July 25, 1985 letter from LATHAM to the ASD in which MASSEY discussed net worth concerns that the ASD had, and by which letter MASSEY forwarded June 24, 1985 letters by LATHAM and ROBINSON. LATHAM said that he had no recollection of discussing the issues addressed in the letter with MASSEY, although he may have, or of having written the letter. LATHAM reviewed the attachments to his letter and said that he had no specific recollection of the documents or of who prepared them. LATHAM said he had no recollection of the ROBINSON letter. LATHAM said that he did not recall ever asking FROST to produce any documents other than what would have been normally produced in connection with the audits and tax work.

LATHAM was asked about his knowledge of the involvement of SETH WARD at MADISON GUARANTY or MADISON FINANCIAL. He recalled that WARD and MCDUGAL were somehow familiar with each other, and that it was thought that WARD had the contacts that could bring business deals to the institution. LATHAM could not recall the nature of the agreement between WARD and MCDUGAL or MADISON FINANCIAL/MADISON GUARANTY, or whether WARD was an employee of either entity, but recalled that WARD was getting an automobile and possibly commissions on sales transactions.

LATHAM was asked his recollection of the IDC property and transaction. He said that he recalled that the IDC as an entity was indebted to several banks for property that the company held. He recalled that the property was at 145th Street, and that there was a building at 65th Street that was involved. LATHAM said that he did not recall the individuals at IDC or the banks that were involved, but believed that WARD was familiar with them and was able to bring them together to arrive at a deal for the property. LATHAM said that he did not recall being involved in any discussions involving the purchase. He said that he was sure that MCDUGAL had discussions with WARD concerning the matter, but LATHAM did not recall being a party to any of those discussions.

LATHAM said he had no recollection of any MADISON GUARANTY or MADISON FINANCIAL Board of Directors meetings where WARD may have been authorized by vote, resolution, or other matter to act as a representative or agent of MADISON GUARANTY or MADISON FINANCIAL in the matter of purchasing the IDC property, although there may have been such a vote or resolution.

LATHAM said that he did not recall any discussions he was involved in concerning the manner in which the purchase of the property was structured. He said that he recalled that he did know that part of the IDC property was to be purchased by MADISON FINANCIAL, and part by WARD. LATHAM said that he recalled that there were three reasons why the purchase was split between WARD and MADISON FINANCIAL. He said that there was in effect at the time an Arkansas state regulation that limited the amount of a state chartered institution's net worth that could be invested in a service corporation, and that he recalled that the limitation at the time may have been six percent. LATHAM said that a second consideration was that WARD wanted to make money on the transaction himself, and so wanted to purchase part of the property. A third reason, according to LATHAM, was that MCDUGAL really only wanted to purchase a portion of the IDC property that he wanted to use to develop a housing development, but that the IDC property had been presented as an all or nothing package purchase.

LATHAM said that it was his recollection that MCDUGAL believed that the IDC purchase was a good deal, and that MCDOUGAL'S strategy was to sell off the parcels of the property he had not intended to be part of the housing development as quickly as possible to recoup the purchase price. LATHAM said that he recalled that there may have been some agreements to sale portions of the IDC property in place already at the time that MADISON FINANCIAL/WARD closed on the property to reduce risk to MADISON FINANCIAL, although he could recall no specifics. LATHAM said that he did not recall what agreements, if any, existed between WARD and MADISON GUARANTY, MADISON FINANCIAL, or MCDOUGAL in the transaction. When asked whether he was familiar with an agreement concerning an option by MCDOUGAL or the institution or MCDOUGAL to purchase property purchased by WARD, LATHAM said he had some recollection that there may have been an option but he had no knowledge of the specifics.

LATHAM said that he recalled that there was a sewer and water works included in the IDC purchase. He said that he did not know whether the sewer and water works were purchase by MADISON FINANCIAL or WARD as part of their respective purchases. LATHAM said that he did not recall JIM GUY TUCKER being involved at the purchase phase of the transaction, but believed that the sewer and water works was subsequently sold to a company set up by TUCKER and R.D.RANDOLPH to purchase and operate it.

LATHAM said that he did not recall MADISON GUARANTY or MADISON FINANCIAL engaging ROSE or any other law firm for legal services concerning the sewer and water works, compliance with Arkansas state laws or Public Service Commission regulations.

LATHAM said that he had no recollection of MADISON GUARANTY or MADISON FINANCIAL engaging ROSE or any other law firm to do research concerning whether any portion of the IDC property was "wet" or "dry" for purposes of establishing a brewery, tavern, or tasting room on any part of the IDC property. LATHAM said that he did recall that at that time, MCDOUGAL had a friend who had a brewery or was interested in establishing a brewery. LATHAM was asked if he was familiar with a WILLIAM or BILL LYON. He said that he had some recollection that a BILL LYON was a banker in some Arkansas town south of Little Rock, but had no recollection of a BILL or WILLIAM LYON being involved in the IDC transaction.

LATHAM said that he believed that MADISON FINANCIAL wrote a check to pay for the MADISON FINANCIAL portion of the purchase, and that MADISON GUARANTY loaned WARD at least part, if not all, of the purchase price of his portion of the property.

LATHAM said that he was not aware of any law firm that provided services to WARD, MADISON FINANCIAL, or MADISON GUARANTY in the purchase of the IDC property. LATHAM said he was not aware of any law firm that provided legal services to the banks or IDC in the matter.

LATHAM said that he is familiar with ROSE attorney THOMAS THRASH, but did not recall him having any involvement in the transaction. He did recall that THRASH once represented some other party in a real estate transaction involving MADISON GUARANTY/MADISON FINANCIAL, but could recall no specifics.

LATHAM said that he could not recall whether he attended the closing of the IDC transaction, but may have as he recalled having lunch with WARD and MCDOUGAL at the Excelsior Hotel in Little Rock on the day the transaction closed.

LAW OFFICES

WILLIAMS &amp; CONNOLLY

725 TWELFTH STREET, N.W.

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20005

(202) 434-5000

FAX (202) 434-5029

EDWARD BISHOP WILLIAMS (1920-1996)
AND A CONNOLLY (1922-1996)

WILLIAM J. FULLER
WILLIAM F. HENRY
JERAMIAN C. COLEMAN
ROBERT L. WEINBERG
DAVID POWEN
STEVEN W. VINTY
JOHN W. PARSONS
PAUL MARTIN WOLFE
J. ALAN CALLEWAT
JOHN C. CRIST
WILLIAM E. HODGKINS
MARTIN V. SHULMAN, JR.
ALEXIS M. DANIEL, II
RICHARD M. COOPER
GERALD A. HENDER
ROBERT P. WATERS
JERRY L. SHULMAN
LAWRENCE MCKINNON
LESTER H. FORDSON, II
ROBERT S. BISHOP
DAVID E. CONNOLLY

GREGORY J. CLARK
JOHN J. HULLIST, JR.
TERENCE S. DONNELL
ROBERT A. WATSON
JOHN C. WILK
DAVID I. HENRY
GARY P. BISHOP
STEPHEN L. WEINBERG
MICHAEL J. WOOD
KATHERINE WHITTEN PETER
JAMES A. HARTMAN, JR.
PETER J. LAMON
LOUIE S. BISHOP
MICHAEL J. WUNDERLICH
JAMES T. MILLER, JR.
DAVID D. WUNDERLICH
MURIEL A. CONNOLLY
CAROLYN M. WILLIAMS
P. LOUIE WATSON, JR.
STEPHEN J. CLARK

CLAYTON A. TWILFACH
PAUL WOOD
ROBERT F. EUTHMAN
MICHAEL J. WATSON
KATHLEEN E. HODGKINS
STEVEN A. WEINBERG
DAVID S. LEWIS
DAVID C. BISHOP
DAVID A. BISHOP
MICHAEL E. HODGKINS
ROBERT M. BISHOP
KATHLEEN L. BISHOP
WILLIAM E. HODGKINS, JR.
STEPHEN S. BISHOP
JOHN S. CLARK
DAVID E. CONNOLLY
JOHN E. WUNDERLICH
JOHN E. WUNDERLICH
CHARLES A. WATSON

January 3, 1996

VIA FACSIMILE AND HAND DELIVERY

The Honorable Alfonso M. D'Amato
Chairman
United States Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs
Senate East Office Building
Room 520
Washington, D.C. 20510-6075

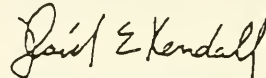

Dear Senator D'Amato:

You and your agents have stated that the recently released Rosa Law Firm billing records for the Madison Guaranty representation impugn or contradict Mrs. Clinton's statements to investigators. The Associated Press reports today that you stated on yesterday's Brinkley show that the billing records "show 'tremendous inconsistencies' with Mrs. Clinton's sworn statements to federal regulators . . . ."

These are serious charges that are wholly unfounded and completely false. Since you have made these allegations, in fairness you ought now to state the specific factual basis for them.

I don't believe you can.

Sincerely,

David E. Kendall

LAW OFFICES
WILLIAMS & CONNOLLY

725 TWELFTH STREET, N.W.

WASHINGTON, D. C. 20005

(202) 434-5000

FAX (202) 434-5029

LOUWIS J. BARNETT WILLIAMS (1930-1988)
 PHILIP A. CONNOLLY (1922-1979)

WILLIAM J. JONES
 LAMARQUE W. HENRI
 SALMAN C. COLLINS
 ROBERT L. WINTERBAC
 JAMES POWERS
 MICHAEL M. JONES
 JOHN W. HARRIS
 PAUL HANATH TOLSON
 J. ALAN CHAMBERS
 JOHN C. ESTER
 WILLIAM E. HARRIS
 MICHAEL W. JONES, JR.
 MICHAEL M. JONES, III
 MICHAEL M. COOPER
 GERALD A. HARRIS
 ROBERT P. WATERS
 JERRY L. HARRIS
 WALTER L. HARRIS
 LARRY M. HARRIS
 ROBERT W. HARRIS
 JAMES L. HARRIS

ALBERT E. JONES
 JOHN J. HARRIS, JR.
 THOMAS J. HARRIS
 DOUGLAS A. HARRIS
 JOHN E. HARRIS
 ROBERT L. HARRIS
 LARRY P. HARRIS
 THOMAS L. HARRIS
 PHILIP J. HARRIS
 PRESERVE WHITEN HARRIS
 JAMES A. HARRIS, JR.
 PATRICK HARRIS
 LOU J. HARRIS
 MICHAEL J. HARRIS
 JAMES T. HARRIS, JR.
 DAVID D. HARRIS
 JAMES L. HARRIS
 CYNTHIA M. HARRIS
 LARRY HARRIS, JR.
 STEVEN A. HARRIS

DAVID A. HARRIS
 PAUL HARRIS
 MICHAEL W. HARRIS
 MICHAEL J. HARRIS
 MICHAEL A. HARRIS
 JAMES L. HARRIS
 LARRY E. HARRIS
 MICHAEL J. HARRIS
 MICHAEL E. HARRIS
 MICHAEL L. HARRIS
 MICHAEL W. HARRIS, JR.
 MICHAEL HARRIS
 STEVEN D. HARRIS
 JAMES D. HARRIS
 DAVID L. HARRIS
 LOU E. HARRIS
 LOU E. HARRIS
 MICHAEL A. HARRIS

January 8, 1996

Letters to the Editor
 The Washington Post
 1150 15th Street, N.W.
 Washington, D. C. 20071

Dear Editor:

An article in yesterday's Washington Post suggests that the recently discovered Rose Law Firm billing records "may contradict" Mrs. Clinton's sworn statements to the RTC. This innuendo is wholly false. Mrs. Clinton has accurately described her limited work on the law firm's representation of Madison Guaranty, and the billing records confirm her previous statements about that work.

The RTC interrogatories asked Mrs. Clinton questions about particular aspects of the law firm's representation related to Madison Guaranty, and the billing records confirm the accuracy of her responses. The interrogatories also asked about her personal knowledge of a list of Jim McDougal's real estate projects, including Castle Grande. Her responses to those questions were accurate as well.

WILLIAMS & CONNOLLY

Letters to the Editor
January 3, 1996
Page 2

Castle Grande Estates was a 400-acre mobile home development that was part of a 1050-acre tract purchased by Madison from the Industrial Development Company of Little Rock (IDC) in September 1985. Mrs. Clinton did not work on any matters related to Castle Grande Estates, and the particular RTC interrogatory response cited by the Post addressed that project. Confusion may be created by the Post's apparent reference to the entire IDC development as Castle Grande.

In the last several months, we have attempted to answer questions about work the Rose Law Firm performed with respect to the property purchased from IDC. The law firm billing title for this matter was "Madison Guaranty - IDC." Much of the publicity about the Rose Law Firm's work related to the IDC property has focused on whether the firm had a significant role in Madison's acquisition of the real estate. As the billing records confirm, Mrs. Clinton did not work on the acquisition. She supervised later legal research relating to such state law issues as water/sewer service provision and the legality of allowing a brewery tasting room to be constructed.

Mrs. Clinton also billed two hours in May 1986 for option agreement work relating to land approximately one-half mile west of, and not related to, Castle Grande Estates. The billing records also reflect conversations with Seth Ward, who was working for Madison developing real estate projects. The

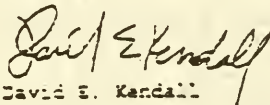

WILLIAMS &amp; CONNOLLY

Letters to the Editor
 January 3, 1996
 Page 1

conversations all occurred after the Madison acquisition of the IDC property.

Mrs. Clinton specialized in litigation, not real estate law. She was the billing partner on the Madison Guaranty account and appears to have averaged less than an hour a week over a 15-month period in her work on the Madison representation. She accurately answered the RTC's interrogatory with respect to "Castle Grande" by stating that she did not believe that she had knowledge of it. And, quite apart from the Castle Grande mobile home development, her work on matters relating to the IDC development was quite limited, as previously indicated.

Sincerely,

 David S. Kendall

OFFICIAL RECORD OF INTERVIEW
OFFICE OF INVESTIGATIONS
OFFICE OF INSPECTOR GENERAL

CASE NUMBER: IO96-094

PARTICIPANTS: Richard N. Massey, Attorney, Rose Law Firm
Tom Hardin, Attorney, Rose Law Firm
Walter B. Stuart, IV, Attorney, Vinson & Elkins
Alden L. Atkins, Attorney, Vinson & Elkins
[REDACTED], OIG, FDIC
[REDACTED] Special Agent, OIG, FDIC

DATE/TIME/LOCATION: October 4, 1994, 9:30 a.m., Rose Law Firm, Little Rock, AR.

INTERVIEW CONDUCTED: In Person x___ By Phone ___

PURPOSE: To obtain information regarding the Rose Law Firm's representation of FSLIC, FDIC, RTC and potential conflicts of interest.

RESULTS:

Richard (Rick) Massey was interviewed and provided the following information: Massey passed the bar exam in 1985 and then began working as an associate at the Rose Law Firm; in 1990 Massey became a partner at Rose. Since joining the firm, he has concentrated primarily on corporate finance and securities matters. He currently works in the Corporate Finance Division.

Concerning Rose's conflict of interest procedures, Massey said when he is initially contacted by a client he asks himself if Rose has represented any of the people adverse to the prospective clients. If Rose has represented any of these people, then it is a dead issue and he won't take on the client. Also, Massey will check with other Rose attorneys and if they advise Massey of Rose representations which are adverse to the prospective client, then Massey will not represent this client. Further, the intake or "responsible" attorney will notify all of the other Rose attorneys by E-mail, formerly via memo, of the prospective new client's adverse parties. The Rose attorneys are asked to advise the intake attorney if they know of any Rose representation of these adverse parties. Massey said that Rose employee Connie Bull also checks the computer data base which contains the identities of Rose clients to see if the firm has represented any of the adverse parties. If it is discovered that Rose has represented any of the adverse parties then it is a dead issue and the firm will not represent the prospective new client.

If it is not clear whether or not an issue is a conflict, the firm's conflicts committee considers the matter. Massey said the conflicts committee is charged with the interpretation of the conflicts laws. Massey added that Rose attorneys Wilson Jones and George Campbell are currently on the conflicts committee; Webster Hubbell used to be on this committee. Massey said Rose attorneys consult with the conflicts committee when they can't decide if an issue is a conflict. If the conflicts committee decides that there is a conflict then it is a dead issue and the firm does not represent the prospective new client. Massey said he has never done any work whereby he has represented the FDIC, RTC or any other U.S. government agency. He has brought matters to the conflicts committee approximately three times whereby the committee has decided that there was a conflict.

Massey said that the younger, new associates are usually assigned to do the state regulatory work because they are usually cut and dried issues. He was assigned to represent Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan (Madison) before the Arkansas Securities Department (ASD) in 1985. Massey worked on two matters for Madison. One was getting Madison the authority to issue preferred stock. The other issue concerned the fact that Madison had acquired a broker/dealer and Madison wanted Massey to work on Madison obtaining the authority to operate the broker/dealer business.

Massey does not know how or why Madison selected the Rose Law Firm to represent them before the ASD. He did mention that he taught a securities law class in the Fall of 1984 and John Latham attended this class. Latham would occasionally call Massey with questions about the class. Massey expressed his belief that Rose was then, and still is today, the best securities firm around.

Massey was shown a letter dated July 10, 1985 from him to Beverly Bassett (then the Commissioner of the ASD), Nancy Jones and Charles Handley (both of the ASD). (attached) The letter concerns the application by Madison to engage in brokerage activities. He was also shown Exhibit A, Exhibit B and Exhibit C attached to this letter. (attached) Exhibit A is the financial statements of Madison Financial Corporation (MFC). Exhibit B is a worksheet calculating all investments in MFC by Madison. Exhibit C is a balance sheet of Madison. Massey said he received these documents from Madison and has no knowledge of Frost & Company preparing these documents. After reviewing these documents, Massey said it appears to him that Madison prepared them.

Massey explained that he closed his July 10, 1985 letter by saying to please call Hillary Rodham Clinton or him because it was appropriate procedure at the firm to name a partner as a contact in correspondence, since he was at the time only an associate. Massey was shown a letter dated May 14, 1985 from Beverly Bassett to Hillary Rodham Clinton concerning the preferred stock issue(attached). He was also shown a letter dated May 23, 1985, from Hillary Rodham Clinton to Jim McDougal concerning the ASD's approval to issue preferred stock(attached). Massey said he did the work involving the ASD but Clinton's name appeared on some correspondence since she was the partner.

Massey was also shown a copy of a letter, dated October 25, 1985 from him to John Latham where Massey advised that he was going to be out of the country until November 9, 1985(attached). Massey's letter stated if Latham has any questions concerning the preferred stock issue, he should advise Bill Kennedy of Rose. Massey explained that he was going on vacation and he used Kennedy as a stand in point of contact. He does not believe Kennedy ever did any work on this Madison representation before the ASD.

Massey was shown a copy of a letter dated July 25, 1985 from him to Beverly Bassett, Nancy Jones and Charles Handley (attached). It concerns the application by Madison to engage in brokerage activities. In the letter, Massey refers the addressees to an attached letter from Frost & Company, Madison's independent accountant. Massey explains that the difference between Madison's net worth as reflected in its audited financials and as reflected in its net worth reports is a result of basic differences in the calculation of net worth under Generally Accepted Accounting Principles ("GAAP") and under Regulatory Accounting Principles ("RAP"). In his letter, Massey says that the enclosed Frost letter explains this in greater detail. Massey stated that he was relying on the Frost audit information when he prepared this letter. He did not endorse it, nor did he ever review the work done on the Frost audits of Madison. Massey had no dealings with any Frost employees, nor did he ever ask any Frost employees to prepare financial information for him. Massey added that at the time he was representing Madison before the ASD in 1985, he had no reason to believe there was anything wrong with the Frost audits. He said Frost & Company was a reputable firm.

Massey said the ASD agreed that Madison could issue preferred stock, but Madison never did so. ASD would also allow Madison to engage in broker/dealer activities, but only if Madison met a certain net worth. Massey does not believe Madison ever did engage in any broker/dealer activities.

Massey recalled attending one meeting with the ASD concerning the preferred stock or broker/dealer issue. John Latham and Charles Handley attended the meeting but he does not believe Hillary Clinton was at the meeting.

In 1989, when Rose was initially approached by the FDIC or RTC to pursue litigation against Frost & Company, Vince Foster came to Massey's office and asked him what Rose had done for Madison before the ASD. Massey recalled Foster asked him if he relied on the Frost audit data. Massey stated he told Foster what work he had done in this matter and asked Foster if this was a conflict. Foster responded that he did not think so, but it still had to be resolved. Sometime later, when the litigation became "hot and heavy," Foster told Massey that the government did not think this prior representation of Madison was a conflict and Peter Kumpe (attorney representing Frost & Company) shouldn't have any problem with it.

Massey stated that in 1985, he did not know who Seth Ward was. It was clearly after 1985 that he learned that Seth Ward was Webster Hubbell's father-in-law. Massey added that in the 1990 time frame it was generally known by the partners in the firm that Ward was Hubbell's father-in-law. Massey does not know of any work that Hubbell did for Seth Ward. Massey is familiar with P.O.M., Inc. He said that Rose represented this company in an antitrust case against Duncan Industries. Hubbell and another Rose attorney, Amy Stewart, represented P.O.M. in this litigation. The verdict, in 1991, was in favor of Duncan Industries. Massey stated he and Hubbell worked in different divisions at Rose. Massey related he did not know of any "firewall" having been established at Rose concerning Hubbell and any issues involving Ward. Massey added, however, that any "firewall" arrangements which may be set up or established only among the concerned attorneys on the particular issue and not normally every attorney in the firm. Further, these "firewall" are established as necessary on a case by case basis; Massey estimated that he has been aware of approximately 20 "firewalls" established per year at Rose.

Prepared by:  _____

Date: 11/1/84

Concurred by: _____

Date: _____

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

---

DateLittle Rock, Arkansas

---

I, Richard N. Massey, make the following statement to Phillip Sprague and Eric Nielson, who have identified themselves as Special Agents with the Resolution Trust Corporation, Office of Inspector General. This statement was prepared following my interview with Messrs. Sprague and Nielson on April 21, 1995, and is based on information I provided on that day.

1. Background.

I was hired by the Rose Law Firm ("Rose") in May 1984 and was admitted to the Bar in August 1984. I was placed on the Rose Law Firm letterhead upon passing the Bar. As an associate, I was paid a straight salary with a modest year-end bonus. I became a member of the firm (commonly referred to as a partner) in February 1989. I have been in the Securities Section of Rose since joining the firm. My primary area of expertise is corporate finance, which includes providing legal assistance and advice to entities seeking to raise money through public or private transactions. I came to Rose because I believe it is one of the best firms in Arkansas and in the region in the field of corporate finance.

2. Rose's Conflicts Procedure.

I have read Rose's Engagements and Conflicts policy, and I am generally familiar with it. To identify potential conflicts of interest, Rose attorneys follow the procedure set forth below: First, the attorney who is contacted by the potential client determines if the representation clearly would be adverse to a client known to him or her; if so, the attorney immediately rejects the representation or considers obtaining waivers from the appropriate clients. If the matter is declined, no forms are prepared and the attorney is not required to notify any other attorneys in the firm of his or her decision. Second, the attorney may ask some of the other attorneys in the firm if they know of a conflict. Third, if no conflicts have been identified thus far,

---

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

the attorney notifies all of the other attorneys in the firm of the proposed representation by e-mail and asks them to identify any potential conflicts. Typically the e-mail asks for responses by a specified date and time. Fourth, the attorney requests that the firm's conflicts database be checked for potential conflicts. Often that request is made by sending a copy of the e-mail to the administrative employee who maintains the conflicts database. Fifth, the names of new clients and matters are circulated throughout the firm in our Daily Briefs, also known as the "pink sheets". Sixth, at the end of each week a New Business Summary is circulated to the attorneys which identifies all the parties involved in new matters that week. Each step of the procedure is designed to elicit information from other attorneys in the firm about potential conflicts.

Although I do not recall clearly the conflicts procedure used in 1985, I believe it was much the same. The primary differences between the procedure in 1985 and today are the result of improved technology. Today, the conflicts database is kept on a computer, while in 1985 it was, I believe, kept on index cards. Also, today the attorneys generally circulate an e-mail to other attorneys asking for known conflicts, while in 1985 we circulated a memorandum. In 1985, our conflicts database of index cards was kept by Willie Mae Ethridge. She was replaced by Connie Bull, who maintains the electronic database today.

In general, there are two kinds of conflicts under the applicable rules of ethical conduct -- those that can be waived, and those that cannot. If the proposed representation would be directly adverse to a current client of the firm, then the firm may not accept the new matter unless the attorney reasonably believes the representation will not adversely affect the relationship with the other client and each client consents after consultation. If the proposed representation would be materially adverse to the interests of a former client of the firm, then the firm may not accept the new matter if it is the same as or substantially related to the matter for which the firm represented the former client, unless the client consents after consultation. Although many conflicts may be waived by the client, Rose often decides for business reasons not to request a waiver and simply declines the new matter. For instance, a client who agrees to waive a conflict might be less inclined to retain the firm again in another matter. I personally have never sought a waiver from a client.

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

If the conflicts procedure identifies a potential conflict, then an assessment must be made whether there is an actual conflict and, if so, whether it can be waived. Often, that determination can be made by the attorneys involved. If they do not resolve the issue, then it is presented to the Conflicts Committee. I have never been a member of Rose's Conflicts Committee. The Conflicts Committee discusses the issue and communicates its decisions informally to the attorneys. The attorneys may appeal the Conflicts Committee's decision to the full firm.

An important part of the conflicts procedure is the New Client Form. When a new matter is accepted, the responsible attorney submits a New Client Form to the firm's accounting department. That form identifies the parties who will be involved and identifies the matter. The New Client Form provides the information required by the accounting department to open a new account number, and it is used to create the new client/matter list in the Daily Briefs. That procedure has been in place since I started with Rose.

3. Rose's Prior Representation of Madison Guaranty.

In 1985, I worked on two matters for Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan ("Madison Guaranty") -- a proposal to issue preferred stock, and a proposal to operate a broker-dealer subsidiary. Rose was not the primary outside counsel for Madison Guaranty. Rose did not provide savings and loan regulatory advice to Madison Guaranty; Madison Guaranty used another law firm for such regulatory matters instead. The matters I worked on involved corporate finance, for which Rose was particularly well suited because Rose is one of the best corporate securities firms in the region.

I do not recall after the passage of ten years precisely how Rose was retained by Madison Guaranty. I recall that I had several conversations with John Latham, the president of Madison Guaranty, before Rose was first retained. In the fall of 1984 or spring of 1985, I was a co-lecturer of a Securities Law class at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock, and Mr. Latham attended that class. Often, Mr. Latham spoke to me after class or called me on the telephone to discuss various securities law issues. On occasion, Mr. Latham's assistant, Pat Heritage, called with other questions about securities law. Generally, those questions involved how the corporate and securities laws would apply to various scenarios to raise money. I did not charge Madison

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

Guaranty for those informal conversations, although I encouraged Mr. Latham to retain Rose.

a. The Proposal to Issue Preferred Stock.

In the spring of 1985, Madison Guaranty retained Rose to work on a proposal to offer preferred stock. Madison Guaranty gave Rose a very narrow assignment -- to determine whether Madison Guaranty was permitted by Arkansas law to issue preferred stock. Madison Guaranty did not ask Rose whether or in what amounts it should raise money or whether it needed additional capital to meet regulatory requirements.

The narrow assignment from Madison Guaranty involved a very straightforward legal issue. Under Arkansas law, a state-chartered savings and loan has the same powers as a corporation under the Arkansas Business Corporation Act, unless the savings and loan statute expressly states otherwise. Because the Arkansas Business Corporation Act clearly authorizes corporations to issue preferred stock, and because the Arkansas savings and loan statute does not state otherwise, I concluded that Arkansas law permitted Madison Guaranty to issue preferred stock. I personally did that research and analysis. Based on that straightforward analysis, it was clear that an Arkansas-chartered savings and loan could lawfully issue preferred stock and that the Arkansas Security Commissioner had little, if any, discretion to construe the law to the contrary.

On April 30, 1985, I wrote a letter to Charles Handley of the Arkansas Securities Department (the "ASD") setting forth my analysis and conclusion on the preferred stock issue. The final paragraph of that letter states the legal conclusion I had reached:

"Because the Arkansas statutes expressly give to an Arkansas chartered savings and loan all of the powers possessed by a corporation under the Arkansas Business Corporations Act, which powers include the power to create and issue a class of preferred capital stock, and because we find no express prohibition in Act 227 [the savings and loan statute] against the creation or issuance of such a class of preferred stock, we have concluded that Madison Guaranty's proposed capitalization plan is not inconsistent with Arkansas law. Should you require further information or assistance, please advise Hillary Rodham Clinton or Richard Massey of this firm."

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

I signed the letter "Rose Law Firm". I did so because, in my view, the letter stated a legal conclusion, and letters stating legal opinions or conclusions generally were signed in the name of the firm. The final paragraph of the April 30, 1985 letter provides my name and Ms. Clinton's name so the ASD would know who to contact for additional assistance or information. I included my name because I had analyzed the issue and prepared the letter; I included Ms. Clinton's name because she was the billing partner on this matter.

Ms. Clinton was a partner in the Litigation Section of the firm. There is no fixed procedure at Rose by which a lawyer becomes the billing attorney on a matter, although Rose policy prohibits associates with less than three years' experience from being a billing attorney. At the time of the Madison Guaranty representation in 1985, I was a first-year associate and therefore could not be the billing attorney. I do not recall how Ms. Clinton became the billing attorney for this matter. Under the billing procedures at Rose, the billing attorney periodically receives reports from the accounting department of unbilled fees and expenses and prepares the bills to the client. Any other attorneys working on the matter may not necessarily know who else has charged time to that client matter number.

I addressed my April 30 letter to Charles Handley because he was in charge of the day-to-day regulatory matters at the ASD. I have a vague recollection that prior to our engagement Mr. Latham may have called the ASD and asked whether Madison Guaranty could issue preferred stock, and that he was told to put his request in writing. Mr. Latham asked Rose to send such a letter, and I was assigned the task. I do not recall how I received the assignment. A copy of the April 30 letter also was sent to Beverly Bassett, the Arkansas Securities Commissioner. I do not recall why I sent a copy to her, although I assume it was because she was the Securities Commissioner.

The ASD replied by letter dated May 14, 1985. The ASD's letter says the ASD agreed with my legal conclusion that Madison Guaranty was not restricted by Arkansas law from issuing preferred stock. The letter is addressed to Ms. Clinton and begins with the salutation "Dear Hillary". I do not know why Ms. Bassett used that salutation. I suspect that she saw both my name and Ms. Clinton's name in my April 30 letter as persons to contact, and I was such a new attorney that she did not recognize my name. I do not place any special significance on the form of the greeting being "Dear

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

Hillary". I believe that she probably would have addressed any other Rose partner she knew in the same manner. I do not recall being present at any meetings with the ASD on the preferred stock issue.

I have been shown a copy of a letter from Ms. Clinton to James McDougal dated May 23, 1985 concerning the ASD's approval of the proposal to issue preferred stock. I do not believe that I wrote that letter. I have never met Mr. McDougal, and therefore correspondence from me to him would have been inappropriate.

On October 25, 1985, I sent a letter to Mr. Latham enclosing documents I had drafted concerning the proposed issuance of preferred stock. I informed Mr. Latham that I would be out of the country until November 9, 1985, and I invited him to contact William Kennedy, then a partner in the Securities Section, if he had any questions. I do not recall any further work on the preferred stock matter after that letter.

It has been suggested in the press that Rose used Ms. Clinton in an attempt to gain undue influence with the ASD on this matter. That is absolutely not true. I included Ms. Clinton's name in my April 30, 1985 letter as a person to contact for more information solely because she was the billing partner on this matter. Moreover, this was a straightforward legal issue on which the Securities Commissioner had little, if any, discretion to disagree with our interpretation of the statutes. Therefore, there was no reason even to try to exercise any political influence on Ms. Bassett. In any event, to my knowledge Madison Guaranty never issued the preferred stock.

b. The Proposal to Operate a Broker-Dealer.

The second matter I recall working on for Madison Guaranty involved a proposal to operate a broker-dealer subsidiary. Madison Guaranty felt it could save money if it sold its preferred stock through its own broker-dealer, and it acquired a company with a broker-dealer license. I did not work on that acquisition. Mr. Latham asked me to prepare an application to the Arkansas Savings and Loan Advisory Board ("ASLAB") requesting permission to operate the broker/dealer. I believe that I performed nearly all of the work on this matter. I do not remember discussing the broker/dealer issue with Ms. Clinton, although it is possible I did so. I do not recall that Ms. Clinton played any part in presenting the issue to ASLAB.

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

The broker-dealer issue was, in my view, just as straightforward as the preferred stock issue. Under Arkansas law, a state-chartered savings and loan had all of the powers of a federally-chartered institution. I concluded that federal law permitted a federally-chartered institution to operate a broker-dealer in the manner in which Madison Guaranty sought to operate its own broker/dealer, which under applicable Arkansas statutes meant that state-chartered savings and loans could do so as well. I viewed this as a relatively clear-cut legal issue for which ASLAB had little, if any, discretion to disagree.

The billing attorney on this matter was Ms. Clinton. As with the preferred stock matter, Rose's policies prohibited me from being the billing attorney because I had practiced law less than three years.

On May 14, 1985, I submitted the Application to the Arkansas Savings & Loan Association Board for Approval to Engage in Activities Not Specified in Article 5B of the Rules and Regulations of the Arkansas Savings & Loan Association Board (the "Application") on behalf of Madison Guaranty. The Application requested permission for Madison Guaranty to provide brokerage services through a second-tier service corporation. I prepared the Application with information provided to me by Mr. Latham. I do not believe I submitted any financial statements with the Application.

Mr. Handley of the Arkansas Securities Department responded to the Application by memorandum dated May 22, 1985. Mr. Handley's memorandum raised eleven highly detailed questions and comments to the Application. I considered Mr. Handley's comments to be excessive; for example, he quibbled with the Rule under which the Application was filed (comment 1). Mr. Handley's exhaustive review of the Application shows that Madison Guaranty did not receive any favorable treatment by ASLAB.

In those comments, Mr. Handley raised for the first time questions about Madison Guaranty's financial status (comments 6-8). His comment 8 refers to the audited financial statements of Madison Guaranty as of December 31, 1984. I do not believe I submitted those audited financial statements to ASLAB. It is my understanding that savings and loans chartered under Arkansas law are required to submit audited financial statements to ASLAB, and I suspect that is how Mr. Handley obtained them. In his comments, Mr. Handley also asked for current financial statements of Madison

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

Guaranty. I do not believe that ASLAB had the authority to condition its approval of a broker-dealer subsidiary on Madison Guaranty's financial condition. That is because the federal statute permits savings and loans to operate a broker-dealer without regard to financial condition, and state law did not separately impose a financial condition test.

I submitted a response to Mr. Handley's comments in a letter dated June 17, 1985. I obtained all the information in that letter from Mr. Latham and others at Madison Guaranty. I submitted with that letter an unaudited balance sheet of Madison Financial Corporation as of May 30, 1985, unaudited financial statements of Madison Guaranty as of March 31, 1985, and the quarterly Minimum Net Worth calculations as of March 31, 1985. I was given those documents by Madison Guaranty. They all appear to me to have been prepared internally by Madison Guaranty rather than by its outside accountants, Frost & Company. I did not independently review the financial information for sufficiency or accuracy; instead, I relied on the expertise of the persons who prepared the financial statements.. My June 17, 1985 letter merely transmitted this information.

Mr. Handley responded to my letter in a memorandum dated June 18, 1985. Mr. Handley raised several more highly detailed comments and questions about the Application. On page 1 of his memorandum, Mr. Handley also refers to Madison Guaranty's investments in Whitener & Associates and Campobello. I knew nothing about those investments. Mr. Handley also questioned Madison Guaranty's net worth and its adjustments to retained earnings. I knew very little about the Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP) and Regulatory Accounting Principles (RAP) under which those calculations were made. I am not an accountant, and I had no reason to independently question or verify those calculations, as this would have been clearly outside the scope of our engagement.

I responded to Mr. Handley's comments in a letter dated July 10, 1985. I transmitted with that letter the most recent financial statements of Madison Financial Corporation, a worksheet calculating investments in Madison Financial Corporation by Madison Guaranty, and Madison Guaranty's unaudited balance sheet as of May 31, 1985. All of the attachments to this letter were provided to me by Mr. Latham, and I believe they were prepared internally by Madison Guaranty rather than by Frost & Company.

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

Mr. Handley responded to the July 10 letter in a memorandum dated July 17, 1985. Once again, Mr. Handley raised several highly detailed questions about the proposal and about Madison Guaranty's financial status. Mr. Handley also questioned certain adjustments made to Madison Guaranty's net worth as of December 31, 1984 in its audited financial statements. Neither I nor, to my knowledge, any Rose lawyer performed or had reason to perform an independent analysis of those adjustments under RAP and GAAP. All of the financial information I transmitted to ASLAB was supplied to me by Mr. Latham or other employees of Madison Guaranty, and I relied on their expertise for its accuracy. Review or verification of financial information was outside the scope of Rose's engagement, which was simply to obtain approval to operate a broker/dealer.

I responded to Mr. Handley's July 17 memorandum with a letter dated July 25, 1985. With that letter, I transmitted to ASLAB, among other things, a letter signed by Mr. Latham and a letter signed by Michael D. Robinson of Frost & Company. The letters by Mr. Latham and by Mr. Robinson discussed the adjustments to Madison Guaranty's net worth as of December 31, 1985 under RAP and GAAP. I was generally aware that there were differences between RAP and GAAP because new accounting principles had been promulgated and had been discussed in the press. However, I did not independently review the analyses by Mr. Latham and by Mr. Robinson, nor did I discuss their letters with anyone to determine whether they had applied the appropriate accounting principles correctly. I did not request these letters and I did not speak to anyone at Frost about its letter. Instead, I relied entirely on their financial expertise. My cover letter simply stated the conclusion that the adjustments to net worth were the results of differences between RAP and GAAP. I do not recall having any discussions with Mr. Latham or others about whether Madison Guaranty was solvent or about its financial condition generally.

On approximately August 27, 1985, a meeting was held with ASLAB to discuss the Application. Mr. Latham and I attended on behalf of Madison Guaranty, and Ms. Bassett, Mr. Handley and perhaps another person attended for ASLAB. Neither Ms. Clinton nor anyone else from Rose attended that meeting. At that meeting, Ms. Bassett informed us that she would not approve the Application until Madison Guaranty demonstrated its ability to meet regulatory net worth requirements by year-end. I do not recall any other meetings with ASLAB concerning the Application.

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

After the meeting, I prepared a letter responding to Ms. Bassett's concerns. I believe the response is in a letter dated September 9, 1985, although I have seen a substantially similar version of that letter dated August 30, 1985. In that letter, I described two transactions proposed by Madison Guaranty -- the sale of preferred stock and the sale of limited partnership units. The letter was written to explain to Ms. Bassett how Madison Guaranty intended to meet the applicable regulatory net worth requirements. I do not recall why there are minor differences in the August 30 and September 9 drafts of the letter. I believe Mr. Latham provided me with the information necessary to draft the letter.

Ms. Bassett responded by letter dated October 17, 1985. Rather than authorizing Madison Guaranty to operate a broker-dealer subsidiary, Ms. Bassett conditioned the approval on Madison Guaranty actually meeting the regulatory net worth requirements by year-end. Because neither federal nor state law established net worth limitations on the ability of a savings and loan to operate a broker-dealer subsidiary, I do not believe the Securities Commissioner had the authority or discretion to impose such a condition on the Application. To the best of my knowledge, Madison Guaranty did not raise additional capital, did not satisfy the net worth condition imposed by Ms. Bassett and therefore never operated a broker-dealer.

I have been shown a copy of a letter from Stephen Cuffman, an attorney with Cuffman & Cuffman, to John Latham, dated October 9, 1985. The letter appears to address the proposed preferred stock issue by Madison Guaranty. I have not seen that letter before.

c. Other Matters for Madison Guaranty.

Mr. Latham told me that Madison Guaranty was considering forming a limited partnership and selling limited partnership units. I mentioned Madison Guaranty's idea to Mr. Kennedy, who had significant experience in such transactions. Mr. Kennedy agreed to be available in my absence to answer questions that Madison Guaranty might have about the idea. I do not recall any significant work on that issue. To my knowledge, Madison Guaranty did not sell limited partnership units.

I have been shown copies of two letters from Pat Jones (Heritage) dated August 8, 1985 and August 9, 1985. At the time, Ms. Heritage was an assistant to Mr. Latham. Those letters refer

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

to moving the home office of Madison Guaranty, and the August 9 letter states that Sarah Hawkins should contact me about the proposal. I have no recollection of working on a proposal to move the home office. The August 9 letter also says that Sarah Hawkins should check with me concerning the valuation of directors' stock. I do not recall being consulted about that issue either.

I have been shown a letter from Beverly Watzke to me dated June 6, 1985, concerning a real estate closing in Colorado. I do not recall working on a real estate closing in Colorado for Madison Guaranty.

d. Rose's Return of the Retainer Fee.

I have been shown a copy of an unsigned letter from Ms. Clinton to Mr. McDougal and Mr. Latham at Madison Guaranty, dated July 14, 1986, terminating the retainer arrangement between Madison Guaranty and Rose. Ms. Clinton also returned the balance of the retainer fee to Madison Guaranty. The letter says that Madison Guaranty had been relying on a number of other law firms to provide ongoing representation of Madison Guaranty and that Rose's representation had been for isolated matters and had not been continuous or significant. That letter is consistent with my recollection of the limited work that Rose did for Madison Guaranty. I am not surprised that the retainer arrangement with Madison Guaranty was terminated because Rose did so little work for Madison Guaranty.

4. The RTC/Madison Guaranty Lawsuit Against Frost.

At approximately the time that Rose was contacted about representing the RTC/Madison Guaranty against Frost & Company ("Frost"), Webb Hubbell, then a Rose partner, circulated a memorandum asking attorneys in the firm to identify potential conflicts of interest. Although I do not have any present recollection that the memorandum was circulated in 1989, I have seen a copy of the memorandum and believe it was circulated at that time.

At some point in time, I also recall being contacted by Vince Foster, also a Rose partner at the time, about potential conflict issues involving Madison Guaranty. He explained to me that the government was considering retaining Rose to represent it and he asked me about the legal work I had done for Madison Guaranty in 1985. I do not remember whether this discussion involved only the

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

Frost lawsuit or savings and loan litigation work in general. I told Mr. Foster about my assistance to Madison Guaranty in the two matters described above. I asked Mr. Foster if he thought there was a conflict, and Mr. Foster said that he did not think so but would discuss it with the government. Mr. Foster also asked me whether Rose had done any other savings and loan work. Mr. Foster was always very careful, and he often informed clients about issues that were not actual conflicts. I do not recall when this conversation occurred, but it was some time before Rose agreed to represent the RTC in the Frost litigation.

After I learned that Rose had been retained by the government in the Frost case, I asked Mr. Foster whether he had mentioned the prior representation of Madison Guaranty to the government. Mr. Foster said that he had discussed the issue with the government, but I do not believe he said who he had contacted. Mr. Foster told me that the government agreed that Rose's prior representation of Madison Guaranty did not pose a conflict of interest. Based upon my knowledge of Vince Foster as a careful lawyer of high integrity, I accept as true Mr. Foster's statement to me that he had discussed this issue with the government.

5. Other Matters.

I have been asked if I know someone named E.J. Massey. I do not, although there are a number of Masseys in Arkansas, and conceivably I could be related to him or her.

At the time I represented Madison Guaranty, I do not believe that I knew that Seth Ward was Webb Hubbell's father-in-law. I also do not believe that I knew Mr. Ward was on the Board of Directors of Madison Guaranty. Since doing the 1985 work for Madison Guaranty, I have learned Seth Ward is Mr. Hubbell's father-in-law.

6. Conclusion.

I believe that Madison retained Rose to work on the preferred stock proposal and the broker-dealer proposal because Rose is among the best law firms in the region to perform such securities work. I doubt that Madison Guaranty hired Rose in an effort to use whatever influence Ms. Clinton may have had to impress the Arkansas regulators. That is because Madison Guaranty hired Rose only for narrow and straightforward securities law issues and used another law firm for its ongoing regulatory matters. To my knowledge, Rose

STATEMENT

Resolution Trust Corporation

Office of Inspector General
Office of Investigation

did not have any discussions with the regulators about whether Madison Guaranty was undercapitalized or solvent, nor did we try to persuade the regulators to keep Madison Guaranty open.

I do not believe that the Arkansas regulators were influenced by Ms. Clinton's presence at Rose. In my view, the ASD and the ASLAB had little, if any, discretion to deny the requests submitted on behalf of Madison Guaranty. Nevertheless, Mr. Handley aggressively challenged the Application to operate a broker-dealer and raised numerous questions and comments at every turn. When ASLAB finally approved the Application, it imposed conditions that Madison Guaranty ultimately did not meet.

The speculation that the work I did for Madison Guaranty created a conflict of interest in the Frost litigation is unfounded. I do not believe that I submitted to ASLAB any financial statements prepared by Frost. Further, I did not independently review or analyze Madison Guaranty's financial condition, nor did I have the expertise to do so. I do not recall ever having dealt with Frost regarding Madison. Instead, I relied on the expertise of the employees and accountants of Madison Guaranty who prepared its financial statements, and I simply transmitted that information to the regulators.

I have read the foregoing statement consisting of 13 pages and it is true and accurate to the best of my knowledge and belief. I have initialed each page.

Signature of Maker

6/15/95

Date

ARKANSAS

CONFIDENTIAL

SECURITIES DEPARTMENT

#1 CAPITOL MALL — 4B-208

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201

TELEPHONE 501-371-1011

May 14, 1985

Hillary Rodham Clinton
 Rose Law Firm
 120 East Fourth Street
 Little Rock, AR 72201

RE: Authorization and Issuance of a Class of Preferred Stock by Madison Guaranty ("Madison"), a Savings and Loan Association chartered under the laws of the State of Arkansas

Dear Hillary:

I have reviewed your letter of April 30, 1985, regarding the proposed authorization and issuance by Madison of a class of non-voting preferred stock.

I agree with your analysis and conclusion of the question whether an Arkansas chartered savings and loan association may under Arkansas law create, authorize and issue a class of preferred stock. Arkansas law expressly gives state chartered associations all the powers given regular business corporations under the Arkansas Business Corporation Act, including the power to authorize and issue preferred capital stock. Further, there is no express prohibition against such action contained in the Arkansas laws governing building and loan and savings and loan associations. Accordingly, as the Savings and Loan Supervisor, I concur in your opinion that Madison's proposed capitalization plan is not inconsistent with Arkansas law.

Very truly yours,

Beverly Bassett
 BEVERLY BASSETT
 Savings & Loan Supervisor

BE/ps

RS 000537

RECEIVED

MAY 16 1985

COPY

ROSE LAW FIRM

A PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATION
ATTORNEYS

120 EAST FOURTH STREET
LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201
TELEPHONE (501) 376-2131
TELECOMMER (501) 376-3009

U. M. ROSE
1934-1913

May 23, 1985

PHILIP CARROLL
W. DAKE CLAY
C. JOSEPH GIBSON, JR.
GEORGE L. CAMPBELL
HERBERT C. RULE, III
STANLEY C. PRICE
H. BATT GREGORY, III
W. WILSON JONES
VINCENT FOSTER, JR.
WESLEY L. HURSELL
ALLEN W. BIRD II
WILLIAM L. BISHOP
WILLIAM RODHAM CLINTON
C. BRANTLY BUCK
TIM BOE
H. JANE DICKET
WILLIAM D. SHERIDY, III
KEENEETH A. SHERMIN
DAVID A. SHERST
RONALD H. CLARR

BARBARA J. BARNETT
JERRY C. JONES
THOMAS P. THURMAN
CAROL L. JARROLD
JACKSON FARROW JR.
LEE R. BALEDGE
JIM HUNTER BIRCH
S. DAVIS THOMAS, JR.
DAVID L. WILLIAMS
CATHERINE LASSITER
RICHARD T. DONOVAN
MICHAEL S. JONES
MARTIN S. THOMAS
BRYAN RALSTON WELSH
RICHARD H. MASSEY
GARY H. SREED
J. GASTON WILLIAMSON
CHARLES W. BAKER
OF COUNSEL

Mr. Jim McDougal
MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS & LOAN
16th & Main Streets
Little Rock, AR 72206

Dear Jim:

Enclosed is a letter for your files from Beverly Bassett, approving the proposed authorization and issuance of a class of non-voting preferred stock. We appreciate the opportunity to work for you and look forward to continuing success in resolving whatever questions arise as you pursue your plan for growth.

With best regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

Hillary
HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

jkf
enclosure
cc: w/enclosure:
Mr. John Latham
Mr. Rick Massey

LAW OFFICE

WILLIAMS &amp; CONNOLLY

TELEPHONE: 434-5000

DAVID E. KENDALL
(202) 434-5000

WASHINGTON D C 20005

(202) 434-5000

FAX: (202) 434-5035

EDWARD BENNETT BUILDING, 200 14th
FLOOR, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20005

CONFIDENTIAL

November 22, 1993

BY REGISTERED MAIL

Gerry C. Jones, Esquire
Rose Law Firm
100 East Fourth Street
Little Rock, AR 72201

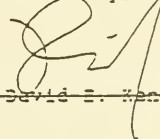

Dear Gerry:

It was good to talk to you today. I am enclosing herewith three file folders, labeled: A3530.1 MADISON GUARANTY LTD. PARTNERSHIP Application/Brokerage Activities, A3530.2 Madison Guaranty - Net Worth - (1985) Preferred Stock Offering, and A3530.3 MADISON GUARANTY Preferred Stock Offering Corporate, which were among the late Vincent Foster's files. They appear to me to be files of Rose Law Firm documents. I thought it most appropriate to transmit them to you, for retention and storage.

I would be grateful if you would confirm for me the receipt of these files.

Best wishes for a good Thanksgiving!

Sincerely,

David E. Kendall

Enclosures

DEX/bb

RS 000381

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

---

TUESDAY, JANUARY 16, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:05 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. We are going to make an announcement at this time. Senator Sarbanes has been held up in traffic and he has requested that we delay the meeting. When he arrives he would like an opportunity to confer with me, so we will start at 10:35 a.m. in deference to the Senator having made this request. I am sorry we didn't make the announcement sooner.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. The blizzard of 1996 continues to have its impact, and I don't mean that only because my colleague, Senator Sarbanes, was delayed but one of the things we were discussing was the requirement for the filing of our Committee's report on Whitewater on January 15. As the Resolution calls for, we have made every effort to prepare that report, but due to the blizzard and other circumstances—Committee scheduling, et cetera—we have reached an agreement, and I will propose that we seek unanimous consent to postpone the filing of that report until Monday, January 22. So I ask unanimous consent that the Committee agree to the filing of that report on January 22.

Would anybody like to be heard on that? If not, I ask the Clerk to record unanimous consent of this Committee for filing the report on January 22.

The Committee has been requesting for a period of time now, since the 25th of August, that the White House produce certain materials, E-mail in particular, and a copy of a New York Times editorial, December 20, 1993, which purportedly contains the President's handwritten instructions in the margin.

Now as it relates to the E-mail, we have received a letter from the White House Special Counsel, Jane C. Sherburne, in which she indicates, basically, a willingness to discuss a methodology of the production of the E-mail. I had made statements previously that I believe we are entitled to the E-mails. Indeed, the Committee has voted subpoenas for that and for the December 20th, New York Times editorial which contains, purportedly, instructions by the President in his own handwriting to his Chief of Staff and to Mr. Lindsey.

I would hope that our discussions with Ms. Sherburne will be productive so that we can have, in a timely fashion, a schedule for the production of the E-mails, and the editorial I just mentioned.

I also want to acknowledge for the record that the other documents that we requested, Mrs. Clinton's briefing book, was turned over last evening to the Committee.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think the record ought to also reflect the fact, as I understand it—I think I am correct in this—Counsel for the Committee did review that newspaper editorial and the President's handwriting, so the Committee knows the substance of what was said.

If I'm mistaken about that, I would like to be disabused of that notion, but I think, as I understand it, Counsel had an opportunity to examine that and to copy down, I think, everything that was written in the margins.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes, we did, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. There still exists a need to produce this document. Indeed, I believe that the American people are entitled to it, and there is a question about the written instructions. Having said that, the Committee Counsel hopefully will have an opportunity to meet with Ms. Sherburne, either during one of the breaks or sometime thereafter, hopefully to avoid a continued confrontation or the possibility of a confrontation between the Committee and the White House.

I'm going to ask our witnesses to stand for the purpose of taking the oath.

[Whereupon, William H. Kennedy, Attorney, Rose Law Firm, Bruce R. Lindsey, Deputy Counsel to the President and Assistant to the President, and Neil Eggleston, Partner, Howrey & Simon, former Associate Counsel to the President were called as witnesses and, having first been duly sworn, were examined and testified as follows:]

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to ask if any of the witnesses, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Lindsey, or Mr. Eggleston, have any statements that they would like to make prior to our starting?

Mr. Kennedy.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM H. KENNEDY, III ATTORNEY, ROSE LAW FIRM

Mr. KENNEDY. I do not, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lindsey.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF BRUCE R. LINDSEY DEPUTY COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT AND ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Chairman, just for the record, I am Bruce Lindsey, Deputy Counsel to the President and Assistant to the President. I have no opening statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Eggleston.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF W. NEIL EGGLESTON PARTNER, HOWREY & SIMON
FORMER ASSOCIATE COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chairman, again, my name is Neil Eggleston. I was Associate Counsel to the President from about September 1993 to about September 1994. I am now no longer affiliated with the White House. I have no statement, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Kennedy, on November 5, 1993, you met with Mr. Kendall and other individuals at his offices in Williams & Connolly; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. It is, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lindsey, you were at that meeting?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Kennedy, you were at the meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. I was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Kennedy, you prepared notes of the meeting in your own handwriting?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You later typed up those notes yourself; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you furnished the handwritten and the typed notes to the Committee; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also furnished them to the White House; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct also.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Eggleston, have you had an opportunity to look at the notes?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you looked at the package of material the White House prepared to go out in connection with the notes?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lindsey, same true for you?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Eggleston, am I correct that at the meeting on November 5, one of the subjects of discussion was the investigation of David Hale being undertaken by the SBA?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, I have read that in the notes. I have no reason to think the notes are inaccurate at all in that respect. I actually don't remember the various events that were discussed during the course of that meeting, but I have no reason to think that the notes are not accurate, and I see that that's reflected in the notes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just to nail it down, Mr. Kennedy, your notes, on the second page of your own typing, says, "Asked for records of Capital Services Management—SBIC, David Hale—indicted." Is that accurate?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, it will be very helpful to me if you gave me page references. Are you talking about the typed portion?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. Page 2 of the typed portion.

Mr. KENNEDY. One second, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Very top of the page.

Mr. KENNEDY. I'm getting there.

Yes, that is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now having established that the subject of the SBA investigation of David Hale had come up and the indictment of David Hale had come up, Mr. Eggleston, on November 16, you called or contacted someone at the Small Business Administration to get documents that had been sent to the House of Representatives; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That is. I testified about that at great length a few weeks ago.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And your testimony a few weeks ago is that you began by having a conversation with Mr. Spotila, the General Counsel, at some point in the morning on November 16th?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't mean to quibble with you. I think I began by calling someone in the Office of Legislative Affairs. Eventually I had a conversation with Mr. Spotila.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That conversation took place around 11 in the morning of November 16th; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I remember it taking place on that date, Mr. Chertoff. I can't tell you that it took place at 11 in the morning.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to show you—and we'll give you a copy of it. There's a fax transmission sheet to you, November 16, 1993, 11:20 a.m., to Neil Eggleston from John Spotila; subject, Capital Management Services. Does that refresh your memory that, as of 11:20 a.m., you had had a conversation with Mr. Spotila?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't have any reason to dispute the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you got a press release from Mr. Spotila in that initial fax; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That's my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you wound up calling up Mr. Spotila and arranging to go over and pick up the documents that afternoon; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Actually, Mr. Chertoff, could I correct what I just said? That is not actually my recollection. I think what I first got from Mr. Spotila was the letter from Administrator Bowles to Chairman LaFalce. That's my recollection of the first thing I got and that I had gotten, actually, the press release later in the day. But with that distinction from what you said yes, I then called Mr. Spotila and got the records later in the day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You went over yourself to get the records; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was in the afternoon at some time?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Presumably it was sometime after 11 a.m.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, your testimony was, when you were here last time, that you did not have any conversations or coordinate this with Mr. Lindsey on November 16th?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think my testimony was I didn't remember any conversations with Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you got the attachments, did you show the attachments to anybody?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I believe I did not show the attachments to anyone after I got the attachments.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you discuss the attachments with anybody?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember talking about them with Mr. Nussbaum?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't specifically remember. It sure would make sense that I would have told them that I got the attachments. I don't specifically remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you show the attachments to anyone besides Mr. Nussbaum?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Actually, that was not the question you asked me. I don't think I showed the attachments to Mr. Nussbaum.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you show the attachments to anyone besides Mr. Nussbaum?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't believe that I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you discuss the attachments with anyone besides Mr. Nussbaum?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Last time I was here I was shown a document reflecting some communication I apparently had with Mr. Lindsey's secretary regarding the documents. I don't actually remember that, but that's perfectly possible and I don't dispute that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's put it up. It's S 11399. I think it's in your package in front of you.

Mr. EGGLESTON. It is probably easier for me to look at it on a screen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, whichever is easier. We'll put it up then.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I'm sorry, Mr. Chertoff, actually it's small enough, it's probably easier for me to find it in my pack.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We can follow along. "Neil Eggleston said"—

Mr. EGGLESTON. Let me get it first. Thank you, Mr. Chertoff. I have it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Neil Eggleston said the additional information is at SBA and is approximately a foot high. He has a call in to SBA to find out if it contains reference to either the President or Hillary. He can obtain a copy of the documents if it appears necessary but does not believe it is problematic." This is what you just referred to?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, I was shown this the last time I testified.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is a message received by Mr. Lindsey, produced from Mr. Lindsey's files, that you had left for him. Do you have any reason to doubt that?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember it. I've no reason to doubt it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now having looked at this document, does that refresh your memory that, in fact, sometime between your receiving the original cover letter by fax from the SBA and your going over to pick up the rest of the documents, you had had a conversation with Mr. Lindsey about going over to get the documents?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, it does not. In fact, this probably leads me to conclude that I never got—let me—if I can give you a slightly longer answer, it would make a lot of sense that I would have tried to talk to Mr. Lindsey. The reason I was getting these documents is that we were concerned that, having been produced to Congress, there was an issue about leaks, and I testified to that last time.

Mr. Lindsey at the time was the person who would probably have gotten the telephone call if there had been a leak and had been a press inquiry to the White House. It is absolutely as logical as it can be that I would have attempted to talk to Mr. Lindsey about this, because, in fact, that was the notion of what I was doing.

Mr. Chertoff, I don't remember actually doing it, and this document leads me to conclude that I probably didn't, and that I communicated with Mr. Lindsey through his secretary, which happened fairly frequently because Mr. Lindsey is extremely difficult to get in touch with.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You went and got the documents; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you communicate with Mr. Lindsey about the documents after you got them?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't—I don't believe that I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well—

Mr. EGGLESTON. I am virtually certain that I never showed him the documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I asked you a little bit of a different question. Did you communicate with him afterwards, after you had come back from picking up the documents at SBA?

Mr. EGGLESTON. And I answered it. I don't recall. I don't believe that I did. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You went over in the afternoon; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Presumably it was sometime after 11:20 a.m.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Because we know you got the first document by fax at 11:20 a.m. and then you went over the same day to pick up the documents yourself; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, I am not disputing you. I don't mean to do this, but I don't have all these documents, so I have no reason to dispute what you just said. But I don't have these documents all in a big pack where I can follow the times and all that, so I just can't do it. I think that that's probably right, but if you asked me—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Eggleston, he's not asking you to comment on the content of the documents, so don't go through that. He's asking you whether you picked up the documents in the afternoon.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. You went over and picked them up, didn't you?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chairman, the only thing I don't want to do is tell him something I don't remember. He has shown me various documents. I have no reason to dispute that it happened in the afternoon, but if he's asking me do I remember, I don't. And I don't actually—you have shown me a fax sheet. I can't confirm from that that was my first document.

Mr. Chertoff, I don't mean to fight with you. I agree that it is very likely that the afternoon, based on what I have seen, is when I went over. I don't remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will move it beyond very likely. You will agree with me that you got a fax as of around 11:30 a.m. because I've just shown it to you; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would like to put up a letter dated November 16th. It says, "hand delivered."

The CHAIRMAN. You have it in your packet.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On Small Business Administration stationery, November 16 to Neil Eggleston. "Dear Neil: Enclosed is a copy of Erskine's letter yesterday to Chairman LaFalce with confidential attachments." It is dated November 16. Was this the cover letter that came with the package of material you picked up from the Small Business Administration?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That helps us nail it down that it was on November 16th and sometime after 11:30 a.m. that you went over there and picked up the documents; correct? You would agree with me, that's—

Mr. EGGLESTON. That definitely appears to be true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you got back—

Mr. EGGLESTON. As I have said repeatedly, yes, that absolutely appears to be true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you got back with the attachments, Mr. Eggleston, did you call Mr. Lindsey and tell him that you had important documents relating to Whitewater to show him?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Did I call Mr. Lindsey and tell him that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember calling him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let's put up S 12604. This is from Bruce Lindsey's call list which we received, I think, in the last couple of days. I think you have it in front of you.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you seen this before?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you see it?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yesterday.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You see where it says—Mr. Lindsey, this is your call list; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Kept by your secretary?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have a computer program that keeps all of your calls and messages recorded?

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, she has to obviously input any information into it so there's no automatic, but anything that she writes down, she writes down on these call logs.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's part of her responsibilities; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you rely on her to be accurate in taking messages; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says over here, it is November 16, 1993, 4:58 p.m. "Important." Mr. Lindsey, you help us out here. Where it says name/agency, Neil Eggleston, that means the person who has left the message?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's you, Mr. Eggleston; correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, I am Mr. Eggleston.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then it says, "Has some Whitewater documents to go over with you. Will come by about 6 p.m."

Now, Mr. Eggleston, those Whitewater documents were the documents you picked up from the SBA; correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that's likely true. I don't know that to be true, but it's that day.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So would you agree with me that now that we have this message, we can ascertain that when you got back from the SBA with the documents, you called Mr. Lindsey up to set up an appointment to go over the documents with him?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I would say that that's true from this. I might point out that's not the question you asked me earlier. You asked me the question earlier whether I called and spoke to Mr. Lindsey and told him I had the documents, and the answer to that question is no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think I asked you whether you communicated with him but I don't want to quibble with you. The point is this: You now acknowledge that when you came back with the attachments from the SBA, you did, in fact, communicate with Mr. Lindsey, certainly through his secretary, to tell him you had received Whitewater documents; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. This would definitely make it seem that that's true. As I have said repeatedly, I don't actually remember that happening. This would certainly make it seem as if I had two communications with his secretary on that day with regard to these documents, and that makes a lot of sense. I mean, that's the reason I was getting these.

I don't remember, and in fact, I probably never spoke to Mr. Lindsey that day. I don't know what his recollection is about these documents. I think that's right. I think I communicated twice with his secretary about it and it makes sense that I would because that's the reason I got them, was in the event of press inquiries.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You considered this an important message; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yeah.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You described these as Whitewater documents, even though they came out of the Small Business Administration, that dealt with David Hale; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, you asked me earlier if I was sure that this related to these documents and I said that I thought it was likely. The only thing that gives me some pause is the use of the words "Whitewater documents," which, you know, this is not my word, this is the secretary's word. And the only reason I wonder whether for sure this is it is because it says Whitewater documents.

The CHAIRMAN. No, it is for you to say that this is not your word, I would have to say seems rather disingenuous. You called, went over to pick up documents. This is the recording of a secretary as she took this message down. I mean, now let's not say that she mischaracterized your message. Are you suggesting that? Are you suggesting that she mischaracterized this message?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Let's set the record straight. You have done a lot of dancing.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You are not suggesting there was some other group of Whitewater documents you happened to get on the same day that you went over to the SBA to pick up the SBA documents?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, I've told you, I think it was these documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did you go over around 6 p.m. to see Mr. Lindsey?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you show him the documents?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you do with them?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think I—Mr. Lindsey is very hard to get in touch with. I remember and I hope Mr. Lindsey remembers—that I never showed him these documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, you had had an E-mail message that you had left earlier in the day, asking him whether you wanted to get the attachments. We've seen that just a few minutes ago; right? You left a message for him earlier in the day. We just saw it a couple minutes ago, saying there is about a foot high of attachments, do you want me to get them; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes. I don't know that this is an E-mail, but yeah.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whatever it is, a message; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember him getting back to you but you do remember going to pick up the attachments; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You come back with the attachments and leave an important message for Mr. Lindsey in which you say you have "Whitewater documents to go over with you. Will come by about 6 p.m." Does he get back to you on this message?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, I did not, as I recall, I never got to him with these documents. I don't remember whether he got back to me himself or through his secretary, but I recollect—and again I don't know what Mr. Lindsey's recollection is—but I recollect that I never showed him these documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your memory of this is you leave him a message asking whether he wants the attachments, you don't remember if he gets back to you, you go over and get the attachments yourself, personally. You come back, you leave him an important message saying you have Whitewater documents to go over with him. What did you mean by "go over with you?"

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, I don't remember leaving this message so I can't tell you what I meant by "go over," but presumably to show him the documents that I got from the SBA.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Which had to do with David Hale?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because you knew it was a matter that he was concerned about; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It's because, if the press inquiry came in, which was the reason I got it, it would in all likelihood have gone to Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you wanted him, Mr. Lindsey, to be prepared with confidential documents to respond to a press inquiry?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I wanted Mr. Lindsey to be able to be ready in the event of a press inquiry, in the event of a leak out of Congress, I wanted him to be aware of the documents, absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So now that you've—it's important for him to be aware of this in case there's a press inquiry, you leave this message. Do you go by at 6 p.m.? It says, "Will come by about 6 p.m." Did you come by about 6 p.m.?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, I don't remember.

Mr. Chertoff, I have to give you a longer answer than this. What his secretary—and I think he'll confirm this—would do, he had an open door, you could walk in any time. He was frequently busy. You didn't schedule an appointment with him. He didn't have, at least for someone like me at my level, you didn't make an appointment to meet Mr. Lindsey because Mr. Lindsey spent time with the President and he spent time doing a variety of different things that were more important than meeting with me.

So his secretary would be a fulcrum of information on how to get in touch with him. And she would say come back at 6 p.m., I think he'll be available by then. You'd go back at 6 p.m., he'd either be there or he wouldn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But whether at 6 or 7 p.m., here it is, you had two discussions with him via the secretary about getting these documents. You have gone over personally to pick them up, you don't even send a courier over or messenger. It's because of concerns about press stuff. Whether it's at 6 p.m. or 6 a.m., when do you finally get together to go over the documents?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't think I did. I think very shortly after this, I learned that the Department of Justice was having difficulties with the fact that the White House had them, and then I was glad that I had never shown them to Mr. Lindsey or anybody else.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Several days afterwards that that came up?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think it was not the next day but the following day.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you suggesting that you sat on these documents for 2 days and that you did not attempt to communicate or bring them to Mr. Lindsey? Is that what you're saying?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. So you received a message saying this is important, you went over yourself. What was your position?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Associate Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. Associate Counsel of the White House. You went over to personally pick these up. Who gave them to you?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Spotila.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Spotila. So he gives them to you; right? You come back. Of course you don't remember if it was in the afternoon, do you? You come back and you call, and he's not there, and you leave a message with his secretary; right? Saying it's important; is that true? Was it important that you went over and picked these up yourself?

Mr. EGGLESTON. The documents——

The CHAIRMAN. Why wouldn't you send a courier over?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I learned in my conversation with Mr. Spotila that the documents had been provided to the House Committee the day before.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. So why didn't you send a courier over?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think I testified before, my best recollection is that I went, picked these up either on the way to the Hill or the way back to the Hill from some other activity.

The CHAIRMAN. As a normal course of business? You went over because these documents were important and because you were concerned about press inquiries; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And you wanted to react to those inquiries as they came in; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. You wanted Mr. Lindsey to be able to do that; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. So that's why you yourself went over and personally got them; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Then you brought them back. Now, you have them. You call up the secretary. You don't remember the actual call but the records reflect that you called and you left a message, and it said important; right? Was it important? It was important at that time, wasn't it?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It was important as of the time, of course.

The CHAIRMAN. It was time sensitive, wasn't it?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It was less time sensitive by the end of the day because evidently there hadn't been any press calls. It was time sensitive as of 5 p.m.

The CHAIRMAN. It was time sensitive as of 4:58 p.m.

Mr. EGGLESTON. If there were press calls. If there was no press call, it was not.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you're not really concerned about the press. Something magical at 5 p.m., it's not important, but you say I'll get these over there at 6 p.m., don't you?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It says that I will come by about 6 p.m., yes.

The CHAIRMAN. I have these documents to go over with you. Is that what the message says?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That's what it says.

The CHAIRMAN. To go over. And now, you are going to tell this Committee you don't remember going over or going over the documents with him? Somehow it didn't become important because, 2 days later, the Justice Department made some announcement?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I——

The CHAIRMAN. Is that what you expect us to believe?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I am telling this Committee that I believe that I did not go over these documents with Mr. Lindsey. I don't know what his recollection is, but my recollection is we didn't.

The CHAIRMAN. So the records don't reveal the truth, then? Once again, the records aren't telling the truth?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Senator, you're going to have to draw whatever conclusions you want. I'm just telling—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I am drawing a conclusion based on the sequence of events and the importance of going over there and bringing back the records. You wanted to be able to give Mr. Lindsey this information, but you want this Committee to believe that you didn't take the records over there to meet with him or see him.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I recall that I did not go over these documents with Mr. Lindsey. That is my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lindsey, you got this message. Let me ask the question a different way. It is your regular routine to look at your messages?

Mr. LINDSEY. I am not sure I could testify truthfully that that's the case. If you will notice, this is page 11 of my telephone records that day. That means that—I don't know how many pages there were after 11. I've seen some of my days when I had 20 to 22 pages worth of telephone messages. At some point I try to look at my messages. Whether or not between 4:58 and 6 p.m. on a day I would look at telephone messages, I do not know.

I can tell you that, as I testified last time, I do not believe that I ever saw any of the SBA documents. For the first time I have seen an index of the SBA documents, and the only one that I think I have ever seen listed in the index is the indictment, which I received not from Mr. Eggleston or through the SBA, but through Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So what we have here are faxes going back and forth with the SBA. Mr. Eggleston, whether you're on your way to the Hill or not, you personally stop to pick up the documents, not simply send someone else to do it. You get back and then you call or you reach out, communicate with Mr. Lindsey, and say you have an important message for him, you have to go over the Whitewater documents, you're prepared to come over yourself in an hour, and then it stops and everybody loses interest in it. Is that basically what you're telling us has happened here? It just stops at 6 p.m.? Nothing happens? After all the rush to get the documents, to leave an important message for Mr. Lindsey, you just let it drop?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Well, Mr. Chertoff, I don't remember whether I went over at 6 p.m. with the documents or not to see Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You might have gone over?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I could have. I know I did not show him the documents. That I know, because—and I'll tell you why I know. The reason is that this became an issue within a very few days. This became an issue with—because of the call from the SBA regarding the Department of Justice, so unlike a lot of things I'm asked to testify about that really don't have any impact in my mind, this particular matter became a problem very quickly.

Let me just finish my answer if I could, and then you can do whatever you want to do.

I mean, this became a problem for me within a very short time after Tuesday, November 16. And I remember thinking to myself, I am glad I never showed anybody these documents because if there's a problem, at least I'm the only person who has seen them.

That is the reason—I mean, unlike a lot of questions you could ask me about things that happened 2½ years ago that I frankly wouldn't remember very clearly, just as I don't remember the details of all these calls and message logs, I remember thinking to myself at the time, thank heavens I'm the only person who saw them, and it's because it became a problem within 2 days of the 16th. So that's my recollection.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, in December you were interviewed by the FBI because they investigated this; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell the FBI that you had attempted to communicate with Mr. Lindsey to go over the documents with him?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember. I don't remember—I don't remember communicating with Mr. Lindsey about this, and I think the reason I don't remember it is that I never got to him. It's because, it looks to me, as if what I did was communicate with Mr. Lindsey through his secretary.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lindsey, did the FBI interview you in December about this?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir, I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether the FBI got this message indicating that Mr. Eggleston had an important matter for you to discuss about the Whitewater documents?

Mr. LINDSEY. I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know whether the FBI got this in December, do you?

Mr. LINDSEY. I have no idea, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Eggleston, did the FBI show you this document when they interviewed you?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know that they had it either?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Since we are talking about matters that you remember, it relates to documents in Vince Foster's office, I'm going to show you a letter of April 6, 1994, signed by you, to the General Accounting Office. You have it in your package. It's 2 pages. It's a cover letter and it's a series of responses to GAO questions for Mrs. Clinton relating to the handling of the Travel Office matter. Is that your signature on the bottom of the cover page?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I'm sorry, Mr. Chertoff, I haven't found it yet.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's at the end of the Watkins' memo.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I'm sorry, since I was looking, Mr. Chertoff, I didn't listen to your question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will give you the question again. Is that your signature on the bottom of the page?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "Attached please find written responses to the questions that GAO posed to Mrs. Clinton." Is that right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You enclose a sheet of paper that is entitled, "Responses to GAO questions for Mrs. Clinton." Right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now this was a response to questions that were contained on a page which I think is also in your package, right before what I have just shown you, that was a list of 5 questions that General Accounting Office posed to Mrs. Clinton about the Travel Office firings; is that right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Correct. I remember doing this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the GAO is what?

Mr. EGGLESTON. GAO is the General Accounting Office, which is an arm of Congress.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's the investigative arm of Congress; correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It does audits. It's mostly an auditing agency.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Auditing meaning they review Government operations for mismanagement or impropriety; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. And lots of other things.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood there was an investigation here about the handling of the Travel Office matter and the manner in which employees were discharged; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew it was an official investigation?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I knew it was an investigation that the General Accounting Office was conducting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. An official Government agency; correct? It wasn't a press inquiry. It was from an official Government agency?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It was from the General Accounting Office, sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were assigned to handle this with Mrs. Clinton; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Get the answers to the questions?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You sat down with her?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You showed her the questions?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She gave you the answers?

Mr. EGGLESTON. She did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She told you orally what the answers were?

Mr. EGGLESTON. She did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a back-and-forth discussion about how to characterize the answers, or how to write them?

Mr. EGGLESTON. At the time——

Mr. CHERTOFF. The first time you met with her on this.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think at the time that we first met about it, she answered the questions but we didn't talk about the language, how I would answer them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, did you give her the questions in advance?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember whether I gave them in advance or brought them to the meeting, but we discussed the actual questions that are on the document that you have shown me at the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She orally gave you answers?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You wrote them down on a yellow pad or something?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Presumably.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have a back-and-forth with her on that occasion about what the answers were going to be?

Mr. EGGLESTON. We talked about the answers, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you discuss how to phrase the answers?

Mr. EGGLESTON. We discussed what the answers would be. I don't know whether at that time we went through the actual words that were going to be put down on the paper, but I asked her questions and got—I asked her these questions and got her answers.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, are we going to get into Travelgate?

The CHAIRMAN. No, but I'm going to give Counsel—

Senator SARBANES. Well, I thought Mr. Clinger was doing that tomorrow?

The CHAIRMAN. I will allow Counsel to develop this line for several minutes but we're not getting into that. Go ahead.

Senator SARBANES. What are we doing if we're not getting into Travelgate?

The CHAIRMAN. We are not but I will allow him to pursue this line of questioning. It goes to what Mr. Eggleston does, what he doesn't do, what he remembers and doesn't. We're going to pursue it. Go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you sat down with Mrs. Clinton to do this, did you have a general discussion with her about what the GAO is investigating?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't specifically remember. I'm sure I told her these are the questions that we've received from the GAO. That's more detail than I remember, but I don't have any recollection that she didn't know that the GAO was doing an investigation into the Travel Office. There had been a fair amount in the newspapers about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there any other lawyer from the White House Counsel's Office who was advising Mrs. Clinton on how to respond to the questions?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I'm the only one that I know of. If someone else talked to her about the answers I don't know about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As far as you know, that was your job, to deal with the issue of her answers to GAO questions; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, yeah.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you come in and you explain to her what this investigation is about, Mr. Eggleston?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I'm sorry, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have any discussion with her about what the investigation was about?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, I don't really remember, but you are talking as if this would be the first time she would have heard of it. This was a matter that had been in the press by April 1994, repeatedly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was the first time you were talking to her about it; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Correct, but I certainly didn't think I was telling her for the first time that the GAO was doing an investigation into the Travel Office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you get your answers on your yellow pad, you write them down, go back and get them typed up?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Well, I typed them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yourself?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you submit the typed answers back to her?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did she do?

Mr. EGGLESTON. She called me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And she called you in for a meeting?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No, I think—I think I met with her one time. It's possible I met with her more than once but I remember meeting with her at least once and talking with her once on the phone after she had gotten the message.

Mr. CHERTOFF. After getting the typed-up version she spoke to you on the telephone?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did she say?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think she basically said that the answers were fine and I was authorized to submit them to the General Accounting Office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did she make any changes in the answers?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember that she did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you quite certain—this is an important question, Mr. Eggleston. Are you certain that the answers that you submitted to the White House that are contained—

Mr. EGGLESTON. I'm sorry, submitted to the GAO?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry, to the GAO that are contained on the document marked "Responses to GAO questions for Mrs. Clinton," are you certain that those answers which you submitted had been reviewed and approved by Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes. I mean, I don't mean to be corny here, unless you haven't shown me the ones—if you got these from the GAO, then these—the ones I submitted to the GAO were approved by Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was no trick question. That's what I wanted to find out.

Mr. EGGLESTON. You identified it as so important I wanted to be careful in my answer.

The CHAIRMAN. It's no trick question. That's what we got from the GAO.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What you sent in was exactly what she had reviewed and authorized by her to send in as her answers; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes. I sent these in—I did not—I sent these in after getting approval from her that these were her answers.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

Mr. Eggleston, in view of the importance that has been placed on getting the notes of the November 5th meeting and all of the background about these hearings today, I would like to ask you some questions about that meeting, if I may.

At the November 5th meeting, did anyone direct you to attempt to obtain any records or documents from any other Government agency, including the Small Business Administration?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The request that was made by Representative LaFalce to the Small Business Administration regarding Capital Management Services was made prior to the November 5th meeting that you have described; is that so?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I think the first—I don't know that I know when the request was made. I think that the first time that I would have known anything about it was November 6 or later, because—which would be the day after this meeting, because I think that it was reported in The Washington Post on Saturday, November 6 that the request had been made, and I don't think I had any other knowledge of it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You don't know whether you had any knowledge as you sit here now, but do you accept the possibility that since the request by Representative LaFalce was made, according to The Washington Post story of November 6, on November 4, the day before your meeting, that it may have been the subject of a passing commentary at the meeting?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember that—Mr. Ben-Veniste, I don't remember that the request from Chairman LaFalce was discussed at the meeting. I just don't remember that. By that time in the press there had—Mr. Hale had been indicted in late September, there was a lot of press activity and issues regarding Judge Hale that had been in the press by November 5. I don't actually remember, and maybe Mr. Kennedy does, but I don't remember anybody discussing the LaFalce request at the November 5th meeting.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, whether or not you recall it, I'm now putting into context the events that occurred prior to this meeting. And of course, we have covered all of this in prior hearings of this Committee to some extent. But the chronology of events is that on November 4, Congressman LaFalce makes the request. You have a meeting on November 5. November 6 there's a news story about it, about the LaFalce request. On the 16th you received documents.

Now putting aside your very precise answers to the questions that were put to you by my colleague, Mr. Chertoff, let's try to just talk in a nonlawyerly way about this for a moment. You anticipated, if I understand your testimony, that there might be a press inquiry that day?

Mr. EGGLESTON. November 16th?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And therefore you wanted to give Mr. Lindsey some notice that you had received some documents; correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, I think I did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now at some point you had the opportunity to look at those documents. Do you remember when?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Sometime during the day on the 16th.

The CHAIRMAN. Possibly—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Possibly after you had left a message for Mr. Lindsey?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Possibly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We covered in a hearing some weeks ago the substance of the material that you had received. It was the subject of testimony from, as I recall, Mr. Spotila, Mr. Foren, and then we read some testimony regarding the Department of Justice take on these documents. And my recollection is that these documents were in all respects unremarkable; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. My recollection is that Mr. Spotila and Mr. Teckler, who was the career SBA official, both testified that they were routine, unremarkable background documents and not sensitive.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that all this discussion and questioning in great detail about whether you left a message for Mr. Lindsey and how it could be that you didn't show these documents to him because the message said on it important, and so forth and so on, in the context of what this material turned out to be, was that anything significant in your mind that you didn't show it to Mr. Lindsey, other than the fact that you didn't show it to him?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We had testimony from Mr. Spotila and Mr. Foren and Mr. Teckler, I believe, that before the SBA released the documents to Congressman LaFalce, they self-censored them, they went through them to make sure that they were not releasing any documents that were sensitive in any way. Do you recall that?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So both your analysis of the documents when you looked at them, the testimony of all of the Small Business Administration officials who put the package together, and indeed the testimony of the Department of Justice career people who asked you to return them, was that in all respects these documents were not sensitive, they were not remarkable, there were no smoking guns, there was no advantage to be gained by looking at them, and indeed the SBA and Justice Department investigations were in no way affected, much less impeded, by the fact that they had been turned over to you for that period of time; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that's right. I think if I was going back to see Mr. Lindsey, and particularly given the first note I was shown by Mr. Chertoff, it was probably to confirm to him that there was nothing particularly sensitive or interesting in the documents.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And the testimony——

The CHAIRMAN. You were saying there was nothing interesting in those documents?

Mr. LINDSEY. I saw nothing interesting in the documents——

The CHAIRMAN. You went through all of them?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What about Susan McDougal wasn't Master Marketing important?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chairman, I don't remember the details of the documents. I remember concluding——

The CHAIRMAN. You know Susan McDougal was a partner, didn't you, of the Clintons?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I knew that Susan McDougal was a partner.

The CHAIRMAN. You weren't concerned whether an illegal loan had been made, facilitated by Mr. Hale? And I'm going to ask the time be put back on my—on the Minority's side. You weren't concerned about that and that issue never came up?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chairman, I don't think anything in these documents indicated that Mrs. McDougal had made an illegal loan facilitated by anyone so these documents—I knew the issue existed but—

The CHAIRMAN. You knew the issue existed?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Of course.

The CHAIRMAN. You were concerned about that?

Mr. EGGLESTON. This was one of the allegations that was in the newspaper by then. But the question I think Mr. Ben-Veniste asked me was whether these documents had any impact on that, and my recollection is they were not, and I think that Mr. Spotila, Mr. Teckler, Mr. Foren, and I think some depositions from Department of Justice people all came to the same conclusion.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I may, Mr. Chairman, simply remind the Committee of the testimony of the Department of Justice career people who looked at this. George Allen Carver, who testified on October 17, 1995, at page 80:

Question: Did you ever learn the circumstances under which these documents were transmitted to the White House, and what happened?

Answer: My impression was it was totally innocent. And you had White House staff, who were interested in tracking what was going on on the Hill, for—because it concerned the White House. So, that when a request for documents went over to the Small Business Administration, they wanted a set of that documents and that a set of those documents was prepared.

Then, Irvin Nathan testified, and he was the deputy to Phillip Heymann who was the Deputy Attorney General, at page 97 of his testimony:

Question: Did you ever come across any evidence that might have led you to feel that there was an improper motive in the White House's request for the documents?

Answer: No. Mr. Eggleston's explanation was reasonable and sensible and I accepted it fully and had no reason to doubt it.

Let me go on to the other points regarding the November 5th meeting. At that meeting, did anyone employed by the Government transmit to Mr. Kendall, or anyone not employed by the Government, any information of a confidential nature which had been attained from any Government agency?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Not that I know of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You certainly did not?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I certainly did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At the time of the November 5th meeting, I believe you had stated that there had been a great deal of information in the press. Can you briefly summarize the nature of that information?

Mr. EGGLESTON. By November 5th, as I recall, the following issues were well in the press. Mr. Hale had been indicted down in Arkansas in late September, and there were a series of articles in the Arkansas papers about that indictment, including some of his allegations.

The Washington area and The New York Times stories began, I think, on October 30th, and there were stories October 30th and then by The New York Times and the AP and The Washington Post and The Washington Times, divulging nearly, as I recall, all the issues reflected in Mr. Kennedy's notes, including issues about campaign contributions, issues about McDougal, the entire issue related to Whitewater and whether or not the amount of the investment and all that was reappearing again, as I recall, and of course had been the subject of substantial press attention during the campaign in March, April 1992.

My general recollection is that by the 5th, there had been 4 or 5 continuous days of one or two stories in all the major papers, dealing with most of these issues. It was really—in some ways, it was the reason for the meeting.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You've already testified that no one requested that anyone prospectively go out and obtain any information for transmittal to Mr. Kendall. Let me ask you, in your understanding, what was the purpose of the meeting?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Ben-Veniste, by November 5, 1993, what had been made public essentially was that there was a criminal investigation, and that aspects of it touched on the President and the First Lady, not that they were subjects, not that they were targets but that they were somehow involved.

It became important, and I remember talking about this with Mr. Nussbaum, it became important to us that we make sure, we and the White House make sure that we are doing the appropriate role and that there are things that we can't do. And the purpose of this meeting was, and I remember, the purpose of this meeting was to make sure that the President and First Lady had private counsel who would do the kinds of things that private counsel can do in connection with these kinds of matters, and there are lots of things that we as Government officials can't do. And we in the White House would do the things that were appropriate for Government officials to do, who are working at the White House. But my recollection is that the purpose of this meeting was to insure that everybody had on the right hat. Because by November 5th, it was plain that this was going to be a problem that was going to require private counsel by the President and the First Lady.

So that, to me, was the first goal and the first reason to have the meeting. The second then was to bring private counsel up to speed on what the facts were. And the people at the meeting who essentially knew or had some knowledge of what the facts were, were Mr. Lyons who had done some work on the issue during the 1992 campaign, Mr. Lindsey who had known the President for a substantial period of time, and to some extent Mr. Kennedy. At the time, I had some little information about this. I guess I was learning as well.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You mentioned a division of labor, and that there were going to have to be different hats worn on a prospective basis in dealing with these issues. With respect to press inquiries, was there a clear demarcation of when it would be that Mr. Kendall would handle a press inquiry and when the White House would handle a press inquiry?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember that we did a real clear demarcation. I think it was our view that it was perfectly appropriate for White House officials to continue to respond to press inquiries. Because of the nature of the White House, those kinds of questions get thrown at the President at photo ops when he gets off Air Force One and the like and we couldn't essentially or—probably not Air Force One, probably off the helicopter—but that we couldn't have the White House out responding to the issues and there were other issues that Mr. Kendall would be responding to.

I don't remember a real clear demarcation but I do remember believing it was perfectly appropriate for the White House to continue to respond to those questions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Were there other areas where there was no clean and obvious demarcation, on a going forward basis, that the White House would be completely out of it, and Kendall would assume authority and responsibility?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Well, to the extent there were going to be contacts with law enforcement officials, for example, I mean, that would be an area—it was one of the reasons that we needed—not we, the President and the First Lady needed private counsel. That is something that the White House really was just not going to do, and couldn't do things like calling up prosecutors and calling up the Department of Justice and saying what's the status, what's going on, how is this happening?

Those were the kinds of functions that Government officials working in the White House really, I thought, could not perform, so that's an area. Another area was some level of fact development. I thought fact development, we thought some level of fact development was not appropriate for the White House to do for a variety of reasons, not only inappropriateness but if the White House were to start contacting witnesses, we would start reading back in the paper that someone from the White House had called someone in Arkansas to talk to them about various issues. So that was an area probably that Mr. Kendall was going to focus more on, although there was some knowledge about some of these facts within the White House, and obviously we weren't going to close our eyes to the knowledge in the White House. When I say that, I principally mean Mr. Lindsey who had been involved in that issue for quite some time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I understand your testimony, there were some areas that were more clearly those which would be arrogated to Mr. Kendall and private attorneys, and there were others that were not so clear. And I take it there were some understanding that you would have to continue to communicate with one another, that is the White House lawyers and Mr. Kendall and his team of lawyers, as issues arose on a going forward basis, to make sure that something didn't fall between the cracks, and that a matter was being handled in the most appropriate way possible.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that's absolutely accurate. I think we anticipated that that would be sort of a first communication, but that as, over time, there would be the need for additional communications between Counsel's Office and Mr. Kendall, as each are appropriately performing their own function in this matter.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of the people in the room that day, how many had you known previously?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Previous to that day?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Well, I knew Mr. Kendall because he is a Washington lawyer and I know him from being around. I obviously knew all the White House people prior to that day. I don't believe that I had met Mr. Lyons before. And Mr. Engstrom, I am fairly confident I had not met before.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And had you worked with Mr. Kendall on any matter prior to that day, other than generally knowing who he was?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't think I had worked on a particular matter with him that I remember right now. I know him from being a Washington lawyer, him being a Washington lawyer, and from his prior employment actually.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now much has been made of the line in the notes, and I am referring to S 12534. If you would have that page in front of you, please.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Is that the typewritten version?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes, it is. You have that handy?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I do, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Where it says, "Vacuum," and then, "Rose Law files." Let me ask you very directly because this is an important question. Was there any discussion about removing, or destroying, or obliterating, or otherwise making unavailable any files that were believed to be in existence at the Rose Law Firm during that meeting?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Absolutely not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your prior background was as a Federal prosecutor; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Would you have tolerated any such discussion had such discussion arisen?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I would not have.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have any reason to believe at the point in that meeting that there were any files in the Rose Law Firm that were in any way the subject of interest or controversy at that time?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't think I had it as to any particular files, no. But I want to emphasize, as clearly as I can, there was absolutely no discussion at that meeting of anybody destroying any files. I would not have tolerated it, Mr. Kendall wouldn't have tolerated it. I had known Mr. Nussbaum for a period of time before that. He would not have tolerated that. That conversation did not occur at this meeting.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Kennedy, let me ask you to look at those notes, and look at your handwritten notes, which are at page S 12523.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I feel confident I am not asking you this question for the first time. What did you mean, to the best of your recollection, when you wrote this note—"Vacuum," space, "Rose Law files"?

Mr. KENNEDY. We were referring to at the meeting that there was an information vacuum, that when you tried to get your arms around Whitewater, in this case referring to the real estate investment, it is impossible to do. The records were a shambles. I had personal knowledge of that. You are dealing with an information vacuum.

The Rose Law files, as they related to Whitewater documents, would—if you had gotten your hands on them, they would not have meant anything to you because of the condition of the records.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you very directly the same question I asked Mr. Eggleston. Did you or anybody at that meeting suggest in any way, shape or form that files then existing at the Rose Law Firm should be destroyed or hidden or otherwise made unavailable?

Mr. KENNEDY. Absolutely not. And I don't have a prosecutorial background but I wouldn't have tolerated it either.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let me go on in the notes. At page 12535 of the typed notes—in fact, let me back up because I do want to cover this area about Mr. Foster's suicide. I guess that would be on the first page of the typed notes. I will probably get a thousand more preprinted postcards for asking you the question. But, again, the notation with respect to Mr. Foster on the bottom of page 12529, it says, "July 20th: FBI issued subpoena and took records of municipal judge named Hale." Do you know who imparted that information?

Mr. KENNEDY. It had been in the press.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Now it is inaccurate in a couple of ways.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you now know why it is inaccurate?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, the records that were taken were not of David Hale as a municipal judge but were instead the records of Capital Services Management, which is an SBIC that David Hale owned and operated.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed the FBI didn't issue a subpoena, they are not in the business of issuing subpoenas, they applied for a search warrant that day, and obtained a search warrant which was not executed—that means it wasn't served—and the search was not conducted until the next day, the day after Mr. Foster's death.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So while there was speculation because of the coincidence of these two events, in fact, because Mr. Hale was caught flatfooted by the FBI on the 21st, the presumption is that no one, including Mr. Hale, had any prior knowledge that he was going to be the subject of a search that would occur on the next day, and by that time, of course, Mr. Foster had committed suicide.

So you are reporting here, I take it, on the coincidence between the dates of the Hale search warrant and Mr. Foster's death as being reported in the press?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And then on the following line, which is perhaps provocative if you don't have all of this in context, is the word "Factor." What did you mean by that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Simply that the coincidence had become a factor in all of the intense speculation surrounding Vince's suicide.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you about information contained on page S 12535 of the typed notes, where it says, "Could be that JGT is target of RTC referral." Do you see that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me direct this question to Mr. Lindsey. If you could take a look at that note. Do you recall how you came to learn that information as of November 5?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir. I believe in the October 14th meeting that we had with certain people from the Treasury Department, that they indicated that Jeff Gerth had indicated that to them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that Jeff Gerth, again being the reporter from The New York Times, who according to testimony received by this Committee, had spent the days talking to David Hale, had apparently called Mr. DeVore, was it, at the Treasury Department?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir, Jack DeVore.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And had provided that information to Mr. DeVore. Did you regard that as some confidential or proprietary or sensitive information of the Treasury Department?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir, I did not. In fact, a memo I wrote after the October 14th meeting, which this Committee has had and which we have had hearings about, clearly states in the second paragraph, "Gerth," meaning again Jeff Gerth, "stated that to his knowledge President Clinton was not a target of the referrals although Governor Jim Guy Tucker might be."

So clearly, you know, my notes that were written shortly after—my typed notes written shortly after that meeting indicated that that information came from Jeff Gerth of The New York Times, not from any confidential source.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I see my red light is on, so we will yield the time back if we have additional time. I think this is a good point to transfer.

The CHAIRMAN. Before I turn to Senator Bond, Mr. Kennedy, let me ask you to look at your notes with the relevant testimony, and have them put up on the Elmo. Your handwritten note about Rose Law files, the "vacuum" page.

Mr. CHERTOFF. 12523.

The CHAIRMAN. Look at that line, starting with "vacuum," would you read that for me, it says, "vacuum," what else? Read it.

Mr. KENNEDY. It says, "Vacuum," space, "Rose Law files, Whitewater docs," dash, "subpoena."

The CHAIRMAN. What did you mean by that?

Mr. KENNEDY. By what, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. What did you mean by that whole thing?

Mr. KENNEDY. What I just testified about, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Whitewater documents were subpoenaed?

Mr. KENNEDY. They were not.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you concerned about the subpoena?

Mr. KENNEDY. We did not anticipate a subpoena, Mr. Chairman. We did not anticipate a subpoena, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. If you did not anticipate a subpoena, why did you put that down?

Mr. KENNEDY. We did not have an expectation that a subpoena would be issued.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the question is, why did you write "Whitewater documents subpoena"?

Mr. KENNEDY. The discussion was that if a subpoena were issued, files that had once been at the Rose Law Firm would no longer be there, with regard to Whitewater.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe that, absolutely. Let's go over the next one. "Documents, never know go out," underlined. Is that what it says? Read it.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir. Asterisk, "Documents," with an arrow, "never know go out."

The CHAIRMAN. What did you mean by that?

Mr. KENNEDY. I was talking about how the Whitewater documents, and I am talking about the Whitewater corporate records as they relate to Whitewater as a corporation and with regard to the real estate—

The CHAIRMAN. Aren't you talking about the Rose Law Firm concerning documents?

Mr. KENNEDY. Rose Law Firm policy?

The CHAIRMAN. Wasn't there a policy?

Mr. KENNEDY. What policy, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. A policy that the documents would not go out? Did you hear the testimony of your former partner last week?

Mr. KENNEDY. Not all of it, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You heard the testimony relating to Mr. Foster coming to him and asking him to remove certain documents and to give them to him, the file? Do you remember that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This was unusual wasn't it?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well.

The CHAIRMAN. Weren't you the managing partner then?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You were the managing partner?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. Now wait a minute. I ask the questions.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, I understand that.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have a policy relating to what files and documents could or couldn't be removed from the firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't believe we had a written policy on it at that time, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have a policy?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, generally understood, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the policy?

Mr. KENNEDY. Without the client's consent, documents shouldn't be removed from the firm.

The CHAIRMAN. So, doesn't this refer basically to that policy, "Documents," arrow, "never know go out"?

Mr. KENNEDY. Absolutely not, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. What does it mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. It relates to the fact that there is—as far as I know, still is—a mystery about how the Whitewater documents—again I wish to stress these are the corporate records and real estate records relating to Whitewater as an investment—got from the Rose Law Firm to the campaign in 1992.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't know that your partner, Mr. Foster, had asked for them? You didn't know that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, these are apples and oranges. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't know that some of these—what about the billing records?

Senator SARBANES. Let him answer.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. Did you ask for the files on Madison?

Mr. KENNEDY. I did not.

The CHAIRMAN. Then how you did you know there were no files?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, you are confusing apples and oranges. I wish to state again, if you will allow me to answer, that what we are talking about here are the Whitewater records relating to Whitewater as a corporation and the real estate records to Whitewater's actual real estate. These did not relate to Madison files as they were described in Mr. Massey's testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know that Mr. Foster was looking for the Madison files?

Mr. KENNEDY. I was aware that Mr. Foster was looking for the Madison files during the 1992 campaign, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know he took them to the campaign?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I am not aware of that.

The CHAIRMAN. You were surprised when you heard for the first time last week that Mr. Foster took the files to the campaign?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I did not hear all of Mr. Massey's testimony. I don't know if he testified about that, about that as a fact or not.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know about this prior to last week?

Mr. KENNEDY. Know about what, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. That the Madison files were brought to the campaign committee and that Mr. Foster was the person who asked for them?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I was aware at the time that Mr. Foster was looking, on behalf of the law firm, at the Madison representation, so that the law firm could make a response to the issues that had come up in the campaign.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know that the campaign acquired possession of the files?

Mr. KENNEDY. I do not know that for a fact, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You still don't know that for a fact?

Mr. KENNEDY. I still don't know that the campaign actually got the Madison records.

The CHAIRMAN. You weren't aware they were removed?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you about the next line. You said, "Documents, never know go out," and then the next line is—

Mr. KENNEDY. Say that again, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. The next line, would you read the next line? There is a word that's underlined twice.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. I am waiting for this one.

Mr. KENNEDY. I bet you are. There is a long answer to this one.

The CHAIRMAN. Creative answer. Go ahead.

Mr. KENNEDY. Characterize it as you wish.

The CHAIRMAN. If it is what has been reported in the media through spokespeople, we will let the general public decide, as well as Members of the Committee.

Mr. KENNEDY. I am totally comfortable with that.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the next word?

Senator SARBANES. Let him respond.

Mr. KENNEDY. When I typed the—what is in front of you is the typed version of these notes. It was done at the request of my counsel, long before any of—either one of us knew that these notes would ever become public. It was done at the request of my counsel. This won't surprise anybody in this room. My handwriting is difficult to read. But it was done on a quick and dirty basis, it was not done with the expectation that I would be answering questions about these notes.

And as anyone who has examined them against the handwritten notes, the actual notes themselves, I dropped some lines, I left some words out. I did not do a perfect job.

One of the things that I have found most aggravating about the press reports and the commentary on these notes is, after the word "quietly" in the typewritten version there is a question mark, put there by me because I wasn't sure at the time whether the word was "quietly" or "quality."

That question mark has never appeared in anybody's commentary or in any press reports—that's something I have to live with—but that question mark is there. And the word is not "quietly," it is "quality." I have taken a magnifying glass, applied it to the originals and that is the word.

Now that ties in with the discussion about the quality of the Whitewater records that I once had in my possession, received from Mrs. Clinton.

The CHAIRMAN. "Vacuum Rose Law files." What does that mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. The words stand not as a complete sentence, Mr. Chairman, or not as even a complete phrase. The word "Vacuum" stands by itself. There is a space between it and "Rose files."

The CHAIRMAN. What does it mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. If you're referring to the handwritten notes.

The CHAIRMAN. What does it mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. As I previously testified, Mr. Chairman, it refers to the fact that surrounding the Whitewater, again the real estate investment, the Whitewater corporation, there was and is an information vacuum.

The CHAIRMAN. How much time did you spend discussing Whitewater during this meeting—no, I will withdraw that. We will get back to that later because we need more time to develop this. I have impinged on my colleague's time, and I will ask that he be given additional time and I will give additional time to this side.

Senator Bond.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER S. BOND

Senator BOND. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

I have some general comments I am going to make, perhaps later on, but what time has been allocated to me now?

The CHAIRMAN. The full 10 minutes and I will give to the other side the additional time. I think we used about 6 or 7 minutes so we will give 16 to 17 minutes to the other side.

Senator BOND. With that, let me go back and begin with some things I wanted to set out first, because a number of things have gone on, Mr. Chairman, there has been controversy around these hearings, and I wanted to clarify a few things before I actually get into the questions.

Now what we have before us are issues surrounding the so-called Kennedy notes requested by the Committee last fall. There was a claim by the White House of attorney-client privilege. We went to the full Senate to enable the Senate Counsel to go forward with the subpoena. Then, a couple of days afterwards, as a matter of fact, and I think on the Friday before Christmas, the documents were handed out along with annotations to the press. I assume that this action really ends any claim of privilege to the information so released to the press; is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN. That's correct.

Senator BOND. Second, over the past 10 days or so, the White House has discovered two long-lost documents, one the Watkins' memo dealing with the Travel Office firings and what may or may not be the First Lady's role; and the other, the Rose Law Firm billing records which have been under subpoena for 2 years; is that accurate?

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct.

Senator BOND. Third, the sudden discovery of long-lost documents coupled with what they actually say has attracted a good deal of attention from the investigators and the media. And I can tell you from being among the people I represent, they are beginning to ask to know what these documents mean and why they suddenly appear, or reappear.

But the thing that has been troubling to me—I saw in the Associated Press an article last week expressing concern about the possible political impact, the White House and the Democrats are vigorously counterattacking. This is something that we have seen, unfortunately, in this Committee when the White House put out talking points, used by both our colleagues in this Committee and on the other side, to savage Jean Lewis, the RTC investigator.

Now, Mr. Chairman, regrettably it appears that you've become the target this month. Some of the more polite quotes, I gather, they have called you a political assassin and this from a $500 an hour attorney who represents the President. And the White House itself has called you a classic political henchman. I'm sorry. I strongly disagree with those, but I take it, your critics are unhappy that the public is beginning to ask questions about that.

But I think the climax of all this occurred last Thursday as the Committee attempted to question Mr. Massey of the Rose Law Firm, to get at the bottom of how the Rose Law Firm came to represent Madison Guaranty as a client. In the middle of that testimony, I have seen reported that the Chairman of the Democratic National Committee read a prepared speech in which he called all of this activity the first salvo in the 1996 campaign, continued to lash out at what he called the Majority's recent outlandish allegations and innuendoes.

If this is the road we are going down, there are a few observations I think that need to be made for the record. The Senate has overwhelmingly voted to authorize the funding of this Committee and the scope of the investigation. I believe the vote was 97 to 2 with Senator Simon, a Member of this Committee, voting no, voting for the Resolution, and everybody said we want to get at the truth. In fact, our distinguished Ranking Member reemphasized the need for us to be thorough. He subscribed to the objective of fair, comprehensive, and thorough hearings.

But now as we enter the so-called Arkansas phase of this investigation, in which the actions of the President and the First Lady in their roles as Governor, Rose Law Firm partner and business partner of Jim McDougal in Whitewater are being developed, we are trying to determine what, if any, knowledge or involvement the Clintons' may have had with the various criminal activities, or perhaps liability in—incurring activities, were happening in which they were engaged with David Hale's SBA company, Capital Management Services and its illegal loans, or Jim McDougal's failed S&L, Madison Guaranty and its failed loans.

Now the questions we are trying to pursue are—Did they have any knowledge of these activities? Did the Clintons provide any assistance, either wittingly or unwittingly, in the perpetuation of fraudulent activities? Did they improperly pressure regulators to prop up a failing S&L, either in Washington or in Little Rock? Was there pressure applied to David Hale to make illegal loans to prop up the activities of Mr. McDougal? Were they aware of the illegal contributions made by McDougal to the Clinton gubernatorial campaign? What happened at the Bank of Perry Valley? Was their land deal, Whitewater Development, propped up illegally by diversion of funds from Madison? And were there tax write-offs improperly or illegally taken?

And then the thing that brought the controversy, how the sworn statements and the other public statements square with the facts and with the information that continues to be developed by this Committee.

I don't think anyone disputes that there was criminal activity at Mr. Hale's company, CMS. Then the trials of Mr. McDougal, Mrs. McDougal, and the current Arkansas Governor, Jim Guy Tucker, on conspiracy and fraud charges won't begin for a couple of months, there are other participants in Madison Guaranty who have been convicted.

I think people ought to understand that this Committee has been assigned a serious task by the Senate and has hired serious professionals to assist us in fulfilling the responsibilities. But given some of the comments, it is very disappointing to see that we are going from searching for the truth to not what I would call the first shots of the 1996 campaign, but perhaps by some a defend to the last ditch campaign of attack, and its ABC's are attack the messenger, blur the issues, create delays and diversions.

I think for this Committee to do the job right, we have to match up the written record, the testimony, and the actions of all the parties. Individual questioners should be skeptical of evidence and testimony, and must ask the probing questions that should be asked. As contradictions occur, we have to weigh the records made at the time, and judge the truthfulness of the witnesses, do they have a reason to lie; do they have a greater reason to tell the truth, and then make a judgment.

As time goes on and facts are ascertained, then I think we can draw some initial conclusions. But when memories continually fail at key junctures, and when documents appear after the fact, records are lost and then refound, people tell us they lied to their diaries, they don't recognize their own voice on tape recordings, don't remember their own notes, it becomes a little bit like a series of my dog ate the homework excuses.

I think that we need to pursue all of these questions, and there have been some very good questions, and I just refer to the questions last August that Senator Kerry asked of Bernie Nussbaum, some very persuasive and very important questions; that is, will they move the—the inquiry along, but last week we saw, instead of questioning, what appeared to be a counterattack, and an attack on you, Mr. Chairman, and I don't think that serves any purpose.

I am troubled that after all of the months and months of testimony, and reviewing the record, where there are some tremendously glaring differences, anytime anybody says there are glaring differences or questions the veracity of the witnesses, the public statements are characterized as outlandish or repugnant or vituperative. I think the time has come when we realize there are some very serious issues here which, if they are not being considered very carefully by the Special Counsel, which I hope they are, need to be aired out and need to be brought in public so that we can find out what, in fact, was going on in the White House.

I didn't ask for the assignment to be on this Committee, I have plenty of other things to do. But I think that we ought to stay on the track without attacking Members of this Committee when they pursue legitimate lines of questions, and demand answers to those questions.

I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Simon.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL SIMON

Mr. SIMON. Thank you, Senator Sarbanes, Mr. Chairman.

Just a few comments and then I will yield the balance of my time to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Number one, when we start asking questions about the Travel Office, that's not within the jurisdiction of this Committee. I am not saying it is not a proper question for some Committee to ask, but that's not part of our responsibility.

Number two, when my friend and colleague, Senator Kit Bond, says that we received information on Jean Lewis from the White House, my belief is—and I would stand to be corrected by either Senator D'Amato or Senator Sarbanes—my belief is that is not accurate, that the information we received on Jean Lewis came as a result of a subpoena from this Committee, not any information that was leaked to us from the White House.

Senator BOND. Mr. Chairman, if I might satisfy my colleague's concern. The Associated Press—

The CHAIRMAN. With the indulgence of my colleague—

Senator BOND. —reported the information—the 4-, 5-page document on how to attack Ms. Jean Lewis was put out by the White House, or ABC.

Senator SARBANES. Not put out to this Committee or to the Members of this Committee.

Senator BOND. It was put out by the White House.

Senator SARBANES. Not to us. The Senator mentioned the House and then he mentioned this Committee and the Members of this Committee, and the latter part of that statement is not correct.

Senator BOND. But what I said was it was used, and it was put out by the White House as identified by ABC. I apologize.

Senator SARBANES. Not used by us. It wasn't part of our effort.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me clear that up, if I may, Senator—

Senator BOND. I can't jump into your minds. I can tell you that ABC did point out that the attack sheets were put out by the White House.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Whatever might have been put out by the White House, let me assure you now publicly, Senator Bond, as I did privately previously when you first raised this, that, as far as the Minority preparation is concerned, I have been doing this kind of work for more than 25 years, and good, bad, or indifferent as my reviews may be, the work was our work, and it was not received from anybody else.

Senator Simon is correct that we had received information which formed the basis for cross-examination of Ms. Lewis on the basis of subpoenas and requests for information. And indeed at the end of the day, Senator D'Amato congratulated the Republican U.S. Attorney, Mr. Banks, for resisting the pressure Ms. Lewis had put on his office to try to initiate some kind of inquiry that would be publicized prior to the 1992 election.

Let me tell you and reassure you, Senator Bond, as I have before, that the work that this Committee has done, on the Minority side, is our work and ours alone.

Senator BOND. Mr. Ben-Veniste, that just leads me to another thing that's been bothering me. Could you provide for the record or advise us precisely what steps you took or were taken at your direction to recover from the tape or the disks, or whatever is used in those machines, by Ms. Lewis, the letter in which she made disparaging comments and which was utilized extensively in cross-examination? How did you manage to get that off of supposedly an erased tape?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, there is a whole book out now that is called the White House E-mails which is a compendium of all the E-mails that were collected from the Bush Administration and were used in the Iran-Contra and other investigations. And Joseph DiGenova in his report, relating to the Passport Office investigation, similarly reports at some length that E-mail that has been deleted can be recovered if there is nothing that's recorded over it. Similarly—and although people who know me know that it was not me personally who pressed the button that says undelete—that's all it takes to get a message that somebody has deleted.

In this case, we made every effort to refresh the witness's recollection, not to bring out anything in the content of that letter that might be embarrassing to the witness, only the evidence of pre-existing bias.

Senator SIMON. Mr. Chairman, I may need a minute or two extra here.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator SIMON. When Senator Bond and others said memories continue to fail, I completely understand. When Mr. Eggleston says

I can't remember on a meeting 2 years ago, and we go through the same thing on phone calls that people make, 2, 2½ years ago, I think it is understandable. If someone asked me about a meeting 2 years ago, or any Member of this Committee, I think we are frequently not going to be able to remember details of a meeting 2, 2½ years ago.

Then finally, ultimately, we are going to have to make some judgments. I think there are two basic questions: One, has the White House used good judgment in reluctance to disclose certain notes and information? And here, my conclusion is that some good judgment was not used, and that the White House would have been wise to be very candid, very up front, right at the beginning.

Then there is a second fundamental question, and this is one the American people are very much interested in: Has there been illegal or unethical conduct on Whitewater, by either President Clinton or Hillary Clinton? And there, my conclusion on the basis of all these days of testimony and mountains of documents, is there has been, so far as we know, no illegal or unethical activity on the part of the President or Mrs. Clinton.

I yield the balance of my time to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, let me just say that I hope Senator Bond's statement is meant to get the Committee on a course of a fair and thorough and objective inquiry. What has been happening here, as Anthony Lewis pointed out in The New York Times over the weekend—I ask that his article be included in the record—is a constant stream of accusations. We are told that the documents are going to show something terrible or a witness coming before the Committee is going to show something terrible, then they come before the Committee, and there is no smoking gun there. It is not borne out by the testimony, and of course that never catches up with the initial assertion.

I made a strong plea the other day that we ought to get the facts first, and judgment later. We have seen a constant process of judgment first. And then when we comment here before the witness table to get the facts, we find that the judgment was not warranted by the facts. The facts don't support the judgment.

We have Mr. Kennedy here today. He has given his view of what his notes meant. It was asserted and widely disseminated that he had said that the Rose Law Firm ought to be vacuumed, in terms of they ought to be cleaned out. Now, he has testified unequivocally here today that that was not the case; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. Absolutely, Mr. Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. So his testimony is that the use of the word "vacuum" was to point out there was a vacuum in the Rose Law Firm, that this information was not there and not available.

He wrote the notes and this is his explanation. Now, you know, in any event, a careful inquiry would not have presumed an interpretation and broadly disseminated it. A careful inquiry would have awaited the testimony about what those notes meant, and we have seen repeated examples of that occur. And I think to the extent that it occurs, it undermines the commitment of this Committee to do a fair and balanced and objective inquiry.

Now, you can launch an attack, and of course, that's being done, but on the other hand, it seems to me our basic responsibility to the American people is to get out the facts and to find out whether there is anything there. And this drumbeat of accusations, which are highly hyped and publicized, then we have this thing where Kendall returned these Madison files, it was then asserted where they had come from Foster's office.

So we went through a period of time where this assertion was constantly being made, carried heavily in the press. It finally turned out they didn't come from Foster's office. They came from the documents that were turned over by Hubbell to Mr. Kendall.

Then you shift off into something else. Now, we are going through this constant process, but it seems to me that if we are going to do our job right, we need to get the facts first and then make the judgments, and not the other way around.

The CHAIRMAN. In fairness to everyone, I believe it is accurate to say, notwithstanding the heavy burdens that may be placed upon the White House, that we have not had the kind of cooperation that this Committee or any Committee of Congress is entitled to. It should not have taken us many months to obtain these diaries, and we should not have needed to go to the Senate Floor to vote for enforcement.

Now the cause of this is the withholding of information, whether intentionally or unintentionally. It is indeed inconsistency of testimony concerning records, recordings, and observations that one should reasonably be expected to recall, given highly-charged situations. You don't attend a meeting on November 5th with the highest level White House officials and was assigned to gather critical information that concerned the participants in the meeting, and then, Mr. Eggleston, fails to recollect what he did with documents, and just tells this Committee that he was happy that he hadn't given them because 2 days later, he learned from the Justice Department that that would have been improper.

You say that they were not concerned about the company which Mr. McDougal's wife controlled and the $300,000 loan, but obviously, that was a matter of great concern because the notes indicate that they discussed what accusations were made and where that money may have gone. I think, Mr. Eggleston, Counsel has a right to be very—and certainly I am—skeptical about your testimony today.

Given the importance of that event, I don't believe an Associate Counsel to the White House charged with these responsibilities treats this matter lightly. If you hadn't gone over there personally, if you had sent a messenger, I would understand. But you went over personally, and you were tasked with this responsibility obviously. The records indicate that you thought these matters were important, and now you want the Committee to believe that these matters were not of great concern and you just kind of stood there.

So it is the failure to recall, repeatedly, not by one, but by the inner sanctum of the White House that concerns this Committee. It is the failure to produce in a timely manner documents and evidence that may or may not be exculpatory.

Senator BOND. Mr. Chairman, when did we receive this letter, the Bruce Lindsey call list, S 12604?

The CHAIRMAN. Sunday.

Senator BOND. Didn't we request that back in August?

The CHAIRMAN. August 25th. This is what takes place. It dribbles in, and then we are led to believe that it was just found. So, I yield.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think we just had an example of what I was talking about. You stated that Mr. Eggleston was assigned to gather information at this November 5th meeting. Now, Mr. Eggleston has testified at the table this morning that that was absolutely not the case. I listened carefully and that's what you testified to Mr. Eggleston.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Senator Sarbanes, I was not assigned at that meeting to gather any information and I did not seek the SBA documents as a result of anything that occurred on November 5th.

The CHAIRMAN. Then why did you become involved with that? You just decided to send for these records, based on your own—it wasn't as a result of the meeting where you decided to gather certain information so that you could respond?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It was not as a result of that. And as I testified last time, the reason I did it is that I was asked by Mr. Nussbaum to do it after the article appeared on November 6th.

The CHAIRMAN. Are we going to quibble? The day after you are tasked by Mr. Nussbaum to go and do this; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It is not correct.

The CHAIRMAN. It wasn't?

Mr. EGGLESTON. The article appeared the next day, as I testified last time. I was asked later during the week of November 8th by Mr. Nussbaum. What I am quibbling about with you, sir, is your indication that I just took this upon myself.

The CHAIRMAN. No, I didn't say that you took it upon yourself. I think you were assigned this.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I was assigned it during the week of November 8th by Mr. Nussbaum. I was not assigned it at the meeting on November 5th.

The CHAIRMAN. Well——

Mr. EGGLESTON. Nothing in the handwritten notes makes——

The CHAIRMAN. You were assigned a task of gathering that information. Whether that specific assignment came on the 5th or 3 days later or 4 days later from Mr. Nussbaum who was a participant, I think, is a kind of thing that is disingenuous. You were tasked with gathering this information.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, in all fairness, given what has been said about the meeting of November 5th, the allegations that have been made about it, it is a very important point that no assignments were made at that meeting, at least according to Mr. Eggleston, to gather information. Now that is contrary to press statements that have been made and allegations that have been waved around. We have to take these things one at a time and tie them down so we don't keep sliding off of them in terms of what happened.

Mr. Eggleston has testified that once this press story appeared, that these matters were going to the House Committee, provided to them by the Small Business Administration, that they were then interested in knowing about it to respond to what they anticipated would be leaks and press inquiries. Obviously, the press has an incredible power. It seems to drive a lot of these things.

What happens is Gerth calls you up and says, this, this, and this happened. Now no one knows whether this, this, and this happened. Gerth is getting these allegations, and then people start scrambling to try to answer the allegations. So the press is always about 10 steps ahead of them. We have no testimony here today that this assignment took place at the meeting and we have allegations leading up to this testimony that that's what happened.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say——

Senator SARBANES. It's important to identify that, isolate it, and answer it. Then we'll go on and try to answer the next one.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm attempting to find out the truth about what happened at the meeting, what recordings Mr. Kennedy made and then what followed. I think it's difficult for this Committee and this Chairman to believe that everything happened as a result of the direction from that meeting, and that there weren't subsequent meetings and subsequent instructions, maybe with only some of the participants. Indeed, Mr. Eggleston himself says thereafter, Mr. Nussbaum, who was his boss and who was at the meeting, told him to get on top of this and to get these documents. Now, I don't think that is an unfair characterization.

Mr. EGGLESTON. May I respond?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, you may.

Mr. EGGLESTON. He asked me after the newspaper story reported that they were being given to Congress. It was after the newspaper story said they were being given to Congress that I followed up, and it was that fact that caused me to follow up with the SBA. If that had not happened, I never would have called the SBA because of the reason I talked about earlier, which is that we weren't—people in the White House did not get into that kind of mode.

The question I asked Mr. Spotila, and he testified to it when he was here, was did I ask him whether, since it was given to Congress, would it be appropriate to give them to the White House? Now, that's me, it's Mr. Spotila. I think you have evidence where Mr. Stephens had said that.

That was the trigger. It was nothing to do with the November 5th meeting. You can just say it was, Mr. Chairman, if you like, but it was not.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, I've attempted to characterize this as fairly as possible, giving you the benefit of the fact that you testified that after the meeting on the 6th, the 7th, the 8th, or whenever, you called Mr. Spotila for this information.

It troubles the Senator that the notes indicate the importance of this and that you had documents and that you wanted to get them over there, and yet you can't recall following through on this, and say that the matter just died. And you would lead us to believe that the documents were there and somehow then were returned.

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Now wait, no, no. You are not conducting the investigation.

Mr. LINDSEY. You've accused——

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lindsey, I have not addressed with you this matter yet, so you'll have an ample opportunity to make your observations.

Mr. LINDSEY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I will give you every opportunity to make your observations, but I'm suggesting, given the records—and by the way, we find repeatedly records indicating important conversations, meetings that are set up and then we have no recollection about what took place at the meeting, or whether the scheduled meeting even took place.

In this case, I will say, it said, "drop by at 6 p.m." But we have even had testimony where people have been asked to come to the White House, and where the records indicate, in Susan Thomases' case, that she turned up at the White House, and was on the third floor of the White House, the personal residence of the White House, and guess what? She has no recollection. So it is a pattern surrounding key events, key documents. It is not just an isolated example of memory failure.

That is distressing. So I just suggest to you that there is an element of concern rightfully expressed by this Committee.

I am going to turn to Mr. Chertoff so that we can continue our examination.

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Chairman, may I make a comment?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, you may.

Mr. LINDSEY. You, in effect, I believe, accused Mr. Eggleston and I of lying so—

The CHAIRMAN. I have not in effect. I am saying that the record indicates that there was an—

Mr. LINDSEY. Well—

The CHAIRMAN. The record indicates at least two communications, if not more. It indicates a certain sense of urgency. It indicates that at 11:30 a.m. a request was made or Mr. Eggleston was advised the documents were ready for him—

Mr. LINDSEY. And the conclusion—

The CHAIRMAN. And that—look—

Mr. LINDSEY. Go ahead.

The CHAIRMAN. Yours is not to summarize.

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Chairman, I was—well, all right.

The CHAIRMAN. Please do not do it. You have plenty to answer to and we will get to that.

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, but—

The CHAIRMAN. We'll get to you specifically.

Mr. LINDSEY. I'm sorry. You indicated I could respond, and as I started to—

The CHAIRMAN. I will give you an opportunity, but I have not accused you of anything, I am only indicating that this is what the record demonstrates. When Mr. Eggleston says to this Committee that personally going over should not be—I believe it demonstrates the importance to pick up this file, which he described as a foot thick, to bring back this file, to certainly place a call unless your secretary made up the fact that the call was placed, we don't believe that nor have you suggested that, and this would be an accurate reflection of the message left; is that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And afterwards, it becomes very difficult to believe that this matter was dropped between the hour of 4:58 and 6 p.m., when he indicated that he would drop by to discuss it. That is the point I am making. I am not challenging your assertion, Mr.

Lindsey. The question is what, if anything, came up within the course of that 1 hour that no longer necessitated this becoming a matter of urgency. And it is difficult to believe those sequence of events, given the records and not the testimony.

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Chairman, your point there—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think that's not fair. I mean, this is the whole point we're trying to make here. Eggleston has testified, Lindsey ought to be given a chance.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to give him an opportunity—

Senator SARBANES. A chance to respond.

The CHAIRMAN. What are you saying is not fair, Senator? I am giving him an opportunity. I wanted to outline—

Senator SARBANES. He has been trying to get at it for some time. I think he should go ahead and have it.

The CHAIRMAN. He will not characterize what I have said before I have an opportunity to lay it out here. And I'm going to give him that opportunity. Go ahead.

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Chairman, your comment that it's difficult to believe means that you don't believe it, and I'm telling you, I have stated that I do not believe I saw these records. Mr. Eggleston has said he has a clear recollection that he did not share them with me.

Therefore, you now say you're concerned about what happened between 4:58 and 6 p.m. My suggestion was that you were saying at 6 p.m. he did come show me these records. He did not.

The point is you have seen the records, I have not. Why would we want to lie about that? Is there anything in the records that he would have shown me? We've testified to a lot of things. You're suggesting that we would come to this Committee and lie about something that, as far as I know, there is no basis for us to. If he had shown me, I don't think there would have been any problem. The people who have looked at the records have indicated that there is nothing in the records of any concern.

So to suggest that, gratuitously, we would just come up here and tell the Committee something that was false without any sort of basis as to suggesting why we would do that, is unfair, I believe.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lindsey, I don't know why many things have been withheld and why many witnesses have made many statements to this Committee which have demonstrated in many instances, I think, a lack of candor, but that's why we question this. I heard your explanation and I'm now going to ask Mr. Chertoff to examine.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Eggleston, I want to take it step-by-step. You indicated to us earlier in the hearing that you did review the documents that came from the SBA; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you saw in those documents there were documents relating to David Hale lending money to Susan McDougal, who was a partner in the Whitewater venture; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Today—I think so. I think there was one line.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, there are documents in there about it so you must have seen it; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. If there are—I reviewed the documents. If it's in there I probably saw it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There are documents in there about Castle Water & Sewer so you had to see that.

Now let's go back to November 5. On November 5 you are in a meeting with Mr. Nussbaum, Mr. Lindsey, Mr. Kennedy, and Mr. Kendall, who was to start as the private attorney for the Clintons regarding what are potentially criminal investigations; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. At the time of the McDougals and possibly Jim Guy Tucker.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. So you are in there on November 5, and on November 5 one of the notes—all over the notes are discussions with David Hale, asked for records of Capital Services Management, what David Hale has accused the President of, which is trying to get money over to Jim McDougal by pressuring Hale. There are direct references in the notes to Hale making a $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal, what Jim McDougal says.

You understand, from your experience as both a prosecutor and a defense attorney, that when you have all these—this information floating around, these allegations, one of the most important things that a defense attorney wants to know is, what is there in the file about David Hale, what is there in the file about what David Hale did with Susan McDougal, what is there in the file about what David Hale did with the money, what is there in the file about what David Hale did with Bill Clinton. And that was the principal topic of conversation you all had on November 5; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No? No, it's not all over the records?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, that ultimately wasn't your question. Your question to me was, was that the principal topic of conversation?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it one of the principal topics?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It was a topic we had discussed because it had been in the newspaper the last couple of weeks.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you know, from having a lot of experience as a lawyer, one of the things you want to do is verify whether the newspaper stories are true, and what better way is there to do it but than to get records. So now your testimony is within a day or so afterwards, there is a story about SBA records going to Congress; correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Mr. Nussbaum, who sat in the same meeting with you, where Mr. McDougal's name was mentioned, where the $300,000 loan was mentioned, where David Hale was mentioned, calls you in and says to you, go find out what happened with these documents, go see if you can get hold of the documents; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, he doesn't tell you to go—

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think I testified to that before. He asked me to follow up on the matter, not to specifically get the documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He asked you to follow up on the matter of the SBA files going to Congress, and you understood, because you had had discussions about it a few days earlier, that this was all about David Hale and the accusations Hale had made against the Clintons and the loans that Hale had made; right? Because you talked about it 2 days before.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I understood it from the newspapers as well as the meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you had a meeting about it, you didn't understand it just from reading the newspapers. You had sat down with a bunch of other lawyers, including lawyers from Williams & Connolly, to discuss these allegations; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now when you testified in your deposition here, you were asked questions about what was your state of mind before you got those documents from the SBA. You didn't mention any meeting like this about—in which it had come up, did you?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I have not reviewed my deposition. But I don't think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll review it for you. On pages 13 and 14, and I think we have given you a copy of your deposition.

Question: Do you recall that at some time you became aware that Mr. Hale was indicted?

Answer: Sure. I have no idea when.

Question: OK. Do you recall whether you had any discussions regarding the indictment with any member of the White House staff?

Answer: I don't recall.

Question: For example, do you recall having any discussions with Mr. Nussbaum?

Answer: I mean, I don't recall. I mean, I am not telling you I didn't, because I think it's highly likely that I did.

But I don't remember any conversations with him about the indictment of Hale.

Question: OK.

Answer: I would not have thought, actually, if you hadn't told me, if you had asked me when I thought Hale got indicted, I would have said sometime in early 1994.

Question: OK.

Answer: So, so I am just, that is the state of my recollection of this whole thing.

Question: OK. Do you recall becoming aware that Mr. Hale was making allegations involving President Clinton and Jim Guy Tucker?

Answer: Yes, I remember that from the press.

Question: Do you recall having any discussions with any members of the White House staff regarding those allegations?

Answer: Not specifically.

Then you go on to say later, at pages 19 and 20:

Answer: I mean, I can't tell you when I was assigned, because I don't know that I can tell you that I was ever formally assigned to do it.

And this was a matter that, until Christmas of 1993, was very episodic. I mean, it was hardly in the press until Christmas of 1993. Right before Christmas of 1993 it began to be a substantial press issue and then remained a substantial press issue until I left. So, so, I mean, this is my recollection.

So I really was minimally involved until around Christmas. And then I became more involved around Christmas.

What we know now, Mr. Eggleston, is that on November 5, you sat with a bunch of lawyers, including criminal defense lawyers, and discussed the allegations; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you called Spotila up to say is there anything wrong with me getting the documents, did you say, you know, John, I have actually been involved in joint defense meetings with the criminal defense lawyers about this subject?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't mention that to him?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you mention it to the Department of Justice in December when the Department of Justice came in to interview you about the reason that you had gone to get the documents?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Not that I recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when the Department of Justice, as Mr. Ben-Veniste read, said that they determined that this was innocent and the motives were innocent, they didn't know about the November 5th meeting, did they?

Mr. EGGLESTON. They did not know about the November 5th meeting from me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't tell them about it?

Mr. EGGLESTON. They did not know about it from me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't mention in the deposition here that you had been actively involved in discussions about the Hale matter as early as November 5th; correct? Because I just read you the deposition.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I understand that on November 5 you didn't know that there were documents on the way to Congress, but within a few days you find out about those documents; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Nussbaum says follow up; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you do follow up?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You call Mr. Spotila and he sends you a fax?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that afternoon you go over and you actually pick up the documents?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have two communications, two efforts to communicate with Mr. Lindsey on that day about these documents having to do with David Hale and Capital Management; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, that appears to be true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. There's an earlier message you leave before you go to get the attachments; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That appears to be true from the records.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have no reason to deny or dispute it?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I have not denied or disputed it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You go and get the records. And when you come back, you reach out for Mr. Lindsey again; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That would appear to be true from the records.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In your mind, you knew when you got these documents that Mr. Lindsey was the same Mr. Lindsey who had sat in the meeting with you where you were all trying to figure out what was going on with Capital Management and what was going on with David Hale? You knew he had the same state of mind you did because you had both sat in this joint criminal defense meeting together; correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. We had definitely both sat in the same meeting together.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Together with the attorneys retained by the Clintons to handle privately the issue of a criminal investigation; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you indicate in the message that it's important to go over the Whitewater documents; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That's what the record reflects.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood from your meeting on November 5 that there was a relationship between the Capital Management investigation and Whitewater because some of the money from Capital Management wound up in Whitewater; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember that today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was discussed——

Mr. EGGLESTON. If it's in the notes, I'm not disputing it. I don't remember that today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you won't dispute the fact that the notes indicate that there was a $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal and that Jim McDougal says it was to purchase land in Pulaski County from International Paper and then it went 2 months later from White-water Development to Great Southern Land Development Company? It's on page S 12532, it was in the notes.

Mr. EGGLESTON. I could look. It sounded like you were reading from the notes. I don't dispute that the notes are accurate.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, we talk about memory. You testified earlier when we were questioning you that because shortly after you got the documents, there was an issue raised where there was a problem—the Department of Justice wanted the documents back. You said this actually was a pretty vivid memory in your mind; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That I had not shown the documents to Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because the whole episode created a problem in terms of the Department of Justice within a matter of days after you got the document; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then the FBI came in and they questioned you in December?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's not a happy experience for anybody; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. It's become quite common for people working in the White House, actually.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sure it has. And that tends further to make this incident, which as of November and December of 1993 was—all this had happened within 2 months. At that point it's frozen in your mind as an important event; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Well, that it was a problem—I mean, I don't know exactly what you're asking me to say. Yes, I mean, I remember this was a problem. I had created a problem and I was sorry that I created a problem, and I remember it as a result of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it became a memorable event; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Parts of it became a memorable event, yeah. I am not telling you that every little thing that I did—I do not today—and you can criticize me if you want to for not remembering this—I do not remember leaving Mr. Lindsey's secretary a note—a message to give to him. I don't remember it, and I don't think I remembered it then. And I just don't remember that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is where we are. The problem is when you testified last time and when you talked to the FBI, your position was because of press inquiries, Mr. Nussbaum told you to follow up on this, you get the documents, you kind of look through them, you are not really that interested once you see that the Clintons aren't there and you put it in a box and put it aside until the Department of Justice comes back to you.

In your testimony in your deposition, which I have read to you, you indicate that really, until Christmas, you're not really involved, you kind of have a knowledge from press stories about this stuff with Hale, but that the documents don't mean anything to you.

But when you look at the notes, what you see is that again and again the people in the conversation on November 5, which include you and Mr. Lindsey and Mr. Nussbaum, who were the people who a week later are talking about getting the documents from the SBA, you see again and again questions come up with this whole issue with Hale and where did the money go and what is Hale saying. And you know from your experience that when these things come up in a joint defense meeting, what you want more than anything else is to find out what is in the Government's files.

So you then go out within 2 weeks at Mr. Nussbaum's direction to follow up, you get the files, you pick them up yourself, you leave a message for Mr. Lindsey telling him that it's important, and then you turn it back to the Department of Justice because they raised a hue and cry about it.

When you look at all of these things together, you understand it suggests a much greater degree of purposefulness and seriousness than is suggested by just the notion that it's a routine response to press inquiries.

My final question to you is this, because we have heard this again and again, the Department of Justice didn't raise an issue about that, they said this was innocent, Mr. Spotila said there was no problem with it. The fact is you did not tell Mr. Spotila or the SBA, and you did not tell the FBI that when you had ordered these documents, you had within 2 weeks earlier, sat at a joint defense meeting with private attorneys representing the President with respect to a criminal investigation to discuss matters of concern for those private attorneys, including those attorneys interested in trying to find out what's going on in the investigations, you did not tell that to the FBI or to Mr. Spotila, did you?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Nothing further.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Can I comment?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Not only did I not tell him, I also didn't give them the documents, show any of the documents or anything about the documents to the private attorneys. I was not getting this—I told you the purpose of this November 5th meeting was to make sure everybody was wearing the right hat, and we could do the things that we could do and the private lawyers could do the things that they could do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you read——

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't mean to—I listened to you for a long time and let me just give my response.

This was something that I thought that we in our public capacity could do. It was not something that I thought that I was going to share with Mr. Kendall, and I did not share it with Mr. Kendall. So you've come to a big conclusion, but the conclusion isn't there. I did not share this material—let me just finish.

I mean, the purpose of this meeting, as I understood and described it earlier, was to make sure that everybody was acting in their own appropriate sphere. And when the meeting was over, Mr. Kendall had his activities that he could follow up and there were things that we could follow up, and following up on press inquiries was one of the things that I thought that we should do.

I did not show these documents to Mr. Kendall. I did not get these documents as part of a joint defense arrangement. When I got them, I did not show them to Mr. Kendall. I have to emphasize, I think it would have been perfectly appropriate for me to show these documents to Mr. Lindsey. It looks like I tried to show these documents to Mr. Lindsey.

There is a major distinction here. When I went to get the documents, I didn't know what they were, I didn't know what they said, I didn't have any idea what was in the documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you knew what the subject matter was, that it had to do with the subject matter that had come up in the joint defense meeting within 2 weeks before; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Well, I knew that it dealt generally with the subject matter of David Hale.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you went over yourself to pick it up; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I went over myself to pick it up. I didn't know at the time what was in the documents.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You could never know. You reviewed it; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Could I give my answer and then you can ask me whatever questions you want?

When I went to get them, I didn't know what was in the documents. You are focusing a lot of attention on this joint defense meeting. The fact is, particularly by the time of November 16, there was much more in the press. I mean, what we basically talked about in this joint defense meeting were the allegations that had come out of the press. This isn't some independent source of knowledge that was going on. And there was even more activity through the press by November 16.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't—

Mr. EGGLESTON. I'm sorry. I know I'm giving a long answer but—so that when I was giving—when I was seeking to get them, I was doing it under, in my capacity as Associate Counsel at the White House, I believed it was proper. And I think there would have been nothing wrong with me showing them to Mr. Lindsey, and as I say, indeed it looks like I probably tried to, which would have been perfectly appropriate, I believe.

I think he wasn't there, I think something happened where I didn't get him, I don't know, I don't remember why he wasn't there but I think something happened that precluded me from showing them to him. And it turned out that, after I had reviewed the documents, they weren't very important, they were not very significant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But—

Senator MURRAY. Mr. Chairman, may I ask a procedural question? I have been waiting for my 10 minutes time and the school has asked that we pick up their kids so they don't walk home, and if I don't do it in the next few minutes here—

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to ask Counsel to hold it down. He has one more question and we'll go right to the Senator.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But Mr. Eggleston, you didn't, after November 5, create separate spheres in which Mr. Kendall was going to be working on his own matters and you were going to be working on your own, because within 5 days thereafter, Mr. Kendall sent you a copy of a chronology he had prepared as part of his representation to the private client, which was found in your files, so there was a continued exchange of information.

You didn't take yourself out, am I not correct, you didn't then say after November 5, look, I'm going to separate myself from Kendall, I'm going to make sure that none of the information I get as a Government official is going to get over to Kendall because I'm going to create an ethical wall between us. You continued to deal with Kendall, you continued to have conversations with Kendall. Kendall gave you a chronology which more or less told you some of the things he was interested in, because it' laid out in the chronology which is dated November 10, you got the chronology; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I must have. I heard it was found in my files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Doesn't the chronology talk about Hale and what Hale claims and the $300,000 loan, so even after November 5, there wasn't a parting of the ways or passing of the torch? What happened is everybody lit the same torch and went on carrying it; isn't that right?

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, this is not fair to Senator Murray, I have to say. Mr. Chertoff is spinning out all these theories. He's entitled to do that. Mr. Eggleston is entitled to reply to them because Mr. Chertoff is making an incredible number of assumptions. I think we should go to Senator Murray and let her have her time, and then Mr. Eggleston ought to get an opportunity to respond to this litany that Mr. Chertoff has been setting out.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say in fairness—could I see that? Could I see that chronology? I don't know how long—

Senator SARBANES. We can come back to that. Why don't we let Senator Murray have her turn.

The CHAIRMAN. We will. I don't know how long we've had this chronology but I think it speaks much about what Mr. Eggleston has testified to, and we will examine that.

And one of the reasons we went over, and I know that my colleague understands that, and because both Mr. Lindsey and Mr. Eggleston want to have opportunities to expand upon, as they should, some of the answers and some observations that the Committee has made, so let's turn—and I apologize to the Senator for the delay, and I thank her for her patience.

Senator Murray.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR PATTY MURRAY

Senator MURRAY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

And I do have a few questions for the witnesses. I do want Mr. Eggleston to respond but I did want to come today and make a statement and a few comments, first of all, to express my optimism, Mr. Chairman, that you will be able to work with our Ranking Member in order to complete this Committee's work in a fair and expeditious manner by next month's deadline.

Mr. Chairman, in general I feel that this Committee in the past has been very successful in working on a bipartisan basis in order to find answers to many questions that, quite frankly, have troubled all of us. I do think, however, it is timely to remind this Committee not to lose sight of its mission.

The American people understand the role of this Committee. They want us to ask tough questions and they want us to pursue this investigation in a responsible manner. And if there is any wrongdoing, they certainly want to know the facts and they want us to make recommendations once we have exposed them.

I agree with Senator Sarbanes that it should be facts first and judgment later, but Mr. Chairman, I think we should notice that many people are growing very tired of what they have seen lately, and unfortunately our constituents have watched this Committee become much more political and partisan since we first debated whether to subpoena Mr. Kennedy's notes.

Mr. Chairman, the Government was recently shut down for 21 days, the longest period of gridlock that's ever been imposed by politicians, and I feel it's important to raise that shutdown, even though the only thing it shares in common with this investigation is that they both come from Capitol Hill.

I spent a lot of time during the shutdown in my home State talking to my friends and my neighbors about their concerns, which mostly focused on the future of Medicare and Medicaid, and they wanted to know whether or not we were going to have a budget deal. Those were the issues they cared about. In fact, the Speaker of the House was in my State last week and he cast doubt on the likelihood of a budget compromise and that concerns me a great deal. As a Member of the Budget Committee, I know we have come a long way. I know a budget deal is possible and I am surprised that the Speaker was so willing to throw in the towel this late in the game. A budget deal is within reach and if we can reach a sensible one, we'll be doing something important for this country.

Against that very troubling backdrop, over the last few weeks in my State, was the ever souring tenor of this Committee's efforts, a tenor I believe is the cause for increasing concern. I'm concerned because it appears this Committee may be getting too far ahead of itself without the benefit of, at least for now, all the facts.

For the average person sitting at home watching the evening news, they could easily conclude by watching this Committee over the past few weeks that grievous crimes have been committed, facts and proof discovered, and punishment rendered. All of this could be derived from the sensational claims and statements made to the press.

I think it is very important to point out to everyone that this investigation is not yet over. It has been long for sure, and some think too long and too costly. We have put to rest Vince Foster's suicide, and we have completed the Washington phase of this investigation, but in the present phase, we have answered few, if any, questions.

It is time for us to move beyond the sound bites, Mr. Chairman, and ask the hard questions. I very much fear that partisanship will intrude into these hearings, especially as Presidential politics heat up, and I can tell you that the people in Washington State are already skeptical of these hearings.

This Committee cannot afford to lose the confidence of the American people, especially when they think their leaders are incapable of keeping the Government running, balancing the budget, and taking care of the issues people really care about.

Mr. Chairman, I urge this Committee to stay focused. We have done nearly 3 dozen days of hearings. We have deposed over 150 individuals, and we've heard testimony from more than 80 individuals, and that's commendable. We have worked hard and resolved many issues.

This Committee is entrusted to investigate some serious issues surrounding Madison Guaranty and Whitewater, and we should do so. If we stay true to that mission, I am confident this Committee can restore its bipartisan demeanor and complete its work on time. And I'm very hopeful that that will be the case.

Having said that, Mr. Chairman, I have one question I want to ask Mr. Kennedy and then we'll turn it over to Counsel.

Mr. Kennedy, on the top of your notes, both typewritten and handwritten, you have a note that reads, "Try to find out what's going on in investigation." Do you have that in front of you?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, I do, Senator.

Senator MURRAY. That line could potentially be perceived as very troubling if it meant that the White House staff was going to attempt to acquire confidential Government materials. Can you explain to this Committee for our information what you meant in writing that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Senator, the word is actually "investigations." That's one of the mistakes I made when I typed the notes up. This was a task list that Kendall sort of outlined for himself at the start of the meeting. It's the things that he needed to do or the things that he foresaw that his law firm would be needing to do as he began to represent the President and the First Lady.

Senator MURRAY. Are you aware of any efforts to track down information as it relates to any relevant Government investigations?

Mr. KENNEDY. I am not, Senator.

Senator MURRAY. Thank you. I'll turn it back over to Counsel.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Eggleston, as of early November, isn't it the case that Mr. Lindsey is the person who had been designated to answer press inquiries relating to Arkansas issues at the White House?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When you learned that Congressman LaFalce had requested documents from the Small Business Administration for this Committee and that was published in the newspaper, Mr. Nussbaum suggested that you ought to see or follow up on that.

If I understand your testimony, you contacted officials at the SBA to see whether it would be appropriate for them to share with the White House what they had given to Representative LaFalce; is that correct?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Having given the materials to Representative LaFalce, the understanding, as we have heard in testimony before this Committee by the officials of the Small Business Administration, was that at some point those documents might well become public. Did you understand that?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was it, in your view, a reasonable and legitimate interest of the White House prior to getting press inquiries or prior to the publication of any of these documents, for the White House to also have a look at them if it was deemed appropriate?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, that is the reason I made the call.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In calling Mr. Lindsey to let him know that you were in the process of obtaining and had obtained information from the Small Business Administration, were you following up on this matter with the person who you understood had been designated the chief press spokesman or liaison on such matters?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that must be true. I always hate to say, "I don't remember" in this forum because it always comes back at you with 10 times more force. I don't actually remember contacting Mr. Lindsey. I have a recollection of not talking to him about this, but the records sure indicate that I talked to him—not that I talked to him, that I talked to his secretary, and if I did, it's because, if the call was going to come in about these records, that call would no doubt come in to Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that the implication that has been ascribed, that there was some surreptitious and clandestine decision struck at this meeting that sent you out as an operative of Mr. Kendall to obtain sensitive information from Government agencies, is, according to the facts that you have testified to here under oath, not a reasonable or accurate description of the true events?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is not a quibble on your part that the motivation and direction to get the material was entirely appropriate from the standpoint of the White House being able to respond to press inquiries?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. On November 28, 1995—I believe you alluded to this in your earlier testimony—Mr. Teckler, an official of the Small Business Administration, testified before this Committee. At page 145 he responded to this question that I put to him:

Question: Having had the opportunity to review the report and the attachments thereto that were turned over to Mr. Eggleston and with the benefit of hindsight, do you identify any documents that were particularly sensitive?

Answer: No, I think we satisfied ourselves, and I think Mr. Spotila satisfied himself, prior to having sent the documents forward that there were no sensitive documents. We certainly are satisfied to that effect afterwards.

By me, "Is that correct, Mr. Spotila?" Mr. Spotila responded, "Yes, it is."

So that on the basis of your testimony, the documents which were requested were requested for a legitimate purpose at the White House, that you reviewed them, that the documents were unremarkable, that you did not for whatever reason show them to Mr. Lindsey although you felt it would be appropriate to do so, that the Small Business Administration and the Justice Department have said that the documents did not comprise any sensitive or remarkable information, and that having seen the documents, there was nothing impermissible about that and it did not impede the investigation.

Let me ask Mr. Lindsey one question with respect to the production of this telephone message that Senator Bond asked you about. Can you please describe the circumstances under which that telephone message was not delivered to the Committee prior to the time it was delivered 10 days ago or so?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir. I'm not sure what this Committee sent to the White House in terms of a subpoena or request. I received from the White House Counsel's Office I believe three separate requests, as they were discussing with you all the scope of the subpoena.

The first request I got, if I remember right, listed about 50 people on it, and asked for any communications or any documents reflecting communications I had with those individuals.

The second document I believe I got, or the second memorandum, had additional individuals that were—it was a smaller group of people that were being asked but I was being asked by some additional individuals.

I got a third request that asked for, and I am paraphrasing, memorandum, documents, dated or prepared before March 4, 1994, relating to, and then it said Whitewater, Madison, Rose Law Firm, and entities.

I understood at the time, or my understanding at the time was that since I had already gotten a request asking for communications with a whole series of people, that those were not asking for communications, they were asking for substantive documents relating to those subjects. I had already provided responses to over, I bet, 60 people.

In my deposition an issue came up about other documents, and I made some comment to my attorney—well, I'm not going to tell you what I said to my attorney, but anyway, I made some comment that I was concerned that we had not provided something that I remembered. We went back to the White House, had additional conversations with the White House Counsel's Office in which they indicated that their understanding of that last request would include telephone messages, even though they had already specifically asked me for telephone conversations with at least 50 people.

We then went back and found some additional documents that related to telephone—they simply reflect a telephone—or a communication, not a meeting and what I would not consider to be a document relating to—I would not consider that to be a document relating to Whitewater. The Counsel's Office took the position that we at least should turn it over because it might be—this Committee might consider it to be a document relating to Whitewater and we made that additional response.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right. So if I understand it, something that came up at the deposition led you to believe that perhaps this Committee was not in possession of a document that you remembered having seen, you went back and you checked, and although technically it might not have been called for, you made the determination to produce it.

Mr. LINDSEY. It wasn't even this document. It was an unrelated document that triggered it in my mind, but it triggered us going back and looking at the request again, trying to determine whether any of the request would include this type of document. Again, the Counsel's Office making a decision that, to err on the side of disclosure, that we would turn these additional documents over.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask one final question so that we put in context, lest there be speculation about whether you were not forthcoming or hiding the document from investigators, and so forth and so on. Had this particular phone record been produced to any other investigators?

Mr. LINDSEY. I understand that yes, I believe it has been produced to the House Committee in response to a request, and that's the only one I can be sure of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So clearly on the House side, they have already had this document and presumably for some period of time?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes. A lot of the requests asked for telephone logs, and—you know, and again the Senate requests, or at least what I saw, didn't ask for telephone logs, it—one request asked for communications with a whole series of people which I would—I took to include telephone logs. But when it asked for simply documents relating to these matters, I took that to be substantive documents, not telephone logs. If that was my error, I apologize.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I have some specific questions I want to get to with respect to some of the notes on the typewritten information that we have, but I do want to follow up on a couple of just kind of general areas. It would be my conclusion in looking at this—at least my understanding of the development of these notes, there was a meeting that took place, someone was charged with keeping information with respect to the points that were raised. And my own conclusion, frankly—and this is not judgmental, it's just a point that I would have thought would have been very natural—that once that document had been put together, that people in fact would be engaged in trying to flesh out some of the data with respect to the areas that were raised.

I gather from listening to the conversation this morning, that the attorneys in the crowd have indicated, well, some of that would be alright but some of that wouldn't. There was kind of a passing of the torch, saying now the Clintons' personal attorneys are going to take care of these things, but I think, Mr. Eggleston, you made reference to the fact that but there would be knowledge in the White House, and I think you pretty much indicated Mr. Lindsey would probably be the person who had most of that knowledge, you wouldn't ignore that.

So what I'm trying to get at here is, there are a lot of different points that were raised. I would assume that Mr. Lindsey and maybe some others were involved in developing some of the background information about some of these points. Is that a fair thing for me to conclude?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think there may have been issues that he learned about—you can probably tell from the documents that Mr. Lindsey learned a lot about a lot of these issues from listening to the press calling him and telling him what a lot of the facts were. But the point I was making is that the White House attorneys and other people were not going to be calling third-party witnesses.

Senator MACK. Internally, then, but you all would have been involved in gathering together what information you might have known about these various points. Is that—

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't think we did that in any sort of systematic way. I think we did it as—

Senator MACK. Again, I'm not trying to pin you down, was there, now that we concluded this meeting, did we give assignments to each of these points to everybody and it was worked through in a thorough way, but from time to time, over a period of time, various issues would come up relative to the points that were made on here and there were going to be certain people in the White House that would have been pursuing gathering of that information. Is that a reasonable conclusion?

Mr. EGGLESTON. If I could just answer that this way, this would come up usually when a press inquiry would come in. Somebody would call up and say how about such-and-such. They usually called Mr. Lindsey, and if he knew the information he might provide the information. There was no effort to go out—now, maybe others did it—but there was no effort that I know of to go out and sort of collect what the existing state of facts or knowledge was about. It was press response driven, as far as I know.

Senator MACK. And in these—I gather there were—

Mr. EGGLESTON. By the White House, I should say. I presume Mr. Kendall was probably doing what ordinary counsel did. But by the White House, it was press response driven, as far as I know.

Senator MACK. Then let me go to some specifics and maybe it might help me both understand how it worked, and also at the same time provide me some information with respect to some of the specifics in the notes.

Mr. Lindsey, if I could, let me engage you in this discussion, and I'm going to be referring to notes on page 12529, and I think that's the first page of the typewritten notes.

Mr. LINDSEY. Of the typewritten version, yes, sir.

Senator MACK. Yes. I want to go to the part that refers to HRC's representation of Madison, the Beverly Bassett part, and possibly even the "RLF—answered questions, did reconstruction."

I guess maybe I should start by asking this question. Are you familiar with what that was representing?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, in general.

Senator MACK. Could you tell me what were the points that were raised in that area of discussion?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir. One of the issues that came up in the 1992 campaign, frankly by Jerry Brown at a debate in Chicago, was that Mrs. Clinton was doing business with the State. In fact, I think he went so far as to say that her husband—that Mrs. Clinton's husband, the Governor, was getting business for her from the State. In connection with that, the issue of Madison's requests to the State Securities Commissioner, Beverly Bassett, now Beverly Bassett Schaffer, came up. We responded to these requests.

It turns out that the Rose Law Firm, on behalf of Madison, made a request, as I think Mr. Massey has testified to, to the State Securities Commissioner, to clarify whether or not, under Arkansas law, a savings and loan could issue preferred stock. The answer to that question was yes, they could.

Frankly, you know, there's a lot of question about whether or not the Rose Law Firm got preferred treatment. I have never seen anyone suggest any other interpretation of Arkansas law with respect to that issue.

In that letter, as you know, there's a reference at the bottom—it was signed by the Rose Law Firm but there was a reference to if you have questions, call either Hillary Clinton or Rick Massey.

Senator MACK. Would you hold your thought there for just a minute?

Mr. LINDSEY. Sure, absolutely.

Senator MACK. Mr. Kennedy, you were the managing partner of the firm at different—I had a question related to a policy.

Excuse me, just a minute.

The other day in Mr. Massey's testimony, I thought he made reference to, or I picked it up in some other document, as to why Hillary Clinton's name appeared in that letter. I thought I heard him say something about it was a policy of the firm to have the billing partner's name appear on that type of correspondence. Do you know whether that was, in fact, the policy of the firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. I wouldn't say it was a formal written policy but particularly for people situated where Rick was, sort of getting started and whatnot, they were expected to keep their supervisors, the billing partners, informed. And I think that that's what he was referring to primarily.

Senator MACK. Well, the way that it came across was that it was policy to have the billing partner's name appear to be in essence recognizable. It seemed to me, struck me as being much more than just informational, but again really, as far as you're concerned, there wasn't any written policy but it was kind of expected for associates to put the billing partner's—would the name, by the way, appear on those letters as the billing partner or was it satisfactory to you to just have the name appear in the body of the letter?

Mr. KENNEDY. Senator, you would not normally identify somebody as the billing partner, no, sir.

Senator MACK. Then what would be the benefit of having her name appear in the body of the letter as opposed to somebody who signed it?

Mr. KENNEDY. I am not sure that you would say that there was any particular benefit given or sought in that case.

Senator MACK. If we were to ask to look at information with respect to letters that the associates put out, would we find it was pretty consistent that billing partners' names would appear in those letters?

Mr. KENNEDY. If the billing partner was actively involved in the matter, actively undertaking a supervisory role, it would not be surprising at all to me, Senator, that you would see some consistency there.

Senator MACK. Well, I appreciate that.

Mr. Lindsey, if you would go on with your explanation, then.

Mr. LINDSEY. Anyway, the second matter had to do with then serving as a broker, if you will, for the placement of that preferred stock. My understanding is that Beverly Bassett indicated that under certain conditions they could do that but indicated that they needed to increase their working capital before that would be allowed. There were questions raised at the time because Beverly Bassett's brother, Woody Bassett, was an early and close, strong supporter of the Governor.

Senator MACK. How early and how close?

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, I believe going back to his first race, 1974, for Congress. That that relationship, that there was too much coziness there. And after the fact, the Rose Law Firm did answer questions with respect to this particular transaction.

Again, I assumed, though Mr. Kennedy may have been involved in this discussion at all, that I was walking through for Mr. Kendall what the various issues that had come up. This was clearly an issue; as you know, two Rose Law Firm letters to Beverly Bassett, listing what the two letters are. Beverly Bassett responded with the authority to do both. She had recently been appointed as Securities Commissioner, and so forth.

So I was simply relating to Mr. Kendall and to others there who had not followed that during the campaign, what that issue was and how we had responded to it during the campaign.

Senator MACK. I understand. Did you voice some concern, or did the group kind of have some concern with respect to whether they thought either there was the appearance of impropriety, or were you concerned about that at the time?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir. I've actually looked at the records. I believe that Beverly Bassett Schaffer took a more active role in trying to supervise Madison and—

Senator MACK. I'm not talking about her role. I'm talking about the role of the First Lady. I'm asking you the question, do you think if you had it to do over again, would you have advised that the First Lady shouldn't have done that? I realize this was not when she was the First Lady.

Mr. LINDSEY. I believe, in hindsight, if it would have taken this matter off the table, that all of us would have advised her. I don't think she would have required our advice.

Senator MACK. I was under the impression that she, in fact, made a point of trying to make sure that she did not represent clients before regulatory agencies.

Mr. LINDSEY. That is correct, and she, in fact, it is my understanding with respect to billings that came from the State, that she did not participate in those as well.

Senator SARBANES. Let's be clear about that because it is an important point but I think we want the record to be clear. My understanding is that she took herself out of the sharing in the proceeds that came to the Rose Law Firm from the Rose Law Firm representing State agencies.

Mr. LINDSEY. You are correct, I'm sorry.

Senator SARBANES. Which is a different point than the point that was just being made, as I understand it.

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Kennedy obviously would know.

Senator MACK. Let me get back to the point that I am pursuing anyway. The First Lady has, I think, responded on a number of occasions that she really made an effort to make sure that she didn't represent a client before a regulatory agency, in fact went to the extent that Senator Sarbanes has raised to clarify how billing would take place. In response to a question, though, as to why she had called Beverly Bassett, the response was that she had made that call for the purpose of just getting the name of an individual that the letter should be sent to.

I find it really, really tests my—well, I'm not sure exactly how to phrase this. It's difficult to believe that she would risk breaking down this wall of protection that she was trying to build around her to make a call for the purpose of finding out who to send a letter to? I mean, that just doesn't make sense to me.

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, again, I don't want to speak for her, she can certainly speak for herself, but my understanding was that as—this is a Securities Commissioner. In many States a Securities Commissioner does not have regulatory authority over the State S&L's. In Arkansas they do, I think as they probably—but again, I am speculating—

Senator MACK. You don't think that she knew that?

Mr. LINDSEY. No. I think she was aware of that, but I'm sure she also, as she was in the process of discussing this, thought I wonder who over there actually handles the S&L side of the Securities Commissioner. She picked up the phone, called, and my understanding is, to ask who on your staff basically handles the S&L side of your regulation, and that, you know, that she then hung up the phone and that was the extent of any conversation she had.

Senator MACK. It seems like, again, a tremendous risk to take to be making that kind of call. I suspect, and I don't know—let me ask you this—

Mr. LINDSEY. Senator Mack, let me say, there is—you know, again, we have to try to put this into some context. What purpose would be served? I don't know of anyone who has looked at Arkansas law and the decision that the Securities Commissioner made with respect to this issue and suggested that that was the wrong decision. Mr. Massey, if I remember, said he thought it was a slam dunk.

Senator MACK. Right. Can I—

Mr. LINDSEY. And therefore, again, obviously in hindsight, it would have been better if she hadn't picked up the phone to find out who happens to be handling this matter within the Securities Commission. But again, to suggest as the only place that that can lead, that somehow she was seeking preferable treatment, I just—it doesn't work, because there was no preferable treatment.

Senator MACK. Sitting on this side of the desk, the requirement is for us to ask questions that could raise other possibilities. If we all just concluded what was written, there would be no purpose for this. So let me respond to your question. Because—in fact, I raised this the other day with Mr. Massey—my experience of 16 years in the banking business was that there was never a slam dunk when it came to the regulators, never, never. In fact—well, and I think Mr. Massey said in hindsight that he has come to that same conclusion.

Second point that I would make, this comment with respect to—and it is something that the First Lady has said I think many times—that they never issued the preferred stock, so what's the harm? That's not the question. The question is was there any effort to try to influence, and I think there is enough evidence out there to at least have people raise questions as to whether there was an intent. I mean, it's not hard to get into a situation where one could conclude, as Mr. McDougal is trying to figure out how he can get his capital situation improved, that one of the ways to do it is through preferred stock. He has to find out whether he can have that issued. It's very important to him for the survival of the organization if it can be done. And people are sitting around saying how are we going to get this done.

Well, if we make the phone call, it might not be the right thing to do. I can just make the call and ask the question about who to inquire, where we should send the letter. The subliminal message that comes with that is one of saying, oh, we have now just notified the Arkansas Securities Commission that, in fact, this is an important issue.

Now, I'm raising that as a possible concern.

Mr. LINDSEY. Senator, my only point or response to that is this is not, in my opinion, a matter of judgment on behalf or discretion on behalf of the Securities Commissioner. She—this request was to—was in effect saying this is our interpretation of Arkansas law, do you agree in our interpretation? The Securities Commissioner said, yes, I agree with your interpretation. I have not seen anyone to suggest that there is any other interpretation that is reasonable of Arkansas law.

Senator MACK. Again, we can debate that particular point for a long time. I would ask you, do you know—I'm just curious—as you have followed this issue through, do you know whether Mrs. Clinton ever raised or contacted regulatory agencies for other clients?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir, I do not know that.

Senator MACK. Is that something that you all would have asked the question about?

Mr. LINDSEY. I never asked that question. It never came up.

Senator MACK. Would it make any difference to you if you knew that this was the only time that Mrs. Clinton had contacted a regulatory agency?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir. I know Mrs. Clinton. I know her to be a woman of integrity. You know, you're sitting there, you're talking, you say I wonder who is supposed to handle this, you pick up the phone. And after the fact, you think, you know, maybe I shouldn't, but—especially 11 years after the fact or 10 years after the fact, but the fact of the matter is, I do not believe that there was any attempt to get preferential treatment in this. I don't believe any preferential treatment was given. I believe Ms. Bassett has testified to that. I believe others have testified to that.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman, I think that's all I have for now.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me follow up on a couple of things from Senator Mack. When you're using a general description of whether an associate sends out a letter under his own and sole signature, does it make a difference, or did it make a difference back 10 or 11 years ago, at the Rose Law Firm, whether the associate was a seventh-year or sixth-year associate or a first-year associate?

Mr. KENNEDY. Absolutely, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As we have all seen, although Mr. Massey has progressed in his career as probably a senior partner now at the Rose Law Firm, at that time he was a first-year associate.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And the rules with respect to whether first-year associates write letters on their own to the heads of regulatory agencies would be one that I would think a firm like the Rose Law Firm would have a serious interest in precluding until that associate were able to prove himself or herself?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste. Rick is and always has been very talented, but all of us have a learning curve.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that, as you look at this in hindsight, do you find anything remarkable about the fact that Mrs. Clinton, as the senior partner supervising Mr. Massey, was a signatory to that letter along with Mr. Massey?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, I do not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now in terms of Mr. Lindsey's responses to the questions about the nature of the question put to the securities—on the securities issue of selling preferred stock, we have heard from Mr. Massey on this question under oath, who testified very clearly that, in his view, there was nothing that was done that was untoward, improper, sneaky, or in any way not aboveboard or proper for an attorney in connection with the dealings between the Rose Law Firm and Mrs. Schaffer and her department.

Mr. Lindsey, do you have some other view of this?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir, not at all. In fact, in response to Senator Mack's question about whether if I knew this was the only time that this had ever occurred, that would reinforce my position that she made effort not to—if you're suggesting that she somehow did it to gain influence, this doesn't sound like the time to do that. And therefore, you know, I do not believe there was anything improper.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you aware that, according to Beverly Bassett Schaffer, both the Federal Home Loan Bank Board representatives and the FDIC representatives that she contacted on this issue encouraged Madison Bank to raise funds in this way?

Mr. LINDSEY. I believe not only she testified to that, but I believe that Rick Massey also testified to that fact the other day.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So we are having all of this discussion and minute focus on an issue which every single person who has looked at it has called unremarkable, appropriate, and in the best interest of not only Madison Bank but their depositors to have taken place if it was possible; is that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Absolutely. One of the things, you know, this Committee knows better than I, was that during the latter part of the 1980's, the FDIC was slow to close banks down because frankly, there was not sufficient funds and therefore they were trying to do everything—my understanding was that they could, to try to put new capital in and preferred stock would obviously be a way that private investors would have responsibility for the continuation as opposed to the taxpayers.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The evidence that we have received in addition to that shows that by 1987, Beverly Bassett Schaffer had taken the position that Madison Bank should be closed. She wrote that position to the Federal regulators, and the Federal regulators said, well, we don't have the money in hand to pay off the depositors, and we're much more concerned about other banks than little old Madison Bank, so you're going to have to wait. And indeed, it wasn't until 2 years later in 1989, that the bank was actually closed down.

And according to the testimony that we have heard, the great majority of the dollars lost by Madison Bank occurred as a result of that interim delay between 1987 and 1989, so the question I put to you is if Beverly Bassett Schaffer was in some way colluding with the Rose Law Firm or the Madison Bank, why in the world would she have taken the initiative to try to close the bank down?

Mr. LINDSEY. I agree 100 percent. In addition, it is my understanding that if she, as a State regulator, had shut the savings and loan down, that the depositors would not have had access to the Federal insurance, and therefore, other than urging the Federal Government to do so, as you indicated she began doing in 1987, there wasn't much she could do. In fact, I believe every Federal regulator who has looked at this has indicated that they believe she acted appropriately and in the best interests of the depositors.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So then—and to get off this subject with this, by way of conclusion, when we look at this situation, you can't look at it in a vacuum, to use another sense of that expression, but you must look at it in the context of whatever else was going on in 1987 in the country in connection with the S&L crisis. And at that point there wasn't enough money to pay off the depositors. What was needed was some time to come up with a plan so there wouldn't be an emergency and a run on the banks, and have bank failures willy-nilly all over the place.

Let me move on to, again, what I understand to be the focus of today's hearings, which was the meeting of November 5th, and go back to a point that Senator Murray had made. And let me ask you, Mr. Kennedy, going to page 12529 of the typed notes, at the very beginning of the meeting where there are these items 1, 2, 3, 4, who was doing the talking at that point?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Kendall, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Would you read those four items to us?

Mr. KENNEDY. Number 1 says, "Gather the facts." Number 2 says, "Try to find out what's going on in investigations." Number 3 says, "Respond to requests that are made." Number 4 says, "Strategy for dealing with the media." And underneath that it says, "One person."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Were these items that Mr. Kendall indicated were ones that he was going to take responsibility for?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes. As I previously stated, he sort of laid these out as things that he felt like he was going to start and needed to be doing.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the strategy for dealing with the media, what did that mean in terms of one person vis-à-vis the White House and one person vis-à-vis the private lawyers? Mr. Eggleston, do you have a recollection whether that was brought up at that meeting?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I remember the general issue of we ought to be having, instead—I mean, at the time Mr. Lindsey was responding, the White House also had Ms. Myers at the time, Mr. Stephano-poulos was periodically involved in responding to inquiries. And as I recall, our notion was that that might result in problems regarding inconsistent answers and the like, and that Mr.—that at least in the White House, Mr. Lindsey was going to continue to have the role of dealing with the press.

I don't remember quite as much about what Mr. Kendall's role with responding to press questions was going to be, but he started to do it after this meeting as well, I believe.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me jump down to the notation that says, "Position: Clintons had lost money in WWDC." Let me go back to you again, Mr. Kennedy. Do you recall who was talking?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe it was Bruce Lindsey at this point in the meeting, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Read your notes about what was discussed at that point.

Mr. KENNEDY. It says, "Position: Clintons had lost dollars in WWDC. Unable to substantiate this in detail. $68,000 at least. McDougals $92,000 lost—maybe."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The next item deals with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. KENNEDY. The reference HRC, that refers to Mrs. Clinton, that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Right. Would you read that, please?

Mr. KENNEDY. "HRC representation of Madison—Not much activity representing people before agencies. Two RLF letters Beverly Bassett."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. RLF meaning Rose Law Firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who was doing the talking at that point?

Mr. KENNEDY. Again, Mr. Lindsey, I believe.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There were points 1 and 2 under that.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What were those two points?

Mr. KENNEDY. They refer, as best I can recall, back up to the letters, the two Rose Law Firm letters. The first, number 1, would be the broker-dealer matter; and number 2, it says, "PP of preferred stock." PP stands for private placement of preferred stock, which were sort of, at least in the campaign timeframe, the issues that had come out.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now had there been discussion in the press at this point about the appropriateness or issue that we have been discussing here of Mrs. Clinton playing some role in her representation where a regulator had been appointed by the Governor?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And at this point, I take it Mr. Lindsey was laying out what had been discussed in the press and what he knew about the subject?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir. He was sort of laying out the background as to, you know, what had gone on before.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the very same matters that we have discussed here in detail where we now look under a microscope at what actually was being requested, what was the appropriateness of the action being requested, what was the role of Mrs. Clinton, what was the role of Mr. Massey and others, and what was the role of Beverly Bassett Schaffer, that had not been dealt with except by way of a general allegation that there was something inappropriate that had gone on because of the political "coziness" that I see reflected in your notes, that some were charging involved in that relationship; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Ben-Veniste, if I understand your question correctly, the answer is yes, during the campaign there were accusations and allegations hurled. The campaign responded, and as best I can recall, that was pretty much what had gone on up to that point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Kennedy, after November 5, did you have further meetings with Mr. Kendall about Whitewater or Madison?

Mr. KENNEDY. After November 5, no, sir, I don't believe I did so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about January 20 of the next year, 1994, did you have a meeting which Mr. Kendall attended?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't recall such a meeting. As I testified before, I am sure I ran into Mr. Kendall in the White House.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Eggleston, did you have further meetings after November 5 with Mr. Kendall?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I remember further communications, yes, sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In addition to receiving the November 10th chronology, which I would like to put up on the Elmo, which I know you have a—well—

Mr. EGGLESTON. It might be helpful to me, I don't think you have a copy of that in my packet here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't. And what I will do is give you a copy right now, but I have to warn you that this is not the actual document, because the White House, although they showed us the document this year, in a meeting since the new year—

The CHAIRMAN. About 2 weeks ago.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They refused to let us have a copy, they made us copy it down. So you're not misled, this is not the actual document, this is our typed-up version of what we were shown.

The CHAIRMAN. This is a typed copy of the memorandum from Mr. Kendall to you that we got out of your file or was received from your file. And again the White House would not give us a copy but after months we received it and it was brought over and it was retyped at the Committee's office. So if it doesn't look exactly like the same typing, it is, we hope, a fair and accurate representation of the document that you had in your file.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, you may have misspoken. It is not a memorandum from Mr. Kendall to Mr. Eggleston.

The CHAIRMAN. A chronology, draft chronology.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now on the chronology, did you get later chronologies?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't remember getting later chronologies. I really—it's not clear to me I got this from Mr. Kendall as opposed to Mr. Kendall gave it to somebody else and it ended up with me. I don't remember getting other chronologies from Mr. Kendall or anybody else.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It ended up with you?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I have been told it was in my file so I am not disputing it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember it?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Not particularly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What were the further communications with Mr. Kendall about?

Mr. EGGLESTON. We had—a whole variety of press issues came up. He was involved in the commodities problem in the spring of 1994 and——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you involved in that?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How were you involved in that?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I was involved in a fairly tangential fashion in that, trying to fashion a response. I remember getting ready for this hearing, I came across a document that I think you have because I saw an S number on it, that referenced a conversation that I apparently had with Mr. Kendall about this sort of arcane issue, which was really hot in about January or February of 1994, about the appropriate treatment of the capital gains tax.

Mr. Lindsey is nodding because he remembers that this was one of the burning issues of the day, because the Clintons had, on their 1993 tax return, had taken—had shown a $1,000 capital gain and they had not taken a loss against it. And the press——

Mr. CHERTOFF. This was the sale of Whitewater; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. This was the sale of Whitewater stock. And the press was all over the issue of how—of what was the impact, could they have taken a deduction, how much. And——

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, Mr. Eggleston——

Mr. EGGLESTON. —I think I had a conversation with Mr. Kendall about the appropriate treatment of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, Mr. Eggleston, hadn't the IRS come in, in November, and raised questions about that when they were doing their regular audit of the President's tax returns?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't think that I remember knowing that. Others may have known it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know, Mr. Kennedy, that in November there was a discussion you participated in about how the IRS had raised questions concerning the way the Whitewater sale was treated on the tax returns?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Lindsey, how many meetings did you attend after November 5 at which Mr. Kendall was present?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't know if I can give you a number.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Give us an estimate.

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't know—I spoke to him often on the telephone. I would get a press inquiry, he would get a press inquiry, we would talk about who was going to respond.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How many meetings?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, I clearly remember at least two meetings. I believe that sometime after this sort of Whitewater response team was created, that he attended some meetings of that, though he may not have been there, but I believe he was. I spoke with him about the time we were responding to turning over documents to the Department of Justice in December and January of 1994.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean, the issue about whether the President was going to ask for a subpoena?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, this was after—well, this was after the fact. This was—we turned over to the Department of Justice, in response to a subpoena for documents, we turned over about five boxes the first time, and I believe about five boxes the second time.

Each time we did that, I issued a press release from the White House, indicating that we were complying with the request from the Department of Justice for documents related to Whitewater.

I remember, at least one of those times, sitting down face to face with David Kendall and discussing it. The other time I may have discussed it on the telephone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who participated in the Whitewater response team, besides Mr. Kendall from time to time?

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Podesta, Mr. Eggleston, Mr. Nussbaum.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you are not claiming that those are privileged meetings, I take it?

Mr. LINDSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you give us an estimate? Was it about a dozen meetings you had with Mr. Kendall being present where the subject of Whitewater or Madison came up?

Mr. LINDSEY. I think I indicated in my deposition that I thought it was less than a dozen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you, Mr. Eggleston, your position was that on November 5 it was decided there was going to be a separation of function between the White House lawyers and the private lawyers; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think I testified that—I think I did not testify to that. In fact, I think that in response to questions from Mr. Ben-Veniste, what I said was that there were certain things the White House people couldn't do, certain things Mr. Kendall could do, but as to many areas there would be a mixture of functions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you mixed together on some areas; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Sure. Press being the most obvious example.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you did say that one of the things you believe was out of bounds for the White House was contact with third party witnesses; right?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No. What I said was I thought that would be problematic because you would read about it in the press. As a general matter I think, to my knowledge, we didn't do it very much because third party witnesses who were completely uninvolved wouldn't—weren't—on the members of the campaign or part of the White House and the like, you'd end up reading in the press that somebody from the White House called. My understanding was Mr. Kendall would generally do that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lindsey, was it your understanding and position that you were not going to reach out to third-party witnesses?

Mr. LINDSEY. I am not sure—if a press question came up, for example at either the Gerth or Isikoff meeting, certain matters came up, and if it involved talking to someone who was not a White House person in order to get the background and the information necessary to respond to that, I did not think it was inappropriate to contact and speak to them. I was not interviewing witnesses, you know, in preparation for a criminal defense of the Clintons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you did talk to witnesses, did you share that information in meetings at which Mr. Kendall was present?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, I can't remember an instance but I am sure I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me put up on the Elmo what's been marked as S 12599. It's from your call list. It's dated September 17, 1993, if you want to look for it. Is that the same type of message system we talked about earlier?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It shows at 4:01 p.m. on September 17, which is 3 or 4 days before David Hale was indicted in Little Rock, there was a message to you from Bill Burton. It says, "Needs to talk to you about a Jim McDougal problem. Jim Blair."

Now, Jim Blair was the lawyer who handled the sale of Whitewater for the Clintons in December 1992; is that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Among other things, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you learned in the last week or so that he actually put up the money to allow Mr. McDougal to purchase that stock from the Clintons?

Mr. LINDSEY. I've read in the press that he has said that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't know that at the time?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't know it in 1993?

Mr. LINDSEY. I believe I may have speculated about that but I did not know it, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you speculated about it during the meeting on November 5; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you were in touch with Mr. Blair, back and forth, on dealing with issues having to do with Whitewater and Madison and Hale and Arkansas during 1993; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. I beg your pardon?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were in touch with Mr. Blair during 1993 regarding Whitewater and Madison and the Hale investigation; is that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, clearly after the meeting that I had with Jeff Gerth, I believe, my notes reflect I called Mr. Blair, so yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the Jim McDougal problem?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't remember. I have no idea what this is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know why—well, you know this is a message to you.

Mr. LINDSEY. Sure, but I don't know what—if I spoke to Bill Burton, I don't know what information he imparted to me related to this message.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, it says here, "Needs to talk to you about a Jim McDougal problem. Jim Blair." Am I correct that that indicates that he was passing on to you Jim Blair's need to talk to you about a Jim McDougal problem?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, you can ask Mr. Burton. I mean, you know, the notes here, I don't know—I don't remember—this is obviously again my secretary. I don't know whether that's Mr. Burton saying he's—I'm not sure what Mr. Burton—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you get back to Mr. Blair?

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. Blair or Mr. Burton?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Blair.

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't recall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to put up what we have previously had from your notes, I don't even have a number on it but I think it's in your package, a set of your notes dated July 20?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry, this is a set of notes that are from September.

Mr. LINDSEY. Right. This was after the conversation I had with Jeff Gerth.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. Which would have been a couple of days after this September 17 message; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had a conversation with Jim Blair in which you indicated, middle of the page, "Heuer asked Brent Bumpers—asked whether indictment—against Hale, not McDougal." Do you see that in the middle of the page there?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On the next page, it goes on to say, "McDougal might become target." Did you have this conversation with Mr. Blair? As you've indicated, this conversation with Mr. Blair was a few days after this September 17 message. Does that help you to remember that the McDougal problem was a concern Mr. Blair was conveying to you about whether Mr. McDougal was going to get indicted along with Mr. Hale?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, I had no idea what Bill Burton—information Bill Burton was passing or whether I got that information. I do know that, after I spoke with Jeff Gerth, I called Mr. Blair the same afternoon and he imparted this information. It could well be that Mr. Burton had spoke to Mr. Blair and Mr. Blair had imparted some of this information to Mr. Burton. I don't know that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why would Mr. Burton get involved in discussions with Jim Blair about McDougal?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't know. I mean, obviously Mr. Burton came to me, from the note, and indicated that he needed to talk to me about it. And you indicated that that was probably that he—well, you suggested that he was passing on information from Mr. Blair, so somehow he did get involved, if that is in fact the case.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, did you assign him or was he part of your effort to gather information in September about what was going on with these investigations?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, Mr. Burton served as Counsel to the Chief of Staff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Blair was someone that you dealt with on an ongoing basis involving investigations or the progress of investigations that were going on in Arkansas; isn't that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. At various points if I needed information that I thought he had, I would call him, yes. If there was—you know, another example was there was a series of questions sent both to Mr. Blair and to me involving this letter, in March 1992, I spoke to Mr. Blair about that letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you speak to Mr. Blair about Beverly Bassett Schaffer?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have meetings with Mr. Blair and Ms. Beverly Bassett Schaffer?

Mr. LINDSEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll come back——

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, meetings——

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll make it very simple. You're in the same area, in proximity where you can have conversation. That's what I mean by a meeting.

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, yes—I attended a University of Arkansas basketball game at some point in December or in January of either 1993 or January 1994. I am sure Mr. Blair was there, I believe Ms. Schaffer was there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll get back to the content of any discussions at that meeting after lunch.

Mr. LINDSEY. I would not consider that to be a meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll get back to the content of the discussions after lunch but let me just conclude by turning to one last issue raised by Mr. Ben-Veniste. He asked you some questions about 1987 when Ms. Beverly Bassett Schaffer made some efforts to close Madison. You are aware, are you not, Mr. Lindsey, that Mr. McDougal actually was forced out of the bank in 1986?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct. I believe that Ms. Bassett attended and participated in the Dallas meeting where that decision was made.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. So that in 1986, as a consequence of the examinations that revealed sham transactions and all kinds of problems at the bank, in 1986 McDougal was forced out of the bank and was compelled to sever all ties with the bank; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, I don't know about severing all ties. I think he—they entered some sort of order that removed him as president, I guess, or CEO of the bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that in 1987, which is a year later, at the time that Ms. Schaffer was interested in closing the bank, that's after Mr. McDougal had gone.

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, if——

Mr. CHERTOFF. Correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, but again, after the 1986 meeting, I believe they ordered a new audit. That new audit came in in early, if I remember right, 1987, and it was the first time that I believed there was any indication or statement that they, in fact, were insolvent. It was at that point, when there was a determination in an independent audit of insolvency that Ms. Bassett wrote to the FDIC or whoever, FSLIC maybe at this time, and asked that they close Madison along with two other Arkansas S&L's.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My point is different, Mr. Lindsey. My point is that as of no later than February 1986, that the examiners had already identified criminal misconduct at the bank and that as of July 1986, Mr. McDougal was gone from the bank, so what Ms. Beverly Bassett Schaffer did in 1987 had little or no impact on Mr. McDougal; is that right?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, I don't believe that's right. Because we——

The CHAIRMAN. Let him say this to you.

Senator SARBANES. Let him answer.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead. Answer the question, and I'm going to suggest—just hold on, I'm going to let you answer the question to the best of your ability.

What I will suggest is that Counsel get the documents that will indicate whether that proposition put forth by Mr. Chertoff is correct. I don't know how much the witness knows or doesn't know with respect to specificity or whether he should even be asked this. I think it goes beyond what he should be required to know. I really do. I am trying to take your part, I really am.

Mr. LINDSEY. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think that that information necessarily lays within your knowledge or scope. You may have some idea about it, et cetera, but you may not have. We have the reports, what the reports indicate I think would be a fairer proposition as opposed to holding you to a specific date and time. That's my point, Mr. Lindsey. Now go ahead and respond.

Mr. LINDSEY. I appreciate that. What I quibble with is the term "criminal conduct." Mr. McDougal was indicted in 1989 and acquitted. I am not prepared on my end to say that he was engaged in 1987 or that there was any reports in 1987 that suggested he was involved in criminal conduct.

The CHAIRMAN. That's a fair observation.

Mr. LINDSEY. If I may make a point, earlier you went back and made a point with Mr. Eggleston about Jim Guy Tucker, a loan to Castle Water & Sewer, and that those were reflected in these SBA documents. I believe by the time that November 16th packet of material was brought, Jim Guy Tucker had indicated in the press that he was a borrower from David Hale's corporation. I believe that the McDougals had indicated that they in fact had borrowed from there, so I'm not sure that that information was not already publicly known at the time that Mr. Eggleston got that information.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me now, though, address the point you made. You were asked questions about both you and Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Lindsey, concerning—I think both Senator Mack raised it and Mr. Ben-Veniste—concerning Mrs. Clinton's involvement in this issue involving the Securities Commissioner. My recollection of Mr. Massey's testimony was that, although he viewed the legal issue as easy, there was a discretionary call that was going to be made down the line about whether to allow this particular bank to issue this stock.

Mr. LINDSEY. If I may, I believe Ms. Bassett—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me get to my question. Now, my question to you is this. The question then became, as Senator Mack raised it, why would Mrs. Clinton be involved in communicating with Beverly Bassett Schaffer about this issue when, as Mr. Massey indicated, she wasn't a securities lawyer, it wasn't her area. She called up. The letter that came back approving the issuance of stock on the part of Madison Guaranty was addressed, "Dear Hillary," indicating—and we haven't had Ms. Schaffer yet, we're going to get her in under oath—but indicating at least in her mind she was addressing this approval to Mrs. Clinton.

But now I want to ask you to comment, since you've commented on her role on one other document which I would like to put up and give to you.

Mr. LINDSEY. If I may, with respect to that, you know, when Ms. Schaffer or Ms. Bassett's discretion was involved, she came down against the interests of Madison. Mr. Massey, if I remember his testimony, thought that they should be allowed—that the purpose of raising—selling the preferred stock was to allow them to gain additional capital. Ms. Bassett indicated that they needed to raise their minimum level of capital before she would let them issue it, so that when it became a matter of Ms. Bassett's discretion, she erred not on Madison's side but against Madison.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't have this information at the time; this is information you have collected, I take it, in preparation for responding to press inquiries?

Mr. LINDSEY. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am not going to engage in a debate with you about things you didn't participate in, but what I want to show you is document 10255 and I want you to pay attention, Mr. Kennedy, as well, because I'm going to ask you about it. This is a document dated—I'm not sure it's in your packet—it's dated July 11, 1985. We are going to walk it down to you.

It is a memo to John Latham from Jim McDougal, and John Latham was the young bank officer whose name came up through Mr. Massey. He was the person who had known, had had a lunch with Mr. Massey, and more important, he's the person who wound up working along with Mr. McDougal on the bank side on this preferred stock issue.

It's from Jim McDougal, and it says, particularly item number 2, "I need to know everything you have pending before the Securities Commission as I intend to get with Hillary Clinton within the next few days." Now let me ask you, actually, Mr. Kennedy, you were managing partner of the firm at this point in time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Formal title is Chief Operating Officer but that's a good way to describe it, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct and is Mr. Massey correct that Mrs. Clinton was not part of the securities group or the corporate group, she was really a litigator?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I also correct that, based on your knowledge of the kind of work that she did at the firm, she was not someone whose regular practice took her before the Securities Commission dealing with approvals, regulatory approvals; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. I think that's fair to say, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was a separate group at the firm that dealt with that?

Mr. KENNEDY. As I think Mr. Massey also testified, in the Rose Law Firm, particularly back then, the litigators had a little sort of wider practice than, say, litigators in a big city with a more detailed specialty.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say litigator, for people who aren't lawyers, that means people who go to court as opposed to people who deal with agencies and deal with issuing stock and things like that; is that right?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's accurate, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now do you know what Mrs. Clinton's role was with respect to representing or advising Mr. McDougal on matters pending before the Securities Commission? This wasn't her area of practice, was it?

Mr. KENNEDY. The short answer is, Mr. Chertoff, on a general basis, no, it was not her area of practice. I must say about this memo, your question to me, I don't know how it fits in the time-frame of things.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's July 11, 1985—I guess they started working in April 1985, they issued their initial request with respect to getting the permission to have preferred stock on April 29, 1985. On May 14, 1985, they got the initial approval. And here is July 1985, which is about 2 months later, in which Mr. McDougal makes a broad request to get everything pending before the Securities Commission to him so he can get with Hillary Clinton. Based on your knowledge of her practice in 1985, did her practice involve general representation of people before the Securities Commission?

Mr. KENNEDY. As a general matter, I would say no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In your notes of the meeting on November 5, the first page, there were some questions about, "HRC representation of Madison—Not much activity representing people before agencies. Two RLF letters Beverly Bassett. 1. Madison. 2. PP of preferred stock." Did you have, at this meeting, a copy of this memo?

Mr. KENNEDY. Of this memo here?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, of S 10255.

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I've never seen it before today.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who was the person who spoke at the meeting about Hillary Clinton's representation of Madison, her role with Beverly Bassett, and the issue with too much coziness?

Mr. KENNEDY. As I previously testified, I believe it was Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lindsey, let me ask you, "too much coziness," that was your phrase; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir, I believe that's the way the press was trying to imply that the relationship, there was too much coziness in there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know about this memo before this meeting on November 5?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't know the answer to that. This memo or at least reference to this memo has been in the press. I don't remember whether it was before or after. My guess is it's after but I can't—I've seen references to this memo in the press.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In your gathering facts for the meeting on November 5, did you make any inquiry to find out what other matters McDougal had pending before the Securities Commission that he needed to get with Hillary Clinton on?

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, I know of no other matters that were pending before the Securities Commission other than the matters that were already in the press at that time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question is, did you make an effort to gather them up?

Mr. LINDSEY. No. I mean, again, the Rose Law Firm indicated what their involvement with Madison and the Securities Commissioner was during the campaign. I had read and was familiar with their responses which, as I understood it, related to these two matters that are reflected in this memo.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did their response include a response to this McDougal memo to Latham, "I need to know everything you have pending before the Securities Commission as I intend to get with Hillary Clinton within the next few days"?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, this can certainly relate to these two matters. I don't know that it relates to anything more, and I don't believe they had anything more before the Securities Commissioner. If you do, I would like to hear it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think I'm out of time.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. Ben-Veniste, and then after this, we will take a 45-minute break.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I will be brief, just to follow up on this last line of questioning. I don't know Mr. McDougal, other than reading some things about him. Mr. Kennedy or Mr. Lindsey, do you have any question, but that in choosing to deal either between Mr. Massey, the first-year associate at the Rose Law Firm, or with Mrs. Clinton that Mr. McDougal was going to initiate any contact that he had on this securities matter with Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. KENNEDY. It makes perfect sense to me that he would go with Mrs. Clinton.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that if you were to look at this memo that Mr. McDougal sent to Mr. Latham, in context of what was going on at that time, and I will tell that you Mr. Massey was performing a number of functions in connection with the regulatory issue, that you have testified about, just at this very time, would it not make sense that this memo would have referred to the very matters that we've talked about, the issue of issuing preferred stock and/or the broker-dealer question.

Mr. KENNEDY. Absolutely, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know of any other securities matter that the Madison Bank had pending in 1985 before the Arkansas Securities Commission?

Mr. KENNEDY. I am unaware of any such matters.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And therefore, can you conclude with reasonable certainty on the basis of your knowledge of what the Rose Law Firm was working on on behalf of Madison in the summer of 1985, and in the absence of any other matters pending before Madison in the Arkansas securities agency, that Mr. McDougal was undoubtedly talking to Mr. Latham about the very matters about which we have heard all this testimony.

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe that to be correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will stand in recess until 3:15 p.m., it's our hope that we can start promptly. We are in recess.

[Whereupon, at 2:26 p.m., the hearing was recessed, to be reconvened at 3:15 p.m. this same day.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we have reconvened as closely to 3:15 p.m. as you would expect in Washington. At this point we will turn to Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Kennedy, I had asked you about——

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth is waiting. Senator, do you want to proceed now or do you want to wait a few minutes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I will wait.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I had asked you about a meeting you had on November 4, 1993, concerning an IRS audit. Do you remember that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And have you produced to us some redacted notes of that meeting.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I did not produce them to you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That you recognize that you have before you a couple of pages of redacted notes from that meeting.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would be S 12595 and S 12596.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And am I also right that S 12596 is actually the first of 2 pages of notes.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to ask that they be put up on the Elmo. While we are doing that, I want to ask you, there are several people identified as attending the meeting. Would you tell us who they are?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, Bob Jones is an accountant, who was assisting in tax matters for the Clintons; David Kendall, of course, is a lawyer with Williams & Connolly. Mike Berman is a consultant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is he a lawyer?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I believe so but I do not know of my own personal knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To your knowledge he doesn't practice as a lawyer or he wasn't there as a lawyer?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I tried to answer your question. I don't know what he does other than the fact that he is a consultant what else he does I just don't know.

Bob Barnett is a lawyer with Williams & Connolly; Beth Nolan, at the time, was an Associate Counsel to the President; Steve Neuwirth was, at the time, an Associate Counsel to the President.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This has to do with the regular practice of IRS to audit Presidential tax returns.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct; it is my understanding that Presidential tax returns are audited as a matter of course.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the portions that have been revealed to us that have not been redacted begin in the middle; it says, "Report—Bob Jones—Audit." Does that indicate that Bob Jones was making a report to the group about the progress of the audit?

Mr. KENNEDY. Basically that's right, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says under Arabic numeral 1, why don't you read us what's under Arabic numeral 1 below and off to the side.

Mr. KENNEDY. It says, one in the hole, "House Sale Proceeds," then there's an A and a B, with an asterisk, and then there is a

C which says, "$1,000 WW," WW is Whitewater, "Could be done with him" out to the side, to the right of a bracket or a—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me try and put this in context. We have seen in earlier hearings that there was an issue that arose that Mr. Foster worked on, and in fact, there were documents in Mr. Foster's office at the time that he died indicating there was some issue about what he called a can of worms having to do with the way in which the sale of the Whitewater stock in December 1992, was going to be treated for tax purposes.

Am I correct that the issue being addressed here, excuse me, for audit purposes, is how the tax return treated the sale of the remaining Whitewater stock from the Clintons to Jim McDougal in 1992, whether it was to be treated as a gain of a $1,000, a zero transaction or something—show a loss?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, what I remember is that we were dealing with historical fact; in other words, there had been a treatment, which was the subject of the audit. And Mr. Jones, who was dealing with the IRS agent conducting the audit, was trying to ascertain what the facts were.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just to remind you and everybody of where we are, the notes that Mr. Foster had in his office indicated that there were three possible options. There was an option of simply saying, not reporting anything, saying that there was a—such a loss on the part of the Whitewater transaction, as the Clintons had said publicly I think they said $68,000 at one point, and $44,000 at one point, there was the possibility of saying there was no gain, there was the possibility of actually claiming the loss that they said publicly they had, or there was the third possibility, which was the possibility of taking the entire $1,000 sale of the stock as a gain, and essentially for purposes of filing the return, acting as if there was no loss.

And the Foster records indicated that Mr. Foster took the view that claiming the $1,000 gain was the safest way to avoid opening the can of worms about justifying the claiming of a loss. Did Mr. Foster have discussions with you about that before he died?

Mr. KENNEDY. He did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your understanding about what was the concern of the auditing IRS agent about the claiming of a $1,000 gain on the Whitewater stock sale?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, without quibbling with you, because I don't intend to, I am not sure based on my memory of this meeting that it is fair to say the agent had a concern. Although, it was something the agent was interested in, clearly. The issue was, if I remember correctly, and I want to say on the front end I am not a tax lawyer but the issue was ascertaining the basis in the shares, their tax basis in the shares from which you would compute gain.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You say you are not a tax lawyer.

Mr. KENNEDY. No, I am not a tax lawyer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the discussion about this issue at this meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, again, my memory is that we were dealing with a matter of historical fact. In other words, there was an audit of the return, the entire thousand dollars had been reported as taxable gain, and the agent had raised an issue about the Clintons' basis in the stock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say the basis in the stock, just again for people who are not tax lawyers, and I am, heaven knows, not a tax lawyer, but am I right that the basis of the stock is the point at which what you are claiming the value of the stock was at a certain point in time, and it is against that that you measure whether the sale of the stock represents a gain or not?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, for tax purposes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there an issue that the agent raised about the fact that the Clintons had publicly stated that they lost somewhere between $40,000 and $60,000 on this project, yet they were claiming a zero basis for purposes of taking the full $1,000 gain on the stock sale?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I'm not sure what was in the agent's mind. The discussion that I remember was relatively simple. Mr. Jones was wanting to get what information he could so that he could discuss the basis determination issue. And that's basically what this issue was. He was saying what should I say back to him as to how the basis was determined.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was he told to say?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, he wasn't told to say anything because no one at the meeting had any specific knowledge about how the tax treatment had been arrived at.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was an agreement to get back to Mr. Jones and give him some information to give to IRS?

Mr. KENNEDY. If I remember correctly, I think we identified the Clintons' accountant in Little Rock as someone he could talk to about this issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On the next page if you want to go to the next page of the notes, what does it say there, "Agent to discuss reporting of income from WW"?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, it says, "Agent to discuss reporting of income from WW," which is Whitewater.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And then it says, "Zero Basis," an arrow, "Sale of WW shares."

Mr. KENNEDY. "Not have reported enough income," with an arrow, and it says, "No problem."

Mr. CHERTOFF. What does that mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. Again, I am not technically qualified to conduct a technical explanation of these issues. But basically, one's basis in an asset is affected by the stream of income, or lack of income, that one receives with regard to that asset.

Moneys received from an investment can be income to you, ordinary income, or that can be return of capital, in which case they will affect your basis in the shares. And so, there is evidently, the agent had a question about the reporting of income, I can only assume from previous tax returns, with regard to Whitewater, as it would impact upon the Clintons' basis in the Whitewater shares that they owned.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did this all get resolved with the agent?

Mr. KENNEDY. You would have to ask Mr. Jones.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why were you at the meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. I was there to assist, primarily in the preparation of the 1993 tax returns for the Clintons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why was Mr. Kendall there?

Mr. KENNEDY. He was there along with Mr. Barnett. You would have to ask them as to what they thought their roles were. Again, I was under the impression that they were there to assist in the preparation of the tax return as well.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, I see I have a minute left and just to close it off, I had asked you earlier whether you had a meeting with Mr. Kendall on January 20, 1994. Let me show you S 12597 and S 12598.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, I have those, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was Mr. Kendall at that meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I don't believe he was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there any representative of his firm at that meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I don't believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he discussed at the meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, he was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This was a meeting of White House attorneys and some people who were involved in consulting?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, these are notes of a—I believe of a daily staff meeting that occurred in the White House Counsel's Office. We met everyday in the morning. And these are notes of a meeting that took place in the White House Counsel's Office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It indicates at the top James Carville and Paul Begala. Did they attend the White House Counsel's meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. They did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the reason their names were noted at the top?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I am not certain about this but what I think is is that they had been identified as suggesting that a more organized approach within the White House be arrived at with regard to Whitewater matters.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now these are your notes; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, they are, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We've talked about a chronology which we've put up on the board which Mr. Kendall furnished to Mr. Eggleston. There is a reference here under Arabic numeral 1, "Chronology of events: Neil Eggleston." Was Mr. Eggleston given the assignment of maintaining a chronology of events?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's what the notes indicate, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What are the entries underneath that?

Mr. KENNEDY. It says, "Chronology of events: Neil Eggleston." What follows next, which I will read to you, is a source of information for him to prepare such a chronology. And it says, "Documentary record, Kendall, principals" with an A, "Bruce Lindsey, WHK 3," that's me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Mr. Eggleston was now tasked as of January to use or assigned as of January to maintain a chronology of events; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Sort of what the notes indicate, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This was part of the effort Mr. Carville and Mr. Begala had suggested about responding to Whitewater matters; is that right?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't want to be too specific in this regard. For example, one could interpret your question to say Mr. Carville and Mr. Begala had said prepare a chronology.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, that they suggested in general a more aggressive response.

Mr. KENNEDY. A more organized response.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The five sources on which Mr. Eggleston was supposed to deal with were the documentary records; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Kendall, that meant that Mr. Kendall was supposed to be getting information to Mr. Eggleston?

Mr. KENNEDY. That he was a source of information.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Principals meaning people who actually had first-hand knowledge?

Mr. KENNEDY. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Bruce Lindsey and you.

Mr. KENNEDY. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So is it fair to say based on that that this was anticipating as late as January 1994, that there would be continued contact between Mr. Eggleston and Mr. Kendall for purposes at least under this heading of Mr. Kendall furnishing information to Mr. Eggleston; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, Mr. Chertoff, the proper answer is that the White House Counsel's Office was organizing itself to make a more organized and better response primarily to press inquiries, and to deal with the public.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. So the information going from Mr. Kendall to Mr. Eggleston was supposed to be for press purposes?

Mr. KENNEDY. Primarily, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that was the assignment of the White House Counsel's Office here?

Mr. KENNEDY. As Mr. Kendall—excuse me, as Mr. Eggleston has testified in testimony, and testimony I would second, it was always contemplated that there would be cooperation between the White House in its official capacity the White House Counsel's Office and Mr. Kendall in his private capacities. It was inescapable.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me go to the next page. The next page has Arabic 4 and it is kind of the reverse. This is Mr. Kendall, and would you read the three headings under what Mr. Kendall is supposed to do?

Mr. KENNEDY. Four in the hole. It says, "Kendall potential public presentation, possible assistance from White House Counsel, partial release of documents W&C." I think that refers to Williams & Connolly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now this was what Mr. Kendall was supposed to be doing in his capacity as representing the President individually; is that right?

Mr. KENNEDY. I want to emphasize the word potential, that this was something that was evidently under discussion that he might make a public presentation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it says, "Possible assistance from WHC." The idea was that the—now we are looking at the reverse side of this, the White House Counsel's Office was going to be assisting Mr. Kendall in doing his possible public presentation.

Mr. KENNEDY. With regard to information and then responding to the press, et cetera, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, this is under the rubric of press, that you would have under Arabic numeral 1 for purposes of dealing with the press, you would be getting information from Kendall to Eggleston. Under Arabic numeral 4 to help Kendall with a possible presentation you could have possible assistance from the White House Counsel's Office to Kendall, and all of this is under the claim of dealing with the press.

Did it occur to anybody at any meeting you've ever attended to the White House Counsel's Office to say something to the effect of, you know, under this theory that all we are doing is dealing with the press, there is pretty much no limitation in our ability to work with the investigating agencies or with the private defense attorneys, since everything we do potentially has a press aspect? Did anyone ever consider that?

Mr. KENNEDY. To the contrary, Mr. Chertoff. I mean, as Mr. Eggleston has testified, what we were trying to do is maintain activities in proper spheres. But the press had to be responded to. And the White House had, if anything, a bigger role to play in that than Kendall because that's where the press inquiries came, most of them anyway.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So for purposes of dealing with the press, and this meeting in January there was a discussion of having information flow from Kendall to the White House Counsel's Office, and from the White House Counsel's Office to Kendall; is that right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, but—the answer is yes, but let me observe one other thing. Other parts of the note designated White House spokesman, it says, "Stephanopoulos, Lindsey, Nussbaum, each day go through the WW clips," those are Whitewater clips that refer to the news reports generated each day in the White House, "go through clips and come up with answers. Inaccurate statements in the clips, address. New things. Go back with regard to stuff that's been written." This meeting was about responding to the press about making public presentations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there any relationship between the date of this meeting, January 20th, and the date on which Mr. Fiske was named as the Independent Counsel?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't know what date that was on, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think it was around January 20th.

Mr. KENNEDY. Could have been.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is he finished?

The CHAIRMAN. He is finished with this line, if you want to go. Senator Faircloth is waiting.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me direct this to Mr. Eggleston, and if you would, there were questions asked about the chronology prepared by David Kendall and dated November 10, 1993. Do you have that in front of you?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Have you had a chance to review that chronology now?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I have looked at it while other members of this panel have been asked questions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, it is 7 pages. This is a retranscription of Mr. Kendall's notes which were made available fully to the Committee for its inspection and copying. Is there anything in that chronology that reflects some information that, to your knowledge, was not available either through some public record or in the press as of November 10, 1993?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I just looked through it quickly. I certainly—I didn't notice anything, I actually noticed that many of the entries are referenced to press reports. There are a lot of Washington Times reported, Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, I am not sure I can quite answer your question because I haven't looked through it that carefully, but I—it is dates various things occurred.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There is no obvious confidential information that comes from some undocumented source that's reflected in this chronology, is there?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I didn't see any.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The idea of getting a chronology together, given the general confusion that existed then and probably still exists about what Whitewater is all about, was deemed to be a pretty good starting point for essentially the new kid on the block, David Kendall who was coming in, to represent the Clintons personally; is that fair to say?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that's right. As this Committee knows now better than I, the number of individual players and entities and the events took place over a substantial period of time. It was pretty impossible and this would have been a very logical thing for Mr. Kendall to have done first thing, just as a way to try to get the events, the people, and the entities organized in his own head.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed, as thorough as Mr. Kendall is, I note on the last page and it is not to be picky, but the reference for July 21, 1993, "Offices of Capital Management Services Raided by FBI," is accurate, but the second entry under that date, Vince Foster suicide is inaccurate, is it not?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that's right, it was July 20th.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was the day before. So that looking at this chronology which was sent over to the White House by Mr. Kendall and ultimately made its way into your files, there isn't anything particularly remarkable or breathtaking or new as of the date it was compiled, contained in that chronology; is that fair to say?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that's fair to say. Again, I looked at it very quickly but I certainly didn't see anything in my review of it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then on a going forward basis, it was understood that this chronology would be continued to be corrected where necessary, updated, expanded so that the body of information reflecting all of these complicated transactions going back to 1978 would be as accurately portrayed as possible and serve as a reference vehicle for those who needed to go back to it; is that basically what happened?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that is right, including later on as I started to do something like this including current things, statements by Members of the Senate about various aspects, so that we would have in one document, we would be able to find various references, we were forever remembering a good line in some story and nobody could remember what it was and where the story was and couldn't find it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All of the statements in the Senate by now, it must be some humongous document. I have my mental picture of the giant ball of string.

Mr. EGGLESTON. We had the good sense to stop at some point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But this was the genesis back in November 1993, when you were pulling all this stuff together?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think that's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I would yield the balance of my time back to Senator Faircloth.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lindsey, we have or will have on the screen a copy of The New York Times editorial of December 20th. Would you tell me, did the President read this, and as we understand make handwritten notes on it.

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir, my understanding is he did.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Could you tell us why the White House is refusing to make this available to us, and what his notes were?

Mr. LINDSEY. I believe you should address that to someone, Ms. Sherburne or someone in the Counsel's Office who is dealing with this Committee.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, we have.

Senator SARBANES. We know the contents of it that were made available. What they have not done is actually provided the paper with the handwriting; that's all.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Why not?

Senator SARBANES. Counsel's examined it.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Why not?

Senator SARBANES. I guess they don't want you running around throwing the President's handwriting up all over the place. My understanding is there is generally a policy not to turn over handwritten communications of Presidents as a general operating principle in the White House. But they have had Counsel come down and look at it and so we know the contents of what he said.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe, and we will develop this later with Mr. Chertoff, that there appears to be a dispute with respect to the contents. Notwithstanding that the Committee has for a period of time now made known its intention, that the policy of the White House attempting to give us documents that we can copy, and not furnish us with copies of the documents is not responsive to the Committee or the American people.

There is no reason for it. It just takes time, causes delay, and causes controversy. So I am hoping that between now and our next session, we will be able to work this out with Counsel, to provide for the copy. I understand as recently as yesterday we've asked for it, we were told that would not be the case. I am hoping that we can resolve this. If we do not resolve it, it is a serious matter. I don't believe Ms. Sherburne, it is within the capacity for you or your superiors to make judgments as to what you will or will not turn over.

And I also would point out to you, a number of documents, including notes that we've referred to today, were only just turned over to us on Sunday. Now that's not being forthcoming. You have had these documents in many cases for weeks and months, and then you complain about delay. It is not right when members of the White House staff complain about delay. Much of that delay is the result of the failure to comply with reasonable requests.

So we will be persistent about this because you don't have a right, nor does anybody else. There is no legal basis to say well, we will let you look at it but you can't have a copy.

Continue, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, you know, it might seem to be much ado about nothing, but I see Ms. Sherburne there, do you have a copy of it?

Ms. SHERBURNE. Do I have a copy with me, Senator?

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. Yes.

Ms. SHERBURNE. No, I don't.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Would you get it to us?

Ms. SHERBURNE. I would be happy to bring it up for you to review, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. All right, thank you.

Mr. Lindsey, according to The New York Times editorial which we've talked about here, Beverly Bassett Schaffer's name was mentioned as having knowledge of how and why Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan was kept open.

To clarify, this is Beverly Bassett Schaffer who was appointed by Governor Clinton, to direct the Arkansas Securities Commission and to supervise Madison in that role. Her husband, Archie Schaffer is also an executive with Tyson Foods.

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't believe they were married at this time. They are married now; they were not married at the time she was the Securities Commissioner.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you have any conversation with either Mr. Schaffer, Beverly Bassett—if she was not married at the time—Jim Blair, or Denver attorney Jim Lyons about Whitewater or Madison Guaranty, and her version of events during the 1992 campaign?

Mr. LINDSEY. Did I have a conversation with any of those people during the 1992 campaign?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. No, during the Clinton campaign for President concerning Madison Guaranty or Whitewater. Did you discuss Madison Guaranty or Whitewater and her version of events, during the campaign for President in 1992.

Mr. LINDSEY. It was an issue during the campaign. If you are asking me whether I spoke with Jim Lyons about that, the answer is probably yes, though I don't recall specifically. If you asked whether I talked to Beverly or to Archie Schaffer, or to—who was the other person?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Jim Blair.

Mr. LINDSEY. Jim Blair, I don't recall speaking to Jim Blair. I may have spoken to Beverly or Archie at some point.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. This was general discussion during the campaign?

Mr. LINDSEY. It was an issue, it was raised in the original article by—I think in the original article by Mr. Gerth and it became an issue during the 1992 campaign, yes.

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. Then after Bill Clinton became President, did you have any conversation with any of the people I previously mentioned, about Madison Guaranty in 1993, prior to October 31st, when The Washington Post article ran on this subject?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, I do not believe I spoke to Beverly, I don't believe I spoke to Archie, I probably at some point—you say Madison and I am having some trouble with that. I am sure I spoke with Jim Lyons, I know I spoke to Jim Lyons.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you have conversation with him about Madison Guaranty? These people I mentioned before, did you discuss with them Madison Guaranty?

Mr. LINDSEY. And the regulation of Madison or Madison as it relates to McDougal and to Whitewater?

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. As it relates to McDougal and Whitewater before The Washington Post article ran?

Mr. LINDSEY. As you know, Senator, I started getting press inquiries in the middle of September from Mr. Gerth, from Mr. Isikoff, and from others, about David Hale, about Madison, raising McDougal again, yes, I am sure I know I probably spoke with Mr. Lyons about those matters. There are notes of a meeting—of a discussion I had with Jim Blair which I would not characterize as relating to Madison, but I will point the notes out to you, just in case you do think that they relate to Madison, I do not believe I spoke to Archie Schaffer or Beverly Bassett before the first of November.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you speak to the President about the December 20th editorial in The New York Times?

Mr. LINDSEY. The President's comments on the editorial were sent to me. I do not recall speaking to him directly about it after that but I may have.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Do you know what was discussed?

Mr. LINDSEY. The copy I had actually had the comments written out. The comments were to the effect that Beverly did a good job in the campaign, we need to stay on top of this, will she again or can she again.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Following the editorial, did you have any conversation with Ms. Bassett or Mr. Schaffer, Jim Blair or Jim Lyons, or receive any faxes from these people regarding the December 20th editorial? Between then and December 28th, did you hear from them, did they respond to you or did you respond to them?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't know if I reached out or talked to any of them before the 28th, so I—you know, if you showed me a fax from someone, it might refresh my memory but I don't have any memory of speaking to any of them between the 22nd and the 28th. I would just note that Christmas fell in that period. I probably went home.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Where were you on December 28th, do you remember?

Mr. LINDSEY. I have been told at some point we attended a basketball game in Fayetteville. I have been told that that was on December 28th. I have not gone back to confirm that, but I could well have been in Fayetteville on the 28th at a University of Arkansas basketball game.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you discuss Whitewater or Madison Guaranty while you were in the Tyson box with Beverly Schaffer or Archie Schaffer?

Mr. LINDSEY. Probably.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. What was the discussion about?

Mr. LINDSEY. I think I raised with Archie whether or not Beverly would get out and do press inquiries and others with respect to her role and what she did and get that story out.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Who else took part in the discussion?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, I was asked. I was asked whether the President was there. The President was at the game. I don't have a memory of him being.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a second, please. Weren't you at a box? Is that one of these sky boxes?

Mr. LINDSEY. This is a large box, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Sky box. Was the President in the box?

Mr. LINDSEY. The President, during most of the game, sat in the stands. He was probably in the box at some time during the time but during the actual ball game my remembrance is that he sat in the stands. So there are times when the President was in the box, I'm sure. I do not remember when I spoke to Archie, whether or not the President was in the box or not.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Let me ask you this question.

The CHAIRMAN. If I might intrude upon my friend. Mr. Lindsey, it is not a game. And when you answer the Senator as you began to, you would have us believe that you didn't even recall, unless we pursue this, that the President was in the box. You went to this game, you know the President was there. You knew we were going to discuss this subject, you looked at your notes, you refreshed your recollection, didn't you, prior to today?

Mr. LINDSEY. I have no notes or recollection on this, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. You have no recollection about this?

Mr. LINDSEY. I have a recollection that I was at the ball game.

The CHAIRMAN. You knew the President was there?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You knew the Schaffers were there?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And that they were in that box?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It was a Tyson box?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. At least you're now answering in a responsive manner instead of dancing all over the place.

Mr. LINDSEY. May I, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. No, listen. You want to do it later on but we are going to go back to Senator Faircloth.

Senator Faircloth.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lindsey, you will get an opportunity to answer the question on my time when it comes.

Mr. LINDSEY. Thank you, sir.

Senator SARBANES. I want to assure you of that. It leaves a certain lag time in getting the response to the assertion but you will get that chance if you just take it easy.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. The very question is this: Did the President discuss with Beverly Bassett Schaffer or Archie Schaffer, Madison or Whitewater during this time?

Mr. LINDSEY. Senator, the only way I would know is whether I was present or whether he told me. I don't believe he told me of any conversation he has had. I had a conversation with Mr. Schaffer, with Archie Schaffer, about this. I do not believe, I do not know whether the President was there during my conversation, but beyond that, I have no knowledge.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. So you don't know whether the President discussed with the Schaffers Madison Guaranty or Whitewater, whether it was discussed with the President or not?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, I know that I had a discussion with Archie about whether Beverly would—would talk to the press, I do not know whether the President was around during that conversation.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. All right. Did you or the President discuss with Jim Blair Whitewater or Madison?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't recall. I mean, again, the only thing I can tell you about the President is what he did in my presence. If Jim Blair was there and he and I were talking we might have talked about things like the editorial and the press. That was coming out. I don't have a specific recollection of having a conversation with Mr. Blair about Whitewater or Madison during that game.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. After December 28th, did you have any discussion with Beverly Bassett, Archie Schaffer, Jim Blair, or Jim Lyons—in dealing with the press or the inquiries?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. You did have.

Mr. LINDSEY. I spoke with Archie Schaffer on several occasions. I spoke with two of my law partners on several occasions about it. At least one or two of my law partners about it. I don't again recall speaking to Jim Blair about this particular matter, and whether I spoke to Mr. Lyons or not, it would—I don't remember speaking to him with the purpose of gathering information. If I spoke to him I was just telling him what I was doing.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Would you tell us what was discussed, just in plain language you tell me.

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir. Ms. Beverly Bassett during the campaign had put out, spoken to the press, spoken to Mr. Gerth, in fact, I later learned wrote three memos to Mr. Gerth describing what her role had been during the late 1980's in the regulation of Madison Guaranty.

As I say, I have reviewed the records; I reviewed a chronology of what she did, what occurred, I believe that any reasonable person who looks at it will find that she went out of her way to try to bring this to the proper regulators' attention and to get action. She communicated that during the campaign.

Obviously we wanted her to continue to communicate that. She was reluctant to do so. She was reluctant for several reasons. One, I think she was reluctant because she had spent so much time with

Mr. Gerth and she felt like the treatment that she received in The New York Times article and in other articles was not fair, did not reflect the information she provided. Another reason was, during this same time period, there were people who basically were, I will use the word stalking because I believe Ms. Bassett has used that word, in fact one of your current employees, Mr. Bossey, went to Fayetteville in early January 1994, and according to Ms. Bassett stalked her from one place to the other.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. He was not an employee of mine.

Mr. LINDSEY. That's right. He is now.

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. I didn't know him.

Mr. LINDSEY. He was working for Citizens United, Floyd Brown's organization, I believe, at that time.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. He tells me he was with NBC.

Mr. LINDSEY. He was with an NBC crew. He indicated to the press at that time that he was not there with them that he had just hitched a ride, I don't know maybe Mr. Bossey could testify as to what his role was but the fact of the matter is—

The CHAIRMAN. Look. Come on. I have given you great latitude. You have such great recall on events that you weren't even at. When we talk and ask you questions about events you were at, that recall is missing. I tell you, you were well programmed for that, but that's OK, but let's stick to the issue.

Mr. LINDSEY. The issue is why Ms. Bassett Schaffer was reluctant to go out there and do press, and as I said part of it was a reluctance because she felt like she spent a lot of time with Mr. Gerth and that she was not treated properly in those articles and the information she provided was not dealt with fairly. And two, because she believed that people were, and again, stalking her, following her, following her into buildings, being there when she came out, she got to the point that she called her husband to come down because she was concerned about this. All of this was reported in the press, which is why I have fairly good recall about it.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Let me ask you, were there ever discussions between you and Mr. or Mrs. Schaffer about what the White House would do to help protect Ms. Schaffer from the press criticism?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, I don't believe so. Again let me finish my answer. I do not believe I spoke to Ms. Schaffer directly because her husband told me that she was very upset, and I don't believe that I broached these subjects directly with her.

I did have conversations with Mr. Schaffer. I did have conversations with my law partners, who were also Ms. Schaffer's law partners, about this, because they were assisting her in trying to put together a chronology of exactly what she had done as Securities Commissioner with respect to Madison.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did you discuss with them what the White House—did you all attempt to help her with the press criticism?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir. We weren't doing a very good job with the press ourselves. I don't think we ever offered to help her.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did she or her husband display displeasure or frustration with the fact that you didn't help them or were not adequately helping them handle the controversy?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't recall that. That doesn't ring a bell with me, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. My next question is to both Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Lindsey. In David Watkins' memo that was released, that we all have a copy of, he mentions a problem.

Mr. LINDSEY. The one involving the Travel Office?

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Yes, he mentions a problem with the Secret Service, "An issue developed between the Secret Service and the First Family. And after the Secret Service incident, it was made clear that I must more forcefully and immediately follow the directions of the First Family."

Now all of you are close personal friends of President and Mrs. Clinton and knew what was going on in the White House. Would you tell us what the Secret Service problem was?

Mr. KENNEDY. Senator, I cannot. I don't know.

Mr. LINDSEY. I have never spoken to either the President or First Lady about a Secret Service problem. I have read stories in the press about what it was, but I have not ever spoken to either one of them directly.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. They never discussed it?

Mr. KENNEDY. Not with me, Senator.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. I will stop for now.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lindsey, I take it that Ms. Schaffer felt that while she had tried to, in effect, tell the press exactly what she'd done and why, she didn't think they had given her a fair report on that; is that right?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir, that is accurate.

Senator SARBANES. What did you understand her problem to be on that issue?

Mr. LINDSEY. She had spent—again, and I actually, ultimately saw the memos that she had written to Mr. Gerth. I believe she wrote to him twice before the first story and at least once after that. And one time I think she threatened to sue The New York Times for libel. She felt like, that the stories did not reflect the time and efforts she had spent trying to lay out for them exactly what she had done as Securities Commissioner. And therefore—and basically reduced it down to less than a paragraph or two paragraphs, in which it suggested that she had been hired because she worked for Madison, which by the way, she actually I think has testified that she did one legal research on a Campobello project but that she, you know, that involved Madison, but that she certainly didn't represent Madison in any sort of significant way, but it was that sort of fuzzing of the facts that she felt like when she would explain to her what her role was with respect to that one issue, when she talked about what steps she had taken, when she tried and spent time, I understand, she called down to the Securities Commission, tried to refresh her memory as to what steps, took the time to write that, to send it to them, to talk to them, then to have it reduced to a paragraph or less in a story in which they, you know, ignored all of that, she just felt like she wasn't being treated fairly and therefore did not want to participate in that.

She certainly was concerned about doing it, to the press other than the written press because everything gets reduced to 15 second or 10 second sound bite and she certainly didn't feel like her role or what she had done could be handled adequately in that sort of timeframe.

Senator SARBANES. As I understand it, she was also concerned because she was being followed about; is that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes. There was an incident involving Mr. Bossey and involving a Mr. Silverman who worked for NBC in which Mr. Silverman had asked, I believe, for an interview. Ms. Schaffer had indicated he wouldn't give her an interview. They showed up in Fayetteville. When she would go into a building they would get out with their cameras, following her in. When she would come out sometime later they would be there, they would follow her to her car, they would try to put the camera on her while she was walking to her car.

Mr. Bossey was there, she called her husband, her husband came down, took a picture. The reason I know Mr. Bossey was there, he took a picture of him which ran in the newspaper the next day. She felt like she was being stalked I think she was fearful not for her safety but just for being followed in and out of the buildings. She called, I believe, Mr. Silverman and tried to explain all this to Mr. Silverman and yet they continued to follow her in and out of buildings wherever she went that day.

Senator SARBANES. For that day?

Mr. LINDSEY. I think it quit after her husband came and took a picture of them doing it. I think they then left.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The business about The New York Times editorial and the President's handwriting, this was an editorial of December 20, 1993, it's been made available to us so that we could look at the handwriting and ask questions of you about it.

Now, you've indicated that in essence the note reflected that Ms. Bassett Schaffer had done a good job in explaining this issue before, during the campaign, and that she ought to be called upon, if she was willing, I presume, to do it again.

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is that basically it?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's basically correct, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And in that regard you recall that when you were at a basketball game in Fayetteville, you had occasion to see her husband.

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At that time, you mentioned to him that the White House would like to see Ms. Schaffer, you know, continue to explain her involvement in connection with the Madison regulatory matter; correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you at any time ask either Ms. Bassett Schaffer or her husband to shade the facts or to tell some story that wasn't accurate?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir. I thought her story was compelling, the role she had played.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I understand you, at the point that you mentioned this to Mr. Schaffer, you don't recall whether the President was in the vicinity of the conversation or whether he was in the stands or eating a hot dog or a burrito somewhere or whatever?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The whole conversation, how long would you say that took?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, less than 5 minutes. You know, she expressed to me her frustration. I think probably said to me, if I were you I wouldn't raise it with her because she is up—it upsets her.

So, I don't know whether we talked about her, and—you know, we may have done some press bashing which I might have engaged in along with him about this, I—4 or 5 minutes I would think at the most.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So basically most of the time was an expression by him of why he thought she might be reluctant to reinvolve herself in this—in view of the way she had been treated?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now as a follow-up to this, do you recall ever making some other effort to contact Ms. Bassett Schaffer or Mr. Schaffer?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, Mr. Schaffer, I think, after that, and again I am not real sure on the time, sent me a copy—copies of the various memoranda that she had written to Jeff Gerth, both before and after the story.

I also had conversations with—one, maybe two, with my law partners because my law firm was trying to put together a fairly extensive chronology of all of the steps that Ms. Bassett had taken as Securities Commissioner with respect to Madison, I think on the assumption that if she didn't want to go out publicly, in a personal sort of role, that they would put out sort of a—call it a white paper for lack of a better deal, outlining exactly what she did, and when, and what steps she took, and so forth.

So I know in the months of January and February I had those discussions. Ultimately at least one newspaper, a Minneapolis paper, wrote a story with respect to this matter that I thought was fair with respect to Ms. Schaffer.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I would like to show you a copy of a memorandum from Beverly Bassett Schaffer to Jeff Gerth, that is dated February 25, 1992, I believe the Bates number is 0000149, to see whether, in fact, you can identify that.

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, one is dated February 18th, it looks like, I guess. Excuse me, February 28th, and the other one is dated February 25th. I believe I—either Archie or someone sent me these two, plus I believe a third memorandum that was after Mr. Gerth's article, that she sent to him. But these, I believe, were her attempts with Mr. Gerth at the time to try to walk him through what she had done and the decisions she made as Securities Commissioner with respect to Madison.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, in order to save time, and not to go through this in great detail although it is an obviously carefully considered memorandum, which goes into considerable detail, I would ask whether it would be appropriate to make this a part of our records.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly. So ordered. Both memorandums will be included in the record.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Unfortunately, we don't have available the one which you refer to as the third one but we do have the memorandum of the 25th and of the 28th.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me see, Mr. Lindsey, if I can go over quickly with you something. There came a time when this editorial dated December 20th came into your possession. It was sent to you and who else?

Mr. LINDSEY. Mr. McLarty.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. McLarty, does the President often do that?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What did he say, we'd been given to believe he said this is important to be on top of, period, do you recall that?

Mr. LINDSEY. I believe that's correct, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Bassett did a good job in campaign on this dash dash, do you recall that?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Can she now?

Mr. LINDSEY. The word I quibbled with from looking at the original and looking at what I saw was the word "can." It could well be "can," it could be "will." The President's handwriting, frankly, is not that great.

The CHAIRMAN. That's one of the reasons we are asking for the documents. But either way, "can" or "will." Mr. Kennedy, with your handwriting I can understand why that would be something to laugh at.

Mr. LINDSEY. I did say his was slightly better than Mr. Kennedy's.

The CHAIRMAN. He said this is important.

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. He didn't just send this to you to take a look at, he sent it to Mr. McLarty and yourself and he said stay on top of it; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir. Was that a question?

The CHAIRMAN. The implication was clear, sent it to you and to Mack, stay on top of this, it is important. Now what lengths, if any, did you go to to stay on top of it? Was it just this casual meeting at the ball game?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir. As I say, even after the casual meeting at the ball game, I had conversations with——

The CHAIRMAN. What about prior to the ball game?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't believe so. I mean, this is the 20th, you know. I don't know when I went home for Christmas.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know that the Schaffers were going to be at the ball game?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, not conclusively.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't know conclusively or you didn't know?

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, it's a ball game in Fayetteville.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. You were in where, Little Rock?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. How far is Little Rock from Fayetteville?

Mr. LINDSEY. The Schaffers lived in Fayetteville, so they——

The CHAIRMAN. But you and the President were in Little Rock?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. My question is, and I don't know how far is it from Little Rock to Fayetteville?

Mr. LINDSEY. I'm guessing 120 to 140 miles.

The CHAIRMAN. 140 miles? And would you ordinarily fly?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you didn't know whether the Schaffers were going to be at this ball game?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, I did not know they were going to be there.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know that you were going to be guests for any period of time, you and the President would be afforded the opportunity to be in the Tyson box?

Mr. LINDSEY. Before I got there I found out.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have any arrangements made?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, when the President goes there, they would have made arrangements as to where we sat, whether it was the president of the university's box, somebody else's box. All of that would have been prearranged, but I'm not sure I would have had knowledge of it before we actually got up there and was escorted into whatever box we were in.

The CHAIRMAN. So there was no particular sense of urgency to attend this game, was there? In other words, there wasn't an urgency that you meet the Schaffers, was there? You didn't know that you were going to meet them?

Mr. LINDSEY. Meeting the Schaffers had nothing to do with going to the ball game.

The CHAIRMAN. That was coincidental?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you fly from Little Rock to Fayetteville?

Mr. LINDSEY. I had never driven with the President from Little Rock to Fayetteville so if we were in Little Rock and went to Fayetteville, we flew. Yes, sir, I do actually remember we flew.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did you fly to?

Mr. LINDSEY. We would either have flown to Drake Field in Fayetteville or to Springdale.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose I told you that that evening you had snow and fog and conditions that prevented you from flying into Fayetteville or to the adjacent fields, would that refresh your recollection?

Mr. LINDSEY. It refreshes my memory that we probably—the adjacent field, I don't remember whether we flew—are you suggesting that we flew into Rogers as opposed to Springdale?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. LINDSEY. That's certainly possible.

The CHAIRMAN. Because of weather conditions.

Mr. LINDSEY. If I remember right, it was snowy.

The CHAIRMAN. That took you further away than going into Fayetteville, the airport that serves Fayetteville; is that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. It is probably 30 minutes from Rogers versus 15 minutes from the Fayetteville airport. Maybe slightly longer from Rogers but not much longer.

The CHAIRMAN. How many miles from Rogers?

Mr. LINDSEY. Probably less than 15 miles from Rogers. Fayetteville, Springdale, and Rogers are all in a corridor; Fayetteville at the southern end of the corridor, Rogers—

The CHAIRMAN. Then you drove from Rogers to—

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct, in a motorcade.

The CHAIRMAN. And you wound up in the Tyson box. Doesn't Mr. Schaffer—did he work for Tyson?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, he does.

The CHAIRMAN. So could you be fairly safe to assume he was going to be at that game?

Mr. LINDSEY. Again, I don't think I knew until we got there that we were staying in the Tyson box.

The CHAIRMAN. So it was just coincidental?

Mr. LINDSEY. I'm sorry, that I saw them there?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. LINDSEY. I did not go there with the intention of having a conversation with Beverly or Archie.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you see why the Committee is interested in this point? Is it a stretch to suggest that after this memo or this jotting of the President, this direction—

Mr. LINDSEY. Senator, let me—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just finish and then you can answer.

Mr. LINDSEY. I'm sorry, I'm sorry.

The CHAIRMAN. Given that this note by the President, this is important to be on top of, Bassett did a good job in the campaign on this, can she now, or will she now, and that this was sent to you and to the Chief of Staff, is it unreasonable for us to say this was an attempt to make contact and to stay on top of this? I mean, do you think that's unreasonable?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't think it's the facts. I think that if I had called Beverly Schaffer up on the 21st and had a conversation with her, that would not be improper. If I had, you know—I do not believe having—I don't know what the point of this is. I spoke with Beverly—I spoke with Archie Schaffer.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't understand the point of the question?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't understand what the point—yes, sir, I don't understand. I don't understand my response to it is, so what.

The CHAIRMAN. If I have to explain that to you, Mr. Lindsey, and talk about the manner in which the White House has gone to withhold this and then the concern which was expressed at this point in time in the President's own message, then there's no use—

Mr. LINDSEY. Senator—

The CHAIRMAN. No, there's no use. I just wanted to attempt to put this in the framework so that you would not think that we're just going on, and I'm going to yield to Senator Bond because these are the circumstances under which we learn about this information. And I think reasonable people would say, was that a meeting set up to give you and/or the President the opportunity to meet with the Schaffers and others to take care of this, was it part of staying on top of this? So that's something that I would ask.

Mr. LINDSEY. Take care of what, Senator?

The CHAIRMAN. This is what the President said, this is important to stay on top of, Bassett did a good job on this, can she now.

Mr. LINDSEY. That's right, Senator. There is an editorial that is written—may I finish, please? I have read some of your responses to various editorials. It is entirely appropriate, if there is an editorial that mischaracterizes somebody's role in something, for someone who knows the facts to say we can't let this stay out there with this mischaracterization, can we get on top of this, can we try to get the facts out.

There is simply nothing improper about that, and the so what is I'm having trouble, and I apologize, it must be me, as to what the significance of this is.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. Senator Bond.

Senator BOND. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Kennedy, let me go back over an area where I'm not clear. You were managing partner at the Rose Law Firm in 1992?

Mr. KENNEDY. Good afternoon, Senator. My formal title was Chief Operating Officer but—

Senator BOND. Chief Operating Officer.

Mr. KENNEDY. —managing partner is fine.

Senator BOND. OK, sorry. Just needed to get that straight.

Now, your responsibility as a COO included the administrative details, is that correct, like handling the files, handling the work of the firm as opposed—the administrative work of the firm as opposed to solely the legal practice?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Senator BOND. Were you responsible for the maintenance of the files? Is that under your—

Mr. KENNEDY. I tried to make the trains run on time, Senator.

Senator BOND. OK. Were you aware that Mr. Foster had requested Mr. Massey to produce the files in the instance where Mr. Foster went to Mr. Massey and said please give me the files, Mr. Massey said I'll make you copies? Were you aware of that request?

Mr. KENNEDY. I was aware, Senator, that Vince was going to make a response on behalf of the law firm with regard to the Madison issues that had come up in the campaign. I did not know, didn't have any independent knowledge at the time that he had talked to Rick. Doesn't surprise me that he did.

Senator BOND. So the preparation by Mr. Foster was—essentially within the purview of your responsibility as COO, you did not know that he had taken copies of the files?

Mr. KENNEDY. I am going to give you a little bit of a longer answer, if I may, because I think the background is important.

Vince was one of two people at the firm that were dealing with campaign issues as they came up during the campaign, and that's—the Madison issues came up in the campaign, issues regarding the firm's representation came up during the campaign, and he was responding on behalf of the firm.

Now several times this morning people have said that Vince took the files. I don't know if Vince took them or not. If he did take them, I don't know when he took them. All I know is, at the time, that Vince gathered the files so that he could respond to these issues on behalf of the firm.

Senator BOND. Mr. Chairman, my time is up. I will come back to that.

The CHAIRMAN. If you want to pursue that, I will give you additional time.

Senator BOND. Let me finish up with this line of questioning. I have a couple of other lines to get into but let me finish up this.

When did you become aware that files—either copies or files from the Rose Law Firm had gone to the campaign or to people outside of the Rose Law Firm who had connections to the campaign?

Mr. KENNEDY. Senator, which files are we talking about?

Senator BOND. The Madison Guaranty/Whitewater files.

Mr. KENNEDY. There's been some confusion as to—and I would like to take a moment to simply see if I can clear it up. There was a group of files which related to the firm's Madison representation. There was another group of files which related to—and this is what I tried to address this morning but I'm told I didn't do a very good job—there was another group of files that related to Whitewater the corporation and Whitewater the real estate development which I had received from Mrs. Clinton in 1991. The reference in the notes, as I testified this morning, was to the Whitewater corporate records and the Whitewater real estate records.

Senator BOND. Now, you said it was a vacuum. It wasn't a Dust Buster or Hoover, there was an absence?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, an informational vacuum.

Senator BOND. What types of information were missing from those files?

Mr. KENNEDY. Take your pick, Senator. They were a shambles. No stock minute book, no minutes, no stock certificates. Any of the normal corporate records that you would expect to find were not in existence. Incomplete copies of documents, half portions of documents. It was a mess, and that's what I was referring to.

Senator BOND. Those files had been the responsibility—are you saying those files had been the responsibility of Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. KENNEDY. They were at one time in Mrs. Clinton's possession, yes, sir.

Senator BOND. And who was the lead partner on that Whitewater—

Mr. KENNEDY. This representation?

Senator BOND. Yes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Me, Senator.

Senator BOND. So under your care, there were gross absences or missing elements in those files?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, that's the condition they were in when—

Senator BOND. Who was responsible for that condition?

Mr. KENNEDY. I can't answer that, Senator. That's—Senator BOND. Who was responsible for the files before they came in their sorry condition to you?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, they came to me from Mrs. Clinton, start there. When they were given to me by her, she owned up to the fact that they were a mess, and that's what I found to be true, OK?

Now why they were incomplete, on whose watch, I can't address, I don't know. I have heard from press reports that there is a dispute about those records. The McDougals say they were delivered at one point; my understanding is the President and First Lady said they weren't.

I can testify of my own personal knowledge that they were a mess, what I received from Mrs. Clinton. Again for clarity, this is the Whitewater corporate records and the records that were in Mrs. Clinton's possession as they related to the real estate development.

Senator BOND. Now with respect to the Madison Guaranty files, were those, in fact, the ones that Mr. Massey had access to?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, as I understand things, Senator—and I would not have known this at the time because I wouldn't have had any reason to—Rick had a set of files regarding his representation, and I believe Mrs. Clinton had a set of files with regard to her representation. And there—

Senator BOND. Of Madison?

Mr. KENNEDY. Of Madison. And there may have been, Senator, other attorneys in the firm that had files relating to representation of Madison.

Senator BOND. When did you become aware some of those files had left the firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. I didn't become aware of that until late in November 1993—well, let me—I need to put some content in that.

I didn't become aware that the files—and I don't know if they're originals or copies—had left the firm until 1994, primarily from press reports, I believe, but I had a conversation with Mr. Kendall in November 1993, regarding returning files to the law firm, OK? And I surmise that those files were Madison files that had been removed.

Senator BOND. And as a COO, do you have ultimate responsibility for insuring that files are not released without the approval of the client?

Mr. KENNEDY. Senator, in an abstract sense, that's correct, absolutely. But on a day-to-day basis, there is no way that I or Mr. Clark, having taken my place, can do that. You just can't do that when you have a firm full of 50 or 60 lawyers. We did not have a reporting mechanism of any kind where someone said so-and-so client wants copies of or wants their files back. We just didn't operate that way.

Senator BOND. But it would only be to the client, would it not, that you released those files?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, unless—

Senator BOND. As you said, unless you had the express approval of the client.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes. Of course, Senator, without quibbling with you, as you know from your own experience, there are other ways files might go out, law enforcement agencies and whatnot, but the fact is you would not ordinarily do it unless you had the client's consent.

Senator BOND. Well, it would seem to me, based on my limited experience, that files would not go out to someone other than the client without having the approval of what we used to call the managing partner or the COO.

Mr. KENNEDY. Senator, I stand by my testimony. The way we operated it would be impossible, and I think I could say that, even today, to know for sure every time a client wanted copies of information or the files themselves, we just—

Senator BOND. Or somebody other than a client. That's what I'm asking you about. If it were not the client having files go out—

Mr. KENNEDY. If it were not the client, then I would expect that that would come to my attention.

Senator BOND. I believe I worked for a law firm that may have used the same professional liability insurer as the Rose Law Firm, and I can tell you that I had been advised on occasion that no files can go out of the law firm without the express approval of the client. They had not so advised you?

Mr. KENNEDY. As I said, Senator, the answer to your question is that the files could not leave the law firm at this point in time or now willy-nilly, absolutely. It would require the client's consent or other extenuating circumstances for the files to leave the firm.

Senator BOND. Finally, who was the client?

Mr. KENNEDY. At which point in time?

Senator BOND. In 1992.

Mr. KENNEDY. One second.

Senator there's a complicated answer to that, as you know.

Senator BOND. Isn't it the RTC?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Senator BOND. You didn't receive any approval from the RTC for those files to go to persons outside the law firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. None came to me, Senator, but I wish to state again I don't know for sure that those files did go to persons other than the client.

Senator BOND. We got them back from somebody who was not the client.

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't know exactly what happened there, Senator. I don't know if they were originals or copies. I don't know.

Senator BOND. Goes just the same for a copy, doesn't it, as the original? You don't let copies of files go out to somebody who isn't the client, do you?

Mr. KENNEDY. As a general matter, that's true.

Senator BOND. I think it's more than a general matter.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Senator Sarbanes, I thank you so that we could finish that line, and we did go well over our time.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lindsey, if my recollection serves me right, just from following the press, the President is a fan of the University of Arkansas basketball team, is he not?

Mr. LINDSEY. That he is, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Going to a basketball game is something you would expect the President to do?

Mr. LINDSEY. If we are in Arkansas, or even if we are not in Arkansas at times, and the Razorbacks are playing, he would try to go, yes.

Senator SARBANES. I guess the suggestion here was that attending this basketball game was a disguise for meeting with either Mr. Schaffer or Mrs. Schaffer or both. Is there any basis to that?

Mr. LINDSEY. Absolutely none.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, you could have gotten in touch with them without going to the basketball game, couldn't you?

Mr. LINDSEY. Absolutely. And I spoke to Mr. Schaffer on occasion after this about this matter.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, there was nothing wrong with you getting in touch with them, was there?

Mr. LINDSEY. Not in my judgment, no, sir.

Senator SARBANES. I take it the purpose of it was to see if Ms. Schaffer would be willing, in effect, to say what had taken place just as she did during the campaign; is that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, sir. And again, if—the memorandums, she went to some length to detail the steps she took and, you know, again, the records of the State Securities Commissioner are there for anyone to look at, and I would just defy anyone to take an objective look at those records and say that she did not do everything within her authority and power to properly manage and regulate Madison Guaranty. I just defy them. I don't believe that they can find a basis for claiming that she did not do what a good regulator should do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Senator.

With respect to the Whitewater files, Mr. Kennedy, you're almost there, in my view, in terms of clarifying this distinction.

Mr. KENNEDY. I'm trying, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The Whitewater files that were provided to you by Mrs. Clinton in when, late 1991, did you say?

Mr. KENNEDY. Actually early 1991.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Early 1991. Do you know whether those files were files that Mrs. Clinton had maintained herself for some period of time, or whether those were files that she had received from some other source?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, Mr. Ben-Veniste, I don't think that I delved deeply into where these files had come from, but I got the distinct impression that Hillary was not generally familiar with them other than the fact that they were in a shambles, and I got the impression that she had not maintained those files.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is our information that the files were received from Mrs. Clinton at some point from an accountant or bookkeeper who had been employed by Mr. McDougal to maintain those files or to work on them.

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe that's correct. There's also an assertion out, which has been reported in the press, that the McDougals claim that they delivered records to Mrs. Clinton at some point in the mid-1980's.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In looking at the files, were these business records as compared with legal files?

Mr. KENNEDY. A mishmash of both.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the Madison Guaranty files, Mr. Massey testified that the files he provided to Mr. Foster, which then made their way as copies to Mr. Hubbell, which were then turned over to Mr. Kendall, and then when Mr. Kendall recognized them as being Rose Law Firm files, returned them to the Rose Law Firm, those files did not deal with Whitewater, did they?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Those were files that Mr. Massey has testified were maintained by him in connection with the securities matter that he had researched and had written about and maintained in connection with the Rose Firm's representation of Madison?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that those files which made that circle were in the possession of someone, to the best of your knowledge and our present knowledge, were in the possession of a partner of the Rose Law Firm up until the point that Mr. Hubbell turned them over to Mr. Kendall as a part of a larger body of documents that he provided to Mr. Kendall, and then they were in turn returned by Mr. Kendall to the firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's my understanding, Mr. Ben-Veniste. I have to say, I don't have much independent knowledge about this circle, but that's my understanding of what's happened.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Those files, from a substantive point of view, have been reviewed by us, and again are completely unremarkable in terms of information that would suggest any impropriety, so far as we have been able to establish at this point. Mr. Massey has been very clear in his testimony about what those files comprised.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's my understanding, Senator. I mean, Mr. Ben-Veniste. Pardon me.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Finally, Mr. Massey confirmed that he compared the files that were returned to his original files which he had maintained all along and which were available to any appropriate agency who had the authority to seek them. His testimony was that the files that were returned were a complete duplicate set of the original files which he continued to have in his possession.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's what he testified to, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I would yield back the balance of our time.

Senator BOND. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

To pick up, Mr. Lindsey, you were certainly present there and involved in many different ways. I asked Mr. Kennedy several questions about the files. Did you know at the time, or do you now know, how the Madison Guaranty files or the copies thereof left the Rose Law Firm and wound up in this Washington transfer to Mr. Kendall? Do you know how they got out?

Mr. LINDSEY. I do not know how they got out of the Rose Law Firm. I do know something about if they were among the files at the campaign, how they wound up with Mr. Hubbell, and I guess—I think I knew Mr. Hubbell had ultimately returned them to Mr. Kendall. And then I heard during the hearing—

Senator BOND. Excuse me?

Mr. LINDSEY. —I heard during the hearing about how Mr. Kendall sent them back to the Rose Law Firm, but I do not know how they went from—I did not—first, I did not know there were Madison files in there. I just knew that whatever information the campaign had went to Mr. Hubbell, who stored them for a while, who ultimately gave them to Mr. Kendall, who returned them to the Rose Law Firm.

Senator BOND. Mr. Ben-Veniste had asked whether they were always in the control of a Rose Law Firm partner. If they were—the files were at the campaign, were they in the control of a Rose Law Firm partner?

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, again, I don't know exactly where these files were. If they were part of the files that were in Ms. Wright's possession, I do not believe they all the time would have been in the control of a Rose Law Firm partner.

Senator BOND. Mr. Hubbell, when he was in Washington in his position, was no longer a partner of the Rose Law Firm; correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct. At the point Mr. Hubbell picked up the files from Ms. Wright, if in fact these files were in that group, he was a partner in the Rose Firm but he subsequently withdrew.

Senator BOND. Mr. Kennedy, as the COO, is it not clear that even though a person had been a partner of the law firm, that person once he is no longer a partner does not have a right to have copies of the files without the client's permission; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. Senator, I would not go so far as to say that. It would depend on the facts and circumstances. I want to stress, I'm not trying in any way, shape or form to quibble with you. But for example, as long as they're—if—undertook a representation and the originals remained with the firm, it's possible that it would be OK to take copies as long as originals remained with the firm.

Senator BOND. I think you will find that's not acceptable. We're not going to argue that here, but I think that—I do not believe that that is permissible or acceptable. That is another—we won't get into that. You've stated your views.

Let me ask you about another area. Were you aware that, in February 1992, a summary of the billing records of Mrs. Clinton mysteriously now turned up in the White House? We have the summary page printed in February 1992, with other records. Were you aware at the time or of the circumstances of the printing-out of those records?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I was not.

Senator BOND. Were you aware that these billing records had been delivered to somebody outside the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. At the time, no, sir, I was not. And I don't know if they ever have been.

Senator BOND. Mr. Lindsey, were you aware of the printing of the summary of the billing records?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir.

Senator BOND. Or do you know when or how they had been delivered to someone outside the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir. You said when or how, I would add or if.

Senator BOND. So you don't know that somehow they got to us mysteriously, and we are trying to track down that mystery. Something happened. Maybe it was supernatural transmogrification, and that is unlikely but in this inquiry, nothing is impossible.

Mr. Eggleston, you sat in on GAO interviews of the White House staff involved in Travelgate, did you not?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, sir.

Senator BOND. Did you sit in on the interviews of the Office of Professional Review?

Mr. EGGLESTON. When I said yes, sir, to the first one, I sat in on some interviews of GAO, probably most, and some interviews of OPR, probably most. I don't know that I could tell you, Senator, that I sat in on all of them.

Senator BOND. How about the FBI interviews?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No.

Senator BOND. You did not sit in on those. Were you present when Mr. Watkins was interviewed?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I was present when—I remember Mr. Watkins being interviewed at the GAO. I do not remember specifically whether I was there when he was interviewed by the OPR but it's perfectly possible. I have read in the paper that he was interviewed by the FBI on April 10, 1993, or something around that time. I know I didn't attend that, I was not at the White House yet.

Senator BOND. Were you aware of the interviews—did you sit in on any of the interviews of Mr. Kennedy?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I think I sat in on the—it is hard for me to remember any specific individual I sat in on. I think I sat in on Mr. Kennedy's GAO interview.

Senator BOND. Mr. Nussbaum?

Mr. EGGLESTON. He may have been—I just don't remember. This process, Senator Bond, was already well underway by the time that I arrived at the White House. I came in mid-to-late September and the GAO interviews had already begun. I just don't remember whether he had already been interviewed or not.

Senator BOND. Did you see records of any of the interviews of those which you did not sit in?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't think so.

Senator BOND. But you sat in on some, so you had a pretty good sense of what was being said?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes. And more than some. I sat in on most, and possibly all. I just can't quite say all because I'm not sure what happened and I haven't gone back to look.

Senator BOND. Mr. Foster, or—well, you would not have—

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Foster was—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, is this with respect to Travelgate?

Senator BOND. I am trying to establish what the basis of this—of these discussions and advice that Mr. Eggleston gave was.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. Continue.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clinger is doing Travelgate and he is going to be doing it tomorrow, isn't he?

The CHAIRMAN. I think for limited purposes I am going to allow the Senator to continue. We are not getting into the whole area. We are getting into those matters that Mr. Eggleston may know about.

Senator BOND. I will conclude this with just a couple of questions, and I certainly don't want to interfere with Mr. Clinger's area. But Mr. Eggleston, so you did know what these people in the White House had said about Travelgate?

Mr. EGGLESTON. If they said it in a GAO interview, it's likely that I did.

Senator BOND. You were not aware at the time of this now famous Watkins' memo, undated memo, stating his views on it?

Mr. EGGLESTON. That's correct. I learned about that in the newspaper last week, the week before. I've lost track of weeks. Whenever it appeared in the newspaper, that's when I learned about it.

Senator BOND. And did you draft Mrs. Clinton's response to the GAO?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes.

Senator BOND. Did you discuss with her any of the information relating to what had been elicited in the aforementioned interviews?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I don't really remember. I remember discussing with her the answers that she was going to give to the questions.

Senator BOND. So you were able to insure that her answers would be consistent with what was then known by the investigators looking at the Travelgate affair prior to the time that she submitted those written responses?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I knew, because I'd sat in on most of the interviews, what other people had said. Of course, this was not the first investigation. The White House Management Report had already done it. I got her answers by giving her the questions and asking her what the answers were to the questions.

Senator BOND. But you knew everything—at that time you knew everything except what Mr. Watkins put in this now—this undated memo, which outlines his position, and the answers that Mrs. Clinton gave in that GAO response were consistent with what had been stated previously by other witnesses who testified in your presence before the GAO?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Generally consistent. Even in his GAO interview, Mr. Watkins was, as I recall at least, more—sort of had a greater role for Mrs. Clinton than she recalled. In fact, I remember drafting the specific answer, because the GAO had posed a particular question and had sort of excerpted from Mr. Watkins' GAO interview, and I asked her about that and said—because they said—one of the questions was do you remember that, is that accurate, is Mr. Watkins accurately summarizing it. And she said Neil, I remember the circumstance of Mr. Watkins calling me, I was getting dressed for a function or the like. I just don't remember it in this much detail, which is the answer that we put down. In fact, they were not even entirely consistent at the time but they were what her recollection was, as related to me, about the events.

Senator BOND. Thank you very much, Mr. Eggleston.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate your indulgence.

And just to add a little more reading material, I look forward to reading the Anthony Lewis' article that our Ranking Member presented, and I would just offer The Wall Street Journal editorial of January 12, 1996, so that another view of editorial comments may also be included in the record.

The CHAIRMAN. It will be included in the record.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, while we're at this, then, let's put in Tom Oliphant's column.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine. Tom Oliphant's column.

Senator BOND. For each one they offer, I'm sure we can offer one, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

The Minority has kindly consented to permit Mr. Chertoff to continue so we could fulfill our line of questioning and hopefully conclude this matter with these witnesses today at this time.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Lindsey, I would like you to turn to the typed version of the notes of the November 5th meeting, which are at S 12535.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Mr. Chertoff, I'm sorry to do this, but Mr. Bond asked me whether I sat in on any FBI interviews. I know I didn't sit in on Mr. Watkins. I didn't remember any others. I think I answered a blanket no, and I'm sitting here thinking to myself, I don't remember about other FBI but I know I didn't sit in on Mr. Watkins.

When I answered you, Senator Bond, I was thinking about the Watkins' interview and I think I was interpreting your question as being a Watkins' question. I did not sit in on the Watkins' interview. I just really don't remember about the others, but I didn't want to sit here and leave that record what I think was probably slightly inaccurate.

Senator BOND. But you did state, I recall that you did sit in on the Watkins' GAO interview?

Mr. EGGLESTON. Yes, I did, I did. But it was the issue—I think I blanketly told you that I hadn't sat in on any FBI interviews. I don't really remember about that. I'm certain I did not sit in on his FBI interview, Watkins' FBI interview, particularly if it was August 10 because I wasn't at the White House then.

Senator BOND. Thank you, Mr. Eggleston.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Kennedy, I want to direct your attention to where it says 1978, and I want you to follow along with me in reading this. It says—this is S 12535.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, I'm there, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's up on the board. It says, "AG plus HRC new lawyer at RLF." What that means is Attorney General and Bill Clinton was then Attorney General; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Hillary Rodham Clinton was a new lawyer at the Rose Law Firm; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It goes on, "McDougal may have approached Clinton—few things that could do. Buy—subdivide—sell lots and get rich." Is that a discussion of your understanding—and when I say "you," I mean, all of you at the November 5th meeting—of the beginnings of the Whitewater Development investment?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I believe that at this point in the November 5th meeting, Mr. Lyons is speaking now, and he has gone back to providing background, historical background.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So this is Lyons giving you all historical background on the beginning of the Whitewater investment; right? Is that right, Mr. Kennedy?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe that's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. LINDSEY. I'm sorry, can I also respond?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm still with Mr. Kennedy.

Mr. LINDSEY. OK, I'm sorry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was Mr. Lyons someone that had conducted some examination or investigation for the campaign, and afterwards, on the beginnings of that investment?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, he had prepared—he had worked on Whitewater issues for the campaign. You put a tag in there, after the campaign. I don't know about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But during the campaign?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood him to be knowledgeable about Whitewater as much as any of you sitting in the meeting; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, without the qualifier, let's just say he was knowledgeable.

Mr. CHERTOFF. At this point in the meeting, he was now presenting his understanding of the facts to Mr. Kendall and to everybody else; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe at this point he had started to talk, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So this portion that I have read says McDougal may have approached Clinton with some propositions of things that they could do together from an investment standpoint, and they talked about buying, subdividing, selling lots, and getting rich. That related to the notion of buying the Whitewater property, subdividing and selling the lots off and making a lot of money; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. With the caveat, I want to focus on the word "may," Mr. Chertoff. I believe what Mr. Lyons was saying at the time is this is how it may have happened.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is based upon his examination of the facts during the campaign?

Mr. KENNEDY. Let's just say it was based on his knowledge, his understanding.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The next line says, "No cash—100 percent leverage." Now, 100 percent leverage, what does that mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. It means that you do something with borrowed money.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It means you don't put any money out of your own pocket into the investment, no cash, it means you get someone else to put up all of the money that is going to represent your stake in an investment; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, it doesn't necessarily mean that, Mr. Chertoff. It could mean the absence of cash, but you could have equity coming from other sources.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But what it means, when someone says no cash, 100 percent leverage, what it means is that person is not putting any cash into the deal, they are going to borrow—of their own, they are going to borrow the money and get 100 percent leverage; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I would like to continue to give you my answer, which is, I take it this way, there is—you're almost completely right, but it is possible to use 100 percent leverage and still have equity in something but put no cash up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yeah, and in that situation what that means is you get the stock but the money that's used to invest to get you the stock is borrowed from somebody else; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. It can mean that with the qualifier that I just put on it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In this case, when you wrote down, "No cash—100 percent leverage," Mr. Lyons was telling you that his understanding was that the Clintons had not put any cash into Whitewater; right, at the beginning in 1978?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, Mr. Chertoff. What these lines represent is Mr. Lyons saying this is how it may have happened. This group, this group of notes talks about, this may have been the pitch that McDougal made to the then-Governor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it may have been the way it happened, that McDougal said in substance, look, we can buy these lots, we can subdivide them, we can get rich. You won't put up any money. We will borrow all the money that reflects your part of the investment and you'll have 100 percent leverage. That's what Mr. Lyons says is the way it may have been?

Mr. KENNEDY. Again, I want to stress the word "may." He's saying this may have been the pitch.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You will agree with me that leverage is when you borrow the money or you use someone else's money as opposed to your own investment, out of your own pocket?

Mr. KENNEDY. Generally so, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When Mr. Lyons was having this discussion, I mean you weren't at this point just sitting around chewing the fat about what might have happened; you were getting this information out because it was necessary to give Mr. Kendall the facts surrounding the Whitewater investment so he could begin to represent the Clintons in this investigation; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When Mr. Lyons said this is the way it may have been, did anybody ask well, have we checked to find out?

Mr. KENNEDY. Check with regard to what, Mr. Chertoff?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did someone say to Mr. Lyons, well, you are saying this may have been the pitch. Did anybody ask Mr. Lyons whether he had checked with the Clintons to see if, in fact, that was the pitch?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I don't recall anybody posing that question to Mr. Lyons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did anyone challenge Mr. Lyons' account of the way it may have begun in 1978?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't believe anybody had reason to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So no one had reason to doubt that the initial pitch that was made to the Clintons by Mr. McDougal involved no cash, 100 percent leverage; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, you keep saying this as if it's a matter of fact, and your questions indicate that. I need to emphasize the word "may" in these notes. Mr. Lyons was not saying this is what happened. He says this is what may have happened.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't Mr. Lyons the person who in the campaign had the assignment of finding out what the facts were?

Mr. KENNEDY. I cannot tell you independently, in other words things that I know from my own personal involvement, exactly what his task was. Obviously, my understanding is that he was tasked to prepare a response on behalf of the campaign to the Whitewater issues that were swirling around in the 1992 Presidential campaign. I do not know exactly what the content of that assignment was. I'm sorry, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But I mean, Mr. Lyons came for a purpose to give facts to the lawyer. Didn't you think in this—when you were sitting in that meeting, that Mr. Lyons had, in the course of his investigations, asked the Clintons how this got started?

Mr. KENNEDY. I have no idea, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did anyone say in the meeting—you're telling us in the meeting that it may have—Mr. Lyons said well, it may have started this way. Did anyone at the meeting say well, did you ever check with the Clintons and find out what they remember?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, nobody to my—to the absolute best of my memory, nobody posed such a question to Mr. Lyons.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact Mr. Lyons went on to describe, in the course of the meeting, the fact that the Clintons had borrowed the money from a bank to invest in their initial share of this White-water deal; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, along with the McDougals.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The Clintons had borrowed 100 percent; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I believe that's correct, but there are, as the notes reflect later on, there was, you know, some work done prior to the time they got into it. I don't know if it was treated back then as equity because of the site work that had been done. I just don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But this discussion here in terms of what Mr. Lyons was saying to the assembled group was that the deal was supposed to be, may have been no cash, 100 percent leverage; is that right?

Mr. KENNEDY. What Mr. Lyons was saying is this may have been the pitch.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And no one there had any contrary information here in November 1993, a year and a half after this matter was first raised in the press, no one sitting around the table there had any contrary information?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't know if anyone did or didn't. There was no discussion. Mr. Lyons said this may have been how it got started. I didn't consider it any big deal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't consider it a big deal that—whether or not the Clintons were able to borrow 100 percent of their initial investment in this project without having to put any money down or something like that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Again, I don't know whether you have just made a correct assertion or not, I do not know, but we're talking about a loan which, at this point in time, was 15 years old.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm operating off of the notes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, I understand that, but you also asked me why I didn't think it was a big deal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me go on further. The next page goes on to say, kind of the middle of the page, "HRC"—

Mr. KENNEDY. Are we on 12536?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say this. We will make more progress if we can let him complete this. The rule also is either side can claim 15 minutes when we're down to two but I would rather not get into that. Let's let Mr. Chertoff finish this line of questioning, and then of course, whatever time the Minority needs to make its point, we'll be happy to make available.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now it says, "HRC"—

Senator SARBANES. I just want to elucidate it, as we move along but if that's how the Chairman wants to do it, we'll have to come back and pick up on it again. But it seems to me in terms of trying to actually find out what occurred at this meeting, we ought to pursue this, but that's all right. I'll pick up on it as—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll move to the next section. Is there other discussion about the issue of 100 percent leverage that you remember having at this meeting, Mr. Kennedy?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't recall any further discussion about the assertion that this is something that Mr. McDougal may have said to then-Governor Clinton.

Senator SARBANES. Since we have the other two people who were also at the meeting, why don't we find out their view on this subject matter?

The CHAIRMAN. Because we've done pretty well, and this is not always easy, I'm going to ask that Mr. Chertoff continue to go through this, and then, Senator Sarbanes, any questions that you wish to address either to Mr. Kennedy for clarification, Mr. Lindsey or Mr. Eggleston, it will be absolutely appropriate. Not that it's not appropriate to say well, look, we're at 10 minutes, but again we're down to 2. The rules provide for us to take up to 15 minutes when we have less than 5 members.

Senator SARBANES. I'm not going to argue the red light. The only point I was making is I take it Mr. Chertoff is moving to a different issue, and before we do that, I thought we ought to get from the other 2 people who were at the meeting their response to this same line of questioning with respect to this matter about which he's been asking.

The CHAIRMAN. He's actually continuing the same issue, so why don't we let him develop it and we will provide them all with ample opportunity to respond.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You continue on to the next page and the meeting continues to discuss the course of this investment; right? And it goes, for example on the third line, "1979, WWDC formed." That means that's the date that Whitewater Development Corporation was formed as expressed in the meeting; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then it goes on to say, "Lot sales were slow—44 Lots. 230 Acres. HUD Interstate Land Sales Prospectus, Real Estate Slows Down. McDougal and Clinton advance and to service debt." What did that mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. I think that's one of my—on this particular—it's not an ampersand. In the handwritten notes, it's actually a dollar sign. "McDougal and Clinton advance dollars to service debt."

Mr. CHERTOFF. So at this point after the initial notion that we were going to invest and subdivide and get rich, it turns out real estate starts to go down and they have to start advancing money to service the debt because the sales of the lots aren't generating enough income to pay the debt back that was borrowed; right? Is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe that's what happened, yes, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It goes on to say, "1981: McDougal—put in more dollars in than ? year." Who said that? Where did that come from, still Mr. Lyons?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe again this is Mr. Lyons' portion of the meeting, as it were, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then it goes, "W—buy a show home and put on one of the lots." What is the W there?

Mr. KENNEDY. I think it is referring to Whitewater the corporation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But then it goes, "HRC—McDougal loan from MBT—will buy lot 13, 2.5 acres. Accelerate sales. McDougal also has a loan at Madison Bank." What did that refer to?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, it requires a little bit of background, Mr. Chertoff. As I know this Committee knows and it has been fairly widely reported, Mrs. Clinton bought from Whitewater the corporation one of the lots, at which point a home was put on it to spur sales so it could serve as a demonstration home, and this is talking about that transaction.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now that lot was bought with a personal loan that she received; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe that's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did that come from Madison Bank and Trust?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe so, Mr. Chertoff, but I'm now speaking from sort of what I recall, the actual documents would tell you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And is that lot that she purchased, using a loan from a bank that she took out in her own name, was that lot 13?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe that's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there discussion in the meeting about why it was that Mrs. Clinton would have taken out a personal loan in order to set up a demonstration project for Whitewater Development and why she wouldn't have insisted that the corporation be the one to take out the loan?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I don't recall any discussion along those lines. I mean again, Mr. Lyons is sort of reciting historical fact here.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What is the reference to "McDougal also has a loan at Madison Bank" mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. I think Mr. Lyons said McDougal at the time also had a loan from Madison Bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the significance of that?

Mr. KENNEDY. I think if you read on into the notes, the significance of it was that payments on Mrs. Clinton's loan got screwed up, or misapplied, whatever the case was, and actually went to pay off a McDougal loan as opposed to her own.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your understanding is that there was, as you put it, a screwup at the bank and they misapplied the loan payments?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't know who did what, Mr. Chertoff, but I do know that, as the Lyon report indicated, and again as has been, I think, relatively widely reported, that the Clintons attempted to make a payment on this loan which was misapplied.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I see Mr. Lindsey is chafing to get into the fray here, but I want to focus, if I may, attention, Mr. Lindsey, on what was said at the meeting. I understand there has been a lot of preparation to respond to these issues over a long period of time. But during the meeting, as displayed in the notes here, beginning where I began at 1978, what is your recollection about what was said about no cash, 100 percent leverage?

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, you kept referring that to the Clintons' participation. I believe that refers to everybody's participation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK.

Mr. LINDSEY. There was—the property was bought for about $202,000. As you well know—it's reflected in there—$182,000 was borrowed from Citizens Bank in Flippin and $20,000 was borrowed from Union National Bank. So the entire project, not just the Clintons' part but the McDougals' part too, was leveraged.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's fair. But McDougal came up according to these notes, again at the meeting, we're talking about what was said at the meeting, and I take it you agree it was Mr. Lyons who is reporting here?

Mr. LINDSEY. Right. I believe at this point Mr. Lyons has taken over. I'll note the "get rich," according to the Stevens' Report, the most—if everything had been absolutely perfect in terms of interest rates and everything else, the most the Clintons could have made on this entire project was around $47,500.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I guess that means different things in different places.

Mr. LINDSEY. But again, I think it is important to know that again we are not talking about the Clintons being leveraged by the McDougals, we are talking about that the entire project was leveraged—

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the bank.

Mr. LINDSEY. By the bank, right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me stop you—

Mr. LINDSEY. The other point is, if I may finish, is both the Clintons and McDougals were personally liable on those loans—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand.

Mr. LINDSEY. —so that the bank had the right to go against the Clintons, the McDougals, or both to get their money. So that in effect the Clintons were $202,000 responsible for this project, not $101,000 or zero dollars.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't want to argue this with you. The point is to ask questions about what occurred at the meeting and I want to make sure we are correct on your recollection of the discussion at the meeting. And this is Mr. Lyons who is talking here; right? Is that—

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes, it's Mr. Lyons that's talking.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have to answer questions. We are not dialoguing here.

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. According to what Mr. Lyons said, Mr. Lindsey, am I correct that it was Mr. McDougal who came forward with the plan, and as you point out quite properly, for both the McDougals and the Clintons to leverage themselves 100 percent using the bank as the source of funds?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct, but personally liable on all those loans.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then as we continue along, you will agree, will you not, that Mr. Lyons indicated that in 1979 the corporation was formed?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct. If I may, just to make it clear, in the original, the loans and the property were taken out in the Clintons' and McDougals' name. There was no corporate structure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right. And they were not required to put any money of their own into the project like a down payment?

Mr. LINDSEY. Well, they borrowed $20,000 from Union National Bank for the down payment.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So they borrowed the down payment?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct, both of them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Unlike, for example, people who go to get a mortgage, just to put it in simple terms, those of us who are refinancing or getting our houses, we go to the bank, the bank usually says you have to put X amount up as a down payment and you can't borrow it. In this case what was put up is the down payment at one bank was borrowed from a second bank. Is that what you're telling us?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct. In 1979, they formed a corporation and they transferred the property to the corporation. My understanding is the debt was not transferred to the corporation, that they continued throughout up until 1991-92 to be personally liable on the unpaid balance of the debt.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As Mr. Lyons indicated in the notes, the original idea and the hope here was that the revenues or the money being earned by selling the lots would be more than sufficient to pay off the debt; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And if that worked out as it was planned, and as Mr. McDougal and the Clintons originally thought it would, this would be a deal in which, after having borrowed all the money to start up the project, the payment of the loan back would be covered by the proceeds of the sales, and in the end, they would have free and clear their profit? That was the idea; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. If everything—if they had sold all the lots from day one and if interest rates had stayed basically equal with respect to what they could charge and what the banks were charging them, yes, the Pillsbury Madison Report indicates that they would have probably made about $47,000 each, if all of that had occurred.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now again, Mr. Lindsey, I know you're eager to get into discussing a whole lot of things, but we have to keep it to what's being discussed here in November 1993 before there was a Pillsbury Report.

Mr. LINDSEY. But of course, the Pillsbury Madison Report confirms the Lyons' Report.

The CHAIRMAN. Please, come on. Please.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lindsey, you're an attorney and you understand the way the rules work. Now, I want to just go on. In 1981, it says Mr. Lyons indicated the McDougals had "put in more money than ? year." What was that?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't know exactly what that is, but I think the record would reflect that by 1981 the Clintons had put up more money—excuse me, the McDougals had put more money into it than the Clintons had in terms of money to service the debt.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And then finally down here, this reference that I asked Mr. Kennedy about, "HRC—McDougal loan from MBT," is that the Madison Bank and Trust?

Mr. LINDSEY. My understanding is yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "Will buy lot 13, 2.5 acres. Accelerate sales. McDougal also has a loan at Madison Bank." Am I correct that that refers to Mrs. Clinton taking out a loan from Madison Bank and Trust or its successor bank in order to purchase lot 13?

Mr. LINDSEY. Yes. You made the point that that was a personal loan. I guess my only quibbling with that is that all the loans were personal loans, including the mortgage loan, including the Union loan, including the refinancing of those loans. But yes, this was a personal loan as well.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me stop you, Mr. Lindsey. The original loans that were taken out personally were taken out before the corporation was formed; right?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it your testimony that, after the corporation was formed in 1979, the corporation never took out loans?

Mr. LINDSEY. I don't know the answer to that. My sense is that if—good banking would say that this corporation, as highly leveraged as it was, that you would at least—if you didn't require the individuals to take the loan, you would at least require them to be guarantors of the loan, which would personally put them on the loan as well.

So whether the corporation took it and Mrs. Clinton guaranteed that or whether Mrs. Clinton took it, I think is quibbling basically.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me finish up with this because you say it's quibbling, because that's kind of what's puzzling about this, and I want to ask you whether this was discussed at the meeting.

If what you say is correct and it doesn't make a difference, then obviously it's generally better to be the guarantor on a loan rather than to be the first person who is principally liable, because the guarantor only pays if the corporation is not able to pay.

So the question is this. Was there discussion at the meeting of a reason why Mrs. Clinton wouldn't have insisted that the corporation borrow the money for the demonstration lot, why she would have agreed to purchase the demonstration lot personally? And was there discussion about whether that had anything to do with the bank's willingness to make any additional loans to Whitewater Development in view of Mr. McDougal's relationship with the bank?

Mr. LINDSEY. I do not remember that being a discussion at this meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lindsey, I wanted to clear one thing up. The notion is quoted around here that the Clintons or, for that matter, the McDougals, undertook no burden, as it were, in obtaining the money with which to buy this land. As I understand it, they took out a personal loan and they were obligated on that personal loan; is that correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Absolutely. For the full extent of the loan.

Senator SARBANES. In fact, in the Clinton's instance—well, in either instance, I guess, it was not for half of the money used, but it was for the total loan.

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. And for that they were obligated personally?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. So it was suggested earlier, well, it all came from the bank. It really came from the borrowers, from the bank since they had assumed the burden of repaying it for which I take it they were liable for any personal holdings they had, and in effect, personally liable in the sense of having to meet the obligation. They failed to meet the obligation they would have defaulted on a personal liability; is that not correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct. And the bank could take the property and then go after the Clintons for any deficiency, and in fact, they made significant payments to the bank to service those loans, personally.

Senator SARBANES. Over the course of the subsequent period?

Mr. LINDSEY. That's correct, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that the notion of it being highly leveraged is only in the first instance, there is no cash out-of-pocket, because all the money is borrowed; correct?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that if I get a bank to lend me $50,000 to buy a little cabin cruiser, and I am such a good sailor that I don't take out any insurance on it, and I go out in a storm, and the boat sinks, then even though I have fully leveraged that boat, the bank isn't going to be satisfied with my story about a big storm coming up. They are going to come after me to get their $50,000 back.

Mr. LINDSEY. Absolutely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They will put a lien on my house or do whatever else they can to get their $50,000, as they should. And in this case, the Clintons were liable not only for half the project, but for the full amount that was borrowed, if I understand your testimony.

Mr. LINDSEY. In the end the Clintons turned out to be a better risk for the bank than the McDougals so if the bank had come after anyone—had to come after anyone they would have come after the Clintons, in my judgment.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the loans that were made by the bank were not made by Madison Guaranty Bank?

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir. The Clintons had at no time a loan from the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, and so the money that was borrowed from the other banks was the Clintons' obligation to repay and they did, in fact, make payments on those loans?

Mr. LINDSEY. Correct, in fact Mrs. Clinton repurchased this lot 13, because she had the underlying responsibility for it, and the way to protect her interests and her assets was to repurchase that property and try to resell it herself in order to get something out of the sale so that she would not have to pay the $30,000 borrowed from Madison personally.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I want to turn to Mr. Eggleston for a moment, and address some questions that have been raised here today that don't officially involve our jurisdiction but involve this Travelgate matter. But since we've opened the doors some little bit on this, it is my understanding that the House Committee has released an FBI report of an interview of Mr. Watkins by two special agents of the FBI on August 10, 1993, which we don't have because we don't have jurisdiction over the Travel Office matter. But according to The Washington Post report of that release, this interview is in substance a mirror image of the substance of what is in Mr. Watkins' memorandum, draft memorandum that has recently been discovered. Is that your understanding, Mr. Eggleston?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I too, sir, have not seen the FBI report, but from reading the press reports of it that is my understanding.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that what I regard as the big ticket item here, whether or not Mr. Watkins agrees in his recollection with Mrs. Clinton's recollection, or Mr. Watkins' interpretation of what occurred is different than Mrs. Clinton's interpretation of what occurred, the simple fact is that nobody told Mr. Watkins what to say to the FBI; he told the FBI, so far as you know, what occurred to the best of his recollection.

Mr. EGGLESTON. That was my understanding. I believe that Mr. Watkins was represented by counsel throughout this time period. And I did not have any extended dealings with him in preparation for any of this stuff. He had a counsel and his counsel did whatever he did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that the important issue and it may be suggested by the prefatory language in Mr. Watkins' memorandum where he said he had been very protective and so forth and deliberately vague and I assume, Congressman Klinger and others will question about that, but in fact, he was direct and apparently gave the FBI his recollection as best he recalled it without being influenced by anybody. Nobody, to the best of your knowledge, attempted to influence Mr. Watkins; did they?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No one to the best of my knowledge, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you have a conversation with Mr. Watkins to say go easy on Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No. I mean, as I say, he was represented by counsel and I wouldn't—I wouldn't say that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did Mr. Watkins or anyone else tell you that Mr. Watkins had been importuned by anyone to shade the facts in his recitation of these events to the FBI?

Mr. EGGLESTON. I—no. No, not that I was ever told.

The CHAIRMAN. I am just going to take a couple of minutes if I might. Mr. Kennedy, you were the managing partner 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, not in 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. When were you the managing partner?

Mr. KENNEDY. I think I became managing partner—don't hold me to this, Mr. Chairman—middle of 1986, late 1986.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you this. You weren't aware of the fact—you were a partner and you became managing partner—that the Clintons had a relationship with the McDougals in Whitewater, were you, when your firm the Rose Law Firm came to represent Madison, were you?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I don't think I knew that at the time, no.

The CHAIRMAN. Shouldn't you have been advised, the partners have been advised of that? Isn't that a general policy?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, with all due respect, Mr. Chairman, we may have then—I don't, I don't recall it. We have been advised on some basis.

The CHAIRMAN. You weren't advised?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't recall being advised.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you come to know that? Didn't you say you came to know that sometime in 1992?

Mr. KENNEDY. I came to know that, I believe, for a fact in 1991.

The CHAIRMAN. Now let me ask you this: There has been a lot said—and I want to ask if we give him this document, bring it down there, please—about who did and who didn't bring in the business, as it related to the Madison bank, and the representation of the Rose Law Firm. I gave you a document and I highlighted, it says, "RTC, Resolution Trust Corporation, Office of Inspector General." Do you have that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, it was just handed to me. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I call your attention to the third paragraph. Now, you want to read that? This is Latham's interview with the Federal investigators. Do you know who Latham is?

Mr. KENNEDY. I do from testimony, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. He worked at the bank and he was the fellow who your associate and now partner, former partner, had some interaction with, Mr. Massey. Read that out loud.

Mr. KENNEDY. What? Do you want me to read—

The CHAIRMAN. "Latham said."

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes sir. Do you want me to read just the highlighted portion or the entire paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. Just that—

Mr. KENNEDY. Highlighted portion.

Senator SARBANES. Read it all.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Latham said at one time, date not recalled, James McDougal suggested that Madison Guaranty use Rose for some of the legal work at the institution. Latham said that, "McDougal had friends over there, he suggested we use them." Latham said when asked who the friends were that it was Hillary Rodham Clinton and others.

The CHAIRMAN. You can go on and read the other because Senator Sarbanes asked you to read the rest.

Mr. KENNEDY. I'm sorry.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. KENNEDY. OK.

Massey said he was also familiar with the Rose attorney, Richard Massey, with whom he had attended college at the University of Central Arkansas. Latham said he did not specifically recall the manner by which Rose was paid but knew that at some point the firm was on retainer which he heard was $2,000 per month. Latham said he did not know who the billing attorney at Rose was.

Senator SARBANES. Could he read the next paragraph. That's the one that gives the complete picture.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you want to read the next paragraph, please?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Latham said he recalled Rose working on only one matter for Madison Guaranty. He said that the issue Rose worked on concerned a broker-dealer operation that was purchased by Madison. He said that he recalled that Rose worked either on the acquisition of the broker-dealer operation, or on legal aspects of the acquisition after it had been done. Latham said that Massey worked on the matter because he had specifically asked for him to do so. Latham could not recall any specifics of what the services performed by Rose in the matter were, except that he did recall one occasion when he and Massey met with Beverly Bassett of the Arkansas Securities Department. He could not recall details of that meeting.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, I am going to refer you, particularly, to that section about how the business came in. And that goes back up to the first paragraph, second sentence.

Latham said that, "McDougal had friends over there, he suggested we use them." Latham said when asked who the friends were that it was Hillary Rodham Clinton and others.

Do you have any reason to believe there was any other reason, I mean, why would Hillary Rodham Clinton be the billing partner if she did not generally do securities work? Wouldn't it make sense then and comport with what Mr. Latham said, that it was indeed "McDougal said," McDougal is saying this to Latham, McDougal was the owner of the bank, that the reason the Rose Law Firm was rehired was because of the Clintons? Who turns out to be the billing partner, Mrs. Clinton? Why would she be the billing partner if she didn't bring the business in and if this was not her usual area in terms of securities?

I am asking as the—you became the managing partner during a period of this—wouldn't that comport with why she was the billing attorney?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, with all due respect, it is late in the day. Can you repeat the question? I am a little bit confused about what you are asking.

The CHAIRMAN. If indeed Mrs. Clinton was the principal reason for bringing the business in, wouldn't it make sense that she would be the billing attorney? Senior attorney?

Mr. KENNEDY. It certainly could be the case.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask one step further then. Would it make sense if she had nothing to do with this business that a young associate would ask a litigating partner to handle this as opposed to people in the section that he worked with in the securities division?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I have no independent—I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand you don't know.

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. I am talking about the practice of the firm.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's what I am trying to get to. I don't know the specifics of what went on, I don't know what Mr. Latham did, what Mr. Massey did, or even at this time what Mrs. Clinton did.

The CHAIRMAN. We know Mr. Massey did a lot of work on this and we know Mrs. Clinton did some work as established by the bills and we know Mrs. Clinton was the billing partner; correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Wouldn't that support this statement by Latham that McDougal had friends over there and he said that it was Hillary Rodham Clinton and that's the reason the business came?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well—

The CHAIRMAN. Wouldn't that explain why she became the billing attorney?

Mr. KENNEDY. It could be, Mr. Chairman, that that is the case. It could also be that Rick brought the business in, and McDougal found out about it and called over and said Hillary, would you watch over this for me.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you know that this young associate brought the business in? Were you advised of that back in 1986 or 1985?

Mr. KENNEDY. The short answer is no, Mr. Chairman. I don't know how the business came in.

The CHAIRMAN. All right. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just have one last area I want to ask you about, very briefly. This is back where we started with, "Vacuum Rose Law files." The reference to "Documents never go out," and your typed version says, "quietly," I just want to be clear on this. You typed up a transcription of your handwritten notes for your lawyer.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And I assume you tried to be as accurate as reasonably possible for your lawyer?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, as I have testified, I did it on a very quick and dirty basis. I never dreamed I would be typing notes for posterity.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You still wanted to be as accurate as you reasonably could. There is no percentage, Mr. Kennedy, in trying to fool your own lawyer, is there?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, certainly I wasn't trying to fool my own lawyer, but as the typed transcription indicates, I did not do a perfect job. I am here testifying in front of you, it was quick, it was dirty, it was done in a hurry simply to help them read my handwriting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The word you typed was "quietly."

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct, with a question mark in parentheses afterward.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was it you picked up the magnifying glass and it became "Documents never go out quality"?

Mr. KENNEDY. When this became an issue of some significance.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now with respect to the Rose Law files so we are not confused, you were asked some questions about Mr. Massey's personal files, which he made a copy of, gave to Mr. Foster, they kind of made a round robin, they were in Mr. Hubbell's basement for awhile, they made their way to Mr. Kendall and they came back to the firm, and Mr. Massey checked and he got back everything he gave to Mr. Foster. But there were other files relating to work done on Madison, including IDC, also known as Castle Grande, and those were located in other areas of the firm; isn't that correct, Mr. Kennedy?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's what I have been told, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When Mr. Foster, in 1992, was looking to collect records, he, in fact, came to you to help him expedite getting the records; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. He wanted me to help speed retrieval of the records from remote storage.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you, in fact, directed the people who handled remote storage to help him get records out of remote storage.

Mr. KENNEDY. Promptly.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know what he got?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't know what he did with it?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I do not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you finally about the issue of billing printouts, time printouts. Have you seen those printouts that were released within the last week from the White House?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, I have seen them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We are given to understand that what the White House released were copies of printouts with Mr. Foster's handwriting on them. I take it you're familiar with that type of printout as a document produced by the law firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I guess we have now accounted for one copy of the printout, a Xerox of the printout which has handwriting on it. But the question I have for you, Mr. Kennedy, is, where is the original of that and why was it not possible for the law firm to produce to this Committee until this year its copy of any such records?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, I don't know why with specificity or of things that I know or have dealt with. It is entirely likely, however, that the original of that printout was destroyed in the normal course along with the firm's document destruction policy.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What is the normal course of destroying printouts like that? How long after the fact of the bills would they be destroyed?

Mr. KENNEDY. Approximately 3 years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So if that's correct, then these bills or these printouts would have been destroyed sometime between 1988 and 1989, 3 years after 1985 and 1986?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But we know that at least a copy of these bills existed in 1992, when Mr. Hubbell spoke to Ms. Thomases and a copy made their way over to the White House. Is it your testimony that it is the normal practice to let a copy of the firm's billing records leave—let the only copy of the firm's billing records leave the firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff—

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you were managing partner?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, you need to draw a distinction now. In this day and age you've got hard copies and electronic copies. So.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have electronic copies at the firm of these records?

Mr. KENNEDY. I cannot—you all are going to talk to Mr. Clark. Mr. Clark is up to speed on these matters as to what the firm does and doesn't have at this point in time. But—the point is that—oh, one second.

[Witness conferred with counsel.]

What I am trying to get to is that the original, the hard copy, could have been destroyed in the normal course.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Could not have been destroyed in the normal course? Anything could have happened?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But the bottom line was when the firm had to produce documents to the RTC or to the Senate, they were not able to produce the printout. And the only copy that has come to light is the copy somewhere in the White House, and that's a fact.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chertoff, that's my understanding.

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question to you is this: From the time period you were managing partner, was it considered remotely acceptable conduct at the law firm to remove the only copy of the firm's private and confidential client billing records outside of the custody and control of the firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. As a general matter, no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would be highly inappropriate, right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And in fact, it would pretty much outrage you, wouldn't it?

Mr. KENNEDY. I wouldn't like it, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Now as I understand it, Mr. Kennedy, it is your testimony that this language which so much was made about when these notes were first provided, "Vacuum" and then a blank and then "Rose Law files," and the assertion was made in a very public way that this showed that this was a verb that you were— instructions were being given vacuum the Rose Law files.

Now as I understand your testimony, what transpired was a report that there existed a vacuum in the Rose Law Firm files with respect to some of these matters; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, my testimony is a little broader than that, Senator Sarbanes. It is basically that anybody trying to deal with Whitewater in this case—let me be sure that we are clear. I am not talking about Madison, I am talking about Whitewater, the corporation, Whitewater, the real estate development, there was an information vacuum, the records were incomplete. They were a shambles. And so that's what the vacuum talks about.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lindsey and Mr. Eggleston, is that your impression of what the conversation was about at that meeting?

Mr. LINDSEY. Senator, I remember there was a conversation that the records were not very good. And I don't remember the word "vacuum" ever being used, but I do remember a conversation about that the records were not good and that you could not reconstruct a lot of this. And if you remember, you may not remember the Lyons' Report, as a caveat puts in there, that they were hampered in their reconstruction because the records were not very good.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Eggleston.

Mr. EGGLESTON. Senator, that is essentially my recollection. I don't remember the word "vacuum" being used at all or not being used. I remember Mr. Kennedy talked about having tried to look into the Whitewater issue in 1991 or so and couldn't find records. I remember him talking about that at the meeting. I don't specifically remember the word "vacuum" being used.

Senator SARBANES. Let me ask each of you, were any instructions or directions or tasking given that you would regard as improper? And in particular, was any tasking given that you should use Government positions to obtain confidential information and then provide that to Mr. Kendall?

Mr. EGGLESTON. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lindsey.

Mr. LINDSEY. No, sir. But let me answer it a little bit. Both Mr. Eggleston and Mr. Kennedy indicated that at no time did anyone imply, state, suggest that any documents be hidden, altered, destroyed. I would simply agree with that, that at no point did anyone at that meeting suggest that. At no point did anyone suggest that anybody should use their relationship with any agency or—in the Government to get any information. And, in fact, I have never spoken to anyone at any Federal agency with respect to the substance of any of these matters other than the instance that this Committee knows about related to the RTC/White House contact issue that you had hearings about over a year ago.

Mr. KENNEDY. My answer is no, Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you this. Obviously we had Mr. Clark here the other day who could have provided some insight on the document destruction policy, but why don't you tell us in general what a document destruction policy is.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Ben-Veniste, most law firms, as I suppose the lawyers in the room know, in some form or fashion have a policy or a procedure whereby after files reach a certain age, or reach a certain level of staleness, they are destroyed, or possibly microfilmed or disposed of. It's the nature of the beast, law firms generate an enormous amount of paper and you have to do that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Why do you have to do that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Well, I can speak to this firm, but I can speak to sort of law firms in general. In this firm we were simply running out of room in our remote storage. We simply did not have enough room to store all the paper.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Costs you money to do it?

Mr. KENNEDY. A lot.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If there is no reason to keep it, there is no point in spending the money; correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now to go back to the files relating to Madison—you have talked about the files relating to Whitewater—files relating to Madison, was there some law in effect in 1985 in Arkansas about how long you needed to maintain files?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I don't recall such a statute.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there some procedure mandated by the local bar?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I don't recall such.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So this was left up to the individual law firms to act on the basis of prudence and need?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So at some point you determined at the Rose Law Firm that you ought to have a policy with regard to destroying files that were unnecessary?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I am going to give you a little bit of a long answer to your question. When I became Chief Operating Officer, managing partner, in 1986, I discovered that: One, we were running out of room at remote storage; two, we had not been dealing effectively with document destruction, as a matter of firm policies or procedure. So I made it one of my priorities to get that process started and on track. And that's one of the things I tried to do during my tenure as Chief Operating Officer.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was the basic policy you came up with?

Mr. KENNEDY. The basic policy is with regard to client matters, we developed lists of the files that each attorney had at remote and we developed—those lists were delivered to the partners and the partners were asked to indicate which files should be destroyed, which files should be microfilmed and then destroyed, or which files or portions thereof should be retained in hard copy form. What I attempted to do was to get the partners and the lawyers, the senior associates that might have client files open in remote storage, to deal with the proper destruction by designating files.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, lawyers, or some lawyers, tend to be pack rats.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the case of Mr. Massey, he determined that he was going to keep his original files way beyond this policy of 3 years.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that we are fortuitous that we have, as a Committee, had an opportunity to review Mr. Massey's files regarding the Madison representation, and for all of us to determine that there's nothing untoward in those files, that Mr. Massey didn't do anything wrong, the Rose Firm didn't do anything wrong, and Mrs. Clinton didn't do anything wrong in connection with the files that Mr. Massey maintained.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It might have been otherwise that those files could have been, and quite properly so, destroyed in the regular course of business.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct also, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the time records, the documents which have been produced most recently by the White House, it is fairly remarkable, wouldn't you say, that those records, which are not essential records of the Rose Law Firm, have turned up?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Because, similarly, those documents could have been destroyed 8 or 9 years ago?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct. And I am going to ask your indulgence. I will give you a little bit of background there as well.

In the 1989-90 timeframe, we had an unfortunate occurrence. Our accounting supervisor passed away. We had a new accounting supervisor come in. She looked at the records and said that basically we had a god-awful mess on our hands that we had too much junk. We had records from far too long. So again, as part of the document destruction program, I instructed her to go ahead and clean the accounting records of the firm up as well.

In addition, in 1992, we went through a conversion of our accounting software system, from one—I beg the Committee's indulgence but you have to understand that this was a big deal—we changed from one accounting software package to another. And that conversion was something I was working on when I departed the firm, and as part of that process, we got rid of a lot of old accounting information.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So, that, if I understand your testimony, it is both remarkable and fortuitous because the billing records that have been produced allow us to go back in time, where people's memories clearly could not be terribly reliable, and look at the time spent in excruciating detail to the 10th of an hour, and recorded by Rose lawyers in connection with the Madison representation.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Ben-Veniste, it is amazing. It is remarkable in that these records could have been destroyed, absolutely, in the matter of course.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask a question about the material that the Chairman showed you earlier with respect to John Latham's statement. Do you have that handy and could we put that back up?

Mr. KENNEDY. I do, Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Directing your attention to the fourth paragraph. Mr. Latham said that, "The issue Rose worked on concerned a broker-dealer operation that was purchased by Madison. He said that he recalled that Rose worked either on the acquisition of the broker-dealer operation, or on legal aspects of the acquisition after it had been done." The broker-dealer issue was not an issue of an acquisition, was it?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't believe that it was, Mr. Ben-Veniste. As you know, I didn't work on the matter. I don't know the ins and outs of it, but I don't believe it was an acquisition issue. It was, instead, a regulatory issue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As to whether the Madison bank could be licensed as a broker-dealer.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So Mr. Latham's recollection of things when he gave his statements which was, in fact, July 16, 1995, that has been put forward here, is clearly erroneous in terms of what the actual project was. He has it blurred.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's right. Based on what I understand Mr. Massey's testimony to be, he has it blurred.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And with respect to the question of whether he recalled anyone from Rose working on the preferred stock offering contemplated or proposed by Madison, he said he did not, going to the last paragraph on that page.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Therefore, you know, that is all Mr. Massey worked on, this would be quite a blow to Mr. Massey's ego, I guess, but Mr. Latham by this time had forgotten all about Mr. Massey.

Mr. KENNEDY. It seems that he had.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now there was further testimony that Mr. Latham didn't have the authority to engage attorneys on behalf of the Madison Bank. We have the deposition of Stephen Cuffman, and Stephen Cuffman apparently was a member of the board of Madison, and an attorney, and I will simply read you from page 3 of his deposition to Pillsbury Madison in connection with the so-called Stevens' Report to the RTC. It says:

Question: Let's start with your legal work. When was the first time you did any legal work for Madison?

Answer: That's how I came in contact with Madison I believe late 1983, early 1984. In that timeframe I began to do work for Madison.

Question: And how did it come to be?

Answer: John Latham. I am not sure what his title was, but he became CEO with Madison. He was a friend and he and I worked together at the Public Service Commission. He began to refer work to me. Did progressively more over the next couple of years.

So contrary to the reflected wisdom that we have been operating under for the last week, apparently Mr. Latham also forgot that he, in fact, had authority. So the issue that was put to you of how did this matter come to the Rose Law Firm that Mr. Massey worked on and Mrs. Clinton became billing partner of, seems to have been an effort by, as Mr. Massey testified, his ability to pitch Mr. Latham following Mr. Latham's inquiry about technical matters regarding securities law, a mention by him to Mr. Massey to Mrs. Clinton that he was doing this, and could she talk to Mr. McDougal. And lo and behold, the very matter that Mr. Massey has pitched Mr. Latham on comes into the firm, as the first matter for Madison.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct, Mr. Ben-Veniste. I mean that is what it appears to be.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is there anything untoward or improper or surprising that an enterprising young associate at the Rose Law Firm in 1985 would attempt to try to get business into the firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. He was absolutely encouraged to do so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further, thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. I will not revisit that. I will spare everybody the pain of going over Mr. Massey's testimony, but it certainly is inconsistent with the summary that was completed. He would have recalled if he brought the client in, and he indicated that he had no recollection, and it is a ridiculous stretch.

Now let me go over this for the last time because I find your interpretation, given what is contained in the notes submitted to us, difficult to understand. "Vacuum Rose Law files." We have no dispute that that's what that says, "Vacuum, blank, Rose Law files." Is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, but they are not an integrated phrase.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand, but this is what appears in your notes. Is that right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Do these words appear in my notes? Yes, they do, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. As I read them?

Mr. KENNEDY. Not if you run them together as a single phrase, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, you want me to continue then with Whitewater documents, or Whitewater DC? What is that, WWDC?

Mr. KENNEDY. Whitewater Development Corporation.

The CHAIRMAN. Development Corporation documents, right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. Docs, documents?

Mr. KENNEDY. Docs, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Does that stand for documents?

Mr. KENNEDY. It does.

The CHAIRMAN. I thought you might have a new interpretation. That's why I wanted to be sure.

Mr. KENNEDY. Sorry to disappoint you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. You don't disappoint me, not at all. The next one is "subpoena," right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So, referring to the Rose Law files, vacuum, Whitewater documents, subpoena, your contention is that these files were, and you meant that they were incomplete, that they were not good. I am using words that you just used in the course of describing what you meant, that they were in a shambles; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. The Whitewater documents? Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Then why didn't you say they were incomplete? You see, Mr. Kennedy, when you are summarizing, for you to say vacuum, why—incomplete, shambles, not good, now you suggest that at this point that the word "vacuum" should be taken in a totally different context. There was a vacuum? No explanation. Then we go down to the second line. "Documents" underlined, underlined, "never go out." Why did you make that point?

Mr. KENNEDY. The phraseology is "never know go out," Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Why?

Mr. KENNEDY. Because there was a discussion about how the Whitewater documents—and again, we are not talking about Madison files—were delivered from the Rose Law Firm to the campaign.

The CHAIRMAN. And then we say again it is not "quietly," because you see, if you gave the interpretation as first translated by yourself, that you typed "quietly," you read this, very clearly, saying, "get them out quietly."

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, there is a question mark in the hole, in other words, in parentheses outside the word quietly, is there not? Yes, there is. OK. And that was an indication by me to my counsel that I did not know what that word was.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. "Vacuum Rose Law files," "Whitewater documents," we are talking about those at this 1993 meeting; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. We are talking about the Whitewater documents? Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, your interpretation now is that we are talking about those documents and this is in 1993, the documents that exist are Whitewater documents; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I don't understand your question. Would you restate it, please?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. The notes were taken at the 1993 meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. November 5; right?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. You are talking about the condition of these files; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. The condition of the Whitewater document files, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. Well, there weren't any Whitewater document files in the Rose Law Firm at that time, were there?

Mr. KENNEDY. In 1993?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I don't believe so.

The CHAIRMAN. So why would you put "Rose Law files"? There are none there.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. No. Wait a minute. You first tell me—let me explain and then I will give you every opportunity to answer the question.

If you are referring to incomplete Whitewater documents that you have in your possession, that the campaign has that are incomplete, why do you refer to the Rose Law files when there are no Whitewater Rose Law files at this time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, those files existed at one time. The Whitewater files were Rose files when they were in my possession when I was performing legal work for Mrs. Clinton. And regardless of how you or anyone else want to—

The CHAIRMAN. So you are reflecting—no, wait, this is important. Are you now saying that you were reflecting on a time when you saw those files?

Mr. KENNEDY. When you say “reflecting,” what are you talking about, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. At this meeting, who talked about these files—you are taking notes now. Was this your observation? Whose observation was this, “Vacuum Rose Law files, WWDC documents, subpoena?” Was this—

Mr. KENNEDY. As Mr. Eggleston testified, it was me talking.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you talk at any other time during this meeting that you recall that’s reflected in your notes?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe so, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. So you are talking now?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you say? Let me hear what you said.

Mr. KENNEDY. I said that we had an information vacuum, that we were dealing in a vacuum when you tried to deal with the substantive corporate records of Whitewater, and I was trying to convey that to Mr. Kendall.

The CHAIRMAN. Indeed, at that time, were there any Whitewater files in the law firm that you knew of?

Mr. KENNEDY. These documents I was referring to? No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. There weren’t any there.

Mr. KENNEDY. There were at one time.

The CHAIRMAN. But you are now talking in 1993 about documents that were at the Rose Law Firm, right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. If they weren’t Rose Law files that encompass all of Madison, then they were files that talked about, and I am willing to concede, Whitewater, so they were Whitewater documents; is that right?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, you keep trying to say that we are talking present tense. I was talking past tense.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, then let me pin it down.

Mr. KENNEDY. By all means.

The CHAIRMAN. When is the last time that you saw the Whitewater files at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. KENNEDY. In 1992.

The CHAIRMAN. When in 1992?

Mr. KENNEDY. February, I believe, would be the last time I saw them in 1992, but I don’t remember specifically.

The CHAIRMAN. So you saw them in February, Whitewater files, specifically?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How did you happen to see them?

Mr. KENNEDY. I had them in my possession.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you do with them, because they are missing from the firm now?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I had them in my possession in furtherance of legal work I was asked to do by Mrs. Clinton.

As the Whitewater real estate—excuse me, Whitewater Real Estate Development became an issue in the campaign I was asked to make them available to the campaign, which I did. And at some point they were physically delivered to the campaign in 1992.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, we are making some progress.

Mr. KENNEDY. I testified about that previously, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you about this. You saw them in 1992, you were working on it, you were given these files.

Mr. KENNEDY. I had these files in my possession in 1992.

The CHAIRMAN. Who did you turn them over to?

Mr. KENNEDY. I made them available on at least one occasion, maybe a couple of others, to a lawyer associated with the campaign named Loretta Lynch.

The CHAIRMAN. When you say you made them available and then at another time, will you explain, what do you mean by "made them available"? Did you make copies of them or did you turn them over physically?

Mr. KENNEDY. I did not do either one.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you tell me what you did?

[Witness conferred with counsel.]

Mr. KENNEDY. What I did is she came to the law firm, put her in a conference room.

The CHAIRMAN. This is Loretta Lynch?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Would this be about February?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe so, Mr. Chairman, but I don't know for a fact.

The CHAIRMAN. Early February?

Mr. KENNEDY. Early, late February; sometime in February.

The CHAIRMAN. That comports with some things we know. Let's continue. What happened?

Mr. KENNEDY. Put her in a conference room, brought the files down, said Loretta, here they are. Left and let her do her job.

The CHAIRMAN. Let her copy them?

Mr. KENNEDY. I can't recall that she made copies at that point in time, but she may have. I can state with some degree of certainty she did not copy all of them, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. She may have copied some?

Mr. KENNEDY. She may have copied some.

The CHAIRMAN. At some point, she was done with her work and she left the office.

Mr. KENNEDY. That day? Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I don't know, maybe it took a day or two days. How long did it take? Do you recall?

Mr. KENNEDY. As I say, Mr. Chairman, I don't recall if this was one time or several times.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean—

Mr. KENNEDY. She left the office and the files remained with me.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not asking over—these are not trick questions. I wanted to get to after Loretta Lynch came once or twice to review the files—you are not quite sure how many times, but she reviewed them—she left them in your possession; correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. Correct.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you do with them then?

Mr. KENNEDY. Held on to them.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, you held on to them all through 1992?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir, I did not.

The CHAIRMAN. Did there come a point in time when you gave them to someone else?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir. That did not. I will go on and give you the explanation so you won't have to ask follow-up questions. In—sometime in 1992, either February or March, I went away on a trip. My family came with me. I came back on a Sunday. There was a message on my answering machine from Mrs. Clinton from the night before, a Saturday. The message was that she was trying to get in touch with me because the Whitewater documents that I had in my possession needed to go to the campaign. She asked me to call as soon as I got the message. I immediately tried to get in touch with her. I could not. She was gone somewhere on the campaign trail. When I came to the firm the next day, Sue Cathey-Jones came to me and told me a story.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is Sue Cathey-Jones?

Mr. KENNEDY. She was a paralegal that was assisting me in the representation of the Clintons. The story was this—

The CHAIRMAN. And this is—around February, sometime?

Mr. KENNEDY. February or March 1992.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. KENNEDY. She said that she had received a similar phone call from someone, I don't remember if it was from Mrs. Clinton or somebody else on Mrs. Clinton's staff, I do not know the answer to that. But she had received a similar phone calling saying that the Whitewater document files needed to go to the campaign.

She loaded up with her husband, came down to the firm to get the files and deliver them to the campaign. When she came they were gone. She, not knowing what else to do, then walked the approximate block and a half from the law firm to the campaign headquarters and found that the files had previously been delivered. But she did not know by who, and neither do I.

The CHAIRMAN. You never pursued who delivered the files?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I didn't have any reason to. They were at the campaign. That's where they needed to be.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kennedy, I am not—you told—she knew obviously—Ms. Jones had worked on this matter so she knew where these files were?

Mr. KENNEDY. I don't know if Mrs. Clinton knew.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't mean Mrs. Clinton. I am saying Ms. Jones, your assistant?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. So I am just trying to establish that the files were in their normal place. Look, I think you have testified to this in depositions.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. This is the first that I've been apprised of this, and I do not fault you in any way, but I am trying to put together a picture. I think this is the first time that I have learned of the manner in which the Whitewater files left the possession of the office and that's what I am attempting to find out.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I will help you any way I can. I will answer any question you got, but I did testify to this in deposition before this Committee on July 11.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kennedy, I am in no way suggesting that you didn't. I brought it out because I have been apprised of that. What I am attempting to do is to get the picture, get the facts, that's it. And you see, again, it goes back to the question of what files, what documents. You see, the Whitewater documents, they are not at your firm anymore. They're not there.

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Mr. Chairman. In 1993, they were not. In 1992, they had been.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand. Aren't we recapitulating everything? And you say, "Vacuum" and "the Rose Law files." I can understand incomplete, shambles, no good, insufficient information, but then when I see "Vacuum Rose Law files, Whitewater documents, subpoena," and "Documents never know go out," I have to come back to this situation where we heard testimony from your former associate and partner, Mr. Massey. And he, I think, in characterizing his testimony it would not be unfair to say that he was surprised and disappointed that the files were copied and given to the campaign. That was his—I am not talking about the Whitewater. I am talking about the files as it related to Madison, you see? That's why, this comes up the Rose Law files, in connection with—leads some to say, well, yes, that's true. And then those files disappear were it not for Mr. Massey's retaining a copy and then the manner in which the billing records turned up in the White House, again with Mr. Foster's notations, brings about a greater deal of confusion. What we're trying to do is piece this together.

Now sometimes it may be difficult for some, including the Chairman, to put this all together. To the extent that we put people through all this painstaking and excruciating detail, it is because there are so many blanks. Some may result from the passage of time and normal occurrences. I don't dispute that. Some may come by way of faulty memory, which is natural. Some may not come by those. We're attempting to rectify the inconsistencies and put this picture together. It's a job that we have to do. And sometimes it's not a pleasant one, but I want to thank all of you gentlemen—

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I have a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly. But I would like to thank all of you for your participation today. Now, I'm going to yield to Senator Sarbanes for his questions and his observations.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Kennedy, first do you have those notes? Can we put that exhibit back up on the machine? The one that was just there?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 535.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Kennedy, I listened to the Chairman very carefully and he moved from Whitewater documents to Madison files, and I want to come back to Whitewater documents because I want to be very clear about this. Now, your reference here is to Whitewater documents; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct.

Senator SARBANES. And not to Madison files?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. When you got the Whitewater documents, was there an information vacuum in those Whitewater documents?

Mr. KENNEDY. Absolutely, Mr. Chairman.

Senator SARBANES. And is that what you're referring to here?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. So in the Rose Law files when you had the Whitewater documents there, there were missing—I think you said those files were a shambles or something?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct, Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. All of the questions the Chairman put to you were put to you in depositions both back in the summer and again yesterday, were they not?

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct.

Senator SARBANES. This is not new material. This is all material which the Committee has heretofore received from you. Correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's correct, Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Now on the Whitewater documents, who was your client in dealing with those Whitewater documents?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mrs. Clinton.

Senator SARBANES. So she was a client?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. And under all the theories that have been advanced here today, she was entitled to those documents; correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, she could tell me what to do with them.

Senator SARBANES. I gather she sought them because a lot of questions were being raised to the campaign and she wanted to get them to the campaign so they would be in a position to answer those questions; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. That's my understanding, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Now, I take it that the "never know go out" there refers to the thing you just recounted about how did the documents that were there when you went on vacation then move out of the firm; is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. To this day, I do not know, to this day, how the files got from the Rose Law Firm to the campaign. I don't know the answer to that.

Senator SARBANES. But in any event, if Mrs. Clinton wanted them to go to the campaign, that's where they should have gone. She's entitled to direct those files to wherever she chose to direct them. Is that not the case?

Mr. KENNEDY. Absolutely, Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. Again, let me go to the point that Senator Sarbanes mentioned because there is confusion here. Look at that underline, the second, where it says, "Documents." You're referring to the Whitewater documents there?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. "Never know go out." Huh? Now what did you mean by that?

Mr. KENNEDY. Exactly what I testified about.

The CHAIRMAN. Tell me.

Mr. KENNEDY. Sir?

The CHAIRMAN. Tell me.

Mr. KENNEDY. I've done so. I'll do it again.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. KENNEDY. No one knew how the documents had gone out from the Rose Law Firm to the campaign.

The CHAIRMAN. But you knew they went to the campaign?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, sir, I did.

The CHAIRMAN. Wouldn't you note that those documents were at the campaign at this meeting?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. I see "Rose Law files," I see "vacuum," then I see—"never know go out," but they did go out, and you knew they went out at the direction of Mrs. Clinton. Isn't that true?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I—

The CHAIRMAN. But you did know they went out at the direction of Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. KENNEDY. I know they arrived at the campaign. I do not—

The CHAIRMAN. And you knew that Mrs. Clinton asked for them?

Mr. KENNEDY. I know that Mrs. Clinton was seeking them, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. So that's why I have difficulty understanding why you would put "never know go out." If you said, "don't know who sent them over." But this says, "never know." Never know, what do you mean?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, if you take notes, the word "how" is missing from that phrase. You never know how they went out. I don't know to this day how they went out.

The CHAIRMAN. You didn't say they went to the campaign. I mean, wouldn't you say where those notes were?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. That is followed by "quality."

Mr. KENNEDY. The quality of the files was horrendous. At this meeting I am certain that I told Mr. Kendall and the assembled group that they had gone to the campaign but I didn't know how.

The CHAIRMAN. There's no reference there and there's no reference that Mrs. Clinton asked for them. Isn't that unusual?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It wouldn't be?

Mr. KENNEDY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. If the First Lady had requested that these files be sent over to the campaign and you have vivid recall that she called you and you were gone on vacation and Ms. Jones went to look for them but they weren't there?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I was not trying to sort of recite in the notes this whole story. There was no need to. I wasn't asked to. We were moving on.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, I understand.

Again, I want to thank the witnesses and I want to thank the Ranking Member for giving us the opportunity to explore in the depth what we thought necessary.

We stand in recess until Thursday.

[Whereupon, at 6:28 p.m., the hearing was adjourned.]

[Appendix supplied for the record follow:]

~~1. Agitation~~
~~2. Agitation~~
~~3. Agitation~~
~~4. Agitation~~
~~5. Agitation~~

- ① Control the Facts - Amalgam, etc
- ② Try to find out what's going on in Amalgam
- ③ Report to Report There are roads
- ④ Meeting for Organizing with the Media
- One Person

Come up in the Campaign

'95 Indicated in Arkansas - Mc. Dargle

'92 Campaign - Some up there was 50%
Current by Mc. Dargle
'78 - WSOA

Porter - Clinton had lost in Miss.
- Wrote to President that in detail
- $68,800 at last
- Mc. Dargle $92,000 lost - anger

HAC Representation of Medians

- Not much activity representing people before
Kennedy 2 RLF letters Beverly Bennett

① Medians

② PP of P/d 1988

Beverly Bennett - Proposed by rules to do the Meeting after BS as the con

Book and story suggest

Two more copies

! RLF - minimal printer and reconstruction

S 012517

The balance of 100
Not yet sent yet - premium

- July 20th FBI received message & took power & transfer Judge and Holt

aus d. VF Kreis hinf

David Hume Smith

Explain now - Give up for additional loss
Security  $\rightarrow$  demand
Security or loss retained

Druid Stone: pygma → fore part fixed 88/89
Two dentures

'85/'86: buying of politicians made him not helpful  $\rightarrow$  needed add from industry

↳ Clinton: managed land to M. O'Connell & J. R.

CSM - ~~under~~ <sup>long</sup> ~~long~~ E 565

Trind to sell to USA -

Trained to sell to USA -
Then to Circle of NYT - Demand Conversion - bond
Register

Det - on the way

Mr. Dwyer was denied

II RTU Refused w/rtt Mc Ouzgole

4/85 - Approved a response to 4 competing claims
BE Primary

Conjunctive Conjunction

3 checks written ~~off~~ on Reunion

4th Case on the Oyster primary - signed by 2

Miss M. B. B. B.

4300

Commission
 Turned at Capital - Clinton says M.O. in call you - Alt - legal guide help in 145th Train - joining state

Shipping rules - Clinton says do you know what better than did with things I said

Clinton doing say of 3 over

M.O. desires

no more in National

for Clinton

"I have did affordable - very covered very"

After Clinton filed for SL -

Anger Box of Clayton w/ McOuzel -

McOuzel in house - 1 567 - Motion
 JWF

McOuzel: "Pains of Atty" Not for days needed.
 Get line down - wind

Only line of Commission through down from there

A way for 5% down

for Clinton →

June - LL test

T&E return and not been filed

- 1/2 agreed how our proposed on delivery to McOuzel

- Then our copy down

012519

June, 1992 - r r ~..

Don O'Connell from Don to McO'Connell
Answer that Don has filed

90/91

Brown, Rogers & Co

Foley Archer

Clinton Archer

3/4 Trinity 1 hour

2/3, 1992

Hour 1

→ Brain content
Hour

→ document w/ V/F
Try to find the missing one

Brain could have knowledge could be source of money to clear McO the possible one

Nominal & Organization + Out of the Team 4

- Jim Hamilton
- Walter Havelle
- Blair, Jim
- Hamilton Lynd - helped Hamilton
- Brown Thomas
- Charles Jones

- Jim Lynd for workpapers
- Betty Wright/Havelle the one
- Letter to one to one knowledge

Organization Members → Not to McO'Connell has BW

HRC/ALC: - Letter Organized

Putting one: Member

Know one:

Charles Jones - and for work

S 012520

- Peter O'Connell says that had not been a copy of checks - the bank was paying on the bank's contribution
- O'Connell + ATE - never got paid the good money

Competition pressure: WP/WSS/NT

WP - Conquering Unions
WW

O'Connell did not take a $200,000 loan to finance M.O. for M.O. says positive bond in relation to the I.P. provided it was of WW in 10/86

Two notes later - WSS to bank to fund Development Company

"In WW became" from I.H. on - note

M.O.: Total on paper, person that was loan in WW - buying that gain would be offset

"American says no" - I.H. raised up / H.C. against it → x/p to the bank over C

Did not x/p - the money

I.P. must WW become on the money

$230,000 deficiency

Post:

.88 - Long up WSS by end of the year
McDougal → said all the way

5755 O'Connell Pri x action

27-10-86 → $35,000

1972 Project Summary

Phone sold → Motion Company for $25,000

McDougal took $25,000 as a Commission

Phone sold for Motion World - 417 from in house and then to C.B. Central Flying Service from [unclear] [unclear]

A/for did [unclear] 2/3, 1992

Write Under letter - returned to [unclear] [unclear]

- Post Mc [unclear] & Amer. [unclear], [unclear]

Add [unclear] - [unclear] [unclear] - [unclear] [unclear]

Long [unclear]

RLF - [unclear] [unclear] - [unclear] at $2,000 per [unclear]

~~$2,000 [unclear] [unclear]~~

Add

+ Check down on WUOL - [unclear] to [unclear]

[unclear]
[unclear]
[unclear]

+ Believe that [unclear]
[unclear] [unclear]
[unclear] of $2,000
[unclear] [unclear]

→ [15 [unclear] for $2,000 per [unclear] - [unclear]]
[unclear] [unclear]

End of $6 → [unclear] for [unclear]
→ Mc [unclear] [unclear] [unclear] of [unclear] [unclear] to [unclear]

[unclear] in [unclear] → $6 - [unclear] to [unclear]

RLF - [unclear] [unclear] [unclear]

[unclear] [unclear]

- [unclear] [unclear] [unclear] [unclear] [unclear] - [unclear] in [unclear] [unclear] - [unclear] [unclear] [unclear]

Been at 2 [unclear] → [unclear] [unclear] [unclear] to [unclear]

- [unclear] [unclear] [unclear] [unclear]

5 012522

Relate to or judge

GT deleted, del - Pres says that GT contains investigation

RT - people trying to get BC and TGT

- story of a regional by RT regarding destruction of TGT - Check back reports

Vacuum knows his was one - region

* Journal → then know go out

~~Quality~~ Quality

*
Saw Mr Oogal:

* McDougal that at Anders - two different Chels

* IP for just before of the city

Examiners → Mr Oogal -

Charles the Perce - parents and for Charles for Charles copying - 85
under Ooster (?)

$3,000 → 12,000 * Could all come from Charles Perce house - I signed off from the house

Charles Perce (Kari Perce?)

$1500 per elect → $3,000

Prison and a female

S 012523

~~Not a~~ Today - ~~the~~ last report

— had a note but. receipt & explanation
 Filed a report 30 days after election → "Final Report"
 Would not be a report that not report the Conclusion
 Betty said "Omit how to discuss the loans"

300,000 short application form → the last property → Property for $750,000 to somebody that M.O. paid money loaned $825,000 → 325,000 from $825,000

$500,000 in David Hale — put in S&LC then David Hale → ~~that~~ loaned the money to Sam 2/86 —

the 4/86 — ~~can~~ CWS to David

Could be that J&T is Knight of the report

1986 — New State of Oregon

Flamingo — collected 40 — now

1978 - AK + AKC new bridge at AKC

AKC may have approved Clinton - first stage
 Boy - Anderson - new lot + gas line
 No car - dead 100% damage

Budget from 101 River Development

202,000

$182,000 City of New in Flagging - Personal

$20,000 Union Note Book in AK - Personal

- Credit Union build Co - opportunity would be do certain work + spend $ in New Land

GSAC - Creditors w/ Anderson to LW
 34,160.72

Anderson - lots sold - Personal on Clinton

Paid out over time - Personal return would provide lots and pay debt

1979 - USAC Found

Anti Xpd → Stage + Other kept personally

Personal used to Anderson Other many paid directly in house for Union Clinton Overights - Core of Action

Lot Area was read - 44 LGS

230 Acres

1000 lot area land New Property
 New City plans down

MO's Union returned & to Newland debt

1981: MO - put $ more & in with time year

W. by a new line & put on 4th lot

012525

15-13 2.5 (400)

Achievement sales

McO also for a bond at Modern Bank

$2,000 paid 83
$7,200 84

found at Ministry Bank of Providence

- paid off in 1989

old time → Thomas Logan - provided
HAC, shells at modern bank
Pay the tax and provide out of his life - paid cash

Wool - $30,000 paid by HAC:

$21,000 given out to pay off a debt owed by HAC to Providence →

Admission to Corporation → Attorney for it is Preston

$9,000 McDougall → debt + payment (?)
- done in Alaska

5/85 send Notice of Modern Bank

8/11/91

2/2/92

$20,754.55 provided to Modern Bank - creditor's payment to HAC bond -

- Applied money to McDougall bond

S 012526

2/2/82

Written on pencil
Not

Be check in Pencil and $29,744. US F M&T
 - Not applied to 1981 loan
 - Payment of loan -
 Applied to Mc Oague Note

One year later - At home Hill at County Park
 Lot 13 at home Park

$29,744 not properly stated for

Chris Work - have new estate office -

Order books

He believes that a part owner - no paper / no evidence → my ownership distinct

Even for a new kind

1985:-- Mc Oague denies to get at - deal w/
 Work

Oague Air Service, Inc → New Estate
 Air Charter

Work → require remaining 24 lots for purchase of 35,000
 at $1,000

Anglem

* Anglem xpd in Glens → sold for 25,000

* taken by Mc Oague as a commission
 Not

Newsham →

$11,000 →

S 012527

How up - Wm. Wren

Own IAS

WUOL - $232,000

[Goes to GSCC:]

————— H —————→

Have other for $1,000

Team is given - right is about / quantity / value

1st financial candidate John Form
- Did not discuss but did not seem satisfied

- Blair / Foster / Lynn - Get me out

McD buy it → HK how to sell it

X other students by Blair

McD → Buy

- Indemnity & other things Mc. Dargatz

- Tom Train: Clearly lost & → LT Capital loss
Could write off up to $3,000 per year LTCG

→ Considered Rest of do that →

IXS:

No Brian - $1,000 Gain - Pay Taxes on $1,000

12/72 -

S 012528

Kendall
Engstrom
Nussbaum
Lindsey
Lyon
Eggleston
Kennedy

1. Gather the facts
2. Try to find out what's going on in Investigation
3. Respond to requests that are made
4. Strategy for dealing with the media
    -One person

Came up in the campaign

'89 Indicted in Arkansas--McDougal

'92 Campaign--Issue up that were 50% owners w/ McDougal
    '78-WWDC

Position: - Clintons had lost $ in WWDC
    Unable to substantiate this in detail
    $68,000 at least
    -McDougal's $92,000 lost-maybe

HRC representation of Madison - Not much activity representing people before agencies
2 RLF letters Beverly Bassett

1. Madison
2. PP of pfd stock

Beverly Bassett - Responded w/ auth to do both
    Recently appointed BB as Sec Cer

Brother early and strong supporter
Too much coziness

RLF - answered questions
    Did reconstruction

Report: Clinton had taken the deductions that WWDC had not taken
    Tax advantage of $2500
    Not repay government yet-promise

II July 20th: FBI issued subpoena & took records of municipal judge named Hale

Also the day that VF killed himself Factor

5 012529

Asked for records of Capital Services Management--S81C'

David Hale - indicted

Inflate NW-qualify for additional loan authority-borrowed securities and then returned

David Hale: proffer--false statement filed 88/89
Two instances

'85/'86: urging of politicians made loans not repaid -- needed additional loan authority

Clinton: encouraged loan to McDougal and JGT wife
CSM made loans to JGT

Tried to sell to USA-
Then to Gerth of NYT - Denied conversation-Loan
Editors

DH - non-LR story

McDougal also denied

III. RTC referral w/r/t McDougal

Included a reference to 4 campaign checks
4/85 BC personally

Campaign Committee

3 checks written on Madison--all $3,000

4th check on McDougal personally--signed by Susan McDougal

Les Patten:

David Hale

Tunnel at Capitol--Clinton says McD will call you-DH-hope you'll help em

145 Street Trailer - Jogging Shorts

Shopping Malls - Clinton says do you know what bitch Susan did with money-sed

Clinton denies any of 3 occurrences

McD denies

now lunch in restaurant

Jeff Gerth

"Hale did affidavit - NYT backed away"

Steve Smith filed for BR

Bought Bank of Kingston with McDougal

McDougal in business with JGT - Madison
JWF

McDougal: "Powers of Atty" Not get info needed
Get more involved--wind down
Only lines of communication through Sam Huer

Arrange for 50% interest

Via Blair

June - LR Acct

Tax returns had not been filed

VF agreed have Docs prepared and delivered to McDougal

Turn over Corp Records

June, 1991 - VF tax returns

Sent Directly from Acct to McDougal
Assume have been filed

90/91 Brown, Rogers & Co

Yoly Redden

Clintons Acct

1/4 Times

Huer Blair Contact
Huer

2/3, 1992 Have 1
Involved w/ VF
Try to arrange sale

Blair could have knowledge
Could be source of money
to allow McD to purchase stock

Nominal & respectable + Out of the air

-Jim Hamilton
-Webb Hubbell

-Blair, Jim

-Loretta Lynch - Helped Reconstruct

-Susan Thomases
-Charles James

-Jim Lyon has workpapers

-Betsy Wright/Hubbell Docs

-Return Docs to Dave Kendall

Corporate Records - Not to McDougal bec BW

HRC/RLF: - Loretta organized Charles James Acct for WW

Public Docs: Recorded

Loan Docs:

-Knowledge of referral - Gerth & Isikoff: Referrals include campaign checks

- Pull deposit slip that had with it copies of checks - do know who persons are who listed contributions

-David Hale + RTC - never got press good answers

WP - campaign checks
WW

David Hale did make a $300,000 loan to Susan McD
Jim McD says purchase land in Pulaski Co from IP purchased in name of WW in 10/86

Two months later - WWDC to Great So Land Development Company

"In WW because" Sam Huer - mistake

McD: told one press person that were losses in WW - hoping that gain would be offset

"Clinton's sign over" SM raised with HRC rejected it - xfer to So Land Dev Co

Did not xfer the mtge

6 012522

Ip sued WW because on the mtge

$210,000 deficiency

Post:

88 - wrap up WWDC by end of the year
McDougal - sold all the lots

5/85 Ozark Air xaction

24 Lots - $35,000
 1979 Piper Seminole

Plane sold - Madison Guaranty for $25,000

McDougal took $25,000 as a Commission

Plane sold to Seth Ward - WH father in law and then to Central Flying Service

+Trace through FAA in Oklahoma City - whose on the airplane

+ After did reconstruction 2/3, 1992
 Wrote Clinton letter - attached is accts rept

-Pat McCarthy & Assoc. Denver, Colo

+Add'l info - add'l schedule - add'l problems

Long Ver

+RLF - Madison Guaranty - Retainer at $2,000 per month

ANN + Check drawn on WWDC - payable to HRC

Bernie + Believe that it believes prob. represents confirmed payment of $2,000 # of months for 17 months

[15 months for $2,000 per month - Retainer]
 Webb Hubbell

End of '86 - asked for records
 - McDougals say that all of
 Corp records to HRC

Issue in campaign - 86 - Records to HRC

RLF - Campaign Jim Lyons

Loretta Lynch

5 012533

-Betsy Wright had those Records - Took em home
 -Betsy Wright

WH retrieved - records from BW

Seen at WH - Sent files related to WW

Make a more complete reconstruction

Charles James - subpoenaed w/SBIC matter
 Relate to $ going into WW

GJ indicted Hale - Press says that GJ continue investigation

RTC - people trying to get BC and JGT

- story of a referral by RTC regarding Indictment of JGT - Chuck Banks rejected

Vacuum Rose Law files WWDC Docs - subpoena

*Documents - never know go out quietly(?)

Susan McDougal:

*McDougals acct at Madison - two different checks

*IP file partial releases of the mtge

Examiners - McDougal

Charles Peacock - proceeds went from Charles for Clinton campaign - 85

made a donation (?)

$3,000 - $12,000 *Could all come from Charles Peacock
 Loan - $ siphoned off from the Loan

Charles Peacock (Ken Peacock?)

$1500 per election - $3,000

Primary and a general

Betsy Wright - if Clinton took out a loan not disclosed

Today - the last report
 Never had a match bet receipts & expenditures

Filed a report 30 days after the election - "Final Rept,"

-Would not be a report that not reflect these contributions

Detsy said "Didn't have to disclose the loans"

[$300,000 what application from(?)]

Hale had property - Property for $750,000 to somebody that MCD found

Madison loan $825,000 - 325,000 from $825,000

$500,000 in David Hale - put in SBIC then David Hale - loaned the max to SM

2/86

4/86

- CMS to David Hale

Could be that JGT is target of RTC referral

1986 - New stmt of purpose

Flowerwood - collateral as a maker

Repay it - Promise to repay it

HRC wait to after the election

$4761.33

1978- AG + HRC new lawyer at RLF

MCD may have approached Clinton - few things that could do

Buy - Subdivide - sell lots & get rich

No cash - 100% leverage

Bought from 101 River Development

202,000

$182,000 Citizens Bank in Flippin Personal Loans

$20,000 Union National Bank in LR

- Great Southern Land Co - apparently asked to do certain work & speed $ on raw ground

GSLC - credited w/ Advance to WW

$34,160.72

Subdivided - Lots sold - Purchase or Contract

Paid out over time - Revenue stream
Would service lots and pay debt

1979 - WWDC formed

Assets xfd - Mortgage + Debt kept personally

Revenues used to reduce Debt - Money paid directly on Loans for which Clintons obligors

- Ease of Admin

Lot sales were slow - 44 Lots
230 acres

HUD Interstate Land Sales Prospectus
Real Estate slows down

MCD & Clinton advance & to service debt

1981: MCD - put more $ in than(?) year
W - buy a show home & put on one of the lots

HRC - MCD loan from MBT - will buy
Lot 13 2.5 acres
Accelerate sales
(MCD also has a loan at Madison Bank)

Loan Serviced -

$2,000 paid 83
$7,200 84

Refinanced at Security Bank of Paragould

- paid off in 1989

Sold twice - Helman Logan - foreclosed
HRC gets back

HRC sells at small gain - Pays the tax and passes out of her life - paid cash

WWDC - $30,000 paid by HRC:

$28,000 goes out to pay off a debt owed by
WWDC to Pesbrooke(?) -

Advance to Corporation - Actually how it is treated

$9,000 McDougal - Interest payment (?)
 - Check in Blank

5/85: Second note at Madison Bank
 8/11/91 $20,744.65 President to
 2/2/92 Madison Bank - expecting applied to HRC Loan -
 - Applied instead to McDougal loan

8/81 - FY 92 McD borrows $30,000 from Madison Bank
 BC check in personal(?) Acct
 $20,744.65 to MBT
 -Not applied to HRC loan
 -Repayment of Loan-
 Applied to McDougal Note written on personal acct

One year later - refinances HRC at Security Bank

Lot 13 Interest Problem

$20,744 not properly accted for

Chris Wade - runs real estate office - Ozark Lands

He believes that a part owner - no paper/no evidence - any ownership interest

Earn in of some kind

1985 - McDougal decides to get out - deal w/Wade

Ozark Air Services, Inc. - Real Estate Air Charter

Wade - acquire remaining 24 lots for assumption of $35,000 (?)
 at Flippin

+ Airplane

*Airplane xfed in blank(?) - sold for $25,000

*Taken by McDougal as a commission
 Not Reconstruction -
 $11,000 -

Clinton not released until Fall of 1992

Blair up - Chris Wade

Owe IRS

[WWDG - $232,000]

[Goes to CSLC:]

Sold stock for $1,000

Term as governor - rept as asset/liability/neither

1st Federal Candidate Disc Form

-Did not disclose bec did not know existed

-Blair/Foster/Lyon - get rid of it
McD buy it - HRC told to sell it xaction structured by Blair

McD - Buy

-Indemnity & Hold Harmless McDougal

-Tax Time: Clearly lost $ - LT Capital Loss could write off up to $3,000 per year LTCG

--Concluded that if do that --

IRS:

No Basis - $1,000 Gain - Pay taxes on $1,000

12/92

6 012538

FAX TRANSMISSION SHEET

Date: 11/16/93 Time: 11:20 am

WARNINGS: PROTECTED UNDER THE PRIVACY ACT, 5 U.S.C., 552a. Unauthorized Disclosure Prohibited Under Penalty of Law. If Recipient is Not As Identified On Cover Sheet, Make No Further Disclosure And Telephone Transmitter For Instructions On Return Of Materials.

Be Aware Fax Machines Using Thermal Paper Produce An Unstable Image Which Will Deteriorate. Copy Messages Onto Plain Paper Prior To Filing As A Record!!

YOU MUST FILL IN ALL FIELDS

SUBJECT: Criminal Management Services Total Pages - Cover = 5

	Person's Full Name	Office/Firm	FAX Number	Voice Number
TO:	Carl Eggensten Esq.	City of New
	San Diego County	White House (Jury)	(602) 456-1647	(602) 456-7955
FROM:	John T. Spaula	SSA/CGC	(602) 255-6246	(602) 255-6713
	General Counsel/SSA

Optional Message:

ATTENTION RECEIVING PARTIES

Immediately call 645646 at (602) 255-6713 if any FAX transmission is incomplete or if multiple copies are received.

☐ Check this box if you would like the receiving office to confirm receipt of this Fax Transmission.

When checked the receiving office should fax only this cover sheet back to the transmitting office confirming receipt.

Receiving Office, Firm or Division: _____

Received by: _____ Receipt Date: _____

Receipt Time: _____

- Neil Eggleston said the additional information is in SBA and is approximately 1 foot high. He has a call in to SBA to find out if it contains reference to either the President or Hillary. He can obtain a copy of the documents if it appears necessary but does not believe it is problematic.

S 011399

U.S. SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20416
(202) 205-6640

General Counsel

November 16, 1993

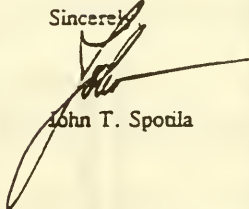

HAND DELIVERED

Neil Eggleston, Esquire
Associate Counsel
Office of the White House Counsel
The White House
Washington, DC 20416

Dear Neil:

Enclosed is a copy of Erskine's letter yesterday to Chairman LaFalce (with confidential attachments).

Sincerely,

John T. Spotila

JTS/s

Attachments

BRUCE LINDSEY CALL LIST
NOVEMBER 16, 1993

Page 11

S 012604

TIME	RESOLUTION	NAME/AGENCY	PHONE NUMBER(S)	MESSAGE
4:58 pm	IMPORTANT	Neil Eggleston		Has some Whitewater documents to go over with you. Will come by about 6:00 p.m.

GAO QUESTIONS FOR MRS. CLINTON

The White House Management Report describes, on page 9, the following:

"That afternoon [May 13], before Foster talked to Watkins about Peat Marwick, Foster went to see the First Lady on a matter unrelated to the Travel Office. The First Lady told Foster that she had heard about problems in the Travel Office. Foster replied that Kennedy was looking into it. Late that afternoon, she saw McLarty and inquired about the situation in the Travel Office. Foster subsequently informed her that Peat Marwick was going to conduct a review of the Office."

In our interview with Mr. David Watkins, he stated that (a) on May 14, Mrs. Clinton (through Mr. Foster) had expressed an interest or awareness of the situation in the Travel Office; and (b) that it was Mr. Watkins' understanding that Mr. Harry Thomason asked to have an update on the situation. Mr. Watkins reported that in a subsequent conversation on the same day, Mrs. Clinton (a) mentioned the 25 percent (White House) staff reduction goal; (b) said it would be good to have "our people" working in the Travel Office; and (c) said that the administration had been criticized at the time for being slow in filling positions, and had delayed too long. We also note that the White House Travel Office Management Review contains a copy of a memorandum from Mr. Watkins to Mr. McLarty which was marked as "cc" to Mrs. Clinton, and which describes the steps taken to review the Travel Office matter and the decisions made to remove the employees and carry out the functions with other staff.

We respectfully request Mrs. Clinton's official response to the following questions:

1. How would you describe and to whom would you attribute the origin of the decision to remove the Travel Office employees?
2. How would you characterize your role in that decision?
3. Did you ask or direct that any action be taken by anyone in regard to the White House Travel Office?
4. Is Mr. Watkins' characterization of his discussion with you, as recorded by us, accurate? If not, how would you describe the discussion?
5. Did you participate in any other discussions with White House staff or Mr. Thomason concerning the White House Travel Office matter during the period leading up to the removal of the Travel Office employees on May 19, 1993? If so, when and how would you describe those discussions?

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April 6, 1994

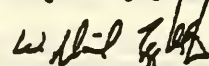

Nancy R. Kingsbury
Director
Federal Human Resource Management Issues
General Government Division
General Accounting Office
Washington, D.C. 20548

Re: GAO Requests for Responses to Written Questions.

Dear Ms. Kingsbury:

Attached please find written responses to the questions that GAO posed to Mrs. Clinton.

Very truly yours,

W. Neil Eggleston
Associate Counsel to the President
(202) 456-7901

RESPONSES TO QAO QUESTIONS FOR MRS. CLINTON

1. Mrs. Clinton does not know the origin of the decision to remove the White House Travel Office employees. She believes that the decision to terminate the employees would have been made by Mr. Watkins with the approval of Mr. McLarty.

2. Mrs. Clinton was aware that Mr. Watkins was undertaking a review of the situation in the Travel Office, but she had no role in the decision to terminate the employees.

3. Mrs. Clinton did not direct that any action be taken by anyone with regard to the Travel Office, other than expressing an interest in receiving information about the review.

4. ~~Mrs. Clinton does not recall this conversation with the same level of detail as Mr. Watkins.~~ She recalls that on Friday, May 14, she had a very short telephone call with Mr. Watkins. Mr. Watkins stated that Mr. Foster had mentioned that Mrs. Clinton was interested in knowing what was going on with the Travel Office. Mrs. Clinton knew that Mr. Watkins was out of town. Mr. Watkins conveyed to her that even though he was not in Washington, his office was taking appropriate action.

5. Mrs. Clinton has a general recollection of having conversations with Mr. Foster and Mr. McLarty about the Travel Office situation prior to the termination of the Travel Office employees. She has no specific recollection of any particular conversation with Mr. Thomson on this issue at that time.

Mrs. Clinton believes that she spoke with Mr. Foster about the Travel Office before her telephone call with Mr. Watkins. She also believes that she had a very brief conversation with Mr. McLarty sometime before she spoke with Mr. Watkins. In that conversation, she told Mr. McLarty that she had heard about problems in the Travel Office and wanted Mr. McLarty to be aware of it.

Mrs. Clinton does not recall seeing the May 17 memorandum from Mr. Watkins to Mr. McLarty until after the Travel Office employees were terminated.

Abroad at Home

ANTHONY LEWIS

Bricks Without Straw

to finding something wrong, as if they had an investment in the story.

Whitewater is a hard subject for three of us on the outside to discuss.

If we say that Tweedbottom is bunk,

the expert replies, "What about Tweddledoo?" Only the obsessed have the trivia at their fingertips.

But here are two examples of what seem to me to be overzealous changes.

The other day copies of Inflection

percolated from the large law firm in Arkansas, in which Hillary Rodham Clinton was a partner, were found. Mrs. Clinton had said she did

"minimal" legal work for Madison

Guaranty, a failed savings and loan owned by James M. Douglas, the Whitewater developer. Senator D'A-matteo said the records raised "certains questions" about Mrs. Clinton the scope of "conflict that borders on contingency, obstructive action and false statements."

The records actually showed that over 15 months Mrs. Clinton billed

Madison $6,000 for 60 hours of work, less than an hour a week. For a reputable law firm, that was a small amount.

Senator D'Amatteo then held a lengthy hearing with Rodham Mac-sey, a lawyer in the Rose firm, as the witness. The question was whether about Clinton had no responsible prosecution would make such a deal unless the suspect agreed to plead to a serious charge and unless he talked first, with Mr. Hale would not. One then Mr. Hale has pleaded guilty to two felonies on charges brought by the independent Whitewater counsel,

Leonard W. Starr.

I have hardly been an ardent admirer of Bill Clinton. I have written critically about his performance as President, on Bosnia and other issues.

But personal attack is another thing. When it is carried to the extremes it has been in Whitewater, it is not just Mr. Clinton who suffers. It is the country.

...that part of the territory." The

Clinton said in his interview with

Barbara Walters on ABC, "I feel that in other words, anyone in public office, these days, can expect to be villified. The President, concluding that the cost of defending himself had left him essentially bankrupt said, in his press conference last week that he had no complaint that no one really want to be that kind of celebrity. It is time for us the press and the public to step back and say: None of this is getting to the public business. Enough is enough.

I turn the moment Bill Clinton took office as President, I probably was set out to destroy his legitimacy. They method was to attack his honor, primarily through charges about the long ago land deal known as White

Water.

Three years and innumerable investigations later, Mr. Clinton has not been shown to have done anything wrong in Whitewater. Our charge after another has evaporated.

But the Whitewater investigation was long grinded on Senator Alfonse

D'Amatteo, the New York Republican who chairs a committee on the subject, accuses that a document will show "something terrible. The press incredibly reports that -- and falls to point out that the document, when produced, is not what Senator D'A-matteo said it was.

The D'Amatteo performance is right out of the box. Mr. D'Amatteo, I'm not sure, and prove nothing. But there is a big difference. The press continued on to Senator McCain and checked out what he said. On Whitewater, the press too often seems angaged as a complicity of the accused.

The performance of the press is especially troubling. Some of the coverage of Whitewater reads as if the reporters or editors were committed

Nov- 10- 93- Wed. 10:27

P. 01

DEK 11/10/93

Draft

Chronology

Aug. 2, 1978: Clintons & McDougals purchase 230 acres in Marion County for $202,611.20 (all financed)-- mortgage loan of 182,611.20 from Citizens bank and Trust Co. in Flippin (now Ozark National Bank), Personal loan to JBM and WJC of $20,000 from Union National Bank of Little Rock.

Nov. 1978: WJC elected governor (1st term)

April 1979: Clintons take interest deduction of $10,131 for 1978

April 1979: Clintons obtain $8,000 loan from Bank of Cherry Valley

June 18, 1979: Whitewater Development Company Inc. (WDC) incorporated (50-50 ownership) corporate purpose was develop property and sell residential lots on escrow contracts.

Sept. 30, 1979: Clintons and McDougals convey the 230 acres to WDC (mortgage obligation not transferred-- remained with the 4, joint several; personal loan- not transferred)

April, 1980: Clintons may have taken $2900 interest deductions in 1979 for loans (out of total interest deduction of $11,749)

Aug. 23, 1980: HRC writes $9000 check with payee blank (on her account) -- this was claimed as interest deduction on 1980 tax returns -- may have been principal reduction ( only 3rd party endorsements is stamp of Citizens Bank & Trust) -- This looks like a reimbursement by Clintons to McDougals for a previously unreimbursed interest component of $11,032.50, so interest deduction would have been proper.

Nov 10-93 Wed. 10:27

P. 02

Dec. 16, 1980: HRC buys lot 13 from WDC for $30,000 via secured loan from Bank of Kingston, later Madison Bank and Trust (MBT)

Dec. 26, 1980: WDC deposits $30,000 in its accounts at MBT, which had balance of $456 (Wash. Times, 11/4/93)

Dec. 9, 1981 : Lot 13 sold to third party Hilman Logan on escrow sales contract for $27,500 ($6,000 cash and assumption of $21,500 note) --WDC collects contract payments & make payments to MBT, reducing the mortgage loan Feb 1982: Marlin Jackson, owner of Security Bank of Paragould, appointed State Banking Commissioner by WJC.

1982: JBM buys Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan (MGS&L) (2/29/92 chron; "Late 1982." -- Washington Times, 11/5/93)

Sept. 30, 1983 HRC's $30,000 loan on lot 13 at MBT is refinanced at Security Bank of Paragould at lower

Nov 10-93 Wed 10:27

P. 03

interest rate at amount of 20,800
(MBT's mortgage release recorded 10/19/83)

1984: JBM claims WJC asked him to send "about $2000 a month" in business to HRC (LA Times, 11/7/93)

1985: JBM sells MBT (2/29/92 chron)

1985: Madison Marketing (McDougal family business -- derived income from S&L) provided funds to Whitewater to make $7,322 payment on loan to WJC from another bank (NYT 11/2/93)

April, 1985: HRC confirmed in writing during campaign she met with JBM

April, 1985: JBM gives Clinton Campaign (1984) $3000 -- it was $35,000 in debt (Bruce Lindsey, Wash Post 10/31/93); MGS&L hosts Clinton fundraiser at the Main Street office -- at least $12,000 in MSG&L checks ($9,000 in cashiers checks) wound up in campaign coffers (NYT 11/2/93)

April 30, 1985: HRC represents MGS&L before State Securities Commission -- letter to Rose Law Firm to Securities Commission's Charles Handley says further info to be provided by HRC or Richard Massey.

May 4, 1985: Assets of Whitewater sold to Ozark Air Service, Inc. (24 Lots) in return for Ozark Airs

Nov.-10-93 Wed 10:29

P. 04

Assumption of $35,000 of Mortgage indebtedness at Citizens Bank & Trust in Flippin an 1979 Piper Seminole (later sold for $25,000, which went to McDougals as a "commission")

May 14, 1985: Securities Commissioner Barbara Bassett Schaffer grants permission for MGS&L to sell preferred stock and form a brokerage service subsidiary ( "Dear Hillary" letter?)

July 10, 1985: Richard Massey of Rose firm writes States Securities Commission on behalf of MGS&L it should address questions on brokerage sub. to either HRC or him

Nov. 7, 1985: WDC check for $7,323 signed by JDM used to pay principal on interest on WJC "personal" loan at Security Bank of Paragould (payment on account described as #957-585, Bill Clinton)(Wash Times, 11/4/93)

End of 1985: Charles James leave accounting business & terminates work for WDC

Feb 1986: Hale claims he meets with WJC and JBM who requests a $150,000 loan (LA Times, 11/7/93): Hale claims MGS&L finances land deal for more than land is worth (loan loss of $672,000), getting Hale the money to loan to Master Marketing (get cite)

Apr 3, 1986: $300,000 loan from Capital mgmt Services Inc. to SHM d/b/a Master Marketing

Nov 10-93 Wed 10:29

P. 05

July 11, 1986: FHLBB & Arkansas S&L Board remove JBM and SHM from MGS&L Board (Post Nov 2.)

Oct. 1986: Whitewater buys 810 acres from Intl. Paper for $555,000 -- Wash Times claims that "record shows" $110,000 of the $300,000 used as down payment 11/4/93)-- IP agreed to finance balance (JBM admits $110,000 of the loan was used to purchase the land -- LA Times, 11/7/93)-- after purchase "records show" that Master Marketing changes its company description to a real estate venture (Wash. Times, 11/4/93)

Nov 14, 1986: JBM status report to WJC & HRC -- states all property has been sold" (get this document)

Dec, 1986: Property transferred to another McDougal entity-- but Whitewater still on Mortgage (Post, 11/2/93)

1987: First purchase of lot 13 (Hilman Logan) defaults

Mar 36, 1987: Clintons execute a continuing guaranty jointly and severally, of the original mortgage acquisition loan at First Ozark National Bank in Flippin ( was Citizens Bank and Trust Co.)

1987: JBM says he gave all Whitewater records to WJC (Post 11/2/93) ("late 1987"; wash Times, 11/4/93)

1988: JBM indicted for fraud in connection with MGS&L -- charged with arranging sham deals to generate $75,000 in bonuses for himself and using funds of MGS&L to buy land through Master Developers

Nov 10-93 Wed 10:30

P. 06

Sept 14, 1988: HRC purchases lot 13 from B/R estate to Hilman Logan for $8,000 to B/R trustee and assumes remaining loan balance of 14,118 at Security bank of Paragould

Oct 31, 1988: Warranty deed signed by Clintons only transferring lot 13 to Lauramoors (recorded on November 28)

Nov 25, 1988: Letter from Earl Stafford (Ozark Realty) -- Lot 13 is sold for $27,500 (gain of $1,742) to John and Marilyn Lauramoore (Lyons report says $1,640)

Nov 28, 1988: HRC letter to JBM & SHM asking for POA: " We are trying to sell off property that is left and get out from under the obligations at Flippin and Paragould

1989: MGS&L S&L fails

June 7, 1990: JBM acquitted of bank fraud -- case focused on bonuses & profits he earned on re deals involving the development sub, Madison Financial Corp. (Post 10/31/93)

March 8, 1992: Jeff Gerth NYT articles "Clinton joined S&L operator in Ozark Real Estate Venture"

March 17, 1992 Illinois Primary

March 23, 1992: Jim Lyons report released: Clintons described as passive shareholders" -- "at all material times the McDougals or their agents exercised

Nov-10-93 Wed 10:30

P. 07

total control over the management and operations of the corporation and its investments"

Dec 22, 1992: Assignment of Interest/Stock purchase -- WJC & HRC"s 50% in WDC to JBM for $1,000 cash (payment by check dated Dec 24, 1992 from Sam Heuer trust account)

June 23, 1993: Yoly Redden sends to Jim Blair fed & state income tax returns for WDC for FY's ending in 5/31/90, 5/31/91, 5/31/92 and Arkansas franchise tax report for 1992, with a transmittal letter to JBM dated June 18, 1992

July 21, 1993: Offices of Capital Mgmt Services Raided by FBI -- Vince Foster suicide

Sept 23, 1993: Hale makes claims in Arkansas Democrat- Gazette article

Sept 1993: Hale indicted with two others -- charged with defrauding SBA by illegally parking $800,000 in Capital Mgmt. Services to secure $900,000 SBA loan

BRUCE LINDSEY CALL LIST
 SEPTEMBER 17, 1993
 Page 5

S 012599

TIME	RESOLUTION	NAME/AGENCY	PHONE NUMBER(S)	MESSAGE
------	------------	-------------	-----------------	---------

4:01 pm		Bill Burton		Needs to talk to you about a Jim McDougall problem Jim Blair
---------	--	-------------	--	--

2:30 pm -

Jim Blair

- McDangel called Hume to tell her that Hale had been to see her - McD told Hume that Hale had tried to get her to fabricate story about BC - "GT" -

- Galt tried to get <sup>Sam</sup> Hume to tell her where McDangel was - Hume wouldn't -

<sup>Hume</sup>
- But Rogers - asked whether indicated - against Hale, not McD

→ Agreement: we would prepare / McD would file

Copy to Records → done →

490-92 - tax return

60 days <sup>30</sup> / 90 days

2nd call

See Hume: Called Charles Rely -

Letter of transmittal → for account -
Date 2 or 3 days before the returns are filed →

Return. Prepared for <sup>MCB</sup> ~~to~~ to file to give to MCB ~~angel~~ → doesn't know where
MCB. filed returns

Fletcher Jackson - in charge of case → minority held

MCB might become target →

Blair
Heard that $300,000 had been deposited in MCB's
^ account - jumped pretty high

407

7124

37

MEMO

July 11, 1985

TO: John Latham
FROM: Jim McDougal

1. This is probably a good time to take in some 5-year money cheap. Let's discuss rates.

2. I need to know everything you have pending before the Securities Commission as I intend to get with Hillary Clinton within the next few days.

JM/ss

10255

1 MG 0000654 1

1552 Audit

*

Agmt to discuss Reporting of Income from WW

2010 Basis →

Sale of WW Shares
Not have reported enough Income → no problem

*

S 012595

7/11/4/83

Jones, Bob
 Kowalski, David
 Brown, Mike
 Smith, Bob
 Niles, Lita
 Newman, Steve

*

Report - Bob Jones - Audit

Formal Request - Faxed

① How Sales Proceeds

(A)
 (B)

*

③ 7000 WW

Could be done w/them

*

S 012596

1/20/84

James Conville →
Paul Bagala →

+ Nuremberg to high Congress

② Chronology of events: Nazi Register

- + Documentary Record
- + K. W. W.
- + Principles
- + Basic History
- + W. K. W.

③ Each day - last case → go through clips and come up w/ answers

- + Documentate stuff in the clips
- + Address
- + New Things:
- + Go back w/ it stuff been written

→ + Produce & hand to me?

→ + Original W. K. W. Register: + St. Louis
+ History
+ Nuremberg

④ Final Assignments w/ h/t unit
James

S 012597

~~Under the same name~~

~~②~~

- ④ Under - Potential public presentation
 Possible ~~possible~~ assistance from WH
 - Potential release of documents ~~not~~ WOL

- ⑤ Under - "Op Ed Piece"
 + Answers to editor James
 +

S 012598

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: Jeff Glitz, New York Times
FROM: Beverly Bassett Schaffer
RE: Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan
DATE: February 25, 1991

On February 14, 1991, I spoke with you by telephone concerning the above referenced Arkansas savings and loan that was closed during my tenure as Arkansas Securities Commissioner and Savings and Loan Supervisor. We discussed a number of items during our telephone conversation, many of which I was unable to fully address at that time due to my lack of specific recollection of matters that occurred as much as seven years ago.

Since then I have reviewed my personal and work calendars from 1985 and 1986, reviewed certain documents pertaining to Madison Guaranty and spoken with Charles Handley at the Securities Department, who participated in each and every decision concerning savings and loan matters during my tenure. I believe it is important that I give you the benefit of my personal knowledge concerning these matters.

In 1984, I was a practicing attorney with expertise in securities law. I was a member of the Mitchell Law Firm in Little Rock which I had joined in 1978 as a law clerk and later became an associate and partner. In 1977, while I was a law student, I served full time for a year for Bill Clinton when he was serving as Attorney General. I had first met Bill Clinton in 1974 when I worked as a volunteer in his first campaign for elective office as a congressman (he lost). My brother, Woody Bassett, who is also a practicing attorney in Fayetteville, is a long time close friend and supporter of Bill Clinton's and has been active in Democratic party matters for years.

Memo to Jeff Gorton
February 15, 1991
Page 1

Sometime in mid-1984, I learned that Lee Thalheimer, a friend of mine and law school classmate of my brother's, planned to leave his post as Securities Commissioner. I discussed with my brother my interest in seeking the job because I wanted to build my expertise as a securities lawyer and, for a variety of reasons, I was not happy at the law firm. I knew that my brother discussed this with Bill Clinton and his then Chief of Staff, Mackey Wright, several times in 1984 and I did as well.

In early January, 1985, I met with Governor Clinton at the Governor's Mansion to discuss in general the kinds of issues facing the securities industry at the time. It was a lengthy meeting and I do not recall any mention at all of savings and loans. A few days later, the Governor called me at home to tell me he planned to appoint me as Securities Commissioner. He asked that I not say anything about it until he had had a chance to call the other persons who had asked for the job to personally tell them of his decision. Later that same week, on Friday, January 13, 1985, Joan Roberts, who was the Governor's press secretary, called me at my law office to tell me that the Governor planned to announce my appointment that day and asked me to get a resume and picture to the Governor's office right away. Members of my law firm often asked me about the appointment and I declined to share with them my conversations with Bill Clinton. On the day it was announced, however, I told the members of my law firm, including John Selig, of the Governor's decision. I believe this is how John Selig learned of my appointment. I do not believe he learned about it from Jim McDougal and I am certain I knew of the appointment long before John Selig.

Memo to Jeff Glick
February 15, 1991
Page 1

I do not believe Jim McDougal, a man I have never met, had anything to do with my appointment. If he ever claimed he did, I believe he was blowing the usual hot air that pollutes the environment in the state capital. I would have paid no attention to John Selig or any other member of my law firm who claimed to know anything about my appointment. I did not seek and in fact discouraged involvement by the law firm in my appointment. There are many reasons why I felt that way but suffice it to say that I sought the appointment for myself, not for the law firm. I did not return to the firm when I left the Securities Department in 1991.

Memo to Jeff Glavin
February 25, 1992
Page 4

During 1984, when apparently Jim McDougal was claiming he influenced my appointment (or at least someone is now saying he did), he was deeply involved in a business transaction with Sheffield Nelson. It involved Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan. I believe Charles Handley is aware of the transaction and there may be a public file at the Securities Department. I mention this only so that you know why I believe that Sheffield Nelson was and is in a position to advance, with some degree of specificity and believability, a distorted and self-serving version of the events and circumstances surrounding my appointment.

I do not wish to enhance my credibility by dumping on someone else. But I must tell you that the relationship between Sheffield Nelson, Jim McDougal and Madison Guaranty in 1984 - not mine - is the one that warrants scrutiny. My predecessor, who was a Republican appointee, was serving as Securities Commissioner at the time. He approved a risky, speculative real estate development project at a time when the savings and loan was in dire need of capital to support such a project. The savings and loan was not required to first increase its capital base and take steps to meet its minimum net worth requirements before receiving approval to proceed with the development project. Without the necessary capital base, the savings and loan would be unable to absorb potential losses from its direct investment in the venture. I believe that the venture may have been approved, at least in part, based upon the personal financial strength of the outside investors, rather than the institution. I believe that the venture later proved to be a significant financial drain on the institution.

Memo to Jeff Glass
February 25, 1993
Page 5

Throughout 1981, both state and federal savings and loan regulators were pressuring savings and loans to raise capital. Many, including Madison Guaranty, were not meeting their various regulatory net worth requirements. Indeed, Madison Guaranty was operating under a Supervisory Agreement with the FDICB which required them to take steps to bring the association into compliance with those requirements. When our Department was approached by the Rose Law Firm in 1983 about a plan for Madison to issue preferred stock, I believe that Charles and I both felt that the savings and loan was making an effort to address their obvious lack of adequate capital, but we had some concerns about whether the savings and loan laws authorized the issuance of preferred stock. Charles Handley is not an attorney and although I relied heavily on his advice on savings and loan matters, I believed this matter was a very narrow legal issue that had to be treated as such. I am confident after looking at the statutes again this week, that our interpretation of the law was absolutely correct. Assistant Commissioner Nancy Jones agreed with the Rose Law Firm's position and I believe there are hand written notes of hers (N.C.) in the file to this effect. Although we officially agreed that state law authorized the issuance of preferred stock, we cautioned the savings and loan that it should seek the assurance of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (FHLBB) of Dallas that the preferred stock, if issued, would be considered "permanent capital stock" for regulatory net worth purposes. Under R&B accounting, the FHLBB had certain rules that differed from GAAP. There are notes in the file from Mary Jones (who is a C.P.A.) to me indicating she believed the preferred stock Madison Guaranty intended to issue would be "permanent capital stock" for FHLBB purposes.

Memo to Jeff Glick
February 15, 1992
Page 5

With regard to the brokerage services subsidiary, I specifically recall that Charles and I agreed that we would not consider approving the activity unless the savings and loan first raised the capital to bring the savings and loan into compliance with its net worth requirements. Charles wanted to use their request for approval to engage in brokerage services as leverage to insure that they would proceed forthwith to raise the badly needed capital. Although we were not persuaded that a private market for savings and loan securities of this sort existed at the time, we could not be certain. If Madison Guaranty was able to raise the capital, many of our concerns about the safety and soundness of the institution would be alleviated. As such, we decided to condition

Memorandum to Jeff Glavin
 February 25, 1991
 Page 7

our approval of an application for a service corporation to engage in brokerage activities on the savings and loan first raising the capital to bring them into regulatory compliance. (A "safe harbor" provision was added to the state savings and loan laws by the legislature in 1989. It is this provision that clearly allowed state chartered savings and loans to engage in any business practice or activity authorized for a federally chartered savings and loan. In the mid-1980's, federal savings and loans were allowed to engage in securities brokerage activities. Assistant Commissioner Nancy Jones believed that the savings and loan could engage in this activity without our prior approval. Charles Hancley and I took the position, however, that it was not a pre-approved activity and that the savings and loan could not do it without our prior approval. Thus, we gained the necessary leverage to insist on an immediate infusion of additional capital.)

Madison Guaranty apparently abandoned the effort to issue the preferred stock shortly thereafter, although I do not specifically recall being told the reasons. Before the savings and loan could have offered or sold the preferred stock it was required by the state securities laws to file a disclosure document with the securities registration division of our office. The transaction would have been subject to our review and approval as to the adequacy of disclosure to potential investors of the preferred stock. No filing was ever made. Since we had given the savings and loan only until December 31, 1985 (a matter of months) to raise the capital and they were not able to do so, the savings and loan never engaged in brokerage activities.

Memo to Jeff Glavin
 February 15, 1991
 Page 8

I fail to see how our handling of these matters placed depositors at risk or furthered the demise of Madison Guaranty in anyway. Obviously, if the savings and loan had been able to raise the capital, both state and federal regulators would have been relieved of a major source of concern. If not, the savings and loan would not engage in brokerage services for even a day. In fact, it did not.

I do not believe that the involvement of the Rose Law Firm in these matters influenced the Department's decisions in any way. My staff was involved deeply in the decision making process and each decision had a statutory basis. Our Department acted neither favorably toward the savings and loan, nor arbitrarily or capriciously. We acted reasonably.

In the spring of 1986, we had numerous conversations with the FHLB of Dallas about Madison Guaranty. We were all quite concerned about matters that had surfaced during the most recent examination of the institution. Its net worth was further eroding.

Memo to Self
February 15, 1992
Page 9

Far worse, however, were the findings of self-dealing and insider abuse. The Board of Directors of the institution appeared to be completely dominated by Jim McDougal. The service corporations (none of which were approved during my tenure) were draining the institution. It was during this time that the FHLBS sought our advice and approval as to the proper regulatory course of action. We all agreed that it was critical to remove Jim McDougal from the institution. It was decided to seek the voluntary ousting of McDougal first by means of a Consent Case and Cease and Desist Order. Absent consent, the FHLBS would seek a formal removal order, with the State's full agreement and consent.

On July 11, 1986, Charles Handley and I flew to Dallas to meet with the FHLBS and the Board of Directors of Madison Guaranty (the meeting was originally scheduled for July 14, 1986). Walter Faulk was the Principal Supervisory Agent in charge of the meeting and Karen Bruton attended the meeting on behalf of the Enforcement Division of FSLIC in Washington, D.C. The Madison Guaranty Board had been summoned to Dallas to discuss the findings of the examination. Jim McDougal did not attend. John Selig and Brock Speed attended the meeting on behalf of the Madison Board. In June, 1986, John Selig had asked our Department for assistance on certain concerns we had raised with the association about its direct investments in its service corporations. The savings and Loan had earlier promised to address the matter by April, 1986. We did not respond to the June, 1986 request because we knew then that by July, 1986, McCougal would be gone and the issue would be moot.

Memo to Jeff Gliman
February 25, 1991
Page 10

At the meeting, we jointly confronted the Board with the findings of self-dealing and insider abuse (there are handwritten notes of mine in the file from the July 11, 1986 meeting). The Board was presented with a Cease and Desist Order that, among other things, called for the Board to fire Jim McCougal and other family members. (A copy of the Order is in the files of the Arkansas Securities Department.) It was a long and confrontational meeting. The Madison Guaranty Board members and their lawyers appeared stunned. One of them, Steve Guffman, an attorney, acted very responsibly and soberly. He indicated the Board would likely consent to the entry of the Cease and Desist Order. John Selig indicated that the Board would cooperate but would like a few days to review the order and work on minor revisions. I believe the order was entered the last week in July, 1986. At the same time, the savings and loan was placed under another Supervisory Agreement that required approval from OARs of every subsequent decision of any significance.

For a few months, Steve Guffman essentially ran the institution. Later, Tommy Tranchesi was hired by a new Board of Madison Guaranty and approved by the Collins Bank to babysit the institution until FSILC found some money to pay off depositors. In 1987, we received an annual audit for calendar year 1986 reflecting that Madison Guaranty was insolvent. Shortly thereafter, we asked that the institution be transferred to the FSILC on the grounds of its insolvency. There can't be anyone left in America who doesn't know by now that FSILC was dead broke in 1986. Madison Guaranty was the least of their problems. Further, since Jim McDonough had been removed from the institution, there was little harm done in letting it sit, as did hundreds of others, while new management searched for ways to salvage its worthless assets.

Memo to Jeff Glavin
 February 15, 1992
 Page 11

I believe that my office did everything possible during my tenure to deal with the savings and loan disaster in general and with Madison Guaranty in particular. State law requires that an institution that is insolvent or operating in an unsafe or unsound manner be placed in receivership and that the FSILC be appointed the receiver. If FSILC refused (which we were told it would on several occasions), we could have asked the court to appoint another receiver. However, there would be no depositor payoff and we were obviously worried about triggering panic around the state among depositors of both state and federal savings and loans. State law does not provide for the removal of officers and directors of savings institutions. Federal law does, however, and

Memo to Jeff Glavin
 February 15, 1991
 Page 11

We depended heavily on the cooperation of the FRB of Dallas to exercise this authority. I believe we worked well with the FRB in the case of Madison Guaranty and moved quickly to remove the source of the problem.

In the case of other state chartered savings and loans, we fought bitterly over the timing and manner of their disposition. We repeatedly asked the FRB to transfer insolvent institutions to the FDIC. Indeed, the files at the Securities Department reflect a letter in 1987 from me to the Director of FDIC in Washington, D.C. pleading with the FDIC to place three institutions, including Madison Guaranty, in receivership. However, I believe that ultimately federal regulators had the absolute final say on these matters since all of the institutions were federally insured. Federal law granted the federal regulators absolute authority to seize a state chartered association without prior approval of the state regulator. In 1985, at our urging, the FRB seized state-chartered Guaranty Savings and Loan in Harrison, Arkansas. The institution sued the state, the FRB and FDIC claiming that FDIC could not take over the institution unless the state regulator first went to state court to appoint a receiver. The Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld our actions, and found that federal law preempted state law on these matters in the case of any conflict. The ruling in this case influenced our later decisions not to proceed with a receivership without the concurrence of the FBI and FSLIC.

Mem to Jeff Glavin
February 15, 1991
Page 13

I think all of us who had responsibility for savings and loans during the 1980's felt overwhelmed at times and lacking in the necessary power, authority or resources to act as effectively or decisively as we might have under ordinary circumstances. While I never find it hard to defend the decisions we made at the time or the actions we took, I often find them hard to explain.

I hope my thoughts have been helpful in clarifying our earlier conversation. Please let me know if I can be of further assistance.

385:sa
-----

M E M O R A N D U M

TO: Jeff Girth, New York Times
 FROM: Beverly Bassett Schaffer
 RE: Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan
 DATE: February 23, 1992

This is a follow-up to our telephone conversation Wednesday. We talked about three or four issues not clearly addressed in my first memorandum.

First, it is true that in our letter to the Rose Law Firm, we addressed a very narrow legal issue regarding the savings and loan laws and the Arkansas Business Corporation Code. Our letter did not address federal law or applicable federal regulations. The savings and loan was required to seek approval from the FDIC, not our office, as to the form of the security prior to its issuance. We had no reason to think the FDIC would approve preferred stock that could not be included in the association's net worth. There would be no point in pursuing such an offering.

Nevertheless, I am certain that Charles Handley discussed with Rick Massey his concerns about federal regulatory treatment of the preferred stock. It is my understanding from Charles that Mr. Massey subsequently provided Charles with a FDIC bulletin or regulation regarding the issuance of preferred stock and assured

Memo to Mr. Jeff Giffen
 February 28, 1992
 Page 2

Charles that the preferred stock would be structured in accordance with existing federal regulations so that it would in fact be deemed permanent capital stock for net worth purposes. (I believe there are copies of those regulations or bulletins in the file.)

Second, I am certain that our Department had no definitive proof of insolvency of Madison Guaranty until calendar year 1987. The FMSB documents to which you referred Wednesday in no way constituted a full and final examination report admissible in state court as evidentiary proof of insolvency. During this time, Madison Guaranty had been told to obtain new appraisals of its real estate properties in order to determine the value of the real estate investments of the savings and loan. Those appraisals were not formally ordered until McCougal was fired in July, 1986. Indeed, the difficulty in obtaining definitive real estate appraisals delayed the completion of the audit for 1986 performed by the new auditors hired after McCougal was gone. We did not receive it until the summer of 1987.

State law required that proof of insolvency be submitted in connection with a petition for a receivership or similarly thereafter. The audit for the association reflected no such insolvency and the examination reports of the FMSB were inconclusive.

Memo to Mr. Jeff Giffin
February 19, 1992
Page 3

Further, the 1985 preliminary examination report which was the subject of our meeting in Dallas in July, 1986, did not contain a definitive finding of insolvency either. The comments in that report all refer to the net worth deficiency of the savings and loan, rather than insolvency.

Even if we had had proof of insolvency in 1985, I cannot say our actions would have been different. State law requires that when the savings and loan supervisor determines that a savings and loan is insolvent, the state must notify the savings and loan of such insolvency. The savings and loan then must present a plan to the supervisor as to how the solvency will be restored within a reasonable time. A plan to issue $1,000,000 of preferred stock within 90 to 100 days might well have been sufficient to satisfy delaying any receivership until at least the expiration of the offering period.

Third, we intended that our approval of the brokerage subsidiary be conditioned on the association ~~first~~ raising the capital before it began operations. You maintain our letter could be read to say that the savings and loan subsidiary could begin operating as long as the capital was in place by December 31, 1985. Perhaps the wording of the letter is ambiguous, but we firmly believed that our agreement was as I have stated.

Memo to Mr. Jeff Girth
 February 28, 1992
 Page 4

In the file, there is a handwritten note to me from Charles in December, 1985, concerning a telephone conversation he had had that day with John Lathan. In that conversation, he asked Mr. Lathan if the savings and loan had completed its application with our securities broker-dealer registration division. He said "no" and that there were additional items he had to file before the application could be passed on. Charles then reminded Mr. Lathan of our agreement that the broker-dealer could not begin operating until the capital was in place. From Charles' notes, it appears that Mr. Lathan said that that was not his understanding of our agreement but that the savings and loan would abide by those terms anyway. I do not believe the savings and loan ever completed the broker-dealer application.

Finally, it may be important for you to know that state law grants the savings and loan supervisor no emergency acquisition authority similar to that of the FDIC and FDIC. The appointment of a receiver or conservator under state law requires advance notice to the savings and loan and the filing of a petition in state chancery court, which is a public proceeding. Both we and the FDIC agreed that the lack of ability under state law to seize the institution without notice, remove management and immediately take control of the institution from hostile, uncooperative management rendered our receivership provisions essentially useless under the circumstances in which we found ourselves in 1985. The FDIC did not want management tipped off as to the timing of a seizure and the mere filing of a public petition at that time might well have created panic among depositors and a run on the institution between the time the petition was filed and the actual appointment of a receiver. Certainly, it was critical to maintaining public confidence in the insurance fund that FDIC be prepared to accept the receivership. We all agreed that any receivership should be handled under Federal law and, of course, that meant that the FDICB and FDIC controlled the timing.

Memo to Mr. Jeff Glavin
 February 23, 1992
 Page 5

31 MAR 1992 10:297

15

0000166

STATEMENT OF SAM REGER, ATTORNEY FOR JAMES MCDUGGAL

As the attorney for James McDougal, I am appalled and affronted by the allegations and reckless disregard of the facts by the New York Times and its reporter, Jeff Gerth. The statement in the March 8, 1992 New York Times article that McDougal used money from his S&L to subsidize the real estate joint venture is not only false but probably actionable by Mr. McDougal against the New York Times.

The author of the New York Times article, never met with me. He called my office twice and set up two separate times to interview me. Mr. Gerth failed to appear for those interviews on both occasions. I had and still have in my possession documents given to me by Mr. McDougal and documents received through my representation of Mr. McDougal, that would be relevant to the subject matter of the Times article. Those documents support the Clintons' contention that those transactions were proper. I would have been happy to make these documents available to Mr. Gerth, had he chosen to keep his appointments to interview me. I have no idea why he missed those appointments, except for the fact that I told Mr. Gerth over the phone that there was no story in my opinion and based on the documents in my possession.

To the best of my ability, I would like to clarify some points about Mr. McDougal's business dealings. First, there was no link between Whitewater Development Company and Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. In 1989 Jim McDougal was indicted for land transactions that were completely unrelated to this investment. These

REVIEW & OUTLOOK

Smoke Without Fire?

Except for the hired hands, no one any longer is much defending the Clintons on Whitewater issues. Instead, former defenders are scratching their heads over "a coverup without a crime"—why is the White House acting as if it has something to hide? Defenders have advanced to a state of cognitive dissonance, an awareness that beliefs conflict with evidence. The next step is immensely clarifying: OK, they're hiding something; the problem is figuring out precisely what.

This is not to neglect, of course, that a coverup is itself a crime. In the Watergate scandal, obstruction of justice was number one in the articles of impeachment approved by the House Judiciary Committee. The itemized list included making false and misleading statements to investigators, withholding evidence, coaching witnesses and "disseminating information received from officers of the Department of Justice of the United States to subjects of investigations." The "smoking gun" was a tape recording of President Nixon approving a plan to have the CIA ask the FBI to drop its investigation of the "two-bit burglary" at Democratic Party headquarters in the Watergate complex. Along the way, of course, there were 18½-minute gaps in recordings, packets of evidence being destroyed, assertions of executive privilege swept aside by the Supreme Court and other marks of efforts to hide the truth.

In Whitewater, the basic issue is quite similar. We are at a stage of Presidential cronies leaving high office for jail, battles over "attorney-client" privilege, suppressed White House memos suddenly emerging, billing records being discovered in implausible ways. To cover up "two-bit" transgressions back in Arkansas, we are entitled to suspect, the prerogatives of the Presidency are being abused. As a political and constitutional issue, of course, Whitewater doesn't approach the consuming pitch of Watergate, and probably never will unless President Clinton is somehow re-elected and starts a second term.

• • •

The nature of the Arkansas transgressions is suggested by the newly revealed billing records of Hillary Rodham Clinton's work for Madison Guaranty, James McDougal's S&L. She is currently claiming that the 60 hours of work fit under her previous characterization of "minimal," but the question is not so much how much she did as what she did. She used legal skills and political clout to keep the wayward thrift afloat.

In January 1984, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board questioned Madison's lending practices and instructed the Arkansas Securities Department to take steps to close it down. In March, Rose ("atten: Hillary Clinton") received the first $2,000 monthly retainer from Madison. In January 1985, Governor Clinton appointed Beverly Bassett as Securities Commissioner. On April 4, Mr. McDougal hosted a fund-raiser for Governor Clinton in the Madison's lobby, contributions to which have drawn the attention of the independent counsel.

A cluster of Rose Law Firm billings to Madison shows up in late April, as Mrs. Clinton and others work on a recapitalization plan to save the foundering thrift. Among the records is an hour by Mrs. Clinton on April 29 for a telephone conference with Commissioner Bassett. The next day, the recapitalization plan is presented to the Arkansas Securities Department, and two weeks later Ms. Bassett informs Mrs. Clinton the plan had been approved. In the event it was never implemented, nor did Ms. Bassett close Madison.

A second cluster of Rose billings occurs in late 1985 and early 1986 under the heading "I.D.C."—the Industrial Development Co., which evolved into the development. Mr. McDougal named Castle Grande. Mr. McDougal bought the former industrial park in October 1985 from three banks which held the mortgage. He paid $1.75 million, but regulations limited his investment to $600,000. So he arranged for Seth Ward, then another Madison insider, to hold $1.15 million as a non-recourse loan from Madison. Mr. Ward also got a 10% commission on each parcel sold.

The Rose "I.D.C." billings commenced in August and really picked up steam in November and December. Federal bank examiners were due back at Madison in February, and Mr. McDougal knew he had to deal with its poor financial condition and the insider loans. Another non-recourse loan for $25,000 had gone to Madison insider Davis Fitzhugh; Madison CEO John Latham switched it to a phony recourse note before bank examiners arrived; Mr. Latham later pleaded guilty to tampering with the Fitzhugh loan.

Federal investigators concluded that the Castle Grande land was "purchased and sold in a series of fictitious transactions." Mr. McDougal's complex series of loans and paybacks is now under investigation by the independent counsel. The counsel has the cooperation of Robert Palmer, who pleaded guilty to falsifying 25 appraisals for Madison. According to the Rose billing records, Mrs. Clinton had many conversations with Mr. Ward (as well as Webster Hubbell, his son-in-law) as well as conferences with Mr. Latham and Mr. Fitzhugh.

Mr. McDougal's relations with the Clintons is also instructive. He has claimed he put Mrs. Clinton on retainer after Governor Clinton jogged over one day and made the request, mentioning financial hardship. Mr. Clinton denies this ever happened. It is a matter of record, though, that in 1979 the Clintons formed a 50-50 partnership with Mr. McDougal and his wife Susan on the Whitewater Development Co. The idea was to sell land along the White River, but in the end Mr. McDougal heavily subsidized the operation, carrying some of the Clintons' losses. The appearance, in short, is that Mr. McDougal was providing the Clintons a one-way bet.

Another of the Clintons' close friends was Jim Blair, counsel to chicken king Don Tyson. (Beverly Bassett is now Beverly Bassett Schaffer, wife of Archie Schaffer, director of media and government affairs for Tyson Foods.) Mr. Blair, of course, was also adviser to Mrs. Clinton on her 1978 commodities trades, in which she parlayed $1,000 into $100,000. This took place as Bill Clinton's first gubernatorial campaign headed into its final lap.

Yet another friend was David Watkins, political adviser to the governor when he re-entered the governor's mansion in 1983. That year Mr. Watkins steered Mrs. Clinton into a cellular telephone franchise. Her $2,000 investment netted $48,000 five years later. Mr. Watkins, of course, wrote the White House memo fingering the First Lady in the Travel Office firings and mentioning an earlier incident with the Secret Service.

David Hale, an Arkansas political figure appointed to a judgeship by Governor Clinton, was head of Capital Management Services, a federally backed small-business lender. He made a $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal in 1986 to keep Madison afloat. Some of this money apparently showed up in the Whitewater account. Mr. Hale, who pleaded guilty to defrauding the SBA, said he made the loan under pressure from Mr. McDougal and Governor Clinton. Both have denied the charge, and after his plea Mr. Hale has been cooperating with Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr.

And, of course, these are the instances and allegations we know about. The Clintons' circle of friends was even wider. There was David Edwards, the elusive currency trader at the center of a $23 million gift from the Saudis to the University of Arkansas and who had a long dinner with the President in Little Rock just before Vincent Foster's death. Also Dan Lisater, who ran a bond-trading house and was convicted of social distribution of cocaine, leaving his business to be run while he was in jail by Patsy Thomason, later one of the White House aides who visited Mr. Foster's office the night of his death.

Meanwhile, the New York Post reported yesterday on correspondence in which the New York State Attorney General is inquiring about more than $100,000 in payments to Mrs. Clinton by the National Center on Education and the Economy, a charity based at the time in Rochester and since relocated to Washington. Mrs. Clinton sat on the organization's board, along with former New York Governor Mario Cuomo and Ira Magaziner, later health czar. Board members were not paid, but Mrs. Clinton was hired apparently to direct some programs; Dennis Vacco, the new Republican Attorney General, is asking for contracts with her or the Rose Firm and a description of work performed.

Also yesterday, the Associated Press reported that President Clinton was informed in advance of the Travel Office firings, and met twice the week before with Harry Thomason. These findings were omitted from the White House internal review of the matter; the report's author told the AP the omission was "of no consequence," because Mr. Clinton took no action himself. Mr. Thomason, of course, owned the firm that stood to profit from the changes in handling of Travel Office business.

By this point, we should think, the smoke is getting pretty thick. Some little flames may be individually quenched, but there is a certain pattern to them. The Clintons had a lot of friends in the fast lanes in Arkansas, and the whole crowd trafficked in political influence and money. Nearly all of the people involved in these affairs, in Washington and back in Arkansas, are in various degrees of serious legal trouble or personal and political ruin. But Bill and Hillary are in the White House, the dissonance runs, unsmudged and unsullied.

THOMAS OLIPHANT

A 'smoking gun' fizzles — again

WASHINGTON

As smoking guns go, Rick Massey is a fizzle. And he's anything but unique; he's merely the latest.

The no-longer-young attorney for Little Rock's Rose Law Firm at least provides us with a fresh example of how congressional partisans are handling Whitewater. What makes it unusual is that Whitewater is not an investigation of a scandal, but an investigation in search of a scandal. And it is led by Sen. Al D'Amato's bumbling Senate defamation operation.

Since the New York Republican began spending serious money last year, the list of fizzles has been astonishing: A mystery phone call after Vincent Foster's suicide turned out never to have been made. A mystery phone number turned out to be a White House trunk line. A new "Foster File" was neither new nor Foster's. A key S&L investigator turned out to be a rabid, right-wing, Clinton-hating partisan. And the Small Business Administration, purportedly under White House influence, turned out to have pursued a key Whitewater figure in record time.

And, lest we forget, just a month ago there was a D'Amato-manipulated media frenzy very much like the one last week. It was created around a set of notes from a White House-Clinton lawyer meeting two years ago that was supposed to show efforts to obtain inside information to obstruct official investigations. Out came the notes, which of course showed no such thing.

Each time, the syndrome has been identical: report of explosive evidence, characterization of evidence, interpretation of evidence, surfacing of evidence, evaporation of issue. That's why an examination of Rick Massey's appearance before the D'Amato committee last week should begin with the way it was advertised ahead of time.

Reporters were told he would "contradict" Hillary Rodham Clinton's statements about how their law firm came to represent the infamous Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Republicans also said in advance that Massey would contradict her statements that he did most of the work and would say he had little to do with the case.

Not exactly. Massey is now a partner in the firm, and his narrative of events from the spring of 1985 did nothing of the sort.

What Massey did say was that he himself pitched a senior Madison Guaranty executive to have Rose handle the matter, which was an effort to secure a state regulatory opinion that Madison could legally issue preferred stock to increase its capital and arrange a broker's license to handle such a sale of stock.

What is more, Massey said that the executive, John Latham (an acquaintance from college), had originally sought him out at a securities law course he was helping teach in Little Rock. Massey added that Latham told him he lacked the authority to hire him.

Massey said he then "may" have had a "casual conversation" with Mrs. Clinton about this but does not remember a specific conversation.

Mrs. Clinton does remember, however, and she has always said that she then raised the matter of the firm's retention with the S&L's owner, her then-friend, James McDougal. According to testimony by Latham to federal regulators, McDougal suggested retaining the law firm because Mrs. Clinton was a friend, whereupon Latham requested that Massey do the work they had already discussed. All of this — Rose's retention and Massey's assignments — occurred on the same day.

Massey's memory on what happened next is equally clear. He says the substantive work on the two issues was his alone — researching the issue, framing it for the state regulator and sending a formal letter to the Bill Clinton-appointed official to which he put Mrs. Clinton's name as the firm's billing partner. Massey said his view was that the question of the S&L's ability to issue stock was such a "siam punk" that he did not believe state regulators even had discretion in the matter.

He was right. The favorable opinion was issued, but the state regulator later attached a condition to an actual stock sale that Madison Guaranty was unable to meet. Mrs. Clinton has said she had no role in that phase of the matter, and no evidence contradicts her.

The lesson of Whitewater is that you take these shrill claims one at a time, listen to testimony and read documents and then discard the claims.

There will be more. Around here, the conventional wisdom is that the number and volume of charges are, more politically important than subsequent facts. A minority view is that there is a critical mass of garbage beyond which partisan defamation is transformed from a sword into a boomerang.

Thomas Oliphant is a Globe columnist.

Resolution Trust Corporation
Office of Inspector General, Office of Investigation

JOHN LATHAM, LATHAM & ASSOCIATES, was interviewed on July 12, 1995 at Little Rock, Arkansas by Special Agent E.P. HUSOK, RTC Office of Inspector General, and Special Agent SCOTT MALLON, FDIC Office of Inspector General. Also present during the interview was LATHAM'S attorney, JAMES RHODES, of the law firm DOVER & DIXON. LATHAM was advised that he was to be interviewed relative to his knowledge of the ROSE Law Firm representation of the former MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS and LOAN and the 1985 purchase of property owned by the INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT COMPANY (IDC).

LATHAM said that he began working at MADISON GUARANTY as the Executive Vice President in 1983. He said that he was also a member of the Board of Directors of MADISON FINANCIAL CORPORATION, a subsidiary of MADISON GUARANTY.

LATHAM said that at one time, date not recalled, JAMES MCDOUGAL suggested that MADISON GUARANTY use ROSE for some of the legal work at the institution. LATHAM said that, "MCDOUGAL had friends over there, he suggested we use them." LATHAM said when asked who the friends were that it was HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON and others. MASSEY said that he also was familiar with a ROSE attorney, RICHARD MASSEY, with whom he had attended college at the University of Central Arkansas. LATHAM said that he did not specifically recall the manner by which ROSE was paid but knew that at some point the firm was on retainer which he heard was $2,000 per month. LATHAM said that he did not know who the billing attorney at ROSE was.

LATHAM said that he recalled ROSE working on only one matter for MADISON GUARANTY. He said that the issue ROSE worked on concerned a broker/dealer operation that was purchased by MADISON. He said that he recalled that ROSE worked either on the acquisition of the broker/dealer operation, or on legal aspects of the acquisition after it had been done. LATHAM said that MASSEY worked on the matter because he had specifically asked for him to do so. LATHAM could not recall any specifics of what the services performed by ROSE in the matter were, except that he did recall one occasion when he and MASSEY met with BEVERLY BASSETT of the Arkansas Securities Department (ASD). He could not recall details of that meeting.

LATHAM was asked whether he recalled anyone from ROSE working on a preferred stock offering contemplated or proposed by MADISON GUARANTY. He said he did not. LATHAM said that he recalled that at some time in 1985, the institution was considering every possible means of increasing capital, and that a preferred stock offering was considered along with other means. He recalled that the decision was eventually made to raise capital by a subordinated debt offering. LATHAM said that he did not recall anyone from ROSE working on that issue, rather he recalled that JOHN SELIG of the law firm of MITCHELL, WILLIAMS, SELIG, JACKSON worked on the

By: E.P. HUSOK	Date prepared: July 16, 1995	File No: WA-94-0016
----------------	------------------------------	---------------------

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

---

THURSDAY, JANUARY 18, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:12 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENTS OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Ms. Huber, how are you?

Ms. HUBER. Fine, thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you just stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

[Whereupon, Carolyn Huber, Special Assistant to the President, was called as a witness and, having first been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:]

SWORN TESTIMONY OF CAROLYN HUBER SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee wants to thank you because I understand you have been through quite a bit to get here, and yesterday and the day before you gave depositions, I guess, late into the afternoon, so we thank you for your appearance.

We know that your counsel has a pressing engagement so we are going to attempt to move this as quickly as we can——

Ms. HUBER. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. —to accommodate both you and your counsel.

If you have any statement that you or your counsel would like to make, we are prepared to take it. If not, we will begin the examination.

Ms. HUBER. No, I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Huber, what is your current position at the White House?

Ms. HUBER. I'm a Special Assistant to the President in charge of personal correspondence.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that you have known Mrs. Clinton and President Clinton for a long time?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you were one of the nonlawyer managing personnel at the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Back in the 1980's?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And in the 1990's?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would like to direct your attention to August 1995, and I want to help you to fix in your mind what was going on at that period of time, both here and in your own experience at the White House.

You recall in August 1995, there were hearings going on involving the removal of documents from Vince Foster's office?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you testified before the Committee on about August 3, 1995; is that correct?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that again had to do with the events of July 1993, when Mr. Foster died; right?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want you to keep your attention focused on that period in August 1995, while this Committee was in the process of investigating the handling of documents in Vince Foster's office, and I want to ask you whether in August 1995, you had occasion to go to a room on the third floor of the White House residence called the Book Room.

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What is the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. It's a—it has bookshelves in it where we keep the Clintons' personal books. It has a closet in there where we keep knickknacks and had a table where it's piled—when we get gifts in from different people, we pile up the books on the table and then the knickknacks and we eventually sort them out. I pack up some of them to send to archives. Part of them we put in the closet.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The Book Room is located in part of the personal quarters of the First Family?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that one of the doors from the Book Room leads into the exercise room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that is the exercise room that's available to the President and the First Lady and their personal guests at the residence?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you just tell us briefly where this Book Room is located relative to Mrs. Clinton's private office in the residence of the White House?

Ms. HUBER. On the third floor. It's right next—right next to each other. You go out a door here and then right into here, and they're just like that [indicating].

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it's a few paces away from her private office?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This Book Room is not open to the general public obviously; right?

Ms. HUBER. Oh, no, because this is their residence.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, is it the case that the people that use the Book Room are the President and Mrs. Clinton, yourself, and Ms. Marshall?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, and then, of course, the butlers, the maids, and all of the employees there go in there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Putting aside butlers, and maids, and people who are maintenance personnel, what is Ms. Marshall's position at the White House?

Ms. HUBER. She's the Personal Assistant to the First Lady.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What do her duties involve?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know specifically all her duties. I know that she keeps up with all of her personal—like makeup, you know, dress, getting clothes and just all—you know, like a personal—personal matters.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there a table in the middle of this room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. About how big is the table?

Ms. HUBER. It was about 8 by 4 feet, I would say.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have occasion in a deposition yesterday to do a sketch of this Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To help you and help everybody else, we would like to furnish you with a copy of it and put it up on the Elmo. It is Deposition Exhibit Number 1. You drew this for the Committee last night during your deposition?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This table in the center is the table you've just described?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There's a door that leads to the exercise room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then there are other doors that lead out into hallways?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to keep your attention to this period of the first week of August, which is, as I say, one of the weeks we were having hearings on the Vince Foster documents. Did you have occasion to go into that room and see some documents lying on that table in the middle of the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. When—would you rephrase it? I'm not sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During the first or second week of August, did you go into the Book Room and see on this table a series of folded-over documents which you now know to be billing records of the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you tell us how you came to go in and what you saw?

Ms. HUBER. I go up into that room periodically to pick up, like I said, the knickknacks to take down to my office, and that day I went up to get a bunch of magazines and newspaper clippings that we have kept over the years to take them over to my office in the East Wing so that I could get them catalogued. I have a volunteer that does all of this for me.

I had several boxes, and there was a particular box on top of the table that I had—had some of the knickknacks in, and over on the edge of the corner was these documents. And I saw them. I just—they were folded. I didn't open them. I just picked them up and plunked them down into the box. And I called the Usher's Office, if they could come help me tote all these boxes back to my office. So they came up with their little dollies. We carried them to my office. I put them on the floor and left them there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to still keep your attention focused on this period in August. Before this occasion on the first or second week of August when you saw the documents on the table, had you been in that room on an earlier occasion a couple of weeks earlier?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On that earlier occasion a week or two before you saw the documents, had you observed what was on the table?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were the documents on the table a week or two before?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it from your answers in the deposition that you are quite confident you would have noticed the documents a week or two earlier if they had been on that table?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I would have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that on this occasion you came in and you walked to the table. And you had a box there already?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, there was a box there already, had some of the knickknacks thrown into it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you on earlier occasions brought that box in, in order to collect knickknacks?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that before this event in August, you had been in the room from time to time and you had been in the process of collecting knickknacks and memorabilia; right?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On those earlier occasion you did not see these billing records?

Ms. HUBER. No, I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then in the first or second week of August when you went up, you noticed the billing records on the table?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to show you what has been marked as DKS N 28928 all the way down to 29043 and ask you whether this is a copy of the documents or the billing records that you saw in August.

Ms. HUBER. I can't see them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me send them down to you.

Ms. HUBER. My eyesight is not as good anymore. Yes, this appears to be what I saw.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would like you to show us how they were arranged on that day in August when you walked into the Book Room and saw them on the table [indicating].

Ms. HUBER. These don't seem to fold as good as those. Those folded really well and they cannot open up like this, but it's like that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So they were folded over. Were they secured by a rubber band?

Ms. HUBER. No, just like this. Just like that [indicating].

Mr. CHERTOFF. And they were on top of a pile of books?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, about like that [indicating].

Mr. CHERTOFF. How close were they to the edge of the table?

Ms. HUBER. About like that [indicating].

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were they clearly visible?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you saw the documents on that day in August, what did you do with them?

Ms. HUBER. I just picked them up and plunked them down in that box that was already there with the knickknacks on it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you do that?

Ms. HUBER. Because I thought it was something I was supposed to file.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You thought it had been left there for you?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I thought it had been left there for me to take down and file it in the filing that I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that one of the reasons you thought it had been left for you is because when you had been there on an earlier occasion, you had not seen those documents?

Ms. HUBER. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now let me just, before we move forward in time, I want to get a little bit of a better sense of what this room is. The bookcases contain personal books of the Clintons?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When we say books, we mean like novels or biography or whatever?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are there also file cabinets in that room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I have a file cabinet in there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do the Clintons have a file cabinet?

Ms. HUBER. Well, it's theirs.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How many file cabinets are there?

Ms. HUBER. I have two in there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And can you tell us what's contained in the file cabinets?

Ms. HUBER. One cabinet has all their personal matters that I take care of like, for instance, their condominium, their insurance papers, last year's paid bills and that type thing, I keep in there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So would you say it is their current financial records?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, the current ones, not the old ones.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What is in the second file cabinet?

Ms. HUBER. It doesn't have anything in it now, except one drawer has a bunch of maps in it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was in the second file cabinet in August 1995?

Ms. HUBER. Well, after I got those papers out, just the maps. It's from vacations, like when you keep memorabilia when you go on vacations. It's a whole drawer full of places they have been.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it that room is the room in which to your knowledge the President and the First Lady go in when, for example, they want to get a book to read or they want to put a book away?

Ms. HUBER. Not necessarily, because they have bookshelves all over the White House in the residence.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it's one of the places they would go?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, it's just one of them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's also a room that you have to go through in order to get to the exercise room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And that table where the documents were found was right in the center of the room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that it would be—if someone were to enter the room and go through it to go to the exercise room, it would be very obvious—those papers would be very obvious the way they were situated when you found them in early August?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It would be hard to miss them?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again I want to just try to ascertain who generally has access to this room. You have access to the room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I have to ask you, did you put those documents in the room in the first place?

Ms. HUBER. No, I did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Marshall has regular access to that room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your understanding of her duties is that they would relate more to kind of personal needs on the part of Mrs. Clinton, things like appointments for, let's say, clothing or things of that sort?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then the President and Mrs. Clinton would obviously have reason to be in that room; correct?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you would agree with me that those are the only people, other than, you know, maintenance personnel or people who clean, who would have occasion to be in that room except for house guests?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And it is your understanding that house guests might be given permission by the Clintons to be in the exercise room or to be in that room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But I am correct, am I not, that access to that room is very, very limited?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is not like one of the ceremonial rooms in the residence which are sometimes used for functions or in which people might be allowed to come and go with a little bit more freedom?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you folded up the documents and you put them into the box and you had the Usher's—

Ms. HUBER. I didn't fold them. They were folded up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You picked them up and put them in the box?

Ms. HUBER. Just stuck them down in the box.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you notice as you did that what kind of documents they were?

Ms. HUBER. I just thought it was—it looked sort of like billing memos, but I didn't open it. From being in a law firm, I thought it kind of looked like them, but I didn't open it so I couldn't tell that it really was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So from your experience at the law firm, you did have the impression that they looked like the kind of documents that would be billing memos?

Ms. HUBER. Kind of, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you didn't actually open them and inspect them?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is part of the reason for that that you assumed that they had been left for you and, therefore, you were simply to file them?

Ms. HUBER. That's true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had them sent back down to your office?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened to them after that?

Ms. HUBER. They were sitting on the floor in my office all these 4 months or how long it's been.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did anybody make an effort to catalogue what was in the box?

Ms. HUBER. No, it's still there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I guess it's not accurate to say you discovered them in January because you had put them in the box. How did you come to rediscover them in January?

Ms. HUBER. I had some new furniture built in my office. I have some new built-ins. And I had this big table in there. When I got my new built-ins I didn't need a table anymore because I have shelves and I can put all my things up. I had called to have it moved that morning, on Thursday morning. So they took the table out. Then I decided I would start trying to put my things up on the shelves, and I picked up this billing memo and opened it, and I was surprised.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it fair to say you were kind of troubled?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you do?

Ms. HUBER. I sat down for a few minutes and thought. Then I called Mr. Kendall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you think about in those few minutes?

Ms. HUBER. Well, I just thought what should I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you decide to call Mr. Kendall?

Ms. HUBER. Because I have gotten information from Mr. Kendall before on different occasions on records when he needed—when he was—had asked me for records, so I called him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you consider calling Mrs. Clinton first?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why not?

Ms. HUBER. Because I knew she was busy that day with an interview and I didn't want to disturb her.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you consider waiting until Mrs. Clinton was done with the interview?

Ms. HUBER. No, I didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why not?

Ms. HUBER. Because I thought it was very important that I call someone right away.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And am I correct in my understanding that as soon as you looked at the documents and saw that they were Rose billing records, you immediately understood that these were documents that had been subpoenaed or required by a number of investigating agencies?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In order to explain that, let me go back a little bit in time and say, were you, yourself, involved over the months in 1994 and 1995 in helping the White House and helping the Clintons personally in responding to various subpoenas and document requests relating to Whitewater?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I helped Mr. Kendall on several occasions look up documents, and then in July 1994, two of his associates came over to the White House onto the third floor and they copied all of those boxes, my boxes that I have in the closet, or went through every paper and made their little notes, little sticky papers that they left there, things that they were looking at.

Then I had a wooden file cabinet in there at that time. They went through all of those files for 2 weeks, looking through every piece of paper I had up there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to take this step-by-step, because you have mentioned a closet on the third floor and I want to make it clear, the closet you are mentioning is not in this room which is the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is it the same closet that we heard testimony about last year in which for a period of days some of the personal records from Mr. Foster's office were kept?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And there were other boxes in that closet?

Ms. HUBER. When—what—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, after Mr. Kendall's—let me withdraw the question.

After the Foster records had been finally transferred over to Williams & Connolly in 1993, I take it there remained in that closet other boxes of records?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, the boxes that I had brought up here from Arkansas. They're financial records.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And those boxes included Whitewater records relating to Whitewater Development Corporation?

Ms. HUBER. Just some checks that would have been from Whitewater would have been in those files because it was only financial papers, like their income tax returns for the last 10 years or more. That's the type records, checks, personal checks.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in July 1994, a couple of lawyers from Williams & Connolly came over and they were directed to look at records in this closet in a room on the third floor that is not the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who told you or who made the decision as to where these lawyers should look for records? In other words, did the lawyers come to you and say, "Where should we look for records?" Did Mrs. Clinton say, "Tell them to look over here."?

Ms. HUBER. No, Mr. Kendall would call me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he say to you?

Ms. HUBER. He had a request for documents and he would ask me to go up to the boxes and get what he needed and I would copy and send them to him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where were the documents that you were copying located in the White House?

Ms. HUBER. On the third floor in that closet.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In that closet?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But not in the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In all of your going through files at Mr. Kendall's request to copy documents, had you ever seen those billing records?

Ms. HUBER. No, I had not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So as far as you know from your participation in searching through the Clintons' documents to respond to subpoenas, as far as you know, the places you looked did not contain those billing records?

Ms. HUBER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mrs. Clinton ever have any conversation with you about locations or places in the White House you ought to be looking at in order to comply with subpoenas for documents?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk with Mrs. Clinton at all about complying with subpoenas for documents?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All of your communication was with Mr. Kendall?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your understanding that Mr. Kendall was talking with Mrs. Clinton and the President?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it also your understanding that this searching for documents in July 1994, and on other occasions was in response to subpoenas?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you understand that they were subpoenas from the Independent Counsel?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you understand there were subpoenas from the RTC?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you understand that as of October of last year, there was a subpoena from this Committee?

Ms. HUBER. From what?

Mr. CHERTOFF. From this Committee.

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I just want to understand a little bit more fully and make sure we have the complete picture of your role in responding to requests for documents. You got your instructions from Mr. Kendall?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Kendall told you what he needed; is that right?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, and we would meet—occasionally he would bring the paper, we would go over what he needed, and I would tell him if I knew a certain name or if I didn't know it. And I told him about what checking accounts they had had.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it that you used your best effort to comply with Mr. Kendall's requests for documents based on what you knew about where documents were kept that related to the Clintons' activities?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. During all of that discussion with Mr. Kendall, whether in person or on the telephone, you were not aware or you never ran across these billing records until that day on August 1995, when they were—for the first time, you saw them open—not open, folded on the table in the middle of the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct, in fact, that you never actually looked in the Book Room for documents at Mr. Kendall's request?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me direct your attention to the documents, the billing records, again. When you opened those billing records in January and discovered what they were, in January 1996, did you recognize handwriting on it?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was handwriting in red ink?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And just to be very clear, the records you found were not actually original printouts; they were Xerox copies of a printout?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But the handwriting was in red as original red handwriting?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you recognize the handwriting?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whose handwriting was it?

Ms. HUBER. It was Mr. Foster's.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew Vince Foster's handwriting from your knowing him at the law firm?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have an opportunity to read any of the notations that Mr. Foster made on the billing records?

Ms. HUBER. Not until later on that night when I was copying them, I read them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you were copying the records at the direction of Mr. Kendall?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you did get an opportunity to read those notations, did you read notations that indicated to you that Mr. Foster had written messages or notations to Mrs. Clinton's attention about certain items on the bills?

Ms. HUBER. I'm not sure who they were directed to. I'm not sure, because I didn't know who he was—who he gave them to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you see, for example, notations where it says, "HRC"—well, let me direct your attention to page 28934, and I'll just do one or two of these.

Mr. SCHUELKE. These do not appear to be arranged sequentially.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll send a copy of this down to you.

It says, "HRC—this suggests first matter." It's 28934. I just want to have you verify for us, this is Mr. Foster's handwriting. It says, "This suggests first matter."

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want, just to close up in January and then make sure we understand this, after you called Mr. Kendall, he came over?

Ms. HUBER. Not right away. It was about an hour later.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Sherburne came over too at some point?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You gave them the documents?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They directed you to copy them?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you speak to Mrs. Clinton about these documents after you rediscovered them on January 4th?

Ms. HUBER. No, I have not spoken to her since December 22nd.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to go back to make sure we have a complete picture, because this is very important, of the situation in this Book Room in August 1995. This room was a room that was a part of the private residence to which the Clintons, yourself, and Ms. Marshall were the people who had access, apart from cleaning people; right?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you went in there sometime in late July to continue with the process of collecting memorabilia, these documents were not on the table?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But when you came back in early August, the first or second week of August, the documents were on the table?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were folded up?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were piled up on books?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They were out in the open?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Anybody passing through the room could not have missed them?

Ms. HUBER. True.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you, yourself, made the assumption that someone had taken those documents from wherever they had been kept earlier and had deliberately put them on that pile of books?

Ms. HUBER. Someone had.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They didn't get there by themselves?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you, yourself, could tell even from a casual glance, although you didn't look at the actual records, you could tell based on your familiarity with the Rose Law Firm that they were billing records?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Even though they were folded up?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It stands to reason that anybody else who was in that room, at that point in time, and saw those records who was familiar with the Rose Law Firm billing records would also have recognized them to be billing records?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It also stands to reason that the person who put those records on that pile of books was someone who had the ability to gain access to that room and also had access to those records; is that right?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, the reason you put those records in the box to take down was because you believed that either the President or Mrs. Clinton had left them there for you for that purpose?

Ms. HUBER. No, I didn't—I didn't assume that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, who did you think had left them there?

Ms. HUBER. I didn't know. I didn't know who left them there.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But your assumption was someone had left them there?

Ms. HUBER. That someone had, but I did not know who.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And this occurred—let me ask you maybe to help fix the date. Did this event occur after you came to testify before the Committee, which was on August 3 or before?

Ms. HUBER. I do not remember exactly what day it was. I cannot remember. I don't make notes of when I go up and down the stairs or what.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you do remember this occurring in early August, which we have ascertained is the same time that we were having hearings in this very room about the issue of documents from Mr. Foster's office?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do remember August 1995, as a time when there had already been a number of requests from various investigating agencies for documents relating to the Whitewater investigation and related matters?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In January, when you actually opened the records, you immediately recognized that these were documents that were called for by the subpoenas and requests for documents you had been working on over the preceding year or so; right?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It wasn't hard to see that?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you this. In terms of your decision when you were thinking about calling Mr. Kendall in January of this year when you rediscovered the documents, you said you thought about it for awhile, you tried to decide what to do. Had you at that point heard that a memo relating to the Travel Office firings had been recently discovered in the White House?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know whether I had or not, because—I don't really read the newspaper.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you heard any discussion in the White House that there had been a delay in turning over that memo in January because there was some debate in the White House about whether the memo ought to be turned over?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that didn't enter into your thinking?

Ms. HUBER. No, it didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to bring your attention back to 1992 for a moment before my time runs out, and I want to ask you another question about a different set of records.

We heard some testimony 2 days ago concerning Whitewater records that were held at the Rose Law Firm in 1992 in February. We heard Mr. Kennedy indicate that he had gotten a message from the First Lady in February 1992, to get some Whitewater records out of the Rose Law Firm over to the campaign. We heard that Sue Cathey-Jones had gotten a message from Mrs. Clinton to do that, and we also heard that neither of them when they actually went to pick up the records could find the records at the firm. They had already been moved. Did you get a similar call?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us about that.

Ms. HUBER. I got a call about 11:30 from Mrs. Clinton to ask me to take their personal records down to the campaign office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you understand the personal records to include the Whitewater records?

Ms. HUBER. No, they did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you understand them to include?

Ms. HUBER. The boxes that I have moved up here, the financial—personal financial records is what I was to get.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What time was the call?

Ms. HUBER. It was about 11:30 at night.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On what day?

Ms. HUBER. On a Saturday night.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did Mrs. Clinton tell you why there was an urgency about getting this done?

Ms. HUBER. No, she just said the campaign needed them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you go over to get the documents?

Ms. HUBER. They were at the Rose Law Firm. I had had them in my office there. I went down to get them, and they had already been moved to the campaign headquarters.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So Mrs. Clinton called you at 11:30 that night and asked you to go down that very night on Saturday?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, yes. She had been trying to reach me earlier. I had been at the Repertoire Theater. They couldn't get in touch with me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So she had been trying to reach you all night?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, all night. I didn't get home until about then.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you got the call at 11:30 Saturday night, she asked you to go down immediately and get the records?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you arrived there, they had already been moved?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And did you ever find out who had moved the records?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think I'm out of time, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Huber, I want to be clear on one thing so there is no confusion, although I think Mr. Chertoff cleared it up, but twice in questioning you he said—once he said you folded up the documents and another time he said they were open on the table, but as I understood your testimony, these documents were folded over to begin with, you did not fold them over, and they were not open on the table; is that correct?

Ms. HUBER. That's correct. They were folded.

Senator SARBANES. You also said you noticed the billing records on the table, but these were folded documents. Did you know—I mean, did you really identify them as billing records at the time?

Ms. HUBER. No, because—I didn't identify them. I just picked them up and plopped them down in there. And I thought it looked like maybe computer printouts of billing memos. I didn't open it up to verify it. It was just from working in the law firm, I thought that's what it looked like.

Senator SARBANES. So you then put them in a box and then had that box delivered from the Book Room down to your office in the East Wing of the White House; is that right?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Then that box was placed under a table in that room; is that correct?

Ms. HUBER. It was placed on the floor.

Senator SARBANES. And left there?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Then when they redid your office, took the table out, you then wanted to clear out the boxes. Is that when you found these papers?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. That was on January 4th?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good morning, Ms. Huber. Here I am.

Ms. HUBER. Sorry.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Huber, about what time of the day on the 4th of January did you find the records?

Ms. HUBER. It was about 11 a.m., because that's—after they had moved the table out, that's about the time they had gotten through moving it out and getting my office straightened up again.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And then the first thing you did was to call Mr. Kendall?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then you also called your—

Ms. HUBER. Then I called my attorney, Mr. Schuelke.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Schuelke. Then Mr. Kendall came over?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He met with you and he looked at the records?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That evening you copied the records. How many copies did you make?

Ms. HUBER. I made two copies.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you met with Mr. Schuelke as well?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, Mr. Schuelke, Mr. Kendall, and Ms. Sherburne came.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone suggest to you in any way that you not turn over these records?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there any suggestion from any corridor that there should be any delay in turning over the records?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now putting aside whether these records are, in fact, covered by any subpoena by this Committee, let me ask you whether you had occasion to review the subpoenas of this Committee, or the RTC, or the Independent Counsel personally.

Ms. HUBER. Not the real subpoenas, I didn't.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were just looking for various kinds of records?

Ms. HUBER. Records that were in the memos.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the search for records and the assistance that you provided to Mr. Kendall and others in locating records, we have talked about the records that were in the closet of your office which you made available and which were copied and annotated by Mr. Kendall and his assistants. Did you have any reason to believe that there were any records of a financial or other pertinent nature, other than the Clintons' personal and current records, that were contained in the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that was not a place which you either searched or directed anyone to search for the records?

Ms. HUBER. No, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Going back to August 1993, about what time of day, if you can recall—and I know that would be a harder question to answer than the January question—

Ms. HUBER. You mean 1995?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In 1995, I'm sorry. Back in August 1995, when you first noticed the folded-up records on the work table in the Book Room, do you recall what time of day that was?

Ms. HUBER. It was in the morning.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now to the best of your knowledge, how long a period had elapsed prior to that time before you had been in the Book Room on the previous occasion?

Ms. HUBER. It could have been 2 to 3, 4 days, because I was in—I don't remember—I don't go in everyday but I will go in through there, you know, frequently.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you don't have any idea or wouldn't have the ability to form any opinion as to how long those billing records may have been lying on that table, other than that you probably would have noticed it on the prior occasion had they been there, and you think that was at least 3 or 4 days?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So there was a 3- or 4-day period. Let me ask you a very important question that I don't think has been asked of you this morning, and that is whether you know who left those records there?

Ms. HUBER. I do not know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did anyone tell you who left those records there?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You saw the records, you put them in a box. How long a period of time elapsed before that box was moved to your office in the East Wing?

Ms. HUBER. Oh, it was immediately after I got them packed up, so I was up there probably 10 or 15 minutes packing the books up and then we went right on to my office.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was how many boxes altogether?

Ms. HUBER. Probably that day, I probably had four or five boxes of stuff.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I understand your testimony, those boxes then reposed under a work table in your East Wing office until January?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you tell us whether to the best of your knowledge the records appeared to be in the same condition and in the same place where you had put them back in August when you rediscovered them in January when the table was removed from your office and you set about dealing with putting away the materials in the boxes under your work table?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, they were there. Same place.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Same place.

Ms. HUBER. Same way they were.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They did not appear to have been——

Ms. HUBER. Been disturbed.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The handwriting which appears on the records—do we have that set of records or have they been taken back? Could the same records be placed in front of Ms. Huber, please?

Ms. Huber, the handwriting that you had recognized as that of Vince Foster was in red ink; is that correct?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have received what I understand to be a color photocopy of the materials that you received.

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that on our copy, Mr. Foster's handwriting is also in red ink because of the reproduction process in color. Can you tell us whether to the best of your knowledge Mr. Foster's handwriting was original handwriting; that is, ink on paper as opposed to a color photocopy of red ink on paper?

Ms. HUBER. No, it was original ink.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There was other handwriting, was there not?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The other handwriting you have identified as having been from what people, in terms of the handwriting you could actually identify?

Ms. HUBER. There's some from Mrs. Clinton on there and some from the accounting girls that I recognize.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That writing was photocopied handwriting; is that correct?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the only original handwriting to the best of your knowledge on those documents was that of Mr. Foster and in red ink?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now going back to the procedures with which you were familiar by reason of the fact that you were office manager at the Rose Law Firm, would a copy of billing records have reposed in the billing or accounting or bookkeeping office at the Rose Law Firm for some period of time?

Ms. HUBER. You mean the originals? I didn't understand.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Either a copy or the original of—

Ms. HUBER. The originals are kept in the accounting department.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. We have had testimony about it from Mr. Kennedy, and I guess Mr. Clark will also testify and to some extent Mr. Massey will testify about the document destruction policy; that is, keeping the files current and not accumulating a lot of unnecessary paperwork in the firm. Were you familiar with that policy?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Under the normal scheme of things, would you think that it would be remarkable for billing records from the period 1985 to have survived the various housecleanings at the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. HUBER. No, because after 7 years, they can destroy—they can—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have some water there if you like—

Ms. HUBER. They can destroy—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Take a moment.

Ms. HUBER. Excuse me. But after 7 years, they can destroy the documents in the accounting department, so periodically the accounting supervisor would go over and destroy them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It appears, however, quite clear to all of us that these records have survived the normal document destruction procedure, at least in this photocopy. Do you know how those records would have gotten to the White House?

Ms. HUBER. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Has anyone told you?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have heard testimony from Ms. Thomases that Mr. Hubbell referred to certain time records or billing records in a conversation with her at some point during the campaign. Do you have any reason to believe that Mr. Hubbell had these records in his possession?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now during the period of time that the copies were made, they were made at the White House?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, in EOB Building.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In the Executive Office Building?

Ms. HUBER. In the new Executive Office—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The new EOB. Why did you go to the new Executive Office Building to make the copies?

Ms. HUBER. We were looking for a colored photocopying machine so that it would pick up the colors, the things that were marked in red.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that was the one that you located?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The next day those documents were turned over to this Committee, I believe, by Mr. Kendall. Are you aware of that?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Huber, let me ask you this question. This material in the Book Room that you would take and then eventually file away, none of this stuff was urgent to be filed, I take it? You would accumulate stuff over a period of time and then—let me put the question more directly. You had all these materials and they sat in a box for 4 or 5 months before anything was done with them. Was that unusual, or would you frequently or, at least, from time to time accumulate material and would simply wait until you could get around to filing it away?

Ms. HUBER. That's true. It was not critical. None of the stuff that I bring down to do is critical. It's just stuff that when I get time, I work on it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the—

Senator SARBANES. So the fact that you had this material sitting there in a box for a substantial period of time was not unusual and wasn't out of the ordinary course, at least, as far as you were concerned?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Senator SARBANES. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me go to the question of back in 1992, during the campaign. You recall that there was an inquiry with respect to an issue that came up during the campaign that involved Whitewater; is that correct?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Could you tell us how you learned about it and what the immediacy was of getting an answer to questions?

Ms. HUBER. Well, there were people from the campaign office that had called me about check records, that type of thing. That's how I knew about it, was Ms. Lynch and Mr. Martin. That's the only way I knew about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Lynch, and who else was that?

Ms. HUBER. Mr. Martin.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Martin, thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was prompted by an inquiry which they had received from a newspaper reporter as has been developed in the evidence here, Mr. Gerth from The New York Times. Did you understand that they were trying to get an answer to some questions that had been raised by this reporter on a rush basis?

Ms. HUBER. That's what I understood. That's what the rush was all about.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the records which you had been familiar with that had been taken to the campaign office, did you have the opportunity to see them?

Ms. HUBER. The records while they were there?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I saw them on a table; and they were looking at them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you think that there was anything inappropriate or unusual about the records being made available to answer questions posed by the news reporter during the campaign?

Ms. HUBER. No, I didn't know any—it didn't—I didn't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have any reason to believe that any of those records were destroyed, or hidden, or in some way made unavailable?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have no further questions, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Senator Faircloth.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR LAUCH FAIRCLOTH

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Huber, you found these documents on a corner of the table in the Book Room; that's correct, isn't it?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Was this room cluttered or was it orderly and clean as I would imagine you keep it?

Ms. HUBER. No, it was cluttered.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. It was cluttered?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Who had access to this room?

Ms. HUBER. Ms. Marshall and I both had the same amount of access to the residence. The Clintons' house guests and employees.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. So just you, Ms. Marshall, the Clintons, and their personal house guests?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Ms. Huber, when was the last time prior to your finding them in August that you were in the room?

Ms. HUBER. I can't really pinpoint it. You know, I would say I was in through there every 2 or 3 days.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. When you discovered them that day in August, you had been in that room reasonably frequent—2 or 3 days as your normal course of duty?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. If they had been there before, you would have discovered them before, would you not have?

Ms. HUBER. I don't think I could have missed them.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. These records were not on the table before. You wouldn't have missed them. Isn't it likely that someone pulled them out and was looking at them in the time between your visits, somebody had looked at them?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But they placed them there?

Ms. HUBER. They appeared there.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. During this time period, do you recall any visitors to the third floor, such as Susan Thomases, who may have gone into that room? Do you remember any strangers or any—personal—not strangers it would not have been, but any visitors to that room other than the Clintons' normal traffic back and forth?

Ms. HUBER. I can't remember that, because I'm not up there all the time.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But you didn't see anybody in the room?

Ms. HUBER. I didn't see anybody there.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Just a point—this room is right next door, just a wall separating it from Mrs. Clinton's office?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. There is just a wall between, they are right next door to each other. Because Mrs. Clinton and her ghost writer were working on a book, would she have reason to be in the Book Room more often than usual? Was Mrs. Clinton in and out, since she was writing her book?

Ms. HUBER. Well, they hadn't begun on it then.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. They hadn't begun the book then?

Ms. HUBER. No. I think she had been writing it, but it had been in longhand and she hadn't been up to the third floor yet.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Now as I understand it, President Clinton is an avid reader?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. So does he use this room quite often for reading?

Ms. HUBER. I do not know.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Another question, Ms. Huber. Very late in the evening on the night of Vince Foster's death, the First Lady called you for 4 minutes.

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. This was approaching midnight or very late. This was after she had spoken to Maggie Williams. Could you tell us what the conversation was or might have been about?

Ms. HUBER. Be glad to. She called me, she said Carolyn, do you know—can you figure out why Vince killed himself? And I said I cannot, I cannot believe it. And that's all we talked about.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. That was the extent of it?

Ms. HUBER. It was—I had been a friend of his for all those years, too. He was a very dear friend.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But to go back very briefly on this, the only people that have access to this room are yourself, President and Mrs. Clinton, and Ms. Marshall, whose primary responsibility is to work with Mrs. Clinton on a personal matter, on clothing or make-up or whatever?

Ms. HUBER. And, of course, the house guests.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Of course, yes.

Thank you, Ms. Huber.

Ms. HUBER. You're welcome.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman, I think we are all concerned with the testimony we've heard today. I think it's our duty to find out who hid these records during that period of time, and they were hidden. I have said before the First Lady should come here and tell us what she knows. Now with today's testimony, this Committee, we have no choice at the very minimum to depose the President and First Lady on a reasonable assumption of possible obstruction of justice on this very issue.

Now, Ms. Huber will tell us that these records were in the third floor of the White House in August, full view, in a room accessed only by the Clintons and Ms. Huber. Ms. Huber did not put them there. She did not know what they were when she removed them. Certainly, Ms. Marshall, the lady that was helping Mrs. Clinton, didn't put them there. So this leaves two people who could have put them there. These records were under subpoena for 2 years, since January 1994. We need the President and First Lady to tell us that they did or that they did not put them there.

Mr. Chairman, I have to conclude that what we have here is a very likely serious case of obstruction of justice. If not, then we need to find out.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, let me, if I might respond. I think the Senator in summing up his observations of Ms. Huber's testimony would want to include that house guests obviously also had access to this facility, and certainly for cleaning purposes, some of the help. We will, as it relates to Ms. Marshall, take her deposition. We certainly welcome any clarification that the White House wants to make with regard to this.

I think it is very serious, and given the fact that Ms. Huber has testified that these were handwritings by Mr. Foster, that they were original, and given the questions concerning the removal of files from Mr. Foster's office, it is disturbing that these documents were withheld or at least not discovered.

I have no reason to doubt Ms. Huber's testimony. As a matter of fact, I want to commend her for her forthrightness and the manner in which she has testified. That should be very, very clear. I want that to be part of the record and I think all my colleagues agree. But we will reserve decision on the rest.

The First Lady has indicated that she wants to cooperate. We welcome that. And if she wants to come in to testify, she is certainly welcome to do that. It just seems to me that as time goes along, more facts come forward and in a way that does not, I think, serve the interest of either the White House, or the American people, or this Committee, to be quite candid, but we'll take that under advisement.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Chairman, I have one thing. As we have done before, I would like to request that we get access to the Secret Service logs for the time period Ms. Huber has identified so that we can find out who visited the third floor.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me say that's another area that we will examine. I'll have staff, and White House Counsel is here, ask for a review of the house guests during that period of time because obviously that is important for a number of reasons. I won't add to speculation, but we will look and ask for that information.

I was going to go to Senator Mack, but I see that the yellow button is up. They are going to yield, so would you put—no? OK. No, then fine. That's why I said that rather than start with 1 minute left, I would just as soon then yield to my colleague. So let me yield and accord him his time.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Huber, I want to be clear on one thing. I think you said earlier before Senator Faircloth started questioning you that the maids, and ushers, and the people who worked in the White House had access to this room as well?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. So that would be—generally, the staff in the White House residence would have access as well?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Huber, I would like to be very clear on one point. The records that are in front of you reflect time spent by attorneys at the Rose Law Firm back in 1985 and 1986 with respect to the representation of Madison Bank; is that correct?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Those records do not relate to, refer to, or are in any way related to Whitewater, the Whitewater Development Company?

Ms. HUBER. No. This is all Madison.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I just wanted to make that clear so that there is no misunderstanding in terms of what has been subpoenaed and what has not been subpoenaed. I think that's another issue.

I think that it's quite clear that you did exactly the right thing in bringing this material to our attention because it's clearly of interest to us. The records have been quite useful in examining Mr. Massey and others in terms of what work was done by the Rose Law Firm and the partners and associates thereof in connection with the Madison representation back 10 and 11 years ago.

We want to thank you for that, and I know you're obviously quite nervous about appearing here today, and I want to say that on behalf of us on the Committee who have dealt with you previously, we think that you have been very candid and have acted in the most appropriate manner.

Ms. HUBER. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Huber, when did you determine that the files that you had taken out of the box that were now in your office which you have referred to there in front of you were the records that you had picked up in the Book Room? What brought about that connection?

Ms. HUBER. I didn't have to have a connection. It was the box that I brought down from upstairs.

Senator MACK. The only reason I would ask that question is that you brought that box down in August, I guess, and it was there for 4 or 5 months.

Ms. HUBER. Well, you haven't seen my office. I have boxes in there that's been in there for 3 years.

Senator MACK. So there was no question in your mind that when you picked up this document, you immediately remembered picking it up in the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I did.

Senator MACK. At what point was the White House aware that rather than for these documents to have been found just this past January, they were actually in the residence back in August?

Ms. HUBER. Pardon? I didn't—I don't understand that.

Senator MACK. Maybe I don't understand this. We first heard about these records early this month.

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator MACK. When you discovered them in the box in your office, correct?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator MACK. But as we are hearing this morning, you actually found those documents in August of this past year; is that right?

Ms. HUBER. That's true.

Senator MACK. My question then was when did you tell the White House folks that you actually found these in August and not in January?

Ms. HUBER. You mean when I called Mr. Kendall on January 4?

Senator MACK. Well, I understand that when you spoke with Mr. Kendall, you—

Ms. HUBER. That's when I discovered that they were the documents that had been subpoenaed.

Senator MACK. OK. But when did you tell Mr. Kendall that you actually found these?

Ms. HUBER. The minute I opened them up. I sat down and thought just a few moments, and then I thought the thing that I have to do is to call Mr. Kendall to tell him. I told him, I have found a document, David, that I think you are looking for. Would you please come to my office.

Senator MACK. When he came to your office, what did you tell him?

Ms. HUBER. I showed it to him. I didn't say anything. I just handed it to him.

Senator MACK. So at this point Mr. Kendall was not aware that you had actually picked this document up back in August?

Ms. HUBER. No, he didn't know I had it.

Senator MACK. No, I understand that. Did you ever say to Mr. Kendall, now, I actually picked this document up in the Book Room back in August, could be by mistake but I just picked it up and put it in a box and brought it into my office?

Ms. HUBER. When he came over, I explained to him.

Senator MACK. Did you explain to White House Counsel at the same time?

Ms. HUBER. No, he was by himself when he came to see me.

Senator MACK. What I'm trying to determine is at what point did the White House learn that you actually picked these documents up for the first time in August?

Ms. HUBER. That day, January 4th.

Senator MACK. So you did inform them at that point?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, that day.

Senator MACK. Is it reasonable for me to conclude that Mrs. Clinton is aware of the fact that you had picked those documents up in August out of the Book Room?

Ms. HUBER. No, I've—she didn't know I picked them up. I did not say—I did not tell anybody I had picked them up.

Senator MACK. I am now referring to after you had told White House Counsel.

Ms. HUBER. You mean on January 4th?

Senator MACK. Right.

Ms. HUBER. I did not speak to her.

Senator MACK. You may not know, but is it reasonable for me to conclude that if the White House Counsel was informed by you on January 4th that you had picked these documents up in the Book Room in August, that Mrs. Clinton is aware of that?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know. I don't know if they talked to her.

Senator MACK. The last time you talked to her was when?

Ms. HUBER. December 22nd.

Senator MACK. And again, there's just no question in your mind that you actually picked these up in August?

Ms. HUBER. Around that date, the best—to my knowledge.

Senator MACK. Mr. Chairman, the term or phrase "obstruction of justice" has been used, and as I have said many times before this Committee, I am not an attorney so I don't know really what constitutes obstruction of justice. I do know that these records have been under subpoena for 2 years, and I have, I think, said on more than one occasion over the past several months that I have drawn a conclusion to this point that every step of the way it appeared that the White House has been involved in activities designed to influence the outcome of this investigation. I have not used the term "obstruction of justice" because, again, I am not an attorney and I don't want to use a term that I am not familiar with.

But we have been seeking these records for 2 years, and I guess I also raise this question in light of the treatment that I think that we have received by some who have come to testify before us. It's almost as if there was a game being played with the Congress. Some witnesses, I think, have had an attitude almost of contempt for what we are trying to do. So I ask you this question, and maybe I should direct it to Counsel. What, in fact, is obstruction of justice with respect to the handling of these kinds of files?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I refer that question to Counsel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Senator, there are I guess two senses in which people refer colloquially to obstruction of justice. There are a series of obstruction of justice statutes that relate to the obstruction of a Congressional inquiry, obstruction of a subpoena, for example, from a Grand Jury, obstruction of a subpoena from an administrative agency like the RTC. If one is aware of a subpoena and knowingly takes steps to frustrate compliance with the subpoena by, for example, concealing documents or destroying documents, that can be an obstruction of justice, depending on who issues the subpoena.

The second concept is the concept of contempt. There is, in fact, a notion that if one refuses or fails to comply with a Grand Jury subpoena or with a Congressional subpoena, it can be a contempt of Congress or contempt of court, again depending on who it is that issues the subpoena.

So what it turns on is knowledge of the existence of the subpoena, and we have had some testimony here obviously that certainly Mr. Kendall was aware and was taking steps to make the White House aware that there were outstanding subpoenas. That's one element of what makes obstruction or contempt. The second is whether in fact documents have been withheld or destroyed, and the third is if they were withheld and destroyed, who did it and did they do it with knowledge of the subpoenas. And of course, the subpoenas here have been pretty well publicized.

I should observe in connection with that, Senator, that our own subpoena from this Committee dated October 30, which was voted I believe unanimously by the Committee, there are separate subpoenas directed to the White House, to Williams & Connolly, and to the President and Mrs. Clinton themselves. Each of them require, among other things, all documents that refer or relate to the operations, solvency, and regulation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan or any entity controlled by that. And there's no doubt in my mind that our subpoena absolutely calls for the production of these records.

I also understand from having read the Pillsbury Report that their investigation specifically included the activities of the Rose Law Firm, as did the Inspector General of the RTC. I am aware of the fact that they issued subpoenas, although I don't think we have seen those subpoenas and they will have to address that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator Mack's question was directed to Counsel. As that the term may include the plural, I might have a little different take than my colleague, Mr. Chertoff.

Senator MACK. I certainly have no objection to your responding to my question, but I would hope that I would have a few additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me first say certainly, Mr. Ben-Veniste, we would appreciate your insight, and Senator Mack will get the additional time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think when you use an expression like obstruction of justice, you have to be very careful, and that's not a term to throw around. That doesn't minimize in my view the importance of our Committee looking into the issue of how these documents came to be discovered, who had them in their possession, and whether there were any shenanigans in connection with their discovery and ultimate production to this Committee. Indeed as has been said, the documents themselves are to a large extent confirmatory and corroborative of the basic questions of who did what work and how much work was involved for the Madison Bank.

When we talk about obstructing this Committee's inquiry, I think we have to look carefully at the subpoena itself, and again, I am addressing your question regarding obstruction. And on the basis of the subpoena that issued from this Committee that called for documents relating to the operations, solvency, and regulation of Madison and any subsidiary, affiliate, or other entity owned or controlled by Madison, as Mr. Chertoff pointed out, the billing records of the Rose Law Firm would not seem to fit into that category as the operations, solvency, and regulation of the Madison Bank.

And again, let my comments not be misinterpreted. I don't know what anybody else's subpoena said. I know what our subpoenas said. I know also that the issue of the billing records of the Rose Law Firm became of interest to this Committee, and for obvious reasons Mr. Kendall thought it necessary and Ms. Sherburne as well and Mr. Schuelke as well that this Committee be informed immediately of the discovery of these documents and they were turned over to us.

So what we have here in my view is an anomaly, at least as far as this Committee is concerned, of documents which are to a large extent confirmatory and corroborative of the First Lady and other witnesses' testimony and statements about the extent of work done for Madison and who did the work, and yet there is a question mark about how these records came to be produced, and in fact, records which for all expectations, in view of how old the underlying transactions were, would have been thought to have been destroyed by this time.

In a sense, we have the benefit of documents which are helpful and in their content, largely unremarkable. Mr. Chertoff and I may disagree to some extent about how important the documents are for one purpose or another, but I hope, Senator Mack, that before there is a discussion of anything as serious as charging obstruction of justice, that we look carefully at what has been requested and the motivations of people involved before we get to the next step of discussing that serious kind of allegation.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. Well, as I said earlier, the issue had been raised and I thought it was reasonable to ask for some clarification about that legal term. And I want to quickly add, I certainly was not in any way implying in my comments any question with respect to Ms. Huber. I'm sorry if I left that impression, I certainly didn't mean to. Again—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me if I might, Senator, echo the Senator's statements, and I think Ms. Huber knows that and I think her counsel knows that. We have indicated quite clearly that I want to commend you for the manner in which you testified today, as always, and I want to commend you for your candor. The fact that you have not had or feigned memory loss, which has been a rather frequent occurrence in this room, the fact that you have recalled with specificity dates and times that we would have no reason to be expected to.

You have been extraordinarily helpful, and I have no reason to believe, Ms. Huber, I want you to know this, and this Committee, and I think I echo the sentiments of Senator Mack, in the manner in which you've testified, that you found these documents and what you did and when you first discovered them, when you realized when you saw them the second time that these were documents that may have been under subpoena and what you did thereafter.

Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. Just a couple of points. One is that I am sure that there are others involved in this investigation that have subpoenaed those records specifically, and I am also quite aware that Mr. Chertoff did request the production of these documents prior to October 1995. And last I would say that I would imagine that my colleague, Senator Faircloth, raised the issue, because we have all observed here the debate about what has happened to these documents.

We remember the hearings earlier that occurred last year with respect to what happened with the documents on July 20, the Secret Service testifying that Maggie Williams took documents or was seen carrying documents from Vince Foster's office to hers, that on the 22nd, there's testimony to indicate that Ms. Williams took documents from Vince Foster's office to the residence of the White House, so there is reason to believe, now that we have evidence that these billing records were found in the residence, in the Book Room, in an area of very limited access.

The CHAIRMAN. With Vince Foster's handwriting, I might add.

Senator MACK. That there are very, very serious questions, legal questions here, and it is for that reason that I asked the question that I did of the Chairman and of Counsel.

I thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Mr. Chertoff, do you want any amplification?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just wanted to respond briefly on the legal issue, it is unmistakable that the subpoena the Committee issued refers to any—or requires the production of any document that refers or relates to any of the following subjects, and these include, among others, the operations of Madison, which are clearly reflected on these billing records, as well as the issue of the policies and practices of the RTC regarding the legal representation of agencies with respect to Madison, and of course that relates to the conflict of interest issue.

So I think it would be a very dangerous argument for someone to make, Senator, that this subpoena did not call for the records.

Let me also observe in connection with this that in 1994 we established in the course of the hearings held by the Banking Committee that as early as February 1994, there was concern about the Madison issue with respect to the RTC investigation. If my memory serves me, there was a memorandum submitted by Mr. Eggleston, who was here a couple of days ago, to Mr. Ickes, and then transmitted to the First Lady, that was specifically entitled "The Rose Law Firm." The memo addressed among other things, and it was made part of the record, the issue of whether there was a problem with the Rose Law Firm in terms of its representation of the RTC and Madison.

So clearly these issues were the subject of investigation notoriously all over the place as early as 1994.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I just want to make an observation. First of all, I am relieved and gratified that both Senator Mack and you made this statement with respect to Ms. Huber that just occurred, because I was sitting here thinking that this was a rather clear example of harm that can occur to people by a tendency to want to make judgments ahead of facts.

The CHAIRMAN. If I might, Senator—

Senator SARBANES. Let me just finish.

The CHAIRMAN. If I might, I would like to note that I not only expanded on Senator Mack's observations just a few moments ago, but also even earlier.

Senator SARBANES. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Number one, because I wanted this witness to know and have a comfort level; and number two, we appreciate her being here today, after giving us a deposition last night and testifying heretofore in another forum, her cooperation and her candor. I yield back.

Senator SARBANES. As the Chairman did, but I think it is very hard on the witness to have Members of the Committee start talking about obstruction of justice and contempt while she's sitting at the witness table. I mean, she's the one that's here and she's the one that's being carried on the television, and you know, not everyone watching is carefully listening and picking these things up. It simply underscores, it seems to me, the importance of getting in all the facts before you start making judgments.

Now, we brought Ms. Huber here today, and I think she's been very forthcoming and helpful to the Committee. Questions remain to be addressed, but I think it was extremely unfortunate to start engaging in this kind of discussion—we don't know what the facts are yet, the complete facts. Ms. Huber is helping to fill in that factual picture, and I simply regret that this took place with her at the witness table, and I want to underscore, as I indicated earlier, that I think she has been very forthcoming, and I think that needs to be understood so that none of this in any way spills over on her.

The CHAIRMAN. I appreciate my colleague's observations, and I think we have made it very clear for those who are watching and those who are reporting. I don't know how much clearer we could make it. We are appreciative of Ms. Huber's candor, of her testimony, of her cooperation, and I attempted to say that right from the beginning when we swore her in, so that is not a question.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me make one other point of clarification. I think that when terms like "obstruction of justice" are used, before we do that, we have some more facts and background to fill in and it should not be on the basis of what somebody thinks they recall from some memo or some other subpoena, but it ought to be on the basis of some pretty hard analysis of the actual requests and material, and then also on the basis of the additional facts which this Committee will try to find on this issue.

Let me ask one final question of Ms. Huber, because I think there may be some confusion relating to the issue of handwriting on the documents. Clearly, Ms. Huber, on the basis of the handwriting of the billing clerks that you saw on the documents, those notes were made back in 1992; would that be fair to say, or even earlier?

Ms. HUBER. Are you talking about Mr. Foster's writing?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No, I am talking about the Rose Law Firm employees handling it.

Ms. HUBER. Oh, that was done back in 1986 or 1985, or whenever they were doing the billing, that was their notes to themselves and the accounting department.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now on the basis of the handwriting that appears, that you have identified as Mr. Foster's, let me ask you whether you understood that Mr. Foster was one of the people at the Rose Law Firm who was involved in answering the press inquiries during the 1992 election.

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I knew that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you able to tell, on the basis of anything on the document or the content of Mr. Foster's notes, when he wrote those notes, whether those were written in 1992, or during the campaign, or at some point subsequent?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know. There is no date there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You are not able to provide more information on that?

Ms. HUBER. No, I couldn't tell when he would write that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I just wanted to clarify that. You don't know whether he made the notes in 1992, that someone had possession of them, or how they got to the White House?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bond.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER S. BOND

Senator BOND. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, and welcome, Ms. Huber.

I think everybody has gone great lengths to make it clear that we very much appreciate your testimony and your willingness to come forward and help us try to piece together very important elements, and realize that your role was limited. But you have been very helpful to us in developing some practices which give us a better idea of what might have happened.

Now to follow up on Mr. Ben-Veniste's question, the notation on this document, DKSN 028934, which has the handwritten note, "HRC—this suggests first matter." You have said that this is Mr. Foster's handwriting; is that correct?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, sir.

Senator BOND. Based on that writing, and your knowledge of the practices and procedures of Mr. Foster, and the operations in both the Rose Law Firm and the White House, what actually was this? Was this a notation to himself, or would this have been a transmittal note? Does this indicate that Mr. Foster was sending these materials to HRC?

Ms. HUBER. Not necessarily, because—I don't know—it looks like maybe he was pulling out Mrs. Clinton's time and he put, like at the top, "HRC—this suggests first matter." He might—I don't know what Mr. Foster had on his mind but he could have been compiling a record out of the billing memos.

Senator BOND. So you don't have any knowledge whether this was, in fact, a transmittal note or a note to himself?

Ms. HUBER. No, I do not.

Senator BOND. With respect to the records—and you have been most helpful. What we are trying to do is to find out the chain of control over these records and how they got there. Obviously these are matters which you clearly don't have direct knowledge, but maybe we could go back and based on your knowledge of the activities and the procedures at the Rose Law Firm, who would be the person who could ask the firm to pull up the billing records?

Ms. HUBER. The attorneys can.

Senator BOND. The attorney, and that normally—would that be the attorney involved in the case?

Ms. HUBER. It would be the attorney in the case. And Mr. Foster worked on this case.

Senator BOND. So Mr. Foster could have pulled it up?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator BOND. Mrs. Clinton could have pulled it up?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator BOND. Would it normally be pulled up by any attorney not associated with the case?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know.

Senator BOND. Based on your experience at the Rose Law Firm, though, it is customary—

Ms. HUBER. Yes, because I don't know why somebody else would want it.

Senator BOND. So it is an assumption that you would make that these records were all pulled together by an attorney from the Rose Law Firm who had been involved in the case?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator BOND. Now was it the practice at the Rose Law Firm that these billing records would be handled carefully; they would not—would they be made available generally, or would they be kept under the control of the attorneys involved and submitted to the client who is being billed?

Ms. HUBER. No, they—they were kept in the accounting department under tight control.

Senator BOND. And from the accounting department, the practice of the Rose Law Firm was that they should go only to the client?

Ms. HUBER. What do you mean, "go to the client"?

Senator BOND. In other words, these were not made available, generally, to other people in the firm or outside the firm; this was not a public document?

Ms. HUBER. No, it is not. And the client would only get the bill.

Senator BOND. Would the client get the detail?

Ms. HUBER. This bill right here, it is document 28934, that's what the client gets.

Senator BOND. The client would get that.

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator BOND. I have in front of me 29016, or a number of pages like that, that show date, time, matter, value, and description of services rendered.

Ms. HUBER. What page is that?

Senator BOND. Page 29016.

Mr. SCHUELKE. Senator Bond, that's one of the documents that appears to be computer printout?

Ms. HUBER. Is that a computer printout?

Senator BOND. I think it is. I am not familiar with that. I am just asking, is this an internal—this is the kind of thing—

Ms. HUBER. That's internal. We don't give that to clients.

Senator BOND. That should not go out of the firm.

Ms. HUBER. No.

Senator BOND. OK, but—and the reason we——

Senator SARBANES. Can I ask, Senator, is that document in that pile of documents?

Ms. HUBER. I am sure it is. These are just mixed up. I am trying to locate it.

Senator BOND. I am just asking, Senator, what the status of these records are, and apparently, some of the records that were in the matters turned over by Ms. Huber represented not bills that were presented to the client. Some of them were bills submitted to the client, like this 28934 which she mentioned. Some are internal billing records. And I wanted to find out what would normally happen to these bills, and she has just told us that these—excuse me, these computer printouts are internal firm documents.

Senator SARBANES. I understand. My only question was whether that document is part of that pile of materials?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator BOND. Yes, it is. The reason I asked that question, Senator Sarbanes, we are trying to find out how these materials came together, who had them, what happened to them from the time they were taken out of the Rose Law Firm to the time that they appeared apparently in August 1995, on a table in plain view.

Now the reason it is important to determine that is that we have had much testimony about the documents. You will recall that on Tuesday, the members of the White House defense team were talking with us about what they discussed in their meetings. "Vacuuming" was a noun rather than a verb. "Quietly" they told us was "quality." But none of them were able to describe the phrases in the notes, "Documents never know go out," or "Try and find out what is going on in the investigations."

And what we are trying to find out is, by the evidence of practices, who could have had access to these records, and where they went from whatever time they left the Rose Law Firm until they appeared on the desk where Ms. Huber found them. She obviously does not have direct knowledge so we are attempting—I am attempting to find out, to the best of her recollection, how these normally would be handled.

The CHAIRMAN. Now look——

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Kennedy, I might observe, did explain those items.

The CHAIRMAN. —I might say that we are going to have Mr. Clark here.

Ms. HUBER. He can explain it. He knows what they do with the records.

Senator BOND. I appreciate Ms. Huber's candor with us and I realize that there are many questions that you cannot answer, and I think, Mr. Chairman, that we will withhold any further questions until Mr. Clark comes.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Mr. Chertoff, do you have some questions?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I just have a couple of questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth, you have an observation.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Take the shield off.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. We talked of documents and numbers and that sort of thing, but here are the billing records, plain and simple, we've recognized them. We've certainly all been impressed by the honesty and directness of Ms. Huber's testimony.

Now, she did not find these billing records on the turnstile at the Metro. She found them in the most secure room in the entire world, the third floor of the White House. That's where she found them. The most secure room in the world. If somebody can think of one more secure, I want him to tell me about it.

Access to this room is by maids and butlers; and Ms. Marshall, who is an attendant or whatever, helps Mrs. Clinton; Ms. Huber, who we have heard her testify today in exact detail of when and where and how she found them; and the Clintons, the President and Mrs. Clinton.

And yet, when I mentioned obstruction of justice, certainly I was not talking about Ms. Huber and then there was even some implication or trying to say that maybe the butler did it. The most secure room in the world, next door to Mrs. Clinton's office, I think we need to pursue who put them there.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

I know we are over on our time but I think Mr. Chertoff has two questions, and then if you have any observations, I think we would be done with Ms. Huber.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I have two kind of cleanup questions, Ms. Huber. One is, Mr. Ben-Veniste asked you earlier about the policy at the firm when you were at the Rose Law Firm about retaining accounting records, such as the records you have before you.

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the records you found at the White House were copies of printouts, and I understood you to say that originals would normally be kept for 7 years after the bill had been sent out?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, then they could be shredded.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that after 7 years, they could be destroyed under the normal policy of the firm. That would mean that billings or an original billing printout that had been generated for bills in 1985 and 1986 should not have been destroyed before 1992 and 1993; is that right?

Ms. HUBER. If that's 7 years.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's 7 years. I have done the math.

Ms. HUBER. But there are some that are 1981 in there and they could have been destroyed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But bills for 1985 and 1986 would have to be kept until 1992 or 1993 at least, that would be the originals.

Ms. HUBER. According to our policies?

Mr. CHERTOFF. According to your policies at the firm. Again, let me echo, from my standpoint, there is no criticism about the way you handled this in January. You did absolutely the right thing. The only question I want to make sure we have clear in the record is, you called Mr. Kendall, he came over. Ms. Sherburne came over the same night?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then at the direction of the lawyers—

Ms. HUBER. And Mr. Schuelke.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there anybody else that night who physically handled the records besides the four of you?

Ms. HUBER. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know who ultimately took possession of the original records after you had made the copies?

Ms. HUBER. Mr. Kendall.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Ms. Huber.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste or Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing else. I just wanted to thank Ms. Huber and Mr. Schuelke for their cooperation.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

Senator MACK. I have one additional question. Frankly, it is not related to this specific matter but it is something you said earlier in response to a question, and I can't remember the date but there was a time when you received a call from Mrs. Clinton, I think during the campaign, asking you if you would go down and get some personal files—some files—

Ms. HUBER. It was their personal financial records.

Senator MACK. Personal financial records from your office in the Rose Law Firm?

Ms. HUBER. I had them stored there.

Senator MACK. And you went down at approximately 11:30 that night?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

Senator MACK. When you got there, you discovered the files were gone?

Ms. HUBER. Someone had already taken them to the campaign headquarters.

Senator MACK. What was your reaction to that when you got down there?

Ms. HUBER. I called her and told her, and she said in the meantime, she had found out they were already there—that someone was en route down there so she couldn't tell me they had already been taken.

Senator MACK. It did not bother you at all that someone went into your office and took files out of your office?

Ms. HUBER. They were a storage closet right by my office so I just assumed that it was somebody else that—because Mrs. Jones' records had been taken down there, too.

Senator MACK. Who is Mrs. Jones?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, the Whitewater that you had asked about earlier. It was the same night. Hers had been taken. So we all went down to the campaign headquarters and found our records there.

Senator MACK. I guess it would—do you know who took them?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Senator MACK. But when you got down there and found them at the campaign—

Ms. HUBER. They were working on them, looking through them.

Senator MACK. Who was "they"?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know the campaign workers, there were about eight people at a table working on them. I knew none of them.

Senator MACK. The people that were working on them were nobody that you recognized?

Ms. HUBER. No, I didn't work in the campaign so I knew very few people at the campaign.

Senator MACK. Did you, when you went down there and you said you found your files—

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I went in to ask if I could help, to show them anything about my records that I had, and they said no, they were taking care of it. So I went home.

Senator MACK. They didn't need your help?

Ms. HUBER. No.

Senator MACK. How did you know they had your files?

Ms. HUBER. I looked at the files, I looked at them.

Senator MACK. When you were looking at those files, did you see files of—what other files did you see?

Ms. HUBER. No, this was only their personal files, their checks and their paid bills and that type thing.

Senator MACK. And you didn't find anything with respect to Whitewater?

Ms. HUBER. No, I didn't have any Whitewater documents at that particular—in my particular files other than checks, canceled checks, that might have had some Whitewater things on it, some canceled checks.

Senator MACK. And they were going over those, were they?

Ms. HUBER. They went over the whole boxes, all the boxes I brought. I don't know what they did because I didn't stay.

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. May I ask you a question?

Ms. HUBER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What day was that? I know you said it was 11:30 on the Saturday evening.

Ms. HUBER. It was in February. I don't know exactly what day it was. It was on a Saturday.

The CHAIRMAN. Where had you gone?

Ms. HUBER. I had been in the Arkansas Repertory Theater. It was on a Saturday night.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you remember what you saw there?

Ms. HUBER. No, I can't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. You are terrific, I mean, the fact that you even remember it was a Saturday and the Repertory Theater.

Ms. HUBER. I knew I was there.

The CHAIRMAN. Was it early February sometime?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I think it was.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you and I know Senator Mack has asked you who the people were who were there that evening, and you said you don't recall all of them, but that they were campaign workers. Would you recall if you saw Loretta Lynch?

Ms. HUBER. I cannot remember if I saw her. She wasn't at the table, so she may have been in another office that I passed by. I do not—I can't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know a Mrs. McFadden?

Ms. HUBER. No, I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, and you don't recall anybody else?

Ms. HUBER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Was Mrs. Wright there?

Ms. HUBER. I don't know. I didn't see her.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me again thank you.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Huber, did you understand that they were working on these records because they were trying to respond to some press inquiries or press——

Ms. HUBER. No, I thought they were trying to respond to The New York Times newspaper articles, is what I thought they were responding to. I learned that 2 or 3 days later.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Huber, the records were the Clintons' personal records?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, this is their very personal checks.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You had every reason to believe they were taken down there with the permission of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. HUBER. Certainly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And with respect to the Whitewater records that you mentioned relating to what Sue Cathey-Jones was supposed to be looking for as well, and those were Mr. Kennedy's files, and he has testified that those were the Clintons' personal records which they had obtained in some form relating to the Whitewater investment.

Similarly, did you have any reason to believe but that those materials were there with the full permission and authorization of Governor and Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. HUBER. Yes, I thought—I thought they had—it was OK for them to be there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it was their records that needed to be reviewed on a hurry-up basis. That had been done because you were at the theater and they were located where you had kept them, you came over to the firm, you saw that they were working on them, you said can I be of any assistance, they said we are OK, we have what we need, and that was that?

Ms. HUBER. That's all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Again, Ms. Huber I want to thank you for your cooperation.

We stand in recess until 1:30 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 11:59 a.m., the hearing was recessed, to be reconvened at 1:30 p.m. this same day.]

AFTERNOON SESSION

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Mr. Clark, would you stand for the purpose of taking the oath.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF RONALD CLARK
CHIEF OPERATING OFFICER, ROSE LAW FIRM

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Clark, we want to thank you for coming in today. I know that you have been here on a number of occasions, and that you were fully ready to testify last week, but due to the late hour, various scheduling conflicts, and the weather conditions, we were not able to get you on. We certainly apologize to you for any inconvenience that you may have had to go through, and we thank you for your appearance.

Do you have any statement that you would like to make?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, I don't.

The CHAIRMAN. Then I will turn the matter over to Mr. Giuffra for examination.

Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good to see you again, Mr. Clark. Good afternoon.

Mr. CLARK. Good afternoon.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Clark, you became the Chief Operating Officer of the Rose Law Firm in February 1993, when Mr. Kennedy became Associate Counsel to the President?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You have been at the Rose Law Firm since you graduated from law school in 1980?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In November 1993, you began to get press calls at the firm about Rose's representation of Madison?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You began to search for Rose records relating to the Madison representation?

Mr. CLARK. A very limited search at that time, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that the firm first received a subpoena approximately January 13, 1994?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that was from Mr. Mackay who was then at the Justice Department in Washington?

Mr. CLARK. I believe that's right, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then you received a second subpoena, in February 1994, from Special Counsel Robert Fiske; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Both subpoenas called for the production of documents relating to Rose's representation of Madison?

Mr. CLARK. I believe that's correct, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They would have called for billing materials that the firm had in its possession relating to Madison?

Mr. CLARK. I think we would have assumed that that would include the billing materials, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In trying to comply with those subpoenas, Rose undertook substantial steps in order to locate documents, including billing records?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact you spent thousands of dollars on legal fees, having people look through your files to see if they could find the billing records?

Mr. CLARK. Way beyond a thousand, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I also correct that you were unable to locate a set of the Rose billing records?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At least a complete set or anything approaching a complete set?

Mr. CLARK. Really no copies whatsoever of the bills or the billing memoranda.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There came a time in 1995 when you received a subpoena from the Senate, asking for certain documents as well?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That subpoena also called for the billing records?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you again undertook to look for the billing records and could not find them?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You also received a subpoena from the RTC looking for the billing records?

Mr. CLARK. Multiple subpoenas, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you couldn't find them?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that you first learned of the existence of these billing records when I brought them into your deposition about a week and a half ago?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was your reaction when I walked into the deposition with these billing records in my hand and showed them to you?

Mr. CLARK. I was somewhat surprised.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Stunned, in fact?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, gratified but stunned.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't have any idea how these billing records made their way to the third floor of the White House residence?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, I don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You heard Ms. Huber's testimony today?

Mr. CLARK. I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You know Ms. Huber?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. She used to work at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. She did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. She was very highly regarded at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. By me she was, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that client billing materials should not leave the firm in the ordinary course?

Mr. CLARK. That's true. When you say "billing materials," certainly the internal billing memorandum should not leave the firm.

Mr. GIUFFRA. For example, the computer printouts shouldn't leave the firm?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It would be improper for somebody to take them out of the firm?

Mr. CLARK. Other than, you know, I take them home to work on them but for other purposes, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now if I could turn your attention to a document—we will call it document 1, it is in your packet—it is the first page of the computer printout. Do you have that, sir?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In the upper left-hand corner, it states, "Report ID billpay 2/12/92, 8:41." Am I correct that that indicates that this client billing and payment history was printed off your computer system at 8:41 a.m. on February 12, 1992?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So that would be during the 1992 Presidential campaign?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, Mrs. Clinton was the billing partner for the Madison matter?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If a matter in the ordinary course is being handled by a partner and a first-year associate at the Rose Law Firm, the partner would normally review the associate's work?

Mr. CLARK. A partner would normally review a first-year associate's work, yes. It would not necessarily be the billing partner.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But some partner normally would—

Mr. CLARK. Some partner would, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If Mrs. Clinton were the only partner working on the matter, one would think she would have been reviewing the associate's work?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's true.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If a client was dissatisfied with the Rose Law Firm's work, would they normally complain to the billing partner?

Mr. CLARK. In most cases, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You have been involved in billing clients, I would imagine, since you became a partner at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that it could be a violation of Federal or State law if someone—if a firm misbilled or overbilled a client?

Mr. CLARK. Certainly.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So, you try to be very careful in doing your billing?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, it would be overbilling if a firm billed for work that it hadn't performed for a client?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up the document that I've listed as document number 2, this is a bill of the Rose Law Firm; it's dated October 29, 1985. It is a poor copy but it is the best we have.

Mr. CLARK. I can see the October 29.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Up on the corner. This bill indicates that Rose charged the Madison firm for a matter called IDC, $550.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It indicates on the bill that the bill was paid.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And indicates on the left-hand column the work that was performed by the lawyer in connection with this bill.

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's just go down three entries where I have it highlighted. It says, "October 14, 1985, Mr. Thrash"—he is a lawyer at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, he is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then it says, "attend closing."

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you would interpret this bill to indicate that on October 14, 1985, Mr. Thrash attended a closing in some way connected with the IDC matter?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I would.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No other lawyer's time is reflected on this bill; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put the third document up on the Elmo. This is a bill which appears to be dated, it is a bad copy—but January 30, 1986, to Madison Guaranty. It describes legal services rendered by the Rose Law Firm through January 30, 1986, by H.R. Clinton, T. Thrash, R. Donovan, K. Shemin, and J. Birch. Then it lists certain types of services that were performed in connection, again, with this IDC matter.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it does.

Mr. GIUFFRA. On the bill it indicates that the amount that was billed for services is $4,651.50.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. There are some disbursements, and disbursements are expenses that are incurred by a law firm.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this particular case, doing some Xeroxing, for a total bill of $4,670.35; right?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then it says on the bill that it was paid 1/30/86 in the full amount of $4,670.35.

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was because you had a retainer agreement with Madison and the money was in a trust account, and you were able to deduct it from the amount that was in the trust account.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The narrative portion of the bill, it would be Rose Law Firm policy to be accurate in describing the work that you had performed?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, a law firm might have some sort of legal liability to a client if, unbeknownst to the client, the firm in the narrative portion of the bill did not accurately describe the services that the firm had rendered.

Mr. CLARK. Contrary to an agreement with the client, correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You try to be as careful as possible in drafting the narrative portion of the bill. Now in this bill, among the items that are listed are "Review contract for sale." Then it says further down, "Review changes in agreement," and "Attend IDC board meeting,"

"Attend closing," something that had been billed for in the prior bill. Then it says, "Meetings with Seth Ward."

In the October 29th bill someone had—Mr. Thrash's time had been billed for attending the closing, and would you think that perhaps this January 1996 bill reflects attendance at the closing by another Rose lawyer, because it wouldn't be proper to double bill for the same services by the same lawyer; am I right about that?

Mr. CLARK. Well, I think the January bill reflects pretty much all the time in the October bill.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would this bill reflect different services—you had already billed, in the October 29th bill, for attending the closing?

Mr. CLARK. I don't believe the October 29th bill was ever sent to the client.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But the October 29th bill on its face indicates that it was paid.

Mr. CLARK. I think because the money was taken from the retainer account. I mean, it was a typical practice when we had retainers to occasionally submit internal bills or generate internal bills only to clean out balances in the retainer account, but wait until some definite date near the end of the transaction, or the end of our fiscal year to actually send the bill to the client.

I believe that you will find on the January bill that it reflects the time on this matter, both in the October and I think there was an earlier September bill, which is also reflected in the January bill.

Mr. GIUFFRA. OK. Now in preparing the narrative portion of the bill, the billing partner would rely upon the billing memorandum; am I correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's a computer-generated document at the Rose Law Firm.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The billing memorandum would reflect the information contained on the lawyer's timesheets.

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. A lawyer's timesheet, for people who don't know, what you did in a particular time, for example, teleconference for half-hour with whomever you have the telephone call.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It would be Rose Law Firm policy to be as accurate as possible in recording your time on the timesheet.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct, true, that's true.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up document 4 which is the billing memorandum for this IDC matter, appearing to be reflected in the January 30th bill. This billing memorandum describes the services that were rendered in connection with this IDC matter to Madison by the various lawyers who were involved; and it has, for example, RDT would be—I believe that would be Mr. Thrash; right?

Mr. CLARK. No, I believe that's Dave Thomas.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Excuse me. I'm sorry. Then it has Mrs. Clinton's time and then it has Mr. Donovan's time. And it lists, for example, between December 6, 1985 and December 24, 1985, seven telephone calls between Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Seth Ward.

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Seth Ward is the father-in-law of Webster Hubbell.

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who was a partner of the Rose Law Firm.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. Hubbell was, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ward was involved in what has become known as the IDC/Castle Grande transaction. He was a principal in that transaction; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's my understanding, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could look at the time summary by attorney, that's down at the bottom of this billing memorandum. It lists Mrs. Clinton's billing during this time period reflected by the billing memorandum, 7.3 hours; and then it has a standard value which I assume is based on her hourly rate of $125 an hour?

Mr. CLARK. It is based on the hourly rate as reflected in the computer.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So 7.3 times $125 equals $912.50.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now the other lawyers, Mr. Donovan, Mr. Thomas, also their time is reflected similarly under the standard value which is your hourly billing rate.

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So far as you know Rose was billing Madison on a hourly basis; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. I really don't know how they were being billed.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do the records indicate it was an hourly—

Mr. CLARK. Based on these records, it would appear it was pretty much an hourly rate client, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. An hourly rate client means that if you bill 10 hours of work at $100 an hour, you would send in a bill for $1,000.

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If premium billed client, you might do 10 hours of work but bill for $5,000?

Mr. CLARK. That's right, or even on an hourly rate if you had an opinion letter or extraordinary travel or something, you might bill something on an other than standard hourly rate.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You have to work that out with the client?

Mr. CLARK. Subject to agreement with the client, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. For Mrs. Clinton, there is an amount to bill listed in handwriting of $2,731.25. Do you see that down on the—

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then for Mr. Donovan, it's $468; the standard value and the amount to bill is the same.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Same thing for Mr. Thomas.

Mr. CLARK. Right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. For Mrs. Clinton, it appears the amount to bill, which is the amount you are going to bill the client, is $1,818.17—75 cents higher than the standard value, in fact three times her standard value.

Mr. CLARK. It is higher. I will trust your math on it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Which would be approximately three times the hourly rate.

Mr. CLARK. Well, it would be three times the hours reflected on this particular billing memorandum, that's true.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now is one explanation for the fact that the amount to bill is three times higher than the hourly rate, that perhaps Mrs. Clinton had done additional work for Madison in connection with the IDC transaction that is not reflected in the billing memorandum?

Mr. CLARK. I would think that that's probably exactly what happened.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And your belief, based on what you know about Rose Law Firm policies and procedures, would be that Mrs. Clinton probably did additional work on the IDC matter that's not reflected in the billing memorandum?

Mr. CLARK. Correct. If you will notice, I mean, the date of the billing memorandum is dated January 21st; of course, the date of the bill is only January 30th. And it looks like the last time entry was January 15th and Mrs. Clinton's last time entry was January 14th. So I would anticipate at the time of preparing the bill there had been additional time rendered since the last date of the last bill which was added to this.

This is especially true at this time of the year which is the end of our fiscal year; especially in these years, our accounting department was very backed up because they were the same people that was generating the bills that were putting the timekeeping in. So typically we would have to manually add time during the last month of the year to properly reflect our bills.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Or perhaps Mrs. Clinton had done work earlier, and this work was not reflected in her time entries, and she realized the work was not reflected in her time entries and she added it to the bill?

Mr. CLARK. That's possible also, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That sometimes happens; am I correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's possible also, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The difference between the standard value and the amount to bill is about $1,800, which at hourly billing rates of $125 comes to about 14½ hours.

Mr. CLARK. OK.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So this would indicate that perhaps that was about 14½ hours more work done on the IDC matter than is reflected in the billing memorandum?

Mr. CLARK. I think that's correct, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Looking at Mr. Thrash's entries which would be those that are indicated on the earlier bill, and looking at the initial bill, it would appear that Mr. Thrash put down that he had attended the closing, but he made no reference to—for example, if you compare the January 30th bill with the October 29th bill, in the January 30th bill, there is an entry for review contract for sale.

Now review contract for sale is not listed as a service that is rendered in any of the billing memoranda that we have or in the October 29th bill, so, by process of elimination, one would think that perhaps Mrs. Clinton had reviewed a contract for sale.

Mr. CLARK. I think there was one earlier—

[Witness conferred with counsel.]

I think there was one earlier bill on the IDC matter that may reflect that entry, and I know that we have produced copies of Mr.

Thrash's timesheets which describe that particular entry of reviewing the contract for sale.

Mr. GIUFFRA. How about review changes in agreement?

Mr. CLARK. I remember, because I was puzzled by this myself, in going back and looking at the September bill for IDC and the October bill, and Tommy's time—or Mr. Thrash's time, pretty much matched up word-for-word. What phrase were you looking for? I have Mr. Thrash's timesheets.

Mr. GIUFFRA. "Review contract for sale."

Mr. CLARK. Yes. He had a—looks likes on August 6, 1985, he had a time entry that says, "Review contract for sale."

Mr. GIUFFRA. How about, "Review changes in agreement"?

Mr. CLARK. Yes. On August—I believe it is August 9th.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then he also attended the IDC board meeting; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. That was on August 19th.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He also attended the closing, and that was the earlier bill.

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. OK, so it is a mystery to us, how these additional 14 hours that Mrs. Clinton billed were spent. You can't really tell from the billing memorandum.

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, you can't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You can't tell when she spent the time?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. She might have spent the time back in October, she might have spent the time in November, or she might have spent the time in January, you just don't know?

Mr. CLARK. I would have thought had she spent them in September or October they would have been included on the September and October internal bills that were rendered, but that's not necessary to the case, but that's what I would have thought. I mean, I would think that since the extra hours were on the January bill, it would have been time that she would have spent sometime after October 29th, which was the next previous bill.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Or the alternative is that this could be a premium amount that's being billed by Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. CLARK. I guess that's certainly in the realm of possibility. It doesn't look that way from looking at these bills to me.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you would say it's got to be additional work, that she did approximately 14½ hours work on the IDC matter than are reflected in the billing memorandum.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I would think it is unrecorded hours, correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now am I correct that in 1985 and 1986 the primary factor in determining a partner's compensation in the Rose Law Firm was fee credits?

Mr. CLARK. Primarily, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Basically your billing is the same thing as your fee credit?

Mr. CLARK. Well, there was a large correlation but certainly not exclusively, no. There were a number of instances where your fee credit would not necessarily match up with the amount of time you would actually put in the bill, but there was a strong correlation between the two.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The greater your fee credits the greater your compensation?

Mr. CLARK. Eventually, yes; not in that particular year.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So in this particular instance, for example, if Mrs. Clinton had either done premium billing or done additional work, that would have increased her compensation at the end of your fiscal year?

Mr. CLARK. To a very limited extent, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. To some extent though?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. These bills indicate that the matter is something called IDC. If we could put up document number 6 on the Elmo. This is a Rose Law Firm voucher; am I right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. [Reply corrected to, "No."]

Mr. GIUFFRA. This voucher, the amount is $4,670.35; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's the same amount that the firm had billed Madison in the January 20, 1996 bill; am I right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So those amounts correlate.

Now it says under something called "account name," it looks like "RES," and this is a poor copy, "for DEV/UTIL," utility perhaps, "CG." Do you see that?

Mr. CLARK. I do. It is difficult to read, but I do see it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You see the CG though?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have any explanation for what the CG stands for?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would the best explanation probably, given what we know, that CG stands for Castle Grande?

Mr. CLARK. I have no idea what it stands for.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Can you think of any other explanation for what CG stands for?

Mr. CLARK. No, but I haven't given it any thought until this very moment.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that billing partners usually work with your accounting department in preparing your bills; right?

Mr. CLARK. Somewhat, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact your accounting department, I think Ms. Huber testified to this in her deposition yesterday, will visit the partners and discuss the billing materials and how they should bill the client?

Mr. CLARK. In some cases, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So something called account name, in drafting an account name that would be something that the billing—excuse me, that the accounting department would do in consultation with your billing partner?

Mr. CLARK. Well, generally the billing partner would determine the name of the account. This looks like a clerk's entry on trying to clear out the—either the trust account or the unapplied account, so I mean—

Mr. GIUFFRA. This may be based on what the billing partner told the clerk; correct?

Mr. CLARK. It could be or it could not be. [Reply corrected to, "No."]

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's take a look at the next document, number 7.

The CHAIRMAN. Hold on just a second, Mr. Clark. Let me go back to that. This is the first time I have seen this. "RES"—resolution for development. Is that development? And utility, CG. Now what other reasonable interpretation would you put to that CG?

Mr. CLARK. I am sorry, Mr. Chairman. I guess my copy is not clear. What were you reading of the first three words?

The CHAIRMAN. I am not even sure but I see, "Development utility CG." Do you see that?

Mr. CLARK. Yes. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. It's right up on the Elmo, in the third line.

Mr. CLARK. I see it.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, how do you read that?

Mr. CLARK. Well, actually when I first saw the initials, I thought it was the initials of one of my former partners, but——

The CHAIRMAN. Give me a reasonable interpretation of that. Doesn't it seem to be identifying the work as Castle Grande? And when you look back, weren't they doing work on development, sewer, and utility, et cetera, and isn't that utility?

Mr. CLARK. Senator, that makes sense to me. The only way it reads, and I will disagree, is that in the documents that I have seen——

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have a partner by the name of CG?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. You do?

Mr. CLARK. We did at that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Who's that?

Mr. CLARK. C.J. Giroir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he bill CG?

Mr. CLARK. G-i-r-o-i-r, Giroir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he work on this?

Mr. CLARK. I don't think so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We have another document. Let's put up 7. This is a very poor quality copy and I want to apologize to everyone. It says Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. This is a Rose Law Firm document; correct, sir?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it is. [Reply corrected to, "No."]

Mr. GIUFFRA. On the left-hand side there is listed, and you can barely make it out, it looks like a number of 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, those would be your matter numbers?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Down at the bottom, it says I believe that's number 5; right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then it says IDC next to it?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You can barely make it out, but I think this is probably the best reading, it looks like $4,670.35. Would you think that's about right?

Mr. CLARK. It looks correct, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Which would be the same amount that was billed to Madison in January 30, 1996; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So the numbers key off. And then again you can barely make it out but—to the left, it looks like HC. Would that be Mrs. Clinton's initials?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Going to the end, it says CG again, and perhaps—it is hard to make out the rest of it, but you again see the RES, and it looks like a DEV is in there, and UTIL, and then CG again. Would you agree with that, sir?

Mr. CLARK. As difficult as it is to read, that looks correct, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You are seeing again—on this particular document, you are seeing matter 5 IDC, you are seeing Mrs. Clinton's initials, you are seeing $4,670.35 which is the amount that's billed in January, and then you are seeing a description of the work with, at the end, the initials CG.

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The client is Madison Guaranty?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's put up document number 8. And again part of the problem that we have had in doing this is that the records are missing or we don't have complete records. This is another Rose Law Firm document, you would agree; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it is. [Reply corrected to, "No."]

Mr. GIUFFRA. Under account name it says, it looks like "RES," period, "CG utility."?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Or "resolution CG utility"?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The CG is there and then down under the description of the work, it says Rose Law Firm IDC work?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You have IDC work and CG under the account name on the same document?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Again indicating that there is a connection between the IDC work and the CG work or Castle Grande work?

Mr. CLARK. That appears correct, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That would be your interpretation of these three documents we have just shown you?

Mr. CLARK. Certainly of this document which is more clear. It would look like the top would say CG utility which is tied together. My earlier comment was we internally referred to it as IDC, but that was based simply on history I have learned the last 2 years. That's not—

Mr. GIUFFRA. You weren't working on the matter at the time?

Mr. CLARK. No, but I agree with you that that looks like what that is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It looks like someone who was involved in the billing of this matter called it CG or Castle Grande?

Mr. CLARK. Correct. [Reply corrected to, "No."]

Mr. GIUFFRA. That would be your best interpretation?

Mr. CLARK. I think that's right. [Reply corrected to, "No."]

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Chairman, I have a number of other areas, but maybe I should turn it over.

The CHAIRMAN. How long do you have to go? If you feel that you want to, and can conclude in a reasonable period of time, I think we can save a lot of time by finishing up completely. Then we can give whatever time to Senator Sarbanes. Or, if you want to just turn it over now, we will turn it over now. Why don't we turn it over right now.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. I yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Good afternoon, Mr. Clark.

Mr. CLARK. Good afternoon.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You indicated that when you learned that the White House had located the billing records, the time records for individual attorneys and copies of certain details of bills, you were both gratified and stunned that they had turned up; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to the document destruction policy in place at the Rose Law Firm, how would such records have been treated?

Mr. CLARK. Generally speaking, it's—I mean, if you ask me today to go back and find any billing records for any client in 1985 and 1986, it would probably be less than a 50/50 chance that we would find it—find those records at this point. And that probably would have been true in—as early as 1992, or 1993.

Though we handle our clients' records very carefully, or try to, we are less careful with our own internal documents. We have—we may take great efforts to try to clean out that information as we can, and have taken efforts, both throughout the late 1980's and early 1990's, to get rid of all that excess paper as possible. So, it's—they might be there or they might not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, so in a sense it was remarkable to some extent that these documents were maintained even as photocopies somewhere?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you were gratified that they were found because there had been so much interest in what they actually showed, that now you are in a position to work rather from speculation or unfounded accusations, but rather from actual documents?

Mr. CLARK. Well, I was gratified in two respects. One which proved false unfortunately, but I was first gratified, as I think the people who were taking my deposition will recognize, is that I think everyone in that room thought that those were photocopies of the originals. And so my first impression was we had found the originals, which eliminated any prospect that we had destroyed them. That obviously has turned out to be false. They weren't the originals so we still have that issue. Last I was gratified that finally, after 2 years of my partners having to look at 10- and 11-year-old documents to try to reconstruct their memory, we would have a record of exactly what we did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Fine. Now in connection with this very much discussed issue of how many hours Mrs. Clinton spent working for this client on various matters during the 1985-86 time period, I take it you did a computation of how many hours were involved?

Mr. CLARK. Rough, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That came to approximately 60 hours, right?

Mr. CLARK. It did on the billing memorandum. Again, I had already identified some of the matters that Mr. Giuffra had pointed out and thought there were probably some hours that weren't on those billing memorandum.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that the hours that Mr. Giuffra had been talking about, this 14 and change hours or so, were already included when you came to the total number of 60; isn't that so?

Mr. CLARK. Somewhere in that area, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This is not anything that adds in any way to the total number of hours that Mrs. Clinton spent over a 15-month period for this client; is that fair to say?

Mr. CLARK. Roughly, that's correct, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was the Madison Bank a substantial, significant client of the Rose Firm in 1985?

Mr. CLARK. It was very insignificant.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the total numbers of hours expended by all lawyers of the Rose Law Firm on this particular client, can you quantify it as any percentage of the total amounts of time spent in 1985?

Mr. CLARK. It is very difficult for me, Mr. Ben-Veniste, to quantify it in terms of hours and I just don't think that way, I do think in terms of dollars. And I mean, if you look at the revenues of the firm in 1985 and 1986 and compare that to the total collection of this client, it was somewhere between 1/1000 and 2/1000 of our total business during that time period. So from my perspective, sort of a global look, we spent a lot more time—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. 1/1000 of the total billing for that year?

Mr. CLARK. Let me be very clear. What I was looking at was the $21,000 total that was on the billing and payment history and comparing that to the revenues for same period. And it was somewhere between 1/1000 and 2/1000, somewhere in there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand. There were many, many other clients of the firm way ahead of Madison in terms of total billing.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the question of removing a copy of timesheets from the firm, I take it you would not find fault with an attorney, who wanted to check the amount of time he or she spent during a particular year, reviewing those records?

Mr. CLARK. No, certainly not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the issues that came up during the 1992 campaign, where there were a number of allegations about the Rose Law Firm's representation of Madison, there was a great interest in trying to answer questions that had been put by the press?

Mr. CLARK. That's my understanding, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And, if you didn't know specifically, I am sure you had reason to believe that people would be trying to find documentary evidence to answer those questions as completely and fully as possible?

Mr. CLARK. I was very aware of the stories, though I was not involved in it and we were very concerned about the inaccuracies that were contained in the stories.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Were you aware that Mr. Foster was one of the people associated with the firm who was trying to get answers to those questions?

Mr. CLARK. I was not aware at that time, no, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Have you since become aware?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You indicated that it is not at all surprising that an attorney would add in time that had not been reflected in the detailed billing in order to catch up in time to get a bill out to the client so that the client would receive a bill for the total amount of time spent?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct, especially this time of year.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Lest there be any mystery about this, can you conceive of a scenario whereby Mrs. Clinton specifically billed for time that she did not detail in her bills, because she was up to some nefarious purpose in providing information to the Madison Bank about how to do something improper?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, I have no reason to believe that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Under that scenario, you would bill for the time but not disclose the specifics, advise client to do so-and-so improper transaction?

Mr. CLARK. I have absolutely no reason to believe that that was the case.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. In connection with the matter that was put to you about CG utility, these documents don't appear to have Bates stamps on them, but I am looking at one that has a small 8 in the right-hand corner—

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I have it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —to which you referred earlier?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. First of all, there is a partner at your firm with the initials CG, Mr. Giroir; correct?

Mr. CLARK. There was at this time.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There was at that time, and according to the records we received, he did perform some work on the Madison matter. But putting that aside, I think the issue of confusion that has surfaced with respect to this matter of 11 years ago between Castle Grande and IDC is perhaps epitomized in this document, because here, CG and IDC work are sort of interchanged, but at this bottom, it says Rose Law Firm IDC work.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now if we look at what has been marked DKSJN 029010, which is a bill of January 30th or through January 30, 1986.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I am not going to read through it all but it says, "Memo about utility status." I am sort of three-quarters of the way down.

Mr. CLARK. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then it says, "Conferences with Seth Ward regarding purchase from Brick Lyle and proposed industrial development or site research." Do you see that?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know what the industrial development issues were with respect to the IDC property?

Mr. CLARK. Only to the extent that it is my understanding from, I think, something maybe that was in the Pillsbury Report, that once Madison acquired this property, there was some intent to do some development on it. That is—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you recall issues being raised with respect to whether or not a brewery could be built with a tasting room—

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —that implicated some county restrictions as to whether this would be proper?

Mr. CLARK. A dry or wet township issue.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that there was another issue with respect to sewer and water?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, the question of whether there was a utility that had been properly run.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Does this description appear to incorporate those issues?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, it does.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now you mentioned the Pillsbury Report. Let me ask you whether the Pillsbury Report is the report on the representation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan by the Rose Law Firm that was produced by Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, of which my former colleague, Jay Stephens, is a partner. And in that report, there was a reference to some work that is reflected in the time records that we have regarding an option agreement that was prepared in May 1986. Are you familiar with that?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I am.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you think that you can find it in the time records?

Mr. CLARK. In the full time records, I think.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I can help you—

Mr. CLARK. I found it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —it's 5/1/86.

Mr. CLARK. Actually, I am looking at the billing memorandum, just a second. Now I have the bill, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK, and looking at the bill, and the time record printout for May 1, 1986, where there's a reference under HRC, Mrs. Clinton's initials?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. For 2 hours?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you read that?

Mr. CLARK. It says, "Conference with Seth Ward, telephone conference with Seth Ward regarding option, telephone conference with Mike Schaufele, prepare option."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All of that is a total of 2 hours; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now if we turn to—because there has been some question raised about the option in the context of the initial agreement for the purchase of land between the Madison Bank and Mr. Ward, let me read from page 77 of the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report, which has now been made a part of our record in this Committee. It says, "The only solid evidence tying the Rose Law Firm to this acquisition," meaning the earlier acquisition, "is evidence of the innocent activity of participating in the drafting of the purchase agreement." And that was done by?

Mr. CLARK. Primarily Mr. Thrash.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Thrash, then a partner in the firm?

Mr. CLARK. Then a partner, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. "While some evidence suggests that Hubbell could have had a role in the drafting of the September 24, 1985 letter between McDougal and Ward, nothing proves he did, much less he did so knowing it to be wrong.

"Similarly, when Mrs. Clinton seemed to have had some role in drafting"—I'm sorry, I misread that. "Similarly, while Mrs. Clinton seems to have had some role in drafting the May 1, 1986 option"—that's the option—that's the work reflected in the billing record; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. "Nothing proves she did so knowing it to be wrong, and the theories that tie this option to wrongdoing, or to the straw man arrangements, are strained at best." Now do you have any reason to disagree with the conclusion reached here by the Pillsbury Report?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Kravitz.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you.

Along those same lines, Mr. Clark, you have heard what the Pillsbury Report concluded as to whether there was any evidence that the Rose Law Firm participated in the acquisition at issue, the acquisition of the Castle Grande project. Have you, yourself, in the past couple of weeks since the Rose Law Firm billing records appeared at your deposition, had an opportunity to review those records?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I have.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Have you reviewed those records particularly with regard to whether or not the Rose Law Firm did any work regarding or relating to allegedly fraudulent aspects of that purchase?

Mr. CLARK. I have, including discussing it with the people who actually did the work.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Have you reached any conclusion, based on your review of those billing records and on your discussions with the people who actually did the work on the IDC matter, as to whether your firm had any involvement in any of the allegedly fraudulent aspects of that purchase?

Mr. CLARK. My conclusion is absolutely not. I mean, I think the records are very clear as to the work that we performed, the time was kept very meticulously and was billed so. And there is no indication that the evidence is to the contrary.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Just so we are clear what we are talking about, what is the allegedly fraudulent aspects of this purchase?

Mr. CLARK. Well, I mean, I am not exactly sure I know. I mean, based upon press reports, it is my understanding that there were some allegations that Mr. Ward was acting as a straw man for this purchase, that he was not actually the—the economic owner of the land, though he was the title owner. That's really the only one I know of. There may have been something subsequent to that that I am not aware of.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Have you been able to review any of the records of the actual transaction to determine what time—what date it was on which this alleged fraud may have occurred?

Mr. CLARK. Well, if you are—I assume you are saying that the fraud would be if there was some under-the-table agreement about how to structure this transaction, to get around something, if that's the fraud, then certainly based upon these records, I mean, I think our firm worked somewhat on the matter in August, to some insignificant period, or July, maybe even as early as July. I have seen a couple of memos referred to in the newspaper, and I think my counsel has provided me with copies of some structuring memos that were internally done in Madison, which was at a time period that we weren't really doing any work on this document.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Let me ask you about that. Are you familiar with internal Madison records which indicate that this allegedly fraudulent agreement between Mr. McDougal and Mr. Ward was reached on September 3, 1985?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's my recollection.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Are you familiar also with a letter dated September 24, 1985, memorializing that agreement between Mr. Ward and Mr. McDougal?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's the date of that agreement.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Now if you work off those two dates, September 3 and September 24, 1985, can you tell us whether your firm did any work relating to the IDC project on either of those dates?

Mr. CLARK. No, it looks like the closest date would have been September 30th.

Mr. KRAVITZ. That would be the closest date after the agreement was reached between Mr. Ward and Mr. McDougal, and was then memorialized on the 24th of September?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did your firm do any work on the IDC matter between those two dates, September 3 and September 24, 1985?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. KRAVITZ. What was the last date before September 3, 1985, on which your firm, according to the billing records, did any work on the IDC matter?

Mr. CLARK. It is in mid-August, August 19, 20, like that.

Mr. KRAVITZ. So there are several weeks before September 3 during which your firm did no work, then there is no work done by your firm between September 3 and September 24. Then it's approximately another week after all that has already occurred that your firm finally starts to do some work on the IDC matter again?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. And let me say the attorneys working on this were our real estate lawyers. They were not familiar with structuring transactions, or S&L regulation, they were dirt lawyers as we affectionately call them.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Have you had an opportunity to review the letter that—the confirming letter between Mr. Ward and Mr. McDougal of September 24, 1985?

Mr. CLARK. I have some time ago, yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Based on your review, is it your belief that any lawyer was involved in drafting that letter?

Mr. CLARK. My recollection of it, it was not particularly articulate, not that all lawyers are articulate, but—

Mr. KRAVITZ. Did it appear to be a lawyerly letter?

Mr. CLARK. No, not really.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Is that consistent with the records indicating that no lawyers from the Rose Law Firm were involved in this allegedly fraudulent aspect of this purchase?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it is consistent.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Now, Mr. Ben-Veniste asked you previously about what the records show relating to Mrs. Clinton's contacts with Seth Ward in December 1985 and January 1986. Is it fair to say that those contacts were several months after this allegedly fraudulent aspect of the purchase occurred?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Can you tell from what was going on with the IDC project in December 1985 and January 1986 whether Mrs. Clinton's contacts with Mr. Ward could have had anything do with this fraudulent aspect of the purchase?

Mr. CLARK. No. I mean, it was obvious that we were performing some of this miscellaneous research on the brewery, and on the utility issue. And so that's the likely purpose of the contacts, but I really don't know why she was contacting—

Mr. KRAVITZ. In fact, there was a lawyer at the firm named Rick Donovan who was principally involved in doing legal research at that time, December and January?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Is it your belief, based on your review of the records and your knowledge of the way the firm works, that Mrs. Clinton's time during those periods, in addition to speaking with Mr. Ward, would most likely have been reviewing Mr. Donovan's work?

Mr. CLARK. That's what it appears to reflect, yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Those were on legal issues relating to whether the county was wet or dry, and something relating to a sewer system?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Nothing to do with the fraudulent aspects of the purchase?

Mr. CLARK. There's no indication of that in the billing records.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Just to be clear, Mr. Giuffra asked you earlier about whether—specifically with regard to DKSX 029011, that was the bill I think at the end of January or the billing records for the end of January 1986, on which the handwritten figures were on the forms. You testified that certainly a likely reason for those handwritten figures was that Mrs. Clinton had performed extra work after January 15, 1986, that had not shown up yet in the computerized billing records; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Is there any reason to believe that those extra hours that Mrs. Clinton likely billed in late January 1986, had anything to do with any fraudulent aspect of a transaction?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir.

Mr. KRAVITZ. It is much more likely that those hours as well had to do with wet/dry issues and other legal matters having nothing to do with the fraudulent aspects of the transaction?

Mr. CLARK. Based upon the time entries that were recorded, it would be consistent with the work that was being done at that point, yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you. Senator, that's all I have.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Murray.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PATTY MURRAY

Senator MURRAY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I just really have one area and I think you may have partially answered this before but I want to make sure for my own information. I have heard a lot of speculation in the past that some of the Madison-related documents had been destroyed or shredded by Rose Law Firm employees, and I just want you to answer the questions again for me. Can you tell this Committee if you were aware of any such activity?

Mr. CLARK. No, ma'am, not at all.

Senator MURRAY. Does the Rose Law Firm have a standard policy on the destruction of documents? And could you tell us what that is?

Mr. CLARK. Well, we do have a policy concerning the destruction of documents. As far as client files that we are speaking of, I mean, it is pretty much up to the individual attorney to account for his or her client files. We are consistently encouraging our attorneys to get rid of as much paper as possible, because the problems we have had really since the early 1980's in our remote storage it is just crammed full. And as I have spoken to earlier, with the discovery of the billing records, which granted our only copies, I mean, I think we have basically accounted for all of our Madison files now for the most part.

Senator MURRAY. As far as you can tell, absolutely no Madison-related documents were destroyed; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Well, "accounted for" is different than "destroyed." We certainly know that in a memorandum dated 1988 that certain of Mrs. Clinton's files were destroyed relating to Madison along with hundreds of other files that were destroyed at that time. So when I say, "accounted for," I think we know what basically has happened to all of our Madison files.

Senator MURRAY. I appreciate that. One other thing. I'm not an attorney and I have heard "billable hours," but I've never seen it written out before. I just wanted to ask you, this is pretty standard way of writing out billable hours on the timesheet records?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, ma'am, it is.

Senator MURRAY. I am just curious. I see a lot of 2 hours, 1½ hours. If you do 20 minutes at a time, is that considered a half-hour? If you do 45 minutes, is that considered an hour, or how do you do that?

Mr. CLARK. No, we try to be as accurate as possible. I think the smallest unit we use is a 6-minute unit, 10th of an hour. But, you know, again, most people, what they will do is they will at the end of the day try to reconstruct their time. You don't sit down after every telephone call and write it down. You try to be as conservative as possible, but you round up, you round down occasionally, based upon your memory.

Senator MURRAY. Sixty hours is what we come up with. For my own information, 60 hours over a 15-month time period, is that significant in your mind as Chief Operating Officer?

Mr. CLARK. Not in my practice, no.

Senator MURRAY. Thank you very much.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Kravitz, did you have a follow-up question?

Mr. KRAVITZ. Yes, I did, Senator. Thank you.

Mr. Clark, you mentioned in 1988 some of Mrs. Clinton's Madison files were destroyed by the firm. Can you tell us what the circumstances were under which those files were destroyed?

Mr. CLARK. Sure. As I said, we have continually had difficulty with our remote storage and at 1988 it reached sort of a critical point, so at that point we sent a memorandum to all members of the firm along with their internal lists of the documents that they had in remote storage and asked them what documents we could retain and what should be destroyed, encouraging to try to get rid of as many as we could. Mrs. Clinton received those lists much like we all did—I received one also—and you indicated on that list, you know, retain these files, destroy these files, microfilm—actually, we weren't microfilming in those days. Those went back to remote storage. And we still maintain those lists and have produced pages of them to various people.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Is it fair to say, then, Mrs. Clinton's Madison files, the ones that were destroyed in 1988, were just a small number of files among a very large number of Rose Law files that were destroyed at the same time?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. KRAVITZ. All in the regular course of business?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Was there anything unusual or suspicious about the destruction of those Rose documents?

Mr. CLARK. Nothing whatsoever, no.

Mr. KRAVITZ. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Clark, I am just going to take a minute because I want to get this straight. Could you look at the record that has number 8 at the bottom?

Mr. CLARK. OK.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's do this again because I have had an opportunity to look at some more of the printed out documents that refer to that same bill. This one was written down by hand. R-E-S, now, I don't know whether it's "resolution" or not. It would really appear to be "research" because that's what it refers to in other documents; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's probably true, right.

The CHAIRMAN. You've seen that before, haven't you? RES, short for research in this kind of thing?

Mr. CLARK. Now that I can read it, yes, I think that is exactly what it is.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's go to "CG," right? "Utility," right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Isn't it a fair and reasonable interpretation now, Castle Grande utility? Recognizing Castle Grande was popular? At the bottom it says, "Rose Law Firm—IDC work." Isn't that true?

Mr. CLARK. I think that probably says, "Research Castle Grande utility."

The CHAIRMAN. I just wanted to get that established.

Thank you. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I was just interested in the sequence of questions you had with Mr. Kravitz during which he asked you whether you had any reason to doubt that you had done everything correctly, and I think your answer was that in your opinion, you were in agreement with any reports that indicated that the Rose Law Firm had not done anything wrong. Is that basically correct?

Mr. CLARK. I'm not sure. I mean, he asked me a specific question as far as based upon review of the billing records, did I see any indication that we participated in a fraud, and I said no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And just so it's clear, if you were to acknowledge here publicly that the firm participated in a fraud, you would be inviting not only tremendous civil litigation but, in fact, perhaps, other kinds of investigations; right?

Mr. CLARK. But if I answered otherwise, I'd be inviting perjury.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you in fact signed a tolling agreement with the RTC with respect to the firm's liability regarding the matters which are the subject of the Pillsbury Report we have been hearing about; right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, we did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tolling agreement means an extension of the statute of limitations; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That means that as of this point, there was not—at the point the agreement was signed, there was not a determination by the RTC, or the FDIC which succeeded it, about whether they want to proceed against the firm; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. It was my understanding that there had been such a determination, but the discovery of the option was new information, so they sought an extension so they could examine that documentation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. So that new information which came to light as of December 29 caused the RTC, which became the FDIC, to decide that they were not prepared to make a final decision; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. That's my understanding, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And of course this agreement was actually signed several days before the billing records came to light; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that as of December 31 when the Pillsbury Report came out with the language which Mr. Ben-Veniste read about innocent intent, they didn't have the records of the 12 telephone calls or the 14 telephone calls between Mrs. Clinton and Seth Ward, did they?

Mr. CLARK. I don't believe they had the billing records, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't know about the 12, or 14, or 16 calls between Mrs. Clinton and Seth Ward; right?

Mr. CLARK. I have had no discussion with Mrs. Clinton, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that was evidence that the Pillsbury people did not have when they closed the books on their investigation on December 31; correct?

Mr. CLARK. It is my understanding they did not have the option or billing records, that's correct, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now the option is a document that was prepared between Mr. Ward and the bank which was supposed to be an option that the bank took out to purchase a piece of property for $400,000; right?

Mr. CLARK. I have read the options and I remember the $400,000 purchase price, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you understand there's a substantial question that has been raised about whether that option was a device to pay Mr. Ward commissions on the sham transaction and avoid regulators coming back and reclaiming those commissions when they took over the bank; right?

Mr. CLARK. The only reference I have seen to that, Mr. Chertoff, is in the Pillsbury Report and they mention something to that effect, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in terms of when the fraud began and ended, you would agree with me that the Pillsbury people themselves, as of the time they closed their report, had a substantial question in their mind about whether the option was part of promoting the original fraudulent transaction; right?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Not at all.

The CHAIRMAN. Just hold on.

Mr. CLARK. I don't know what was in their mind, but there was some reference in the report that there was some belief by some that possibly this was some way to convert ordinary income to capital gains or something to that effect. I recall reading that in the report, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Again, as of December 31 when the report was closed, so far as you know, and of course you've been asked a series of questions inviting you to comment on the Pillsbury Report by my friend, Mr. Ben-Veniste, so along that line, as far as you know on December 31, the Pillsbury people did not know that there had been extensive contacts between Mrs. Clinton and Mr. Ward in the latter part of 1985 and through the early part of 1986; correct?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know—I assume that they have given interrogatories to Mrs. Clinton. I don't know what her answers have been, so I really can't answer that, Mr. Chertoff. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And isn't it your understanding that the interrogatories were sent out before or at the time the tolling agreement was signed?

Mr. CLARK. I just assume that she's been answering interrogatories all along. I have not seen any of them but—

Mr. CHERTOFF. The billing records also indicate, do they not, that Mrs. Clinton had a couple of meetings together—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I think it's fair to tell Mr. Clark that the interrogatories basically indicate that Mrs. Clinton had no knowledge of Castle Grande. I think he ought to know that. And if you want to see it, we will give you a copy, but I think that is a fair summation.

Mr. CLARK. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were asked about the September 24th letter by Mr. Kravitz as to whether in your opinion the September 24th letter between Mr. McDougal and Mr. Ward appeared to be written by a lawyer; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There are two September 24th letters. Which one are you referring to?

Mr. CLARK. I don't have either one of them in front of me. Again, I think I saw them as attachments to the Pillsbury Report. They made some reference to legalese in one and one didn't have the legalese. Neither one of them looked like something I would draft.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, wasn't there evidence in the Pillsbury Report that the letter—one of the letters may have been typed by Mr. Hubbell's secretary?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't there also evidence in the Pillsbury Report that one of the letters may have been backdated?

Mr. CLARK. I don't recall, but I don't doubt your summary, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Wasn't, in fact, there a substantial question about whether a letter was backdated to make a transaction seem or an agreement seem as if it had occurred in September when in fact the document was prepared sometime thereafter?

Mr. CLARK. That may be. I read it on the plane on the way up here, but I trust you—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You've given answers about the September 24th letter not being written by a lawyer, and if you're going to commit yourself to opinions about the September 24th letter, let's make sure we have all—

Mr. CLARK. I have read both letters, and it definitely is my testimony they did not strike me as being the type of letters a lawyer—a competent lawyer would write to commit a transaction to paper.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know how far Mr. Ward went in school?

Mr. CLARK. No, I have no idea.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether he was—

Mr. CLARK. I take that back. I think somewhere in the report it says he dropped out of college or something.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, let me put up on the Elmo, we don't have a copy of it, but it's a September 24th letter, it's the second letter signed by Seth Ward and James McDougal which contains 3 pages. And I apologize we only have one copy, page 3, marked "Addendum to agreement between Seth Ward and James B. McDougal."

I want you to tell me whether you think that was written by a nonlawyer—competence is a different question, but whether it was written by a nonlawyer.

Mr. CLARK. I don't think this is what I'm seeing. Is this it?

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is the addendum to the letter of September 24, legal description.

Mr. CLARK. That looks like a typed legal description.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now did you also note, and again this goes back to the question you were asked about whether the fraud ended in September. Did you also know that on February 28, 1986, the day the examiners came into Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, there were a series of transactions that closed at the bank that were designed to clear off the books of the bank, a large number of loans or transactions relating to Castle Grande.

Mr. CLARK. No, sir. I was not aware of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that Hillary Clinton had a conversation of almost an hour with Mr. Ward on that day?

Mr. CLARK. If it's in the billing records I guess I should know it, but I don't recall every specific entry.

Senator SARBANES. Could I ask what was put up on the Elmo?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Page 3 of a document, Bates number SINTR 37, 38, and 39. It's page 39 that went up.

Senator SARBANES. Is that just a standard property description? That's what it looked like to me to be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It appears to be a description of this piece of property, a legal description of the piece of property but not something from a form book, something that's tailored to the particular piece of property.

Senator SARBANES. But I mean, that's a standard real estate description, legal description of a piece of property?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Is the assertion then that the agreement was written by lawyers because of this addendum?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually, Mr. Clark had indicated he thought it looked like it was something that was I guess lawyerly, but I'll go to the first page of the document. I'll quote from the Pillsbury Report, at page 67, "The letter and particularly the real property description attached to it appear to be the work of a lawyer. The language is marked by legalese, 'thereon,' 'commonly referred to as,' 'the aforementioned property,' 'the pro rata amount of the note,' 'the property or any portion thereof.' Ward is not a lawyer. He dropped out of Arkansas State Teacher College in 1941 to join the Marines and by his own admission, 'I don't like the fine print and I don't normally study what I'm signing carefully enough.'" Do you disagree with the opinion of the Pillsbury Report with respect to this issue whether a lawyer wrote this letter?

Mr. CLARK. No, I was looking more at footnote 281, which said, "One would expect greater clarity from a lawyer of Webster Hubbell's ability." I mean, is this the one that refers to the, "You will drive a luxury automobile"? That's what struck me as being not very lawyerlike. And I don't have it in front of me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I guess it depends on the lawyer.

Mr. CLARK. Well, that's true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But do you disagree with me that this letter—for get me. Do you disagree with Pillsbury Madison and this report that keeps being mentioned that this letter, in fact, is appearing to be the work of a lawyer?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You disagree with that?

Mr. CLARK. I mean—I do not have the letter in front of me. I've been hearing about it—

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we put the letter in front of him. I think this is much ado about nothing because I can't understand how you would really think that a fraud starts on one day and necessarily ends on another.

Mr. CLARK. I didn't say that, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I mean, the testimony that has been almost suggested is that the fraud started on September 4 or 3 and that thereafter there would be no fraud. I mean, that's absurd. You don't need me to make that observation.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. Chertoff, this was not the letter—

The CHAIRMAN. He's asking you about this particular letter.

Mr. CLARK. Right. That's not the letter that I was referring to.

The CHAIRMAN. You were referring obviously to another letter, Mr. Clark.

Mr. CLARK. To the one that had the luxury automobile.

The CHAIRMAN. What about this letter?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Clark, what—

Mr. CLARK. I would agree with you, on this letter especially when you get to the "acknowledged and accepted by," which is something a lawyer might put on there, and some of—this is certainly much more likely to be drafted by a lawyer. I apologize. There was some memo or something that was drafted which referred to a luxury—that's what I thought we were talking about.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now of course, with respect to the issue of the backdating of the letter, you don't know and, in fact, it's your understanding that Pillsbury wasn't able to determine when the letter was actually prepared; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's my understanding, but I think this is the first time I have seen this particular letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The reason I raise this, Mr. Clark, is that you were running along with a lot of agreement with questions that were asked previously that appeared to be exculpatory, and I wanted to determine exactly what your basis of knowledge was.

Mr. CLARK. Again, I was referring—there are a couple of memorandums. We're discussing when the transaction was structured, and as far as—we had done work in August and started back in September. I don't have these documents. My recollection is there are a couple of memorandums, internal memorandums between Mr. Ward and Mr. McDougal, setting forth how the matter was to be structured. That's what I was referring to in my mind at the time I was answering those questions, not these letters.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were also asked a question about whether you see anything nefarious in the activities of any of the lawyers at the Rose Firm in connection with these transactions. You will agree with me that you do not have actual knowledge of what happened, the events surrounding the preparation or the execution of the option; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do not know what the conversations were between Mrs. Clinton and Seth Ward in November and December of 1985; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Absolutely not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You do not know what the conversation was on February 28, 1986, between Mrs. Clinton and Seth Ward; correct?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know the subject of any of Mrs. Clinton's conversations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mrs. Clinton was a litigator at the firm; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you have any reason or do you know why it was she would have been taking on the burden of preparing the option for Mr. Ward on May 1?

Mr. CLARK. It was not unusual for our litigators to occasionally do transactional work, so I can't speculate as to why she—

Mr. CHERTOFF. It would be purely speculative?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, let me ask you this. When did you become aware that Mrs. Clinton was a partner with Mr. McDougal in a business venture called Whitewater?

Mr. CLARK. It would have probably been in the spring of 1992 when the article came out, or some articles.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You've been asked to come here to represent the Rose Law Firm as the managing partner, right?

Mr. CLARK. I think that's correct, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So to the best of your knowledge, speaking for the firm, and let's put Mr. Hubbell and Mr. Foster to one side. Excluding them, is it your testimony that—to the best of your knowledge, the firm was unaware or not made aware by Mrs. Clinton of her separate business relationship with Mr. McDougal until it came up in 1992?

Mr. CLARK. I think that's probably true, that the majority of the people would not have been aware of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In 1988, Mr. Foster circulated a memorandum regarding potential conflicts to lawyers in the firm in connection with the possibility of representing the Federal Government as a receiver for a number of banks, including Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Did you know that?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I recall that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is the required practice, is it not, of your firm, as in every other firm, to run a conflicts check to make sure there is no legal conflict or business conflict in taking on work; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The work that was being considered here was a receivership; right?

Mr. CLARK. It was 1988.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right, to represent the Government in its actions as a receiver on these banks; right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A receiver is, in the case of these Government agencies, they essentially take over the bank, and one of their responsibilities would be to hire lawyers to sue people who had previously run the bank who had committed misconduct; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the work that was being considered in the memorandum of November 1, 1988, would have been, among other things, representing the receiver, the Federal Government, in pursuing possible claims against the officers who had been operating Madison Guaranty before it got taken over; right?

Mr. CLARK. I would need to see that, Mr. Chertoff. I don't think we were being considered for the what I would call the D&O work. I think that was with—my guess is it is with respect to the Frost litigation. I don't recall us ever being considered for the standard D&O investigation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me read it to you. This is the second paragraph. It's RS 749. "It is presently anticipated that these receiverships would be pass-through receivership rather than liquidating receiverships. In a pass-through receivership, the receiver sells the assets as a package. The responsibility of fee counsel"—that would be your firm, right, if this panned out?

Mr. CLARK. In this case, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. "would be to institute document procedures at the time of the takeover, defend any challenge to the receivership and institute 90-day snapshot investigation of officers, directors, attorneys, accountants, and appraisers to recommend whether the receiver should assert a claim." Right?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So this conflict memo was contemplating the possibility that the firm would be hired to represent the receiver in perhaps among other things conducting a snapshot investigation of officers and directors of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan; right?

Mr. CLARK. Is Madison on the list?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan is number 6.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, then that's true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There is therefore, not surprisingly, a list of potential conflicts for each of the institutions, and with respect to Madison Guaranty, there are a list of directors and officers, which includes such persons as James McDougal and Susan McDougal. Now would you agree with me that it was Mrs. Clinton's obligation as a lawyer in the firm in responding to this conflicts check to identify to the firm that she had a business relationship outside the firm with Mr. McDougal and Mrs. McDougal?

Mr. CLARK. If their names are on that list, it was circulated to the firm, then yes, I would think so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did they do that?

Mr. CLARK. I assume that somewhere we have—I certainly don't recall knowing it, whether Vince—whether there was some response to Vince, and he docketed it somewhere, I don't know. I do not know, and as far as I know, the majority of the firm did not know until February 1992.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We have the records that your firm produced of responses. There is a scarcity of responses, but there's certainly no response—

Mr. CLARK. Then I would assume there was no response.

Mr. CHERTOFF. From Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But this is very important. There's no question in your mind that she was under an ethical obligation at least as of the date of this memo to disclose to the law firm the fact that she had a separate business relationship with James McDougal and Susan McDougal; correct?

Mr. CLARK. I think that's correct. I will have to say, the only clarifying point is it was not a typical—when we were sort of bidding in a group like this, we would run a preliminary search. We did one of those quite often, and, you know, we would do a preliminary search of the computer system, nothing showed up. Once it really got serious, are they actually considering it, to hire us for this institution, then there would be another more detailed list. But yes, I think, in fairness it would have been proper to disclose it at that point.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It would have been inappropriate and improper not to disclose it; right?

Mr. CLARK. Certainly as we got closer and were actually going to be engaged, yes, but it should have been disclosed then, no question about it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because you guys were partners and part of what partners were supposed to do is they are supposed to be honest with each other?

Mr. CLARK. I hope that's what the basis of it is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Clark.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Clark, let me ask you whether a lawsuit on the basis of this representation was ever instituted against Mr. McDougal.

Mr. CLARK. I'm not sure I understand your question.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did the Rose Law Firm in bidding for this business get the business?

Mr. CLARK. To my knowledge, the only thing we were ever engaged for as far as receiver was in the Frost litigation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And the Frost litigation was a third party litigation against the accounting firm of the bank?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you happen to know whether in 1986 or 1987 Mr. McDougal had any money? Do you have any reason to believe he did?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know one way or the other.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The whole idea being retained here was to see whether money could be obtained by way of lawsuit or compromise, threat of lawsuit from persons who had either acted fraudulently or negligently to the damage of the bank?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In that regard, the firm was hired to institute a case against the accounting firm for whatever negligence or worse had already been discovered?

Mr. CLARK. The action had already been implemented, so we were substitute counsel.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were substitute.

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there any conceivable conflict that you saw, that you would see now between suing the accounting firm for the Madison Bank and Mrs. Clinton having been involved in a private business deal with the former CEO of the bank?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, it wouldn't be a conflict.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know whether Mrs. Clinton ever received the detailed questionnaire to fill out about the matters that Mr. Chertoff has brought up?

Mr. CLARK. I would assume that she received everything that everyone else received, so to the extent that was circulated to everyone, she would have received that, I would have thought.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have a copy of that?

Mr. CHERTOFF. We're making copies.

Mr. CLARK. I probably have seen one, but I don't have one now.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Apparently we are going to have a copy made so we will be able to deal with that question on the basis of more than speculation.

Let's come back to the Pillsbury Report. The matter that was referred to—even before we get to the Pillsbury Report, the matter that the Chairman showed you, which was a page from a detailed billing—I'm sorry, which was a page from a report that reflects both the initials CG and then underneath that a description, "Rose Law Firm, IDC matter"; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let me refer to the official record of an interview, Office of Investigations, Office of Inspector General involving Mrs. Clinton, and this interview was conducted on November 10, 1994. Let me read from the bottom of the third page of that 5-page document. "Mrs. Clinton was shown a January 23, 1986 memo from Rick Donovan regarding Madison Guaranty versus IDC. She recalled the issue pertained to researching townships and the topic of 'wet/dry' licensing approval for alcohol consumption. She stated that this matter was handled by Rick Donovan." Is that the very same regulatory matter that we have been discussing, the wet/dry matter?

Mr. CLARK. I believe so, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Here it is described as an IDC matter, in this interview, so the issue of whether something that has the acronym "CG" 11 years ago, which is also referred to as IDC, has some nefarious implication to it, I put to you again, is there any reason to suspect that Mrs. Clinton wasn't being candid when she referred to her involvement as involvement with the IDC matter?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, not that I know of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the Rose Law Firm's investigation by the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro firm as regards the representation by Rose of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, on the issue of whether this billing information casts substantial new evidence upon the table to consider, I will refer again to page 77, where it says, "the only solid evidence tying the Rose Law Firm to the acquisition is evidence of the innocent activity of participating in the drafting of the purchase agreement. While some evidence suggests that Hubbell could have had a role in drafting the September 24, 1985 letter between McDougal and Ward, nothing proves he did, much less that he did so knowing it to be wrong." This refers to what you have been shown as the backdated version of the rather inartful earlier version of that letter. Is that fair to say?

Mr. CLARK. Again, I think that's fair to say. I was referring to the different documents on the first round of questioning, but—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Most importantly, the Pillsbury firm is making the assumption, because they had records from the Rose Law Firm that indicated that Mrs. Clinton had some role in drafting the option agreement, that was the computer-generated draft that reflects that it was prepared by someone associated with Mrs. Clinton at that time; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes. I think they did have the option, and they knew it was prepared by the Rose Firm.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So they made the assumption, and now we have a grand total of 2 hours spent on the drafting of this document and other matters, comprising 2 hours of time, but most important, the conclusion of the Pillsbury firm was, "Similarly, while Mrs. Clinton seems to have had some role in drafting the May 1, 1986 option, nothing proves that she did so knowing it to be wrong, and the theories that tie this option to wrongdoing or to the straw man arrangements," that's referring to the initial contract, "are strained at best." Is that what you were referring to earlier?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the conclusion with which you do not take issue?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We would cede back our time.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Clark, does the Rose Law Firm have policies for handling client files?

Mr. CLARK. We do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Is it the normal case that the client files belong to the client?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that an attorney who was leaving the law firm could not take the client files with him or herself?

Mr. CLARK. Without the consent of the client, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have any procedures in place for handling client files when an attorney is leaving the law firm?

Mr. CLARK. We do. I mean, obviously it depends on the purpose or where the attorney is going. In a standard situation where an attorney is leaving to practice in another firm or something, then it is not unusual for them to take clients with them. If that's the case, we will sit down with the attorney, take a list of the files, we will determine what's to be left at the firm.

If there are any that they think will be taken with them, we will agree on the standard form of a letter to be sent to the client consenting to the release of those files, and once we receive the letters back, we will release the files to the attorney who has left.

Mr. GIUFFRA. When Mr. Foster, Mr. Hubbell, and Mrs. Clinton left the Rose Law Firm in the latter part of 1992 and early 1993, you met with them to discuss the pending matters that they had at the firm?

Mr. CLARK. I did not meet with them. It's my understanding that members of their section, which would be the likely recipient of any active files, met with them to discuss who was to handle those files. It was not necessary in my mind, or in Mr. Kennedy's mind I think, at that time to meet with them to discuss filings because we didn't anticipate there would be any reason for them to take the client files with them.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You assumed the client files would remain at the law firm?

Mr. CLARK. That's right.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No one disclosed to you that files would be leaving the law firm?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is a letter, you may recall, that Mr. Jones received. He is a partner of yours at the firm?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, he is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You and he had been working on these Madison/Whitewater related matters?

Mr. CLARK. Actually, no. I think the reason Jerry was the recipient of this letter, he had been working with me on the Hubbell matter.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And so David Kendall knew him and sent him this letter?

Mr. CLARK. I don't think David knew him. I think David must have gotten his name from somebody else.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know where he got the name?

Mr. CLARK. I don't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The letter says, "Dear Jerry: It was good to talk to you today. I am enclosing herewith three file folders, labeled: A3530.1 Madison Guaranty Ltd. Ptnrshp. Application/Brokerage Activities; A3530.2 Madison Guaranty—Net Worth—1985 Preferred Stock Offering; and A3530.3 Madison Guaranty Preferred Stock Offering Corporate, which were among the late Vincent Foster's files." Now these were Rose Law Firm's client files; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was this the first time that you were aware that Rose Law Firm's client files had been removed from the firm?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And were you, in fact, very upset when you learned that these files had been removed from the firm?

Mr. CLARK. I was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. At this point in time, the Madison files belonged to the RTC, which had taken over Madison; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know anything about how these files were removed from the firm?

Mr. CLARK. No, I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know why Mr. Kendall wrote that these files were among the late Vince Foster's files?

Mr. CLARK. No, I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It was improper for Mr. Foster to have removed these files?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It would have been improper for him to take them out of the firm?

Mr. CLARK. Unless he had the client's consent, and I know that he didn't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would it have been proper if Mr. Hubbell was involved in doing this?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Isn't it the case that you learned sometime in the last several years that Mr. Hubbell removed some of Mrs. Clinton's time records from the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. I have learned that Mr. Hubbell had possession. I don't know who removed them.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Could you tell the Committee what you know about the fact that Mr. Hubbell has possession of Mrs. Clinton's time records?

Mr. CLARK. Well, I can't—I learned it through our counsel. We've been obviously searching for documents for years now, and they, their primary efforts have been searching for some, and at some point they were told that Mr. Hubbell or at that point Mr. Hubbell's attorney was in possession of some timesheets. We obviously were very interested in that. The Independent Counsel was informed immediately of that.

One of our counsel went over and examined those to see what information was contained. It was my understanding they were mostly 1987, 1988, and possibly a few 1989 timesheets. They were reviewed to determine whether they had anything to do with any matters that we were under subpoena about, and to the extent they were, any privileged information was redacted and they were turned over.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was it consistent with firm policy for Mr. Hubbell to have removed or, at least, have in his possession Mrs. Clinton's time records?

Mr. CLARK. I can't really say we had—I mean, we've never considered our handwritten time records?

Mr. GIUFFRA. These were handwritten time records?

Mr. CLARK. It's my understanding that there were some handwritten and some typed. I don't know what was what, but I'll have to say, I can't really say that we have a policy saying that the records you keep at your desk are firm records.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you also learn that Mr. Hubbell had removed a Bank of Kingston client file from the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. Well, again, we had learned that he had it given to his attorney and it had been produced to Bank of Kingston. I don't know who removed it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And the Bank of Kingston was owned by Jim McDougal; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. I believe he partially owned it, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was the Clinton's Whitewater business partner and also the owner of the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. CLARK. That is true.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't know why Mr. Hubbell's attorney had possession of this Bank of Kingston file?

Mr. CLARK. I do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't know how the Bank of Kingston file left the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. I absolutely do not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It was improper for the file to have left the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. That's true.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did the firm have a policy in any way limiting Mrs. Clinton's ability to represent private clients before Arkansas State agencies?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So she was free to represent and lobby Arkansas State officials while she was a partner at the Rose Law Firm on behalf of private clients?

Mr. CLARK. As long—she was subject to the same rules as everyone else.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Don't the billing records, in fact, indicate that Mrs. Clinton contacted Beverly Bassett, who was the Arkansas Securities Commissioner?

Mr. CLARK. I believe they do, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now if we could put on document number 11, which is an April 30, 1985 letter to Charles Handley. Mr. Handley was with the Arkansas Securities Department, and this letter was written April 30, 1985, and the re: "Authorization and Issuance of a class of Preferred Stock by Madison Guaranty, a Savings and Loan Chartered under the laws of the State of Arkansas."

In the section of the letter which has been highlighted, it says, "The question has arisen as to whether an Arkansas Chartered Savings and Loan Association may under Arkansas law create, authorize, and issue a class of preferred stock. For the reasons stated below, we are of the opinion that a State chartered savings and loan may do so."

If we could turn to the next page of the document, and if we could just shrink it on the Elmo a bit—the other way, a little bit further. The letter is signed, "Rose Law Firm." It's not signed by a partner or an associate of the firm; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So this would be a formal opinion letter of the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. It was an opinion letter. I'm not sure what formal—generally I see an opinion letter as being something you would give to your client, but it's an opinion letter, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did the Rose Law Firm have policies with regard to the signing of opinion letters in the firm's name?

Mr. CLARK. Yes. Generally an opinion letter, given in a transaction, would require at least the approval of a partner.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This opinion letter indicates that if the recipient from the Arkansas Securities Department has any questions, they should advise either Mrs. Clinton or Mr. Massey of your firm; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it does.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The letter also has a cc to Beverly Bassett, who is the Arkansas Securities Commissioner?

Mr. CLARK. Was at that time, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Don't the billing records that we have obtained from Mr. Kendall that were at the White House indicate that on April 29, 1985, Mrs. Clinton had, in fact, spoken to Mrs. Schaffer about this preferred stock issue?

Mr. CLARK. I believe they do, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So the opinion letter was sent the next day?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now am I correct, sir, that in February 1994, you investigated some allegations of shredding at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you not advised by a courier at the firm—I believe it was a man by the name of Jeremy Hedges; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That he had recently, sometime in either January or February 1994, shredded some documents that were from the files, from files that bore Vince Foster's initials?

Mr. CLARK. The box that contained the documents had Vince's initials on it, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was your understanding as to when the shredding had occurred?

Mr. CLARK. It was late January.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Late January 1994?

Mr. CLARK. Of 1994, correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You did an investigation into the shredding incident?

Mr. CLARK. We did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And it's your belief that there weren't any Madison or Whitewater files in the box; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. Absolutely, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you can't be certain as to whether there were any Whitewater or Madison files in the box?

Mr. CLARK. I'm as certain as I can be, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you can't be completely certain?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know why Mr. Hedges shredded this box of documents that were from Mr. Foster's files?

Mr. CLARK. The box contained Vince's initials; in fact, they came from another attorney's files.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you believe that the files were not Mr. Foster's files?

Mr. CLARK. I'm pretty sure I know that as a fact, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Clark, if two Rose lawyers have a meeting, normally would the client be billed for the time of both lawyers?

Mr. CLARK. It depends on the meeting. I mean—

Mr. GIUFFRA. For example, if you and another lawyer spoke to a client for a half hour, you both would be expected in your time records to record a half hour for speaking to each other about the matter; correct?

Mr. CLARK. I would say if we were in a conference with the client, speaking, you know, in an hour, yeah, certainly we would hope that they would both record it. They don't always do it. We would hope that they would both record it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would expect them to do it, though?

Mr. CLARK. We would be underbilling if we didn't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We've done some analysis of the Rose Law Firm billings that we obtained from Mr. Kendall, and they indicate that there are 22 instances in which Mrs. Clinton billed for a conference with another Rose lawyer and the other Rose lawyer does not have the similar conference, for example, with Mrs. Clinton. Do you have any explanation for why that would be?

Mr. CLARK. It doesn't surprise me. Mrs. Clinton was a very meticulous biller. Some of our other attorneys—unfortunately, I'm one of them—are not particularly—are not that specific. And so it's not unusual, and we have a lot of trouble in going through billing records to see where, you know, conference with somebody, that someone else hasn't entered an entry. In fact, one or two of our attorneys, that's how they keep most of their time, is to go through a billing memo and say, yes, I was at that meeting and recall that. It's not that unusual.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So Mrs. Clinton had billed an hour for a conference with Mr. Massey, and Mr. Massey did not bill the time. In fact, the amount of time that the Rose Law Firm had worked on Madison matters should be increased by another hour; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So, in fact, the 60-hour number is probably on the low side given the fact that we have identified 22 instances in which the other lawyer who was having the conference or the teleconference with Mrs. Clinton did not bill the time?

Mr. CLARK. Well, except it's my understanding that 60 hours is Mrs. Clinton's time, so I don't think her time would have been understated, but the firm's time would have been understated.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, the firm did more work for Madison than in fact we realize now?

Mr. CLARK. That could be the case, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That would be your best explanation for this discrepancy?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clark, I want to be sure I understand something. There was a big to-do at one point that the Rose Law Firm or someone working in the Rose Law Firm was shredding files of Vince Foster's. That was in 1994, I think.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Do you recall that, it was carried on the television and run in the newspapers and everything else?

Mr. CLARK. I'll never forget it, Senator. Right.

Senator SARBANES. Now as I understand what you said earlier in responding to Mr. Giuffra, there was a box that had Foster's initials on it out of which these papers that were shredded came, but the papers had nothing to do with Foster, or the files had nothing to do with Foster; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. They had nothing to do with Whitewater or Madison. I mean, these files apparently came from one of our attorneys when he was moving offices, and in fact we still have the file jackets that the documents that were in those—we have produced those to the Committee.

So certainly Vince's name was in those documents. They were internal Rose Firm financial records, that sort of thing, so they did have something to do with Vince but they didn't have anything to do with Whitewater or Madison.

Senator SARBANES. But that was the allegation that was made against the firm and given widespread media circulation, was it not?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. Yes, sir, it was.

Senator SARBANES. Then upon your investigation, when you actually got the facts, the facts in effect established that this prior judgment that had been made was invalid?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. I could speak all day about this issue, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Is there anything further we ought to know about it? I think it's an important point to get on the public record, because the Rose Law Firm took a beating there for a bit by media judgment about this matter, which said that Whitewater and Madison files were being shredded by the Rose Law Firm, and I take it that upon your investigation and inquiry, you have established that was not the case?

Mr. CLARK. We have established—and this gets back to something I said earlier, I mean, with respect to what Whitewater files that we may have had, I think there's been testimony here that those were in some way returned to the campaign in 1992.

With respect to our Madison files, they have now been accounted for. We know where Mr. Massey's files are, we've produced documents showing Mrs. Clinton's files were destroyed in 1988. We have records of our other files, Mr. Rule's files, a few other files actually being returned to the client, so we don't see where anything is missing at this point, especially now that the billing records have been determined.

So if there was something that was destroyed, I don't know what it was, and we've concluded, based upon a very thorough investigation, and I will say the Independent Counsel certainly investigated this thoroughly, that there was no relevant documents destroyed.

Senator SARBANES. Did this courier who destroyed these documents, did he ever see any Whitewater documents? Did you interview him or talk with him?

Mr. CLARK. I was very cautious about that, Senator. When the allegations—I mean, I first learned about these allegations when a Washington radio station called me at 5:30 in the morning when I was at home, and I immediately went down to the firm that morning, I met with the entire staff. I met with the couriers separately. I met with the lawyers.

I told them that if anyone had any information whatsoever about the destruction of documents, they should let us know immediately. If they were in any way uncomfortable talking to me, they should talk to someone else in the firm if they were uncomfortable about it, that they would be asked questions soon from investigators and they should tell the truth and not do in any way—take any steps to protect the firm, and I think any of the couriers or staff members that I talked to will back me up on that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In fact, more than that, you saved the file folders because those weren't shredded, the Manila file folders?

Mr. CLARK. That's right. We learned during the course of the investigation that this box that was destroyed apparently had come down from a particular file clerk. We asked her where she got the box. It was when one of my partners was moving. And just—I mean, it was by accident that he still had the junk, I'll call it, still in the corner of his office. He had the empty file folders thinking he might use them again.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So they were there to be recycled essentially?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You could tell from looking at the files what they were. So if I understand it, it was just the fact that on the outside of the box Mr. Foster's initials appeared on it and this box had been recycled after he had left the firm?

Mr. CLARK. That's right. We reuse those constantly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So all of this to-do was put to rest for all purposes except the press, which in one form or another still carries the notion that files were shredded by the Rose Law Firm——

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —that had something to do with Whitewater?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But you can testify that that's absolutely not the case?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now to go to Mr. Massey's documents on a point that you just made, you've now accounted for all of Mr. Massey's documents that he worked on in his representation of Madison?

Mr. CLARK. Correct. Again, Rick had retained copies. I think he had already testified to that. And when we received the files back from Mr. Kendall before we returned the originals over to the Independent Counsel, Rick went through those files to make sure that they were a complete set.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to Mr. Massey's testimony, he retained the originals of his files, made copies in 1992 at the request of Mr. Foster when Mr. Foster had need for them in the campaign, that he compared the files which Mr. Kendall sent to the Rose Law Firm to those which he had maintained all along, and that they were identical?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. I'm not sure Rick recalled whether he kept or gave Vince originals or copies, but——

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He indicated in his testimony here that he kept the originals.

Mr. CLARK. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think we have located—do we have another copy of this? We have located—and I'll put up on our machine to see if you can read it—I think the earlier memo that you were referring to of September 1985. It's a one-page memo between Mr. Ward and Mr. McDougal.

Mr. CLARK. I don't see it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is marked R 401, on the bottom it has 3668. It also has 009, and it has 5 in another place, and Exhibit A. It looks like one of those suitcases that's been to a hundred countries.

Mr. CLARK. OK. I see it now, yes. Yes, this is the memo I was referring to in answering Mr. Kravitz's questions earlier.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is the one that is clear to you was not drafted as a contract by any person who had any legal training?

Mr. CLARK. That would be my opinion, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is the one that in paragraph 4 where it says, "Madison will provide you with a letter requiring that you drive a prestigious automobile while you are in charge of the project."?

Mr. CLARK. Correct. That's what I was referring to, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Faircloth.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Clark, I have just one or two very, very general and brief questions.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. The Pillsbury Madison Report is public, and in that report, there is a mention that the RTC sought an extension of the statute of limitation regarding the Castle Grande transaction. Is your firm conducting a review of the billing records to determine her involvement in the Castle Grande transaction, since they have asked for the extension?

Mr. CLARK. Well, sir, I have certainly reviewed them in anticipation of this testimony, but that's—

Senator FAIRCLOTH. So you have reviewed them?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, I have.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. What did you find, in a word?

Mr. CLARK. I read the time entries. There were numerous telephone conferences with Mr. Ward, there was a telephone conference with Mr. Ward concerning option, and a time entry that says, "prepare option."

Senator FAIRCLOTH. So she was involved with the Castle Grande?

Mr. CLARK. It looks like she prepared that option, yes.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. OK. You know, she had mentioned that she was not involved with the Castle Grande at all, and that's why I wanted to know.

Mr. Clark, this morning Ms. Huber had testimony that billing records from the firm were removed, they asked her for them but when she went for them, they were gone, and then she saw them down at campaign headquarters and she said that seven or eight, a large group of campaign workers whose names she did not know, were just going through them. Does it bother you that billing records from your office were somewhat open property in a campaign headquarters?

Mr. CLARK. It is my understanding, Senator, that Ms. Huber's testimony—because I've heard this story before from other people—was that those were personal Clinton financial records concerning their Whitewater investment, not Rose Firm billing records.

Now had there been, would I have been upset, yes, but I don't believe that's what they were reviewing at that time.

The CHAIRMAN. If I might, and I ask the Senator, just make a point. I'm not sure, but I believe there was also testimony from that former young associate who is now a partner, Mr. Massey, that at or about the same time, he got a call from Mr. Foster. Actually, I'm going to withdraw that, because I'm not quite sure. I'm going to talk to Counsel, but I think there was another person who testified here that he had taken out documents and that somehow—and he wasn't aware, just like Ms. Huber—

Mr. CLARK. I think it was Mr. Kennedy.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, that was Mr. Kennedy who was called to provide the Whitewater files that belonged to Mrs. Clinton. She was actually the client for those particular files, and those went down, and in fact Ms. Huber I think corroborated that here today, and then also from Ms. Huber they got the Clintons' personal financial papers.

The CHAIRMAN. I am confusing that with the testimony of Mr. Massey, who referred to the fact that Mr. Foster came to him right about the same period of time.

Mr. CLARK. About the same time, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. About the same time. Mr. Foster seemed to press Mr. Massey because he was annoyed that Mr. Massey did not have the files ready for him.

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Foster came back, I think, the following day and retrieved the files from Mr. Massey. Then Mr. Massey testified he was upset that the billing files left the firm. He did not think that they were going to leave, he didn't know the files were going to leave the office. And indeed, you testified that that—

Mr. CLARK. Rick was referring to his Madison files, he would have been upset.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, you also said billing files should not leave and you would have been upset.

I thank my friend.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Well, along that line, another question, Mr. Clark. Has the RTC or did they question you on the propriety of removing billing records for Madison from your firm? These are client files—

Mr. CLARK. Well, the billing records are our files. The client files belong to the client.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. But the client being RTC, don't they have to give approval to have the documents removed?

Mr. CLARK. In the client files, yes, sir, they do, absolutely.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did they give approval to have them removed?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, not to—no, they did not.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Did they question about them being removed without their consent?

Mr. CLARK. I don't think so, Senator, no. They were primarily looking at the billing issues and conflicts.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Two more questions. Your internal investigation of Mr. Hubbell revealed a $400,000, in round figures, illegal overbilling. Since that time or during that time, did you by any chance review the billing records of Mr. Foster or Mrs. Clinton to determine if there had been a discrepancy there?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, not to speak of. I mean, I reviewed the same records—when Mr. Kennedy left, or actually, when all four of the people left to join the Administration, a number of documents were dumped on my desk literally to sort of sort out who was to get what in the matter of clients, so that there were records of Mrs. Clinton, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Hubbell, and Mr. Foster.

It was in May of that year in reviewing those records that I discovered—first discovered what at that point were just questions in Mr. Hubbell's billing practices, so I certainly—at that point I was reviewing the same documents for Mrs. Clinton, for Mr. Kennedy, and for Mr. Foster, and found no discrepancies in those documents. But that's the extent of what I have looked at, other than numerous RTC/FDIC billing memos that I have looked at.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Mr. Kennedy is now back with the firm?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Do you think Mr. Kennedy did a good job—and I realize he's with the firm and this is probably not a fair question—but as a managing partner in 1992 when he allowed records to be removed from the firm and lost or destroyed or whatever?

Mr. CLARK. I certainly think Mr. Kennedy did a good job. I don't—I know for a fact, he has told me, that he had no knowledge, and I have confidence that had he had knowledge, he would have said that was not the thing to do.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. He did not know these records were being removed?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, he did not.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Let me ask you another question. Do you know, who is Amy Stewart?

Mr. CLARK. She's one of my partners.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Was she in Washington during the spring of 1993?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir. It is my understanding she was for some period of time.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Do you know what she would have been doing here?

Mr. CLARK. I think this was during the health care debate, and it's my—Amy has a significant practice in antitrust, and it is my understanding that she was doing some research on some of the antitrust issues on the health care proposals.

Senator FAIRCLOTH. Thank you, Mr. Clark.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clark, I want to be clear on one thing that Senator Faircloth was pursuing, because I think it got mixed up there. The billing records don't belong to the client; they belong to the firm, do they not?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's the way we view it.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I thought he was asking you about billing records and you indicated you'd have to get the permission of the client, but that wouldn't be the case? The billing records are for the firm to handle and dispose of.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. I was only referring to the client files themselves as far as needing permission.

Senator SARBANES. I don't think that was clear on that exchange.

Mr. CLARK. OK. I apologize.

Senator SARBANES. I wanted to ask one other question and get it very clear on the record this notion of a firm destroying documents. That is an established practice in law office management, is it not, that after periods of time, you sort of clean out the files, you avoid the expense of storing everything. Is that a standard practice?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, because of the expense of maintaining that paper, I think all law firms struggle with that issue.

Senator SARBANES. So the notion that you were, as a regular procedure, destroying files ought not to cause any anxiety. That's what good management requires law firms to do; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir. We try to consistently encourage it.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Just a final question. I think we are winding down toward the end here. I have put in front of you a copy of the option agreement of May 5 that we have been talking about that is reflected in Mrs. Clinton's billing records to have spent some time drafting or reviewing a draft of this document. Can you take a look at the document and see whether anywhere in the document it refers to Castle Grande?

[Witness reviewed the document.]

Mr. CLARK. In a very quick read, I don't see any reference to those words, no, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. On the second page, which is SINTR 00014, toward the bottom of the page, you see a legend that goes 0190g?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is an internal Rose computer designation, is it not?

Mr. CLARK. It's a document number, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It's a document number and the small G there refers back to a computer system that was in existence in 1986?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct, yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And as a result of reviewing that, you were able to determine that that document had been prepared on a computer or word processor that was under the authority of Mrs. Clinton and people who work with her at that time?

Mr. CLARK. That's—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's almost correct. I mean, each attorney was assigned a library, and that reflects that when this document was created and stored in the library, it was stored in Mrs. Clinton's library.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Clark, I just want to focus on this issue of document destruction for a moment. Was there any policy back in 1988 with respect to client files about whether it was necessary to check with the client to see whether the client wanted to have documents returned before they were destroyed?

Mr. CLARK. A policy only to the extent that it was pretty much up to the individual attorney to determine whether that was necessary or not, depending upon the contents of the files. Sometimes we would check with the clients but other times we would not for very dated files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you this question. If you represented a bank in transactions and you learned that the bank was put into receivership in the late 1980's during what everybody knows as the savings and loan crisis, it would be a pretty fair assumption that there might be some litigation arising later regarding the transactions surrounding the bank?

Mr. CLARK. I think that's a fair assumption, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Don't you think it would be a good policy for a lawyer in that circumstance to check with the client to make sure that files relating to the transaction weren't destroyed?

Mr. CLARK. It probably would be a good policy. Unfortunately, I don't think we had it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The client in the case of a bank or savings and loan in receivership would be the RTC; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. Well, on this one, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now since you were asked a question by Mr. Ben-Veniste about whether the real estate covered by the option that he has identified as SINTR 13 through 17, you have been asked whether that was Castle Grande. I would like to ask you whether it wasn't a fact that the entire parcel of property which was purchased as part of the so-called IDC transaction in late 1985, and which apparently you have had an opportunity to study in the last couple of years, that entire transaction was referred to as Castle Grande; correct?

Mr. CLARK. By us?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Colloquially, generally in the community in Little Rock.

Mr. CLARK. Internally, we referred to it as IDC. Certainly in the newspaper they continually referred to it as Castle Grande, yes, I think that's true.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But for example, back in 1985 and 1986, do you know whether the map setting forth the Little Rock industrial park area that was covered by this transaction was entitled "Castle Grande feasibility study"?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know. I don't think I've ever seen the map.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me help you out a little bit. We'll pass it down to you and put it up on the Elmo.

Mr. CLARK. OK. I have it now.

Mr. CHERTOFF. See it says, "Castle Grande feasibility study"?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, it does.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Also says, "Little Rock South Industrial Park"?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now still with respect to the option, you were asked questions about that little number on the bottom, 190g. That was Mrs. Clinton's attorney number?

Mr. CLARK. No, the 0190 was just a document number. It would have been sequential as documents are created. The little G is the thing that denotes——

Mr. CHERTOFF. The little G is. And that would identify the document as being in her library?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What does that mean?

Mr. CLARK. Well, whenever a document was created in the system, of course the system has limited memory, so every so often the documents would have to be archived onto disk, and so this means that this document was eventually archived onto a disk that was designated as part of Mrs. Clinton's library.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Excuse me one moment, please. Still on this issue about Castle Grande, I want to show you one other document, Mr. Clark. It is the minutes of a meeting of the board of directors of the Madison Financial Corporation, September 12, 1985. We're going to make sure you have a copy of it.

Mr. CLARK. I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your understanding now is that this transaction involved the splitting of the IDC property into two parts, one part of which was purchased in the name of Seth Ward and one part of which was purchased by Madison Financial Corporation?

Mr. CLARK. I believe that's correct, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do these appear to be the minutes authorizing the purchase of 400 acres of this, within this IDC development?

Mr. CLARK. For a mobile home development, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, did it not identify Castle Grande Estates as being, and I emphasize the word "estates," as being the name that had been designated for this portion of IDC, even in advance of its purchase?

Mr. CLARK. It says, "Per the purchase of this development to be known as Castle Grande Estates," yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me still focus on this issue of the purchase, because one of the issues that's arisen with respect to this Pillsbury Report is, again, the significance of the evidence they did not have. It's your understanding that the lawyers who produced the Pillsbury Report—at that point in time—were not aware of a connection between Mrs. Clinton and the purchase of the original IDC property that was closed in September?

Mr. CLARK. I think that's correct, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you are also aware from the report that there was at least one backdated document; right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you also are aware that at least to this point in time no one has discovered when that document was actually prepared?

Mr. CLARK. Not to my knowledge, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you been able to determine from your review of the timesheets that were discovered a couple of weeks ago that Mrs. Clinton in fact had conversation about the sale—or the original purchase of that property in November with Seth Ward?

Mr. CLARK. When you said timesheets, you mean billing records?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Billing records.

Mr. CLARK. They say what they say. I don't recall every entry, but there were several conversations with Mr. Ward, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, there was a conversation in November 1985, "Conference with Seth Ward regarding purchase from Brick Lyle." Brick Lyle was the seller of the property?

Mr. CLARK. I think he was the president of the corporation that sold it, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then there were conversations in December with Darrell Dover, who was the lawyer who was involved with the transaction on the part of the seller; right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, that's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. These were conversations Mrs. Clinton had in November and December; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you would agree with me that these billing records would certainly give an investigator additional leads to pursue in evaluating what connection Mrs. Clinton had with respect to the sale and why—given the fact that there are backdated documents, to ask questions concerning why she would have had discussions about the sale in November and December if the sale was consummated in September?

Mr. CLARK. It was new information, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now finally let me address one other thing. I will give you a copy of this memorandum involving the conflict of interest review dated November 1, 1988. Mr. Ben-Veniste had asked you the question whether you knew if this was circulated to all attorneys. Do you have a copy of it in front of you?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. RS 749. Does it say, "To all attorneys"?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it does.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mrs. Clinton was an attorney at that time at the firm?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just there going to the last page, it indicates, there's an entry here, it's the second page of the entry for Madison. It says, "problem loans, affiliated persons." Do you see in that a reference to Castle Grande, Little Rock, Arkansas?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you also see a reference to Chris Wade?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that Chris Wade handled real estate transactions for the Whitewater Development project that Mrs. Clinton and Mr. McDougal and then Governor Clinton were partners in?

Mr. CLARK. Did I know or do I know?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know?

Mr. CLARK. I know now, yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know at the time?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. To your knowledge, did Mrs. Clinton indicate to you in 1988—and when I say, "to you," I mean, to anyone you know of in the firm other than Mr. Foster and Mr. Hubbell—that she had business relationships or business transactions with Mr. Wade involving Whitewater?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you agree that that would also be something that would be relevant in doing a conflicts check?

Mr. CLARK. I would say to the extent of doing this work, all of that would be relevant, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Just a couple of questions to follow up. Do you know who actually thought up the name of Castle Grande Estate for this trailer park?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It's kind of a grandiose name. You said you referred to it in the firm, this whole matter on behalf of your client, as IDC during that period of time; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It would not strike you as odd that Mrs. Clinton, in trying to recollect what work she did back 11 years ago, would have also referred to it as IDC; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, Mr. Chertoff was kind enough to show you a property disposition map that—and indeed in the option agreement, that so much has been made of, that to suggest that she must have known that she was performing some work in writing an option that somehow involved Castle Grande Estates, a trailer park, is in no way referenced in the document itself; it is no way described as Castle Grande Estates. But now we have here introduced a property disposition. Do you happen to know where this came from?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir. This is the first time I have seen it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, we got it from a Borod & Huggins Report that was done some years ago, that looked into this matter. Do you have any reason to believe that Mrs. Clinton ever had this in her possession?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, one way or the other.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Similarly, the board of directors' minutes from Madison Financial, which is SINTR 00030, was shown to you, where there is some reference to Castle Industries and to Castle Grande Estates, do you have any reason to believe that this was a document that either Mrs. Clinton prepared or was shown at some point?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, one way or the other, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Clark, in attempting to comply with the various subpoenas that have been served on the Rose Law Firm, you looked for documents related to the IDC/Castle Grande transaction; am I right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You in fact spent a lot of time looking for those types of documents?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that the only files that you were able to find were those relating to the liquor and sewer research that was done?

Mr. CLARK. Of course we had copies of Mr. Massey's files.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This is on the IDC transaction.

Mr. CLARK. Oh, the IDC transaction, I believe that's correct, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The reason you were able to produce the option agreement because you went and looked into the backup computer disk and pulled it up?

Mr. CLARK. No, actually the first time we ever saw the option agreement was when it was provided to us by the Pillsbury firm.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But they went into the computer disk?

Mr. CLARK. No. They had gotten that—we had never seen that option agreement. They produced it to us, when they were interviewing Mr. Thrash and only when we saw the Wang number did we understand it was one of our documents. Those Wang floppies are—they are very—there is not a system around that reads them. We have had a few of them read for the Independent Counsel. We had to send them to New York to get it done.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you able to find the closing documents for the transaction?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you able to find the contract for sale?

Mr. CLARK. Well, when you say "able," we have since found copies but not within our internal records, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You never found any correspondence, for example, with the seller's attorney?

Mr. CLARK. Not within our records.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You would normally expect to find that kind of documentation in your files with regard to a transaction like this?

Mr. CLARK. You would typically, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Thrash was heavily involved in the transaction; you didn't find any of his documents?

Mr. CLARK. No, he has no record of maintaining a file on this.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Turn to another subject, which is Webster Hubbell, who was a former partner of your firm.

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was Associate Attorney General of the United States?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Number 3 position in the Justice Department. Did you ultimately determine that Mr. Hubbell had stolen money from his partners at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. We did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Approximately how much money did you determine Mr. Hubbell had stolen from his partners at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. He pled guilty to approximately $485,000 in theft.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You only had firm records from 1989 through the time of his departure in 1993; isn't that right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You, in fact, believe that Mr. Hubbell stole more money from his partners?

Mr. CLARK. I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mr. Hubbell also steal from the clients of the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. CLARK. He did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And did he steal from the Resolution Trust Corporation?

Mr. CLARK. They were one of the clients.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now——

Mr. CLARK. We have repaid all that money, by the way.

Mr. GIUFFRA. When did you first learn that there was a problem regarding Mr. Hubbell's disbursements?

Mr. CLARK. I am not sure it even rose to the level of a problem at that point. The first time we discovered, or I realized there was an issue would have been in either late April or early May 1993.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And he was then Associate Attorney General?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did Mr. Hubbell tell you when you advised him there may be an issue involving his disbursements?

Mr. CLARK. Our initial meeting with him, we had a little schedule saying at issue was there were some disbursements that we identified, some fairly significant disbursements, $1,500, that sort of thing, which normally you would see billed to a client and these had not been billed to a client, thereby meaning the firm had paid for them. We presented that and said we need an explanation of this. He said sure, no problem, I am very busy, let me look at my records and I will get back to you, and we said great.

Mr. GIUFFRA. He attempted to assure you there was no problem there.

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you then go speak to Mr. Hubbell in June 1993?

Mr. CLARK. He came to Arkansas for personal reasons, and I asked one of my partners who was going to be with him to ask him to stop by the firm so I could speak with him.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you see Mr. Hubbell on that occasion?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did Mr. Hubbell say?

Mr. CLARK. We discussed the fact that he had been busy and we acknowledged that but that this issue was not going to go away, we needed these questions answered, and he said he understood. He was busy, and he would try get back to us as soon as possible. And we said——

Mr. GIUFFRA. And again Mr. Hubbell assured you there was no problem?

Mr. CLARK. Absolutely.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you see Mr. Hubbell in December 1993, around Christmastime?

Mr. CLARK. I did not see him. I spoke to him on the telephone.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did Mr. Hubbell say at that point?

Mr. CLARK. At that point, we had broadened significantly our investigation, and unlike the earlier visits, I was absolutely certain that there were improprieties. And he had spoken to one of our other lawyers, and I asked him to call me because I wanted to make sure he got the message. I talked to him and said that certain of his partners had thought that he had misappropriated funds, and we needed answers immediately. He said that was not the case, that he had not misappropriated funds, that we should try to work this thing out.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to one last subject. Your bills to the IDC matter. Now you indicated that you thought that the January 30, 1986 bill reflected work that had been done by Mr. Thrash going back to August; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We are a bit confused because if you look at the document DKSJN 28930, which is your client billing and payment history?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now on that page, indicates the——

Mr. CLARK. Mr. Giuffra, you have only given me the first page.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's in the larger billing records.

Mr. CLARK. I have it now. I'm sorry.

Mr. GIUFFRA. It is 28930.

Mr. CLARK. I have it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now doesn't that client billing and payment history indicate that the September 20, 1985 bill, which is the bill that reflects Mr. Thrash's work including attending the IDC board meeting, was billed and paid?

Mr. CLARK. It does, but I think the quickest way to clear this up, if you will look at the January 30, 1986 bill, the total for that bill is $4,670.35.

If you will take the September 20, 1985 bill, the October 29, 1985 bill, and the January 29, 1986 bill as reflected on this, you will see it totals exactly to that amount. So it appears to me Mrs. Clinton produced an internal bill in September and October to clear out the trust account. And then when she actually sent the bill to the client in January, she included the total amount in that bill. That's why those numbers don't reflect each other.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But if you could take a look at the document Bates number DKSJ 28979, which is the September 20, 1985 bill.

Mr. CLARK. I will have to find it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. 28979.

Mr. CLARK. I'm sorry. These aren't in order. OK, I have it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This would be the bill that was sent to the client; am I correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that bill indicates that, at least on the bill there is a stamp—

Mr. CLARK. No, this bill was not sent to the client.

Mr. GIUFFRA. How can you tell that?

Mr. CLARK. Because—I mean, you can't tell with certainty, but if you will see, again, looking at the billing and payment history, it was a typical practice when you had a retainer situation to remove the money from the non-interest-bearing trust account as work was performed, but only wait until an event, whether it be the conclusion of the transaction or the end of the fiscal year, to actually forward that bill. So, this bill is reflected as paid, because the money was removed from the trust account.

But again, if you look at the January 1986 bill, you can see, in our billing and payment history, it shows that only $3,462.50 was billed, but in fact, all you have to do is look at the bill and know that's not correct. It is $4,670.35. The difference is to the penny those two previous bills.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So the net of all of this is that $1,818.75 is either the amount of additional work that Mrs. Clinton did or a premium that was charged to the IDC matter?

Mr. CLARK. Well—what I was just explaining doesn't really address the $1,800, the $1,800 is still in my judgment the amount of the additional time that Mrs. Clinton must have spent on this.

Mr. GIUFFRA. OK, so you would think Mrs. Clinton did about 14½ additional hours on IDC that's not accounted for in the billing memoranda?

Mr. CLARK. I think she would have done 14 additional hours. Whether it was related to IDC, I don't know.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We don't know what the nature of the work that Mrs. Clinton performed that adds up to the $1,800.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Chairman, I don't have any further questions.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clark, I want to be clear on one point that Mr. Giuffra has been pursuing, because the general information that's out there is that Mrs. Clinton did about 60 hours of work with respect to this, these Madison matters. Now as I understand it, that 60 hours would include within it the 14 hours that's being talked about here; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Senator, the 60 hours is not my number. I don't know who put that forward. I mean, the easiest way I would look at it would be to take the total allocations, divide it by $125 and whatever that hour product is, that's what it is. That's the way I would do that.

Senator SARBANES. I think that's the process that was followed to get the 60 hours.

Mr. CLARK. If you took her total allocations, divided it by $125 and it was approximately 60 hours, then yes, it would include that 14 hours.

Senator SARBANES. Right, OK.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have occasion to speak to Mr. Hubbell's former secretary with respect to whether or not she drafted the letter of September 24, 1985?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, I have not.

The CHAIRMAN. She indicates apparently to the investigators who did the Pillsbury Report that it looked like the format she would use. Were you aware of that?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It looked like the format she would use. Have you got a copy of that September 24th letter there?

Mr. CLARK. I believe I do, Senator. Hang on.

The CHAIRMAN. Is this a well articulated, precise letter, containing the legal agreement? Would you summarize it in that way, or would you say that it would appear to be drafted under the supervision of an attorney?

Mr. CLARK. Senator—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me send that copy down plus the addendum.

Mr. CLARK. OK, I have it now, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, that looks like a fairly comprehensive, detailed piece of legal work, wouldn't you agree?

Mr. CLARK. Senator, I would agree that this appears to be a fairly formal letter.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, that certainly wasn't drafted by Mr. McDougal. You saw what he drafted, you saw a comparison; isn't that correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct, and I think Mr. Ward said he drafted it, but—

The CHAIRMAN. You don't believe that Mr. Ward could have accomplished that either, do you?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know Mr. Ward, but I—it certainly has some formality to it, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Right. Do you think it would be a reasonable interpretation to believe that Mr. Hubbell helped prepare this? Indeed, because Mr. Ward said sometimes he would come in and ask Mr. Hubbell—who was his son-in-law, right? And Mr. Ward would chat with Mr. Hubbell and sometimes Mr. Ward would ask Mr. Hubbell's secretary to type things. I mean, this letter was drafted with the help of a lawyer.

Mr. CLARK. Senator, the only reason I would disagree, is again in my practice I would not purchase a piece of property based upon a letter. But I would hope a lawyer would be a little more formal than a letter.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I want to tell you, the record indicates—let me refer you now to the billing record, the first one being November 20, 1985, "conference with Ward, conference with Hubbell, and Hillary Clinton." Billed for an hour. Do you see that?

Mr. CLARK. No, I haven't found it yet. November 20th, you say?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, DKS N 029008. I will send it down to you if that will help.

Mr. CLARK. I found it now. Yes, sir, I see it.

The CHAIRMAN. That is Seth Ward and Webb Hubbell. Let's go to this next one, November 26th. Do you have that? That's DKS N 029002, November 26th.

Mr. CLARK. OK.

The CHAIRMAN. Conference with whom, can you read that?

Mr. CLARK. Are you talking about Mrs. Clinton's entry?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. Says, "Conference with S. Ward, conference with T. Thrash, conference with Webb Hubbell."

The CHAIRMAN. Isn't it interesting that Hubbell doesn't bill any time? Did he bill any time on that day?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he bill any time on the previous day, on November 20th?

Mr. CLARK. Not on this matter, no.

The CHAIRMAN. We see 14 phone calls to Seth Ward, who becomes the person who takes off this property involved in Castle Grande, all those communications and billings from Mrs. Clinton. You understand why we would ask this question, wouldn't you?

Mr. CLARK. Oh, absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the letter appears to have been prepared by Mr. Hubbell who in this matter never appears as the billing partner, or his secretary.

Mr. CLARK. I haven't seen any unreasonable questions, Senator, if that's—

The CHAIRMAN. The billing partner on this, on these occasions, is who?

Mr. CLARK. Mrs. Clinton.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. Any further questions, Mr. Chertoff?

Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have one, not to put too fine a point on this. But you recognized, did you not, at the Rose Law Firm that Mr. Hubbell had done a great deal of work for his father-in-law that was not recorded in the time records at the firm?

Mr. CLARK. We know that now, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So if Mr. Hubbell, in fact, drafted this agreement, that would just be one more thing?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, we are going to meet next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

The CHAIRMAN. Next Tuesday and Thursday.

Senator SARBANES. Only Tuesday and Thursday?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Who will we be hearing from on those days?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lyon on Tuesday and Mrs. Beverly Bassett Schaffer on Thursday.

Senator SARBANES. On Thursday or on Tuesday?

The CHAIRMAN. Thursday, and two others.

Senator SARBANES. Who?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Two other former employees of the savings and loan and securities commission, Mr. Handley and Mr. Brady.

Senator SARBANES. Is Mr. Lyon the only person we are hearing from on Tuesday?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what we have planned.

Senator SARBANES. At 10 a.m., Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. At 10 or 10:30 a.m.

Senator SARBANES. How about 10 a.m.? I would think 10 a.m.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Clark, again, let me thank you. I want to thank you for your straightforwardness, for your candor. This is not an easy situation, you know the law firm, through circumstances beyond your control, finds itself in this situation. So I want you to know that the Chair does appreciate what you have had to go through, and we certainly appreciate your testimony today.

Mr. CLARK. Senator, let me say I appreciate the opportunity to come here. It is nice to finally be talked with rather instead of just talked about.

The CHAIRMAN. I think you have attempted to answer our questions to the absolute best of your recollection, that you have not withheld anything from this Committee, and you have answered in all candor. I think where those observations can be made about witnesses, we have a duty to try set that record straight.

Mr. CLARK. No, we understand.

The CHAIRMAN. —because, as my colleague and friend Senator Sarbanes pointed out many times, a person who comes and who does the best of his ability, notwithstanding I think that they may find themselves in positions which are unfair, where we can make judgments, I think in cases such as yourself, I certainly want to commend you and thank you for your cooperation.

Mr. CLARK. Thank you, Senator.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I would also like to thank Mr. Clark for his testimony. In fact he has been able to shed a great deal of light on some of these billing questions, as we indicated last week, when we had hoped to hear from him.

I must say, I think it is very important that we got on the record, this true story about this allegation, that had such media currency about destruction of documents, an alleged improper destruction of documents at the Rose Law Firm which gained widespread currency in the media for quite a period of time, and which, upon apparently on careful inquiry and investigation, was just not the case. I mean, these Madison/Whitewater papers were not being shredded as it was asserted in the press. I think it is very important that you were able to place that on the record.

Mr. CLARK. I appreciate your remarks, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. We stand in recess until Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. [Whereupon, at 4:22 p.m., the hearing was adjourned, to reconvene at 10:30 a.m., on Tuesday, January 23, 1996.]

[Appendix supplied for the record follow:]

LAW OFFICES
ROSE LAW FIRM
 A PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATION
 120 EAST FOURTH STREET
 LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201
 PHONE (501) 378-8131

CLIENT: 90262

MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS/LOAN
 CO. JOHN LATHAM, PRESIDENT
 11TH AND MAIN
 LITTLE ROCK, AR 72201

INVOICE 3 6

PLEASE MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO ROSE LAW FIRM (TAX ID #71-0438814) - RETURN THIS STUB WITH YOUR CHECK

FOR LEGAL SERVICES RENDERED IN CONNECTION WITH PAID 2018.00

MATTER: (1)

CK #

DATE: 5-21-85

STOCK OFFERING

04/23/85 H. CLINTON

04/23/85 L. SALEGE

04/23/85 R. MASSEY

04/24/85 H. CLINTON

04/24/85 S. GRIMES

04/24/85 R. MASSEY

04/25/85 H. CLINTON

04/25/85 R. MASSEY

04/26/85 L. GREGORY

04/26/85 R. MASSEY

04/29/85 H. CLINTON

CONFERENCE WITH J. MCCUGAL AND J. LATHAM; CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY; CONFERENCE WITH W. GREGORY
 CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY
 RESEARCH ON PREFERRED STOCK OFFERING; CONFERENCE WITH JOHN LATHAM; CONFERENCE WITH HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON; CONFERENCE WITH LES SALEGE
 TELEPHONE CONFERENCES WITH R. MASSEY, JOHN LATHAM, JAVIS PITTMAN; CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY; REVIEW DRAFT DOCUMENTS
 DRAFT MINUTES, RESOLUTIONS TO AMEND CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION TO CREATE CLASS OF PREFERRED STOCK PER R. MASSEY'S INSTRUCTIONS; RELATED RESEARCH
 PREFERRED STOCK OFFERING; RESEARCH STATE & FEDERAL LAW ON STOCK AUTHORITY; DRAFTING DOCUMENTS
 REVIEW OF SUBSCRIPTION AGREEMENTS; CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY
 DRAFTING & REVISE DOCUMENTS; CONFERENCE WITH JOHN LATHAM AND HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
 CONFERENCES WITH R. MASSEY REGARDING CAPITAL - RAISING PLANS; REVIEW OF CONSENT ON DRAFT SUBSCRIPTION AGREEMENT
 CONFERENCE WITH JOHN LATHAM REGARDING CLASS; RESEARCH PUBLIC REGISTRATION STATEMENTS; DRAFTING DOCUMENTS
 TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY, MISSOURI COMMISSIONER; TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY

ROSE LAW FIRM

DKSN028934

ROSE LAW FIRM
A PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATION
120 EAST FOURTH STREET
LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201
PHONE (501) 379-9131

tpt

CLIENT: 10220

MAGNION GUARANTY SAVINGS/LOAN
11TH AND MAIN STREETS
LITTLE ROCK, AR 72202

OCTOBER 27, 1985
SERVICE # 7624

PLEASE MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO ROSE LAW FIRM (TXL ID #71-0448614) - RETURN THIS STUB WITH YOUR CHECK

FOR LEGAL SERVICES RENDERED IN CONNECTION WITH:

MATTER:

E.O.C.

09/10/85 T. THRASH

TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH SETH WARD;
TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH LUTON POWEN
AT SEACH ABSTRACT

10/07/85 T. THRASH

TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH SETH WARD,
PEGGY ROGERS; REVIEW TITLE COMMITMENT

10/14/85 T. THRASH

TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH PEGGY
ROGERS, STEVE WARD, DA HILL ROVER AND SETH WARD; ATTEND CLOSING

10/17/85 T. THRASH

MEETING WITH SETH WARD; REVIEW BILL OF ASSURANCES

TOTAL FOR SERVICES 1050.00

TOTAL THIS STATEMENT 1050.00

U/A

PAID 550.00
CK #           
DATE 11-19-85

DKSN028980

ROSE LAW FIRM

525

LOW OFFICE OF
ROSE LAW FIRM
A PROFESSIONAL CORPORATION

120 EAST FOURTH STREET
LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201
PHONE (501) 375-9131

1 nrc 2751
rtd 468
rdt 262

CLIENT: C-200

PARSONS SUBURBAN SAVINGS/LOAN
P.O. BOX 1410, BOSTON
14TH AND MAIN STREETS
LITTLE ROCK, AR 72201

JANUARY 3, 1982

INV# 9389

PLEASE MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO ROSE LAW FIRM (TAX ID #77-0480616) - RETURN THIS STUB WITH YOUR CHECK

FOR LEGAL SERVICES RENDERED THROUGH JANUARY 30, 1982 BY W. B. CLINTON, T. THARON, P. SCHWAB, K. SHERIN AND J. BIRCH:

ATTOR: S - I.O.C.

REVIEW CONTRACT FOR SALE; TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH SETH WARD AND CHARLIE COOK, DARYL DOVER, ALTON BOWEN AT BEACH ABSTRACT; PERRY ROGERS AND STEVE WARD; MAKE CHANGES IN DOCUMENTS; REVISE, CHANGES IN AGREEMENTS; CORRESPONDENCE TO ALL PARTIES; ATTEND T. D. C. BOARD MEETINGS; PREPARE CORPORATE RESOLUTIONS; REVENUE TITLE COMMITMENTS; ATTEND CLOSINGS; REVIEW BILL OF RESURFACING; MEETINGS WITH SETH WARD, BOB WILSON AND CHARLIE COOK; RESEARCH ON JAIL APPROVALS, PERMITS, ETC., ARE NECESSARY TO OPERATE BEVER AND WATER FACILITIES; MULTIPLE TELEPHONE CONFERENCES WITH STATE AND COUNTY AGENCIES; MEET ABOUT UTILITY STATUS; CONFERENCES WITH SETH WARD REGARDING PUD-100 FROM BRICK LANE AND PROPOSED INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT ON PUD; RESEARCH ON STATE LAW GOVERNING LIQUOR PERMITS; RESEARCH AT COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE AND ELECTION COMMISSION; TELEPHONE CONFERENCES WITH ELECTION COMMISSION; NUMEROUS TELEPHONE CONFERENCES WITH DARYL DOVER

TOTAL FOR SERVICES	$4,551.35
DISBURSEMENTS
ONE COUNTY MAP		2.35
XEROX COPIES		12.50
DISBURSEMENTS TOTAL	$12.85
TOTAL MATTER IS:		$4,564.20

AIR trans

PAID 4670.55
CK #           
DATE 1-30-86

DKSN029010

ROSE LAW FIRM

January 30, 1996
Rose Bill to Madison Guaranty S&L
Matter: IDC

	Standard Value	Difference	Amount to Bill	Difference	Actual Amount Billed
Hillary Clinton	$912.50 7.3 hours	$1818.75 14.55 hours	$2731.25 21.85 hours
Richard Donovan	$468.75 6.25 hours	-0-	$468.75 6.25 hours
Davis Thomas	$262.50 3.5 hours	-0-	$262.50 3.5 hours
TOTAL	$1643.75	$1818.75	$3462.50	$1189.00 9.5 hours at $125 per hour	$4651.50 $3007.75 over standard value

89262 MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS/LOAN
MR. JOHN LATHAM, PRESIDENT
14TH AND MAIN
LITTLE ROCK, AR 72201

5.8.8.

[illegible]

REGS TOTAL 17.05 1643.75

DATE	DESCRIPTION OF DISBURSEMENT	DISB AMT	CHECK	DATE	DISB TOTAL
12/24/85	ONE COUNTY MAP	2.55	52291
	PHOTOCOPY EXPENSE 1.13)	1.20
		=====
		3.55

GRAND TOTAL 3.55

TIME SUMMARY BY ATTORNEY

ATTORNEY	TIME	STANDARD VALUE	WRITTEN VALUE	AMOUNT TO BILL	S/NR	LAST	0158
AL MRC WILLIAM CLINTON	7-10	917.50	912.50	273.25	125.00	01/16/88
AL RICHARD DOHOVAN	6-25	488.75	488.75	146.75	75.00	01/15/88
AL RICHARD DOHOVAN	3-10	762.50	762.50	202.50	75.00	10/16/85	3.55

DKSN029011

LAW OFFICES
WILLIAMS & CONNOLLY

120 EAST FOURTH STREET, N.W.

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20005

(202) 434-5000

FAX (202) 434-5029

EDWARD BENNETT WILLIAMS (1920 - 1988)
PAUL A. CONNOLLY (1922 - 1976)

DAVID E. KENDALL
(202) 434-5145

CONFIDENTIAL

November 22, 1993

BY REGISTERED MAIL

Jerry C. Jones, Esquire
Rose Law Firm
120 East Fourth Street
Little Rock, AR 72201

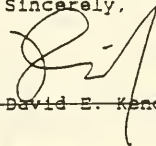

Dear Jerry:

It was good to talk to you today. I am enclosing herewith three file folders, labeled: A3530.1 MADISON GUARANTY LTD. PTNRSHP Application/Brokerage Activities; A3530.2 Madison Guaranty - Net Worth - (1985) Preferred Stock Offering; and A3530.3 MADISON GUARANTY Preferred Stock Offering (Corporate), which were among the late Vincent Foster's files. They appear to me to be files of Rose Law Firm documents. I thought it most appropriate to transmit them to you, for retention and storage.

I would be grateful if you would confirm for me the receipt of these files.

Best wishes for a good Thanksgiving!

Sincerely,

David E. Kendall

Enclosures

DEX/bb

ROSE LAW FIRM

* PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATION

ATTORNEYS

110 EAST FOURTH STREET
LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201

* TELEPHONE (501) 375-8031

* TELEPHONE (501) 375-3008

J. C. ROSE

* 1960-1965

J. EASTON WILLIAMSON
 PHILIP CARROLL
 W. DAKE CLAY
 C. JOSEPH DAVIS, JR.
 GEORGE C. CAMPBELL
 HERBERT C. FULLE II
 STANLEY C. PRICE
 R. RAY FREEDMAN, III
 R. WILSON JONES
 WILSON FOSTER, JR.
 WALTER L. HUSSELL
 RALPH W. BIRD II
 WILLIAM C. BARNES
 WILLIAM ROBERT CLINTON
 C. MARSHALL BUCK
 TIM SOE
 R. JANE DICKEY
 WILLIAM R. KENNEDY II
 KENNETH R. SMITH
 GARY A. HIGLEY

RONALD H. CLARK
 SARAH M. GARNETT
 JERRY C. JONES
 THOMAS R. PIERCE
 CAROL E. ARMSTRONG
 MICHAEL FARMER, JR.
 JESSE S. BAKER
 J. R. FOSTER BROWN
 J. DAVID THOMAS, JR.
 JAMES L. WILLIAMS
 CATHERINE WAGGATER
 RICHARD T. GOODEMAN
 MICHAEL R. JONES
 MARTIN A. THOMAS
 HUBERT RALSTON BELLAN
 RICHARD H. HARRIS
 GARY A. SMITH
 CHARLES W. BAKER
 OF COUNSEL

April 30, 1985

Mr. Charles Hanley
 Arkansas Securities Department
 One Capitol Mall
 Little Rock, Arkansas 72201

Re: Authorization and Issuance of a class of Preferred Stock by Madison Guaranty, a Savings and Loan Chartered under the Laws of the State of Arkansas

Dear Mr. Hanley:

Madison Guaranty, a Savings and Loan chartered under the laws of the State of Arkansas, contemplates a capitalization plan whereby it would authorize and issue a class of ~~preferred stock~~ preferred stock which would have preference as to dividends and amounts paid in liquidation. The question has arisen as to whether an Arkansas chartered Savings and Loan Association may under Arkansas law create, authorize and issue a class of preferred stock. For the reasons stated below, we are of the opinion that a state chartered savings and loan may do so.

Arkansas statute 6751864 (1971) provides in pertinent part:

31
 65110
 4
 1971 { " ... (T)he Arkansas Business Corporation Act, ... as amended, ... shall be applicable to permanent stock savings and loan associations created or operating under the provisions of Act 227 of 1963 ... and such savings and loan associations shall enjoy the same powers and privileges and be subject to the same duties, restrictions and liabilities as other corporations except so far as the same may be limited or enlarged by the provisions of Act 227 of 1963."

RLP 03182

Mr. Charles Hanley
 April 30, 1985
 Page 2

In short, an Arkansas chartered savings and loan possesses all powers afforded to stock corporations under the Arkansas Business Corporations Act unless the Arkansas Act 227 of 1963, as amended ("Act 227") prohibits the exercise of such powers. It is clear that an Arkansas corporation is empowered to create and issue a class of preferred shares of capital stock (see Ark. Stat. Ann. 64§201 (1966) and 64§202 (1966)). Therefore, an Arkansas chartered savings and loan possessing general corporate powers may authorize and issue a class of preferred stock unless Act 227 prohibits such a capitalization plan.

We find no provisions of Act 227 which expressly or impliedly prohibit the creation of a class of preferred stock by an Arkansas chartered savings and loan association. Rather, there are references throughout Act 227 implying that several classes, including a preferred class, of capital stock of an Arkansas savings and loan may exist. For an example, see Ark. Stat. Ann. 67§816 (1963) which requires that the bylaws of the state savings and loan association describe the "several kinds or classes of shares, stock or certificates which it may issue". Other references to the existence of multiple classes of shares of an Arkansas savings and loan association may be found in Arkansas Statutes 67§822 (1963) and 67§1825 (1933).

Because the Arkansas statutes expressly give to an Arkansas chartered savings and loan all of the powers possessed by a corporation under the Arkansas Business Corporations Act, which powers include the power to create and issue a class of preferred capital stock, and because we find no express prohibition in Act 227 against the creation or issuance of such a class of preferred stock, we have concluded that Madison Guaranty's proposed capitalization plan is not inconsistent with Arkansas law. Should you require further information or assistance, please advise Hillary Rodham Clinton or Richard Massey of this firm.

Very truly yours,

Rose Law Firm

Rose Law Firm
 A Professional Association

RNM:mm

cc: Hon. Beverly Bassett

RLF1 01183

5000287

MADISON GUARANTY

THE QUAPAW QUARTER

P.O. Box 1583 • 16th & Main Street
Little Rock, Arkansas 72203 • 501-374-7777

September 3, 1985

TO: Seth Ward
FROM: Jim McDougal
SUBJECT: Industrial Property

The following is a summary of our conversation of last Friday:

1. You will purchase all land north of 145th Street and the utility plants for $1,150,000.
2. Madison will take an option for 270 days to purchase those properties for $1,187,000, plus accrued interest on the loan you will make to purchase the property. If any tax consequences should arise for you from the transaction, Madison will pay those taxes.
3. You will have the present IDC manager collect the rent and utility payments and forward the net proceeds monthly to Greg Young here. Greg will then apply this income monthly to the accruing interest on your loan.
4. Madison will provide you with a letter requiring that you drive a prestigious automobile while you are in charge of this project.

JM/ss

SW1-004

S-INTR00028

532

LAW OFFICES OF
ROSE LAW FIRM
A PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATION

120 EAST FOURTH STREET
LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201
PHONE (501) 378-0131

CLIENT: 92202

WADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS/LOAN
14TH AND MAIN STREETS
LITTLE ROCK, AR 72202

SEPTEMBER 20, 1985
INVOICE # 7097

PLEASE MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO ROSE LAW FIRM (TAX ID #77-0428014) - RETURN THIS STUB WITH YOUR CHECK

FOR LEGAL SERVICES RENDERED IN CONNECTION WITH:

MATTER: S

E.O.C.

02/04/85 T. THRASH
02/04/85 T. THRASH

05/07/85 T. THRASH

05/19/85 T. THRASH

05/19/85 T. THRASH

05/20/85 T. THRASH

REVIEW CONTRACT FOR SALE
TELEPHONE CONFERENCES WITH SETH WARD AND CHARLIE COOK; MAKE CHANGES IN
DOCUMENTS
TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH CARL JONES
REVIEW CHANGES IN AGREEMENTS
CORRESPONDENCE TO ALL PARTIES
TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH CARL JONES
AND CHARLIE COOK
MEETING WITH SETH WARD, BOB WILSON AND
CHARLIE COOK; ATTEND SOC BOARD MEETING
PREPARE CORPORATE RESOLUTIONS
TELEPHONE CONFERENCE WITH SETH WARD

TOTAL FOR SERVICES: $575.00

DISBURSEMENTS

PHOTOCOPY EXPENSE (.15) 15.00

DISBURSEMENTS TOTAL $15.00

TOTAL THIS STATEMENT $590.00

WIA

PAID 654.30
CK #
DATE 11-9-85

ROSE LAW FIRM

DKSN028979

BILLING MEMORANDUM—15140—01/31/68

PAGE 1

WILLARD CLINTON

0022) MADISON SURNAME SAVINGS/LOIM
 MR. JOHN LEFMAN, PRESIDENT
 FIRM AND NAME
 LITTLE ROCK, AR—72201

S. GENERAL

DATE	DATE	TIME	MATTER	DESCRIPTION OF SERVICES RENDERED	15140
DEC 11/20/65	1-00	135.00		CONFERENCE WITH S. JAROSZ SURNAME FROM BRICK CITY	101
MAR 12/20/65	1-00	135.00		CONFERENCE WITH S. JAROSZ CONFERENCE WITH W. HUBBELL	214
MAY 11/27/65	1-30	60.00		CONFERENCE WITH R. MASSEY REGARDING RESERVATION OF MADISON CAPITAL CORPORATION AND FORM 80 TO FURNISH TRANSMITTING BLANK FORM 80 AND INSTRUCTIONS THEREFOR	7504
				CONFERENCE WITH SECRETARY OF STATE RESERVING FOR FURNISHING TRANSMITTING BLANK FORM 80 AND INSTRUCTIONS THEREFOR
				NAME "MADISON CAPITAL CORPORATION" FOR RESERVATION OF CORPORATE NAME FOR PERIOD OF SIX MONTHS

FEES TOTAL 4.00 372.50

DATE	DATE	CHECK	DISB. AMT	BUSH	DESCRIPTION OF DISBURSEMENT	15140
FIRM 11/27/65	37064	5.00			RESERVATION OF CORPORATE NAME: MADISON CAPITAL CORPORATION
SURNAME/ISSN LC#	5	3.25			PHOTOCOPI EXPENSE (1.35)
			8.75
DISB TOTAL

TIME SUMMIT BY ATTORNEY

ATTORNEY	TIME	STANDARD VALUE	VALUE	AMOUNT TO BILL	DATE
10 SIB	1-30	60.00	60.00	60.00	12/27/65
43 WIC	2-30	112.50	112.50	112.50	12/20/65
999 FIRM / FIRM ATTORNEY	4.00	172.50	172.50	172.50	01.15
TOTAL FIRM		8.75	8.75	8.75
TOTAL BILL		181.25	181.25	181.25

DKSNO 29008

BILLING MEMORANDUM - 31686 - 01/21/86 PAGE 1 WILLARD CLINTON

80223 NATION GUARANTEE SAVINGS/LOAN
MR. JOHN LAMAR, PRESIDENT
16TH AND MAIN
LITTLE ROCK, AR 72201

1 STOCK OFFERING

DATE	DATE	TIME	VALUE	DESCRIPTION OF SERVICES RENDERED	AMOUNT TO BILL
BMR	11/12/85	1-20	90.00	VIEW AND REVISE OFFERING MATERIALS	6184
BMR	11/13/85	1-70	127.50	VIEW OFFERING MATERIALS; CONFERENCE WITH S. HAWKINS	6176
BMR	11/16/85	1-10	87.50	CONFERENCE WITH B. KEMBERT, JR. - LITMAYR; REGARDING DEBT OFFERING	6182
BMR	11/17/85	1-10	125.00	CONFERENCE WITH S. HAWKINS; REGARDING DEBT OFFERING	6188
BMR	11/17/85	1-40	125.00	CONFERENCE WITH S. HAWKINS; CONFERENCE WITH M. MURPHY	7286
BMR	12/07/85	1-70	162.50	REVISE MEMORANDUM; CONFERENCE WITH S. HAWKINS; CONFERENCE WITH M. CLINTON; DEBENTURE	9418
BMR	12/07/85	1-40	60.00	CONFERENCE WITH B. KEMBERT; S. HAWKINS; RESEARCH PHLO RECS	8192
BMR	12/08/85	1-10	151.50	REVISE MEMORANDUM; RESEARCH PHLO RECS; REGULATIONS	8192
BMR	12/13/85	1-40	120.00	RESEARCH PHLO RECS REGARDING DEBT OFFERINGS	8192
BMR	12/17/85	1-20	90.00	DRAFTING / REVISE LETTER TO HANLEY	8118
FEES TOTAL
		11-70	1077.50

TOTAL UNAPPLIED CASH

1789.361

SET FEES - INVESTMENT

66781.851

1 CREDIT FOR DISBURSEMENT

DATE	DATE	CHECK	DEBIT AMT	DEBIT	DESCRIPTION OF DISBURSEMENT	AMOUNT TO BILL
BMR	12/12/85	CASH	150.00		CREDIT FOR JOURNALING OF DISBURSEMENTS FOR ESTIMATED EXPENSES TO CLOSE	11018
SUMMARIZED CODE				1	ESTATE
SUMMARIZED CODE				5	LO TELEPHONE CHARGES (INTERSTATE)
SUMMARIZED CODE				5	PHOTOGRAPH EXPENSE (.15)
DEBIT TOTAL
			151.50

TIME SUMMARY BY ATTORNEY

ATTORNEY	DATE	TIME	STANDARD VALUE	MATTER VALUE	AMOUNT TO BILL	DATE	LAST
11 BMR	12-70		125.00	932.50		12/17/85	11/26/85
43 BMR	1-00		125.00	125.00	807.50
9285 BMR	11-70		1077.50	1077.50
TOTAL FEES				151.50	151.50
TOTAL DEBIT				1046.00	1046.00

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

---

TUESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 2:15 p.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING COMMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Mr. Lyon, would you stand for the purpose of taking the oath. [Whereupon, William C. Lyon was called as a witness and, having first been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:]

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Mr. Lyon.

We will take any statement that you want to make.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM C. LYON FORMER MEMBER, ARKANSAS STATE BANK BOARD

Mr. LYON. Senator, I do not wish to make a statement.

The CHAIRMAN. I have a statement that I'm going to make, then.

Last Thursday, the Committee heard testimony from Carolyn Huber, Special Assistant to the President, about Ms. Huber's discovery of the Rose Law Firm billing records in the Book Room of the President and Mrs. Clinton's private residence at the White House.

Ms. Huber's testimony raised some very serious questions that this Committee will examine in the coming weeks. Ms. Huber testified that she found these billing records on the table in the center of the Book Room at the White House residence and that the records were in plain view.

Ms. Huber also testified that access to the Book Room is limited to the President, Mrs. Clinton, the Clinton's overnight guests, Ms. Huber, Patricia Marshall, the First Lady's personal assistant, and a number of maids and butlers.

Perhaps even more troubling, Ms. Huber testified that the records were not in the Book Room just days prior to their initial discovery in August of 1995. It is important to remember that this Committee was conducting Whitewater hearings in August 1995.

Did someone leave these records out in the Book Room? Were the records left out intentionally or inadvertently?

These Rose Law Firm billing records are very important. They document the nature and the extent of Mrs. Clinton's legal work for the Madison Guaranty S&L during 1985 and 1986. Madison is the corrupt S&L at the center of the Whitewater matter. This S&L was owned by Jim McDougal, the Clintons' business partner in the Whitewater real estate project.

This Committee will now look into who obtained these billing records from the Rose Law Firm during the 1992 Presidential campaign, why were the records obtained, and who saw these records. The Committee will try to follow the chain of custody of these billing records to Washington, who brought the billing records from Arkansas to Washington, where the records stored, and where were they stored?

These records were subpoenaed by the Independent Counsel, the RTC, and this Committee. These records have been sought by investigators for 2 years. Why were the records not turned over sooner? Were they hidden at the White House? We will investigate whether anyone defied this Committee's subpoena. The American people have a right to know.

The Committee will depose Ms. Marshall and others who had access to the Book Room in August 1995. We will also depose the lawyers involved in the search for these records. The White House has also promised to provide the Committee with a log of visitors to the third floor of the White House during the early part of August 1995.

I'm particularly troubled by the fact that the records contain the handwritten notes of former White House Deputy Counsel Vincent Foster. These notes appear to be written to Mrs. Clinton. One note from Foster, for example, reads: "HRC, I believe there was a subsequent bill."

This Committee will try to find out if these records were taken from Mr. Foster's office on the night of his death. As the Committee will recall, Secret Service Officer Henry O'Neal testified that on the night of Mr. Foster's death, he saw Mrs. Clinton's Chief of Staff, Margaret Williams, remove file folders from the Foster office.

The Committee is now moving into the Arkansas phase of the Committee's public hearings. The vast majority of the matters that we have examined so far have involved events that occurred after January 20, 1993, when Bill Clinton took office as President. There are also serious questions regarding events that occurred in Arkansas in the 1980's when Bill Clinton was Governor.

Senate Resolution 120 authorizes the Committee to examine these matters. The Committee will examine the operations of Madison S&L. The failure of Madison cost taxpayers $60 million. We'll try to find out if Jim McDougal, the Clintons' Whitewater partner, improperly diverted Madison funds to himself and others? Did any of this money find its way into the Whitewater real estate project in which the McDougals and the Clintons were partners? Did the Clintons know that McDougal misused Madison funds?

The Clintons and McDougals were supposed to be 50/50 partners in Whitewater. That means that the Clintons and the McDougals were supposed to share equally in any profits or losses. But we now know that the McDougals put far more money into Whitewater than the Clintons. In fact, until mid-1986, the McDougals put more than $158,000 into Whitewater while the Clintons only put, at most, $35,000 into this supposedly 50/50 investment.

This Committee will investigate whether Governor Clinton provided any special benefits to Jim McDougal or Madison. Did Jim McDougal obtain improper influence with the Governor or his administration? What did McDougal give the Clintons and what did he get in return? These are important questions and the American people have a right to know the answers.

In the coming weeks, we will also examine the Rose Law Firm's representation of both Madison and the RTC. Senior partners at the Rose Law Firm included Hillary Rodham Clinton, Webster Hubbell, and Vincent Foster.

We now know from the Rose billing records that the Rose Firm was extensively involved in a Madison real estate project called Castle Grande. The Castle Grande project ultimately cost the American taxpayers almost $4 million.

Mrs. Clinton billed Madison for more than a dozen conferences with Mr. Seth Ward, the Madison employee who was the straw purchaser of part of the land for this project. Mr. Ward is Mr. Webster Hubbell's father-in-law. Bank regulators have described this transaction involving Mr. Ward as a sham purchase that was structured to evade regulations limiting how much Madison could invest in real estate.

Last Thursday, Ronald Clark, the Chief Operating Officer of the Rose Firm, testified that the billing records indicated that Mrs. Clinton performed 14½ hours of unexplained work on Castle Grande in addition to over 7 hours of work that was described in the records. In total, Mrs. Clinton apparently billed Madison for more than 21 hours of work on Castle Grande.

Hillary Clinton billed more time to the Castle Grande project than any other lawyer at the law firm. This Committee will examine what legal work Mrs. Clinton performed on the Castle Grande project. What did she know, if anything, about the sham nature of the deal.

As we go forward, the Committee will also investigate Capital Management Services and its President, David Hale, a former Arkansas Judge. Hale has publicly charged that Governor Clinton pressured him to make a small business loan of $300,000 that was used in part to prop up Whitewater. Did this happen?

This Committee is committed to completing this investigation as promptly as possible. We have been slowed by disputes with the White House and other parties over the production of documents. We have seen, in the past month, the mysterious discovery of the Rose billing records in the White House residence. We expect and deserve more cooperation going forward.

Finally, I wish to pledge to the Members of this Committee on both sides of the aisle that we will conduct this inquiry in a fair, even-handed, and impartial manner. That is what the American people want, expect, and deserve.

Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I would just make a couple of brief observations.

Conducting the hearing in a fair, even-handed, and impartial manner requires getting the facts first and making the judgments later. It requires not taking allegations and putting them forward as having been established and then having hearings and receiving factual testimony that disproves the allegations or shows there's no substance for making them. I have consistently asserted that that's essential to the work of this Committee, and I regret that it has been departed from and increasingly seems to be departed from.

So I think it is very important that we move into the Arkansas phase having essentially or substantially completed both the Foster paper phase and the Washington phase of this inquiry, that we keep that in mind. Otherwise, I don't think that the hearings will be seen as valid and I think a growing sentiment will develop in the country that this is a political exercise. I, for one, would not like to see that take place. But I am increasingly concerned that that is, in effect, what will transpire. I think it is very important for the Committee to move with vigor and expedition in conducting these inquiries.

The Iran-Contra Committee completed its hearings within 7 months after it was established, and in the last month, it held 21 hearings in a 1-month period.

This Committee has, on occasion, conducted itself at that pace, rather than at a more leisurely pace, and I think it imperative that the Committee undertake to do that, particularly in view of the fact, as I understand it, that the Senate is not going to be in session for voting virtually through the month of February which, of course, would mean Members would not have to compete with other legislative requirements. We would be in a position to move expeditiously with respect to the work of this Committee. I think it is imperative that we do so.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. LYON, I understand that you had some difficulty getting here from Little Rock, and I appreciate the fact that you were able to make it notwithstanding I guess the weather problem for the airplanes.

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir, we had difficulty. I would appreciate it if they have any more statements of length that they allow me to get my attorney off the timeclock first.

[Laughter.]

Mr. CHERTOFF. We're going to go right to the questions.

I ask you, Mr. Lyon, to move the microphone a little bit closer so that we can hear you.

Mr. Lyon, what is your business background, your profession?

Mr. LYON. I am the manager of a small manufacturing plant for a large company; I am also the Mayor of Fordyce, Arkansas; and, I also own a small lumber or plywood yard.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Back in the late 1970's and early 1980's, did you come to know a man by the name of James McDougal?

Mr. LYON. I knew James McDougal back between 1954 and 1958 at the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the early 1970's and early 1980's, did you have business dealings with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. LYON. In the 1970's, I would not think so. In the 1980's, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What were those business dealings?

Mr. LYON. The business dealings were that, number one, he was a real estate developer. He had a place named Maple Creek, attempted to log Maple Creek or cut the timber. Castle Grande did cut the timber, selectively cutting there, also banked at Madison Guaranty. And other than that, I really can't think of any business dealings that I really had with him. I was offered a great many.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you, in the 1980's, did you get appointed to the Arkansas State Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did that come about?

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal called me, literally out of the blue, and asked if I would be on the Arkansas State Bank Board. I owned, well, the smallest bank in Arkansas and I said yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was he then in the Governor's office as a staff person?

Mr. LYON. He was the top aide of Governor Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you describe for us what the Arkansas State Bank Board does? What it was back in the 1980's?

Mr. LYON. The Arkansas State Bank Board basically advises the Bank Commissioner. They vote on various branches. Some regulations I believe that the Bank Commissioner brings up. I have seen them, in all honesty, argue all day when two banks get into it in the same town, about if a bank was 3 feet too close to the other bank. You get into those kind of things on commissions. But basically they advise the Bank Commissioner, they are an arm of the Bank Commissioner.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When Mr. McDougal called to offer you this position, did you get appointed?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Before you actually got the appointment, did you talk to Governor Clinton at all?

Mr. LYON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the only person you spoke to about getting the appointment was Mr. McDougal?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I right that you served during Governor Clinton's first term, then through Governor White's term, and then into Governor Clinton's second term?

Mr. LYON. I believe that's correct, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you serve out the full second term of Governor Clinton?

Mr. LYON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you come to leave the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Governor Clinton asked me to resign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Tell us what were the conversations that led up to Governor Clinton asking you to resign?

Mr. LYON. With Governor Clinton?

Mr. CHERTOFF. First with Mr. McDougal.

Mr. LYON. With Mr. McDougal?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal came over to a place of business that I owned. Now this is a long time ago.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me just help you with the dates. This is during Governor Clinton's second term so it would be some time in 1983 or 1984, right?

Mr. LYON. That would be correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in this period of time, tell us about Mr. McDougal, what happened?

Mr. LYON. He implied, when he said we want you to resign from the Bank Board and go on some savings and loan board, that Mrs. Clinton was handling the deal, that he didn't think that he would have any trouble on his stock offering, and he said Bill wants to make sure that we get it through.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who did you understand Bill to be?

Mr. LYON. Sir?

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mentioned Bill, whom did you understand Bill to be?

Mr. LYON. That would have been the President of the United States, Bill Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then the Governor?

Mr. LYON. Then the Governor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Can you take us back, just so we understand step-by-step. Mr. McDougal met you, he came to the bank or met you some place?

Mr. LYON. He met me at the brewery.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's a brewery that you operate?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he tell you about his stock deal involving Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. LYON. Jim McDougal had a stock deal in order to raise capital for his savings and loan, which was Madison Guaranty. In talking to him before this, my understanding was that Mrs. Clinton was doing the work for him, the legal work, and that they had to get it through in a hurry because the bank was really out of capital. And capital is simply stored bonds which supports a bank, and you have to have them in a savings and loan, and it was growing too fast.

I'm not answering your question. Repeat it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were starting to answer the question. Mr. McDougal told you that he had some need to raise money for the bank by issuing stock.

Mr. LYON. Right. It was a preferred stock issue. But the funny thing to me about the whole thing is, as I remember it, and I don't remember too much about it, it seemed that it was a preferred stock issue, but that he would still maintain absolute control of the bank or ownership.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So what he wanted to do was issue stock so that he would get money in from investors, but he would have control of the bank, he would still have the voting control?

Mr. LYON. As I understood it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. McDougal also explained to you that he had Mrs. Clinton involved in some way, or some relationship with Mrs. Clinton involving this plan of his?

Mr. LYON. He explained to me, several times, that Mrs. Clinton was on retainer through Madison Guaranty.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he ask you, in particular, to do in connection with this interest he had in issuing stock?

Mr. LYON. He expected me to go on whatever board it was and to help or to assist them in getting the stock issue through the Commission.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would that have been the Arkansas Savings & Loan or Arkansas Securities Commission, the Savings and Loan Board?

Mr. LYON. I do not know, but I would think that it would be the State Savings and Loan Board, not the Securities Commission.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your understanding that Mr. McDougal wanted you to go on that board, the Savings and Loan Board, from the Bank Board, for the specific purpose of voting to approve his issuance of preferred stock?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you say to him when he asked you to do that?

Mr. LYON. I told him not "no," but "hell no."

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you tell him "hell no"?

Mr. LYON. Not that I'm all that honorable.

[Laughter.]

It made me mad that he would think that I would vote the way that he told me to. At that time, I was a banker, and bankers and people that run savings and loans really do not like each other. It's a different field entirely. And last is the stock issue itself just didn't sound kosher, didn't sound right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What didn't sound right about it?

Mr. LYON. What didn't sound right about it was the fact, you know, you bought stock, what did you get? He still, according to what I knew, controlled the bonds completely and had control of Madison Guaranty completely. The common stockholders that would have been there, they could have been cut out entirely dividend-wise.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So one of the problems you saw with this was that it would hurt the regular stockholders of the bank, the people who would get the stock, because they wouldn't have control over what the savings and loan did?

Mr. LYON. That was one of the problems with that. But in all honesty, the reason that I answered like I did was the fact that he thought that I would do his bidding.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you told Mr. McDougal that you would not agree to do what he wanted, you would not transfer from the Bank Board to the Savings and Loan Board, what did he say to you?

Mr. LYON. He asked me to resign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. From the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you why he wanted you to resign from the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. I told him, you know, it surprised me, and I said, "Jim, you can't ask me to resign. You're not with the State anymore." And he said, "Well, I'll have Bill ask you to resign." I said,

"Well, he's the Governor, and if he asks me to resign, I will resign." I honestly didn't believe that it would ever happen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What happened?

Mr. LYON. He called and asked me to resign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you say he called and asked you to resign, you mean the Governor called and asked you to resign?

Mr. LYON. Correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. About how long after your conversation with Mr. McDougal did it take for the Governor to call and ask for your resignation?

Mr. LYON. Within 2 months.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did the Governor say to you when he called you up and asked for your resignation?

Mr. LYON. He thanked me for the fine and honorable work I had done for the State of Arkansas. He was as nice a man and a gentleman as you have ever talked to. I tried to be a gentleman too.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Lyon, in the conversation you had with Governor Clinton, when he asked you to resign, did he mention Jim McDougal?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did he say about Jim McDougal?

Mr. LYON. He started by saying that Jim told me that if I asked you to resign, that you would resign, I really do need the appointment. He did not say why, I did not ask why.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In this conversation with Governor Clinton, after he mentioned to you that he had spoken to Jim about your resignation, he asked you to resign and you agreed?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to go back to the conversation you had with Mr. McDougal when he first approached you about going over to the Savings and Loan Board to vote on the issuance of preferred stock for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. You said earlier in your testimony that he not only mentioned Mrs. Clinton as being on retainer for him, but he also mentioned Bill, meaning Governor Clinton, in that conversation. What did he say to you about Governor Clinton in that conversation?

Mr. LYON. He told me that a gentleman from Augusta, Arkansas, had given him a large contribution, and he mentioned the amount, and the amount was $50,000, and he needed to appoint him to the Bank Board. In all honesty, I didn't necessarily believe that. I was taking everything with a grain of salt. It may have happened, it may not have. I did not know who he appointed to the Bank Board.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is what McDougal told you in connection with who your replacement was going to be on the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When Mr. McDougal first came to you and indicated to you that he wanted to have you switch over to the Savings and Loan Board, you said no. And then he said well, in that case, you are going to have to resign. You indicated you really didn't expect that the Governor would call you up and ask you to resign?

Mr. LYON. Not in my wildest dreams, really.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was your reaction when you got the call?

Mr. LYON. I was disappointed, a little bit hacked, mainly it disturbed me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What disturbed you?

Mr. LYON. That it was the Governor of the State of Arkansas. And I'm not sure why he asked me to resign.

Understand, I never saw Governor Clinton or Bill Clinton and Jim McDougal ever talk. I'm just telling you what happened. But it disturbed me that it probably did happen the way that Jim McDougal said that it was going to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to ask that we put up on the overhead a document marked DKSX 13314. It's a 2-page document from the Governor's office and it's undated. It's to a Jane, and it says, "Re: November/December Appointments." I would like to go to the second page, there's a list of items on it. The second page also has the number "5" circled, and it's written there, "Banking Board—ask McDougal."

I know you have never seen this document before, Mr. Lyon. I'm not putting this up for the benefit of the Committee to see that we have a document in the file in the Governor's office that does corroborate and confirm Mr. Lyon's impression of Mr. McDougal's relationship and abilities with respect to the Banking Board. I would like to ask you, Mr. Lyon, to focus your attention to the period you were on the Bank Board. Were you familiar with a bank known as the Bank of Kingston?

Mr. LYON. With a bank known as the Bank of Kingston?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, a bank owned by Mr. McDougal.

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you know the name of that bank to be? Not the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, now, I'm talking about the bank?

Mr. LYON. The Bank of Kingston?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also know at some time that bank was renamed Madison Bank and Trust?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you were on the State Bank Board, did you come to learn that there were some problems with some of the loans being made at McDougal's bank, the Bank of Kingston, about a Cease and Desist Order?

Mr. LYON. May I go back, briefly?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure.

Mr. LYON. Well, after I was appointed to the Bank Board, Mr. McDougal called me and said that he had an opportunity to buy the Bank of Kingston, which was in the northwest part of the State, and did I think that he would do all right in banking. I told him, yes, I thought he'd do real well. Which means I'll never be a consultant, I guess, the way things have turned out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I don't know, maybe you will be.

Mr. LYON. Right.

At that time, or some time right after that—it was in Madison County, that's where the bank or the Madison name came from—I do remember vaguely that that was the name of the bank, but I think of it as the Bank of Kingston.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you learn, while you were at the Bank Board, that there was a Cease and Desist Order that went out against that bank, the Bank of Kingston?

Mr. LYON. Right. The reason I went back a little bit, at the Bank Board, after he called me and I realized they had bought it, I asked someone either on the Bank Board or one of the examiners or someone, right before the meeting, how they were doing? He told me, do you know that they're under a Cease and Desist Order, and I told him, no, I did not, and asked why; and he told me why. So I did know of it, but not very much. I have never seen a Cease and Desist Order.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you get told about why Mr. McDougal's bank was under a Cease and Desist Order?

Mr. LYON. My understanding was unsecured loans, out-of-territory loans, and really too many politicians.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What do you mean by an out-of-territory loan?

Mr. LYON. An out-of-territory loan, you might say that it's illegal according to bank policy or laws. They draw a circle and within that circle you are supposed to make any loans; not outside the circle. There are instances that are forgiven, and I think it's more of a policy than anything, but when they draw that circle they pretty much stay with it and some of those loans were way out of the territory of a small bank.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now in describing some of these improper loans and those out-of-territory or too many unsecured loans, you indicated that a large number of loans were going to politicians. Was there anybody in particular, or any individuals in particular whose names you heard as being people who received these kinds of loans?

Mr. LYON. Bill Clinton, Jim Guy Tucker, and Senator Fulbright.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am going to ask that we put up on the Elmo now what has been marked as Bates number VCH367 through 373, which is a copy of a notice of charges and of hearing, of the FDIC against Madison Bank and Trust.

In particular, on the second page, I'd like to refer the Committee to paragraph b. This is a list of essentially charges of unsafe and unsound banking practices by that bank. They describe, for example, an excessive and disproportionately large volume of loans to borrowers residing or conducting business outside of its defined trade area, many of which have been granted without protective collateral, are lacking in supporting technical documentation, and some of which represent poor credit risks. Is that your understanding of what you have been referring to as "out-of-territory loans"?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I would like to turn to VCH371 and put it up on the Elmo. Mr. Lyon, you should have a copy of this that we put before you if you care to look at it. It's also up on the screen.

It lists, as another element of concern, that the bank has extended credit to affiliated organizations—Flowerwood Farms, Great Southern Land Company, Kings River Land Company, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association, Madison Properties, Park Place, and Whitewater Development Company, which do not meet collateral requirements and/or exceed the limitations provided by the applicable law.

Let me ask you, Mr. Lyon, had you ever heard of Whitewater in particular in connection with the regulatory Cease and Desist Order at Madison Bank and Trust?

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I would also like to direct the Committee's attention in the record to a document which is a June 5, 1984 document received from the State Bank Department. I don't believe it has a Bates number. It is a June 1984 progress report. It is addressed to Marlin Jackson who I guess was the State Bank Commissioner during part of the time you were at the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Mr. Marlin Jackson was the State Bank Commissioner part of the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is a document that, of course, is after the Cease and Desist Order was in effect and it relates the progress of the bank in clearing out some of these loans that were adversely classified assets, loans to borrowers residing outside the bank's normal trade territory.

I would like to direct the Committee's attention to the first page of the attachment. There are several pages of loans. In particular, at page 15, there is a loan listed to Hillary Rodham of Little Rock, that is listed as of June 1984, as being paid off.

Senator SARBANES. What was the question that he was supposed to answer?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you seen this document before or any documents like it?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator BOXER. Mr. Chairman, can we get a copy of these, because I can't see it on the machine. It's too small printing for me.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly, I think we can provided the Minority with them, so if you would hand them out to the Members.

Senator BOXER. Great.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Do we have them on this side?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll make sure everybody has a copy.

The CHAIRMAN. That's page 15.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Lyon, I would like to direct your attention to something else in the time I have left for this opening examination. You mentioned that Mr. Jackson served as Commissioner during the period of time that you served on the Bank Board. You left the Bank Board during Mr. Clinton's second term, correct?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Jackson continued on after you had left?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'd like to show you a letter we received, DKS 28363. It is a letter that was written after you had left the Bank Board. I want to make it clear to you so this is not something you would have seen at the time but I want to ask you, based on your experience at the Bank Board, for your opinion about this.

We will wait a moment to put it up on the Elmo and make sure everybody has a copy. It is a letter of November 1, 1985 to Charles Campbell, Vice President, Security Bank of Paragoula, Arkansas. Re: Note No. 957-585—Bill Clinton. Note balance—$18,800.00; Accrued interest—$2,322.42. I want to make sure the witness has a copy of this, do you have a copy of the letter?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to read the letter and I want to ask you something about this. It says:

Dear Charles,

I am enclosing the Extension Agreement which Governor Bill Clinton signed yesterday.

It is my understanding that Jim McDougal, a close friend as well as business associate of Governor Clinton, is to forward to you a check for $2,322.42 representing the interest due on the note.

In discussing this matter with Jim today vis-à-vis telephone, he indicated that he intended to make a $4,000 or $5,000 principal reduction in addition to the interest payment.

After making the appropriate approval of the Extension Agreement, please return the appropriate copy to me, and I will personally deliver it to Governor Clinton. Also, please return copies of the receipt to me.

So that Jim McDougal may know that the proper credit has been given, please provide Jim with a copy of the receipt for the payment of the interest and principal along with a copy of the Extension Agreement.

I trust this meets with your approval and that it will soon remove the note from the past due list.

Sincerely, Marlin D. Jackson, Bank Commissioner.

cc: Jim McDougal.

It is on the letterhead of the Arkansas State Bank Department.

Now, am I correct that the Arkansas State Bank Department was the regulator for banks, as opposed to savings and loans?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In your experience, or in your opinion, based on your service on the Bank Board, was it proper for an official of the State Bank Department, especially the Commissioner on official stationery in his official capacity, to be writing to a bank that he regulates and to be soliciting that bank to extend a personal loan agreement to an individual?

Mr. LYON. Marlin Jackson is a very good friend of mine, and the answer is no.

The CHAIRMAN. You say he is a very good friend and the answer is no?

Mr. LYON. When I say, no, I mean it was not right for him to do that. He should never have done this.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He should never have done this.

I think this is probably a good place for me to stop.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Do you know whether Marlin Jackson had any connection with the Security Bank of Paragoula?

Mr. LYON. My understanding was that he owned the Security Bank. When I say owned—the majority of the stock of some bank in Paragoula, I am not sure it was the Security Bank. And that when he became Bank Commissioner, he put it in a trust where he wouldn't have anything to do with it or have any say so. It was my understanding, but I don't know what bank he owned.

Senator SARBANES. But you think it's this bank?

Mr. LYON. Not necessarily, no, sir. I do not know what bank he owned.

Senator SARBANES. We'll find out.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Lyon, good afternoon.

Your relationship with Mr. James McDougal in the early- to mid-1980's was one as borrower to lender in connection with Mr. McDougal's capacity at the Madison Bank. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. I borrowed money from Madison Guaranty Bank. My relationship with him at that time was a friend.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And when did you first borrow the sum of $100,000 from Madison Bank?

Mr. LYON. My guess is somewhere in the early 1980's.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That loan then grew, as time went on, did it not, to the point where you were well over $300,000 in debt to the Madison Bank?

Mr. LYON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When was that time period roughly?

Mr. LYON. I guess around 1984, 1985, 1986.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you can't be more precise as to whether it was 1984 or 1986?

Mr. LYON. Counselor, the loans kind of were paid and not paid and came and went. I can't be precise without the records that you have in front of you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you remember when you paid them off?

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You did pay them off, did you not?

Mr. LYON. Every one of them.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But you don't remember which year that was?

Mr. LYON. No, but I certainly did do a lot of celebrating when I did do it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'm sure you did.

So that at least during the period of time that you have testified about here today, you were in the situation of owing Madison Bank quite a considerable sum of money?

Mr. LYON. Yes, I owed Madison Bank a considerable sum of money, right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And those loans were in connection with your brewery business?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You had established a brewing operation, sort of a micro-brewery operation in Arkansas?

Mr. LYON. I believe that's one of the best definitions that I ever heard, sort of a brewing operation. The beer wasn't all that good, if you don't mind me saying so.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, you know, everybody's a critic, and I guess you're the best critic of the product. So you were working on making better beer. It was costing you more and more money as time went on, and this loan grew almost four-fold?

Mr. LYON. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you had reason to be nice to Mr. McDougal and sort of humor him from time-to-time?

Mr. LYON. Well, I didn't go around kicking him in the rear every day, right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your own personal view I take it, not expressed directly to Mr. McDougal at the time, was that Jim McDougal was a braggart?

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal is known to brag a little, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You thought he was given to exaggeration, is that correct?

Mr. LYON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, I think in your own words, you felt that Mr. McDougal was grandiose?

Mr. LYON. No, I didn't feel it, I knew it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You knew that he was grandiose?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In order to make sure I knew what you were talking about, Webster's helped me out with a definition of grandiose saying: Seeming or trying to seem very important, pompous, or showy. Would that be a fair characterization of what you meant when you characterized Mr. McDougal as grandiose?

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal, a man of great humor, a fine man most of the time that I was around him, was certainly that way at times, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that you would take what he told you, from time-to-time, with a grain of salt, having in mind your personal view of exaggeration, grandiosity, and braggadocio, fair to say?

Mr. LYON. Say that one more time.

[Laughter.]

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You took what he said with a grain of salt?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is it correct, when you were removed from the Bank Board, you were not happy about that event?

Mr. LYON. No, I was not happy about it. I was very disappointed about it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were unhappy and you were bitter about the decision?

Mr. LYON. No, not really. Serving on the Bank Board had gotten a little bit old, to be off of the Bank Board didn't really matter to me one way or the other.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that it was OK with you that you were off the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. It wasn't necessarily OK with me, but it wasn't any big deal with me either.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Haven't you said that you were p.o'd big time, using your expression sort of abbreviated?

Mr. LYON. I don't believe I ever used that expression. I think I spelled it out.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I said I'd abbreviated it.

Mr. LYON. Right, OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I am having difficulty in accommodating both versions. You were either not unhappy or you were unhappy, which was it?

Mr. LYON. If you say that I was not unhappy or I was unhappy, then I would say in this case that I was unhappy; and you would be too if they kicked you off of where you are now.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Maybe not.

[Laughter.]

Mr. LYON. I can't help my feelings. You understand the way I felt about the Bank Board.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But I am trying to get it in your words since you said both things. I am trying to find out exactly, and this is now serious, whether in fact you expressed that you were unhappy that you had been asked to leave the Bank Board and you did tender your resignation. But you say you weren't happy about it.

Mr. LYON. And I wasn't unhappy about it either.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I think we have taken that as far as I can go with that for now.

The timing that you have indicated of Mr. McDougal's phone call to you was, as you expressed it, a couple of months before the Governor asked you to tender your resignation. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. No, that's not correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When did McDougal have that conversation with you in relation to the time that Governor Clinton called you?

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal came over to the brewery and we went outside on the porch and talked. There was no phone call.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'm sorry.

Mr. LYON. He did that before. Go ahead.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When did this porch conversation take place in relation to the time that Governor Clinton asked you to tender your resignation?

Mr. LYON. Some time in 1983 or 1984, as best as I can tell you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No, no. I am not asking you to pin down the date right now, but I am asking you in terms of the sequence of events, Mr. Lyon. You say that Mr. McDougal had a conversation with you. If I recollect your testimony, you said that he mentioned that he wanted you to resign from the Bank Board and then to go on the Savings and Loan Board because he wanted you to vote on the preferred stock issuance in a way favorable to him. That Mrs. Clinton had been retained and she was working on that project. And that you didn't say just "no," you said, "hell no." Am I fair in that characterization?

Mr. LYON. I said not "no," but "hell no."

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That occurred how soon before you received a call from Governor Clinton asking you for your resignation?

Mr. LYON. We're going back probably 10 years.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I know it's a long, long, long time ago. That point has been made in this Committee.

Mr. LYON. My best estimate—and it is an estimate—is that after the conversation with Jim McDougal, Mr. Clinton called out of the blue, probably 2 months later.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is where I started this question, thank you. Two months elapsed, more or less, before you were asked to tender your resignation, and then you tendered your resignation?

Mr. LYON. Correct. At least 2 months, I would say, or more.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You mentioned, in your testimony, that on several occasions, or repeatedly, Mr. McDougal said that Mrs. Clinton had been retained and was handling the matter, but that they wanted your vote on it as well. Clear in your mind?

Mr. LYON. Clear in my mind.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, the date that you resigned, and I think we can help you on that, could we put up DKS 026346, please? Can you read that?

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's get a copy down, please, for Mr. Lyon.

Mr. LYON. We don't have a copy of that, that's what we sent in.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The document that I'm referring to—
The CHAIRMAN. Could you furnish us with a copy?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Sure. We'll take a moment because it is very important.

Are you with me now, Mr. Lyon, on this document? It is a February 28, 1984 release from the Governor's office. In the second paragraph, it says: "Governor Bill Clinton's office today announced the following appointments: James Atkins of Little Rock, State Banking Board. Mr. Atkins replaces William C. Lyon of Fordyce, who resigned." Do you see that?

Mr. LYON. No, I do not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You don't see that?

Mr. LYON. Mine says, "Announced the following appointments."

Senator SARBANES. The second one, Mr. Lyon, James Atkins.

Mr. LYON. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Are you with me now? Mr. Atkins of Little Rock, State Banking Board. Atkins replaces William C. Lyon, that's you, of Fordyce, Arkansas, who resigned. OK?

You look puzzled, is this inconsistent with your recollection?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What do you think, that this is not accurate?

Mr. LYON. James Atkins is a friend of mine and was on the State Bank Board at the same time that I was on the board.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's right. He's not some $50,000 contributor from Augusta.

Now, Mr. Lyon, Atkins resigned a month after that and he was replaced by Mr. Hobgood. Do you know who Mr. Hobgood is? Hello Mr. Lyon?

Mr. LYON. I'm looking for Mr. Hobgood?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Don't look for him on that document because Mr. Hobgood comes in a month later. Your counsel, I believe, is providing you with a document that shows that on April 3rd, Mr. Hobgood replaced Mr. Atkins who resigned. Mr. Hobgood had been on the board, had he not?

Mr. LYON. I don't know. I am trying to answer your question, Counselor. When you say Mr. Hobgood, I do not recollect a Mr. Hobgood. If I knew his first name, it might help.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Jim, it says here; could be James.

Mr. LYON. James Hobgood. Where is he from?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Arkadelphia. Is that near Augusta?

Mr. LYON. No. The man from Augusta was, I believe, Collins or Collier.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It's not Hobgood and it's not Atkins, correct?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now more to the point, Mr. Lyon, the Rose Law Firm is not retained by the Madison Bank to do any work on the preferred stock deal until 1985, over a year after you have resigned, well over a year after you resigned.

Further, the officers of Madison Bank, including Mr. Latham, have provided testimony to the effect that the preferred stock proposition was not considered and was not researched until the spring of 1985, well over a year after you say you had your conversation with Mr. McDougal about that subject.

Now with respect to the concept of preferred stock, you indicated that your reaction to Mr. McDougal or your reaction personally, when you learned about this preferred stock proposition, was that this was some kind of a scam.

Mr. LYON. No. No. I am telling you that I don't know what the deal really was. I do not know what the deal was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You're saying that you didn't understand it?

Mr. LYON. Preferred stock, I said I thought, but I didn't know. I do not know anything about the preferred stock, except that they get paid before the common stockholders. Now that's all I know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It is your general feeling, because of this understanding of what happens with preferred stock, that maybe there was something wrong with the transaction?

Mr. LYON. Maybe.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But you have absolutely no reason——

Mr. LYON. But I'm telling you that I do not know.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You have no reason, as you sit here before us, no matter how your prior statements have been interpreted here today, to believe that the preferred stock offering was in some way improper or a scam or in some way untoward. Is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. The Cease and Desist Order that you were shown here earlier, did Mr. McDougal ever mention such a thing to you at any point when you were on the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No one asked you to do anything improper or, for that matter, to look at that situation or to become involved in any way with that situation. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. That's correct. The only thing that I know about the Cease and Desist was strictly a very minor conversation, probably 15 years ago, and I had nothing to do and know nothing about any Cease and Desist Order.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were not happy with Governor Clinton when you were asked to leave the Bank Board. Is that fair to say?

Mr. LYON. That's fair to say. It's fair to say that I was not happy with Governor Clinton when I was asked to leave the Bank Board, but I wasn't all that unhappy either.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When did you, for the first time, make an allegation that Mr. McDougal had asked you to resign in conjunction with voting in some way, if you were to be appointed to the savings and loan?

Mr. LYON. Sir, I didn't make an allegation.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When did you first tell this story?

Mr. LYON. I told the truth when several members of whatever Gestapo you all have coming at me, asked me what I knew about Jim McDougal, and I told them everything that I knew.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We don't have a Gestapo here, I know you are trying to be funny, but that isn't too funny to me.

So I'm asking you again, when for the first time any place, Mr. Lyon, did you come forward with the story that you have told here today, about Mr. McDougal's request that you take particular action for Madison Bank?

Mr. LYON. I do not remember. It wasn't a story that I told.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your version, your recollection.

Mr. LYON. My recollection, to me, it's the truth.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you ever tell it to the newspapers?

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you ever tell it to any investigators?

Mr. LYON. To investigators? Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you ever tell it to any investigators before this Senate Committee asked you about it?

Mr. LYON. Is this called the Senate Committee?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This is the Senate here, this building is the Senate.

Mr. LYON. I'm sure that I have, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. About how long ago?

Mr. LYON. I have no idea when this first came up, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you ever testify under oath before you gave a deposition to this Committee about this subject?

Mr. LYON. I do not know the first time that I gave it, if I testified under oath. I'm simply stating what I recollect happened and how it happened at the time, and that's all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You've also made a statement that McDougal enlisted your help in connection with some problem you were having with State regulators regarding your fledgling brewery business. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. I do not remember asking Mr. Jim McDougal to help on that matter. However, I feel sure that I would have, and I did because I would have asked him to help me in that matter, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I understand what you're saying now, you have no recollection of having asked him to do anything. You have no recollection that he did anything but you feel kind of sure that you must have?

Mr. LYON. Sir, if you wish to testify, you're putting words into my mouth.

Senator SARBANES. What is your recollection, Mr. Lyon, on that subject?

Mr. LYON. On what subject?

Senator SARBANES. On Mr. McDougal helping you on the brewery matter.

Mr. LYON. What is my recollection?

Senator SARBANES. Yes, sir.

Mr. LYON. Immediately or when it actually happened?

Senator SARBANES. Either way.

Mr. LYON. My recollection is Jim McDougal and I used to drink coffee every once in awhile, when I banked at Madison Guaranty. He would invite me in for a cup of coffee. I feel sure that I told him about the problem, the brewery was floundering and I thought if I could sell the beer at the brewery along with food, which was not legal in Arkansas at that time, that we might make it.

I feel sure that I told Jim about it, I feel sure that I asked him to help me. I also honestly do not know when I asked him.

Senator SARBANES. But you do recall asking him to help you?

Mr. LYON. No, that's what I'm telling you. I don't recall asking Jim McDougal to help me. I'm telling you the truth. I know I would have, but it happened a long time ago.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Lyon, is it fair to say that you believe you probably did this?

Mr. LYON. Oh, sure.

The CHAIRMAN. Because he was your banker?

Mr. LYON. Not because he was my banker, necessarily, but I would have asked anybody to help.

The CHAIRMAN. But he was the banker as it related to this particular transaction, so you would have explained it to him?

Mr. LYON. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So what year would this have been?

Mr. LYON. Oh, man, you know the years come and go.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was it before or after he asked you to get off the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. I feel sure that it was probably afterwards.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Afterwards?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So after you got upset about being asked to get off the Bank Board, then you continued to have a cozy relationship, a friendly relationship with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. LYON. Thank you, yes, I still bank there. I still owed the bank and Jim McDougal was still a friend of mine. As I told you, I was disappointed in being taken off the Bank Board, but in another way I really was not. And Jim McDougal was still my banker and my friend.

Senator SARBANES. He had been your friend in college too, is that right?

Mr. LYON. He was a friend in college to a certain extent. I didn't know him all that well, but, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, I want to get to a question that was asked you at your deposition, which I did not attend, but I'm reading from page 41 at line 18, where you were asked this question by Majority Counsel:

Question: So you were attempting to get this bill passed through Senator Scott for the brewery that you owned in Little Rock, and at the same time, Mr. McDougal wanted you to invest in a brewery, move your brewery to Castle Grande, and so you were concerned about the restrictions on both places in terms of the manufacture of beer and the sale of it on premises, correct?

Answer: Yes, sir.

Do you see that?

Mr. LYON. I see that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have a little question now in your mind about whether you should have answered yes to that kind of a leading question?

Mr. LYON. Counselor, if there is one thing a very good attorney can do, he can put a little word in there that you wonder about.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Which little word troubles you that Majority Counsel put in?

Mr. LYON. On both.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's let Mr. Lyon answer the question, and if it's not answered satisfactorily, you will have an opportunity to ask again. You know, he is testifying to the best of his ability.

Go ahead, Mr. Lyon.

Mr. LYON. I don't really have any hesitation on that. I see what you're talking about on both places, but at the time, man, when your back's against the wall, you don't care if it's on all three places and there wasn't a third. You understand what I mean?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No, I don't. I can tell you that I'm completely puzzled by what you just said.

Mr. LYON. OK. If I could have gotten the regulation passed that we put the brewery in Maple Creek, or Fordyce, or Timbuktu, then I probably at that time would have done it.

The thing that I was trying to do, at the location that I was at, in Little Rock, Arkansas, was to get a regulation passed where I could sell and serve beer and food. Now it's legal, but at that time it was not legal.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me back up a couple of steps. First, the request that you had to serve food at your place of operation in Little Rock, that was turned down, you never got that through, right?

Mr. LYON. Never got that through.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Second, when you were asked this question, you said, at the same time that there was a bill that was put through on this issue, McDougal wanted you to move your brewery to Castle Grande. Do you see that?

Mr. LYON. No, but that's true.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I don't think it is true, and I don't think you're being careful with your testimony under oath, and this is why—

The CHAIRMAN. Counselor, I'm going to let you come back to this.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I'd like to finish it now, if I might.

The CHAIRMAN. If you're going to pursue this line, and finish it within a few minutes, we'll pursue this. Go ahead.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask you something. I think when you make your statement that he's not being truthful, I don't think that to date, there has not been anything I have seen that would indicate that Mr. Lyon has not been doing anything other than attempting to answer questions truthfully.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I haven't said there was anything deliberate, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. When you're saying untruthful, the clear characterization—let's ask the question. I am going to let you proceed, though you are over the time limit. Continue. We will end this particular line of questioning.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Lyon, do you know when it was that the bill was withdrawn that you referred to in this answer: "Senator Scott's bill"?

Mr. LYON. Counselor, I do not know when it was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me see if I can help you.

Mr. LYON. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. According to the House report, page 11 on the subject, it says, "After referral to the State agency's Committee, the bill was withdrawn on February 18, 1985," OK? February 18th is the date that the bill was withdrawn.

Sir, the problem that I have in your answer is your reference to Mr. McDougal and Castle Grande, because, let me show you—this is the deed whereby Mr. McDougal and the Madison Bank buys the property that's called IDC from the Industrial Development Company. It is dated the 4th day of October, 1985, several months after the time that the bill that you referenced was withdrawn by the Arkansas legislature.

Now that my time is up, Mr. Chairman, I will certainly reserve further questioning for a later opportunity.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm not going to give into the temptation of asking so what?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I could explain so what, or I will let you do it if you would ask that.

The CHAIRMAN. I have to tell you——

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me go back.

In fairness to you, Mr. Lyon, let me help you clarify some of what just went on. You were shown a document marked DKSJN 26346. It is a press release indicating a number of appointments to the State Banking Board. You remember being asked about that a few minutes ago?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Ben-Veniste, I guess, was trying to suggest you were wrong in your testimony about who replaced you, but I actually think you are right. Why don't we see if we can get at the facts here.

Your testimony in your deposition was that Mr. McDougal told you that you were going to be replaced by a man from Augusta named Collier or Collins, or something of that sort, who was a big campaign donor. That's what Mr. McDougal told you?

Mr. LYON. That's what he told me. I didn't know that as a fact, but that's what he told me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If you look at the press release of February 28, 1984, I think that is exactly what it shows. It shows that you had your term. You resigned, which is, of course, what Mr. McDougal had told you that you would have to do, right?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There was a Mr. Atkins who served with you on the board, right?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It seems what they did was they moved his term over to replace your term which would normally have expired at the end of 1984, which is the second paragraph. Then they made Mr. Collier from Augusta, which is the man you identified, they put him in then to substitute for Mr. Atkins who then had a longer term. So that what happened is exactly what you said happened. They moved the chairs over on the Bank Board. You resigned. They took Atkins out of the term that ended in 1988 and moved him over to fill your term out, which ended in 1984, and then they put Collier in to serve a full term to 1988.

I think you would agree with me that what is contained on this document you were shown is exactly what you said happened. The bottom line is Collier came in from Augusta and he was the new face on the board that replaced you, right? That's your memory, right? Your memory is that McDougal told you Collier was the guy who would come in to replace you from Augusta?

Mr. LYON. Collier or Collins, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It turns out that your memory is correct in this respect.

I also want to clarify, Mr. Ben-Veniste had asked you some questions about whether Mrs. Clinton was retained by the bank, Madison Bank, in 1983 or 1984, when you had this conversation with Mr. McDougal.

In fact, what the record reveals is that Madison had been a client of the Rose Law Firm—Madison Bank, not the savings and loan, the bank had been a client of the Rose Law Firm since at least 1982. In fact, I get this from Mrs. Clinton's own statements in the interviews she made to the Office of Inspector General of the RTC, which is at I believe the third page where Mrs. Clinton said she believed Madison then, as Madison National Bank, had been a client of the RLF since 1982, and that Vincent Foster had been the responsible attorney.

So again, your memory, which is that Mr. McDougal said that Mrs. Clinton was on retainer at the bank is essentially corroborated, confirmed by this document, that the firm had been on retainer not for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan but for the bank.

You have come up here, you are testifying under oath. I want to be quite clear about this. This incident with respect to your removal from the Bank Board, and I'm going to try to lay out for you my understanding of what you've told us. I don't want to put words in your mouth. If you want to correct me or you want to change something, you tell me. I will tell you first what I understand your testimony is.

I understand you to have said that Mr. McDougal met with you at the brewery. You went outside to talk about this issue of the preferred stock. That Mr. McDougal said he wanted you to leave the Bank Board and go over to the Savings and Loan Board so that you would vote his way on the preferred stock issue. Do I have it right up to that point?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Your answer to him was "hell no." Is that right?

Mr. LYON. Not "no," but "hell no."

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't want to do it because you were not comfortable with this preferred stock arrangement, right?

Mr. LYON. It wasn't really that. I don't know an awfully lot about that stock deal. I didn't want to do it simply because he seemed to think that he could control me or here, I'm going to snatch you over here, and put you there, and you vote this way.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You thought that was improper?

Mr. LYON. I'm an honorable man, you know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you understand that it is dishonorable for somebody who is in a public position to be voting out of a sense of obligation to somebody else. You are supposed to do what's in the public good, right?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's why you said, "hell no."

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When Mr. McDougal talked to you about the preferred stock, he told you, in this conversation, that he had Mrs. Clinton on retainer at the bank, right?

Mr. LYON. He told me, not necessarily about preferred stock. He told me that he had her on a retainer, and I believe he mentioned a figure, $25,000 a year. And then later on, probably the preferred stock came up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the reference to Mrs. Clinton was not specifically with respect to the preferred stock issue, it was in general in describing——

Mr. LYON. A general discussion. He mentioned it, he seemed to be a little proud of it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He also told you, I think you said, Bill had an interest or Bill wanted this to happen too?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood Bill to be Bill Clinton?

Mr. LYON. I perceived that, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you said, "hell no" to Mr. McDougal, he then told you that you would have to resign from the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, a couple of months later, you were asked to resign, right?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By Governor Clinton?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Out of the blue?

Mr. LYON. Out of the blue. As far as I was concerned, it was out of the blue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were not given any explanation by Governor Clinton when he called you up and asked for your resignation?

Mr. LYON. He told me simply that Jim had told him that I would resign if he asked me to, that he really did need the appointment.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So when the Governor called you up to ask for your resignation, he was the one who mentioned having had a conversation with Jim?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you resigned, right?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think we've established, it took us a little while to do it, that you weren't happy about it, but you didn't lose a lot of sleep over it either?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And is it fair to say you don't bear any particular ill will to anybody 10 years later about this Bank Board issue?

Mr. LYON. I have no ill will toward anyone about any of the situations.

May I say one thing?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sure.

Mr. LYON. This gentleman right here proved a point that I have been telling everybody and telling everybody if you'll think about it. In that in trying to get the brew pub for my brewery, it was a different deal than whatever happened to Castle Grande.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's good. I want to get to the brew pub issue.

Mr. LYON. I appreciate you doing that, thank you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let's be clear about this because there are two separate issues. There's an issue, at one point you had a brew pub in Fordyce. You had a brewery in Fordyce?

Mr. LYON. No, it was in Little Rock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sorry, in Little Rock. You wanted to set it up like a restaurant where you could sell food and sell beer, right?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You went to a Senator, Senator Scott, and asked him to help you get the legislation through?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He agreed to do it?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also believe you spoke to Mr. McDougal. You are not 100 percent sure, but you think you probably spoke to Mr. McDougal and asked for his help?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to put up on the Elmo a letter from Mr. McDougal to Betsey Wright, dated December 12, 1984, which is accompanied by, in fact, the bill that we have been talking about by Senator Scott. It says: Dear Betsey—

Do you know who Betsey Wright was?

Mr. LYON. I know who Betsey Wright was. I do not know, nor have I ever met Ms. Wright.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who did you understand Betsey Wright to be back in 1984?

Mr. LYON. Basically she was Bill Clinton's aide or secretary. He depended on her quite a bit apparently.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says here:

Dear Betsey,

Governor Clinton has made a commitment concerning this bill, which I need to discuss with you at your convenience. Best wishes.

Sincerely, James McDougal.

Did you ever see this before?

Mr. LYON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that this tends to confirm your memory that you probably had a conversation with Mr. McDougal about helping you with this bill?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I gather what happened is, as Mr. Ben-Veniste helpfully pointed out, that the bill actually never made it through the Senate, it got pulled back?

Mr. LYON. It got pulled back.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So it never reached the Governor's desk?

Mr. LYON. No, it never reached—never went anywhere really.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was something that was part of Senator Scott's responsibilities, not Governor Clinton's?

Mr. LYON. Yes, Senator Scott is a State Senator.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now there was a separate deal, or second deal, or second issue that arises with McDougal where McDougal was trying to get you to buy a piece of property in an area he had purchased called Castle Grande. We have now established that was a separate second incident, right?

Mr. LYON. Apparently, yes, but it was within kind of that time-frame.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Within a year?

Mr. LYON. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But in your mind, you see them as being connected there in the same general timeframe. OK? All right.

With respect to this second issue, am I correct that McDougal had a number of conversations with you, trying to get you to buy a piece of property and set up a brewery within this Castle Grande property?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, you had done some timber removal at Castle Grande?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. By the way, everybody referred to that area as Castle Grande, a well-known part of the area south of Little Rock.

Mr. LYON. Very well-advertised.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Very well-advertised.

Now with respect to the opening of this brewery, and I just have a moment or two left, let me just finish this up. Am I correct that one of the problems that you had, or one of the issues was whether it was a dry county or part of a dry part of the county?

Mr. LYON. There were several issues with it. We did find out that it was in a dry county, yes, or a dry part of the county.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have any discussions with Mr. McDougal about what he would try to do to get permission to open a brewery in this dry part of the county?

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal was trying very hard to get rid of—it was a large shed. He told me that he thought I could handle it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you say?

Mr. LYON. I told him that I really wasn't interested because Arkansas is a Southern State, a lot of Baptists. You get in an election like that, you know, I really didn't want any part of that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So eventually you lost interest in buying that piece of property?

Mr. LYON. No. It started, he asked if I would move the brewery, be interested in moving it because he had a building, and that's when we looked at the shed, Mr. Ward and I. It didn't necessarily occur to me that he was going to sell me the building, that I was going to do all of the improvements, until it came out later, and I really did not have the finances to do anything like that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said you went to look with Mr. Ward. Who was Mr. Ward?

Mr. LYON. Mr. Ward—well, I'll tell you who he is now, but I didn't know. Let me tell you who he was then.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who did you know him to be then?

Mr. LYON. He was a very fine gentleman that I thought sold real estate for Madison Guaranty.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You went with him a few times to look at the building on the property, and then eventually you decided you didn't want to go through with doing the improvements.

Mr. LYON. To look at the shed. It was not a building.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Last question.

During the period of time that you were considering getting into this, or considering moving your brewery or putting up a brewery there, did you know that Mr. McDougal had asked the Rose Law Firm to do some legal work concerning how you might get permission to open up a brewery there?

Mr. LYON. No, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Mr. Chairman, my time is up.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lyon, I am concerned and disturbed by your reference to Gestapo in terms of contacts with this Committee. What contacts have you had that might lead you to make that statement?

Mr. LYON. Over a period of years, sir, there were two investigations. Sometimes when you're in the position that I'm in, knowing James McDougal and banking at Madison Guaranty, you can get confused about who is who. So I've had contact with various FBI agents over a period of time, and then on this Committee, and you feel like, look, I've answered every question I know.

I'm not directing that, and please do not take offense.

Senator SARBANES. What contacts have you had with staff of this Committee?

Mr. LYON. If it's the same Committee I am thinking about, two gentlemen came down and talked to me for several hours. The interrogatories, is that what you call them, 2 to 3 hours, deposition, I'm sorry, 2 or 3 hours.

We've been calling back and forth trying to get airplane tickets.

Senator SARBANES. Two gentlemen from this Committee came down to Little Rock and had a deposition with you?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator SARBANES. I thought that's what you just told me?

Mr. LYON. That I just told you what? Came down to Little Rock?

Sir, I apologize. That was a different, that was not this Committee. The people that I was telling you about, OK.

Senator SARBANES. Who were they from?

Mr. LYON. Mr. Starr's Committee, OK.

Senator SARBANES. OK.

So what have your contacts been with this Committee? Can you identify that in your mind?

Mr. LYON. Not really, not this Committee. I can't really identify them right now. My contact with this Committee, as far as I know, has only been a telephone deposition which lasted several hours.

Now when I said what I said, I wish to apologize to this Committee. I don't necessarily wish to apologize to the other Committee, the one in Arkansas.

Senator SARBANES. But you said it to us.

Mr. LYON. That's correct. I don't blame you at all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me go back, if I may, to the issue which is very important to us, about your conversation with Mr. Jim McDougal 2 months or so before you received a telephone call from then-Governor Clinton, requesting that you tender your resignation. Earlier, you testified that Mr. McDougal had this preferred stock concept that he wanted to get acted on, that he wanted to get approval for, correct?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew he wasn't talking to you about Madison Bank, he was talking to you about Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan where the preferred stock proposal was going to be made, correct?

Mr. LYON. My assumption at that time that he was talking to me about the stock was that Madison Guaranty, which he was out of the bank by then, I assume, and this was the savings and loan.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This is the savings and loan. The bank he had been out of for some time. So in terms of Mr. Chertoff's helpful information about the Rose Law Firm and Madison Bank, that's got nothing to do with this conversation, right?

Mr. LYON. I do not know where the Rose Law Firm is. I do not know anyone in the Rose Law Firm and I don't want anybody to tell me where it is.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I understand that. But what I want to get from you, sir, is that it's clear in your mind that what you claimed occurred at that time had to do with a preferred stock proposal involving Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. That was the focus of your discussion?

Mr. LYON. As I remember it, yes. Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, or whatever you call it, in Little Rock, Arkansas.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. At that time, according to my notes of your testimony here this afternoon, you said that Mr. McDougal told you that Mrs. Clinton was involved in the matter, that Mr. McDougal had hired her, and that McDougal thought they were going to get it through, but they still wanted to get you on the Savings and Loan Board so that they could count on your support, correct?

Mr. LYON. Sir, I stand on what I testified. You are either going over testimony or you are going through too many sentences. Keep it kind of simple, sir.

Senator SARBANES. We want to be very clear about this.

Mr. LYON. I've tried to make it very clear.

Senator SARBANES. Now what's the answer to that question.

Mr. LYON. It wasn't a question, it was a series of questions.

Senator SARBANES. Was that a fair statement of what transpired in the conversation between you and Mr. McDougal?

Mr. LYON. I'm sorry, are you asking a question?

Senator SARBANES. Yes. Was that a fair statement of what transpired in the conversation between you and Mr. McDougal?

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we, in fairness to the witness, put the question to him again Counselor. If you could break it down so that we don't make it a three-part or four-part, I think maybe we would have more luck.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me break it down.

First, we know we are talking about Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Second, Mr. McDougal told you that Mrs. Clinton was working on that issue for him, correct?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Third, that Mr. McDougal said to you that although they thought they were going to get this concept approved, they wanted to put you on the Savings and Loan Board so they could get your support?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now my point is, and as I have been sort of invited to do, let me make it clear that the Rose Firm was not retained by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan until April 1985, and that Mr. Latham testified that they had considered the preferred stock possibility for raising funds in the weeks before the Rose Firm was retained to help them. So I ask you, sir, do you think you may have been confused in the testimony that you've given?

Mr. LYON. I've given the best testimony that I know. Unfortunately, I can't tell you that, you know, in June 1954 that I was somewhere, and that seems to me to be the way you're coming at me, sir. I've told you the truth. I've told you where it happened. I just can't tell you when it happened.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lyon, let me pursue this for a minute. Your conversation with Mr. McDougal took place before you went off the Bank Board, correct?

Mr. LYON. That's pretty obvious, yes.

Senator SARBANES. I know it's obvious but I just want to get it on the record.

Mr. LYON. OK, yes.

Senator SARBANES. You went off the Bank Board in the beginning of 1984?

Mr. LYON. How do you know that, sir?

Senator SARBANES. I'll ask you the questions. You seem to have been replaced, in this release from the Governor's office, which dates February 28, 1984, and announces that you've been replaced on the Bank Board by James Atkins.

Mr. LYON. He could have replaced me 8 months later. Only if we had the letter of resignation would we know when I resigned because I resigned the same day he asked me to, and that should be in the Governor's office.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that was a year or so before your term was due to expire, isn't that right?

Mr. LYON. That was what?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That was a year or so before your term was to expire, do you remember that?

Mr. LYON. No, sir, I do not remember how much longer I had on the term.

Senator SARBANES. Are you asserting that you just don't know when you went off the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Am I asserting?

Senator SARBANES. That you don't know when you went off the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. I'm not sure, no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We'll help you out.

Mr. LYON. You've got it. You asked it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have the records that you supplied the Committee. Take a look at that, take a moment. Does that help your recollection, the minutes themselves?

Mr. LYON. I would have to sit—I'm reading them. Incidentally, I do believe that I know Mr. Hobgood, James Hobgood.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's fine. We are now asking you when you resigned from the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. I do not know when I resigned.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Look at the document we provided you, which are the minutes.

Mr. LYON. According to this, the minutes of this meeting, they are April 17, 1984, these are the minutes that I sent you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You sent them to us?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Does that help you? You don't think these are erroneous or a forgery? No one is trying to trick you with respect to when you resigned from the Bank Board.

Mr. LYON. No. It simply tells me that the Bank Board had a meeting April 17th. That doesn't mean that I can tell you that at 2:30 in the afternoon of April 4th, that I resigned from the Bank Board, unless you let me read it. It may say that in there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We are not asking you for the moment you resigned, or the day of the week.

The CHAIRMAN. Your time is well over, but I want to get—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I want to—

The CHAIRMAN. Please, you're well over and I want to get to the basis. Are we going to play trick ball? If you're contending that his resignation became official as of April 17th then I don't think Mr. Lyon has any argument with you, if that's what your contention is. And the Chair would like to know, is that what your point is?

Senator SARBANES. Clearly, Mr. Lyon had resigned from the Bank Board prior to April 17th.

The CHAIRMAN. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. Now the Governor announced his resignation on February 28, 1984.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And these minutes show that Mr. Hobgood is completing the unexpired term of Mr. William Lyon. So unless they were both sitting in the same chair in that meeting, Mr. Lyon was gone and Mr. Hobgood was there.

The CHAIRMAN. Look, Counselor, the record speaks for itself. The meeting of April 17th indicates that there have been two newly appointed members of the board, Mr. Franklin Collier of Augusta and Mr. James Hobgood of Arkadelphia.

Now, as it relates to the date, I'm going to ask Mr. Lyon to the best of his ability, not now, but if he could furnish the Committee, and I'll ask our investigators to see what day, because he seems to have said quite clearly that he remembers sending his resignation in on the date that he spoke to the Governor. Is that true?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. So on the same date the Governor spoke to you, you sent it in?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Obviously the meeting of April 17th memorializes that there are two new appointees. The release of that was not made, as you point out, some time thereafter in February.

Senator SARBANES. Now, Mr. Lyon, you saw earlier the release from the Governor's office on February 28, 1984, remember, when you looked at that here today?

Mr. LYON. The release from the Governor's office?

Senator SARBANES. I saw that.

Mr. LYON. I saw that.

Senator SARBANES. Here today.

The CHAIRMAN. One of the documents provided to you, Mr. Lyon, is a copy of the release in which the appointments were announced.

Mr. LYON. Yes, I saw that.

Senator SARBANES. That was dated February 28, 1984, correct?

Mr. LYON. We think that's correct, yes. We can look.

The CHAIRMAN. It's right up on the Elmo. It says, February 28th, Release.

Mr. LYON. OK, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. So it's reasonable to presume that your resignation had taken place before that date since the Governor is announcing on that date that you're being replaced and had resigned?

Mr. LYON. Yes, that would be reasonable.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. May I just follow up in the time that would be remaining if we got the additional time the Majority had?

The CHAIRMAN. Counselor, you had more than the additional time, and if I hadn't stepped in, you would have still been arguing about some date as it related to who knows what.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I think what we ought to do is just stick to when the red light goes on, shift it over, then we don't get into this. I think that's easier, because Mr. Chertoff ran over and Mr. Ben-Veniste is running over. I think it is probably easier if we just follow the red light.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lyon, in your areas of responsibility, you became quite familiar, obviously, with your duties as a member of the State Banking Board. And from time-to-time you had occasion to visit the significance of Cease and Desist Orders. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Would you clarify your familiarity and your particular responsibility?

Mr. LYON. My responsibility was simply to serve on the board to help the Commissioner in anything that he had.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Was this a salaried position?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did you have an advisory capacity?

Mr. LYON. It was an advisory capacity, they paid mileage. We had nothing to do, as far as I know, when I was there, I never saw a Cease and Desist Order or had anything to do with them, except as a banker. I knew that they were deadly, and when I say that, if you got one, you'd better listen to it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I couldn't agree with you more. I'm familiar with their existence, having been in the banking business for 25 years. They are not something that a board of directors ignores because there's a personal liability associated with them. Is that not correct that the board does act in a fiduciary responsibility?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I'm curious to know, this advisory capacity, while you weren't the director of banking, you sat as a review board, or you were informed at some level of the areas of activity of the responsibility. Otherwise, there wouldn't have been much point in having a board, would there?

Mr. LYON. We sat basically as a review board for the Bank Commissioner. The Bank Commissioner of the State of Arkansas is a very powerful gentleman.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you are the sounding board. You have some familiarity with what went on?

Mr. LYON. That is correct. If he has a problem with a bank, there is a chance that he will tell the board. There's also a chance that he will not, and handle that himself. He's over the examiners.

Senator MURKOWSKI. In your testimony today, you made a statement relative to the problems associated with the bank with regard to unsecured loans, out-of-territory loans, and too many loans to politicians. And I think you indicated some names—Bill Clinton, Governor Tucker, and Senator Fulbright. Do you know what the disposition of those loans were? Because obviously you chose to highlight them as being examples of loans that were subject to criticism by the examiners.

Mr. LYON. No, I did not choose to highlight them. I was asked who I heard and anything that I would tell you about that incident is strictly hearsay, a brief, brief conversation.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And you are not aware of those loans being classified?

Mr. LYON. I am not aware that they even had those loans in the bank, Senator.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So that was just an example?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Clearly in the bank, and I'm referring now to one of the exhibits that I think has been provided you, it shows a loan to Hillary Rodham, Little Rock, $26,792. This is on a report, June 27, 1983, it says to be paid off within 60 days and then it says from Security Bank loan. Do you have any familiarity, does that ring a bell? If you saw that, what would that mean to you as a banker?

Mr. LYON. That would mean that the Securities Bank would pay it off to that bank within 60 days to me.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That bank. I was referring to the examination classification of the Madison Bank and Trust Company.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, that is on page 15 of the document you are holding.

Senator MURKOWSKI. On page 15 of the document. One could assume then that this particular loan, which was classified, was paid off by a loan from another bank.

Mr. LYON. Correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I am interested in this letter from the Arkansas State Bank Department signed by a Marlin D. Jackson, Bank Commissioner. To your knowledge, was Mr. Jackson associated with the Security Bank in, is it Paragoula?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. How was he associated with that bank?

Mr. LYON. At that time, I believe he was a majority stockholder of that bank.

Senator MURKOWSKI. He wrote this letter to Charles Campbell, Vice President, Security Bank, and the date of that was November 1985. To your knowledge, at that time, was he still a significant shareholder of the bank, or had he put his stock in trust as Banking Commissioner for the State Bank Department of Arkansas?

Mr. LYON. To my knowledge, at that time, when he was Bank Commissioner, he had put his stock in trust.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I see, but he hadn't sold it. The trust controlled the stock, and it was a blind trust, do you know?

Mr. LYON. I believe it was, according to what he told me, yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You indicated that Mr. Jackson was a friend of yours, and when asked about this particular letter and the appropriateness of it, you said something to the effect that no, it was not right. I assume you were referring to the fact that as Banking Commissioner, to use the stationery to write a letter to obviously an associate, because I assume Mr. Campbell, Vice President of the Security Bank of Paragoula was known to Mr. Jackson and had been in the bank for some time, and had been a previous associate of Mr. Jackson, when Mr. Jackson was active in his ownership of that stock. So they knew each other?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So what we have here is a case where Mr. Jackson is using his office, his letterhead, to enclose an Extension Agreement which Governor Bill Clinton signed the previous day.

It further goes on to state, "It is my understanding that Jim McDougal, a close friend as well as business associate of Governor Clinton, is to forward to you a check for $2,322.42 representing the interest due on the note." Why would Mr. McDougal pay Governor Clinton's interest on the note? Do you have any idea?

Mr. LYON. I have no idea.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But clearly that's what the letter states. It further states, "that he intends to make"—it's blocked out here—but I think it's a "principal reduction in addition to the interest payment," and that principal reduction—maybe I am reading $25,000. I'll have to ask the personal staff to review that.

Furthermore, "after the approval of the agreement, please return the appropriate copies so that it may be delivered to Governor Clinton. Also please request copies of the receipt to me," being Mr. Jackson, the Banking Commissioner.

And then further, "So that Jim McDougal may know that the proper credit has been given, please provide Jim with a copy of the receipt for the payment, of the interest and principal along with the Extension of the notes."

So it's pretty well your opinion then that this loan, which was previously held by Hillary Rodham Clinton, in an amount of $26,792, that was on the Madison Bank and Trust Company portfolio, was paid off with a loan from the Security Bank of Paragoula, which Mr. Jackson had been formerly associated with, at least a large stock ownership, and was now Commissioner for the State of Arkansas?

Mr. LYON. It does seem that way, yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Now, as a banker, can you provide for us, upon recollection, the appropriateness of having another bank pay off a loan that's classified relative to aren't we just transferring the problem basically of one nonpayment to another financial institution that has to bear the brunt of that?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That's my impression too.

I'm curious to know, when you talked to Mr. McDougal concerning the particular and the rather delicate conversation where he suggested you leave the advisory position on the State Bank Board, and take the position on the Federal Board, which would assist the S&L in the issuance of preferred stock, was there any mention of any consideration? In other words, he was asking you to step down and do something else. Is there a salary that goes with the S&L Board position? Did he say that he would look favorable—I mean, what was the basis? Was he just asking you to do a favor? Or was there any talk or any recollection of consideration for doing that?

Mr. LYON. I think Mr. McDougal was asking me simply to do a favor. There was no mention of any consideration.

The fact that at the time he didn't really understand the difference between a bank and a savings and loan did disturb me.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That's evident now.

Well, when you recall having sat on that board as an adviser to the Bank Commissioner, I assume that you were aware that a Cease and Desist Order had been initiated against Madison Bank?

Mr. LYON. Barely, just barely aware of it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. How long did you sit on that board? I'm kind of curious in a sense. How long does it take that board to act once they issue a Cease and Desist Order and get back and advise you folks, who are in an advisory capacity, of what action if any had been taken?

Mr. LYON. I sat on the board I believe from 1980 until some time in 1984, right in that area. I knew nothing ever about any Cease and Desist Order, except this one.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What did you know about this one?

Mr. LYON. We were walking into the meeting, and I asked, since I knew they had bought the bank—and I'm talking about "they," Jim McDougal and Jim Guy Tucker and another gentleman named Steve Smith—how they were doing, I was asking, really. They said, "You know that they're under a Cease and Desist Order." And I said, "No, I did not. Why?" They told me what I told you, and we went on into the meeting. That's all I remember.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator?

Senator MURKOWSKI. My last question is in reference to your deposition. I think this is a question by Mr. Gesell:

Question: How, when you say he was bragging about it, did it come up? In discussion with respect to the brewery? Or was it with respect to some other business deal that you had with him?

Answer: No, look. What it boils down to is whether, right or wrong, Jim McDougal thought that he owned Bill Clinton. And that's what it boiled down to. I don't know when he told me all of this, what year it was, but he did tell me that.

Question: He told you that he did own Bill Clinton?

Answer: That's correct.

Do you recall that deposition?

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal, right or wrong, said that several times; yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Boxer.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR BARBARA BOXER

Senator BOXER. Thank you very much.

Mr. Lyon, you have said, I think very candidly, that years come and go, and you're having trouble pinpointing exact years. I think the reason it's important is, when we take your testimony and lay it down beside the facts of the timing of this, it simply doesn't add up. It doesn't mean that what you remember isn't accurate. But it says to me—and I think this is very important, and it goes to what Senator Murkowski just said. Mr. McDougal was a braggart, and he said things that weren't true. Because clearly, when he told you that Hillary Clinton was working on this preferred stock matter, the evidence shows you that she was not. He said she was.

I don't question your memory on that. And the fact that Senator Murkowski brings out the fact that Mr. McDougal bragged that he owned the Clintons, that's the point. The facts are that he was bragging, and it gets back to Mr. Lyon's testimony, which Senator Murkowski didn't hear in the beginning—when you said he was a braggart, that he was grandiose, and all the other things that you put on the record.

Now, what we have here, and I would like to put into the record—I see the Chairman isn't here; maybe Senator Shelby could help me—is a report done by Jay Stephens, a Republican U.S. Attorney for Pillsbury Madison & Sutro. I would like to ask unanimous consent that this page be placed into the record, if I might, and that's page 6 of that report.

Senator SHELBY [presiding]. I think that report has already been put in the record.

Senator BOXER. Actually, one paragraph out of that page. It will take about six lines.

Senator SHELBY. The whole report, if I understand, if the Senator from California would yield—the whole report has been made a part of the record.

Senator BOXER. Thank you. Then I will quote it. It will take a little bit longer.

Mr. Chertoff said something that the record doesn't bear out. He said that Madison Guaranty—that the bank was working through that whole entire time, that Rose Law Firm was working through that whole entire time for Mr. McDougal. That is not shown.

I will put into the record and I will state it, since I can't put the document in: "Apart from this case, no evidence has been located suggesting that the Rose Law Firm represented other McDougal-controlled entities until 1985, when it started to represent Madison Guaranty."

Basically through 1981 and 1982, then, they didn't do any more work. Here is a situation where you are saying that Mr. McDougal, before you were asked to resign, told you Hillary Rodham was working for Madison, and in fact that wasn't the case. And that's what's really important and troubling here. It was, it seems to me, a case of showing off, bragging, throwing around Hillary Clinton's name, when in fact the record shows she wasn't working for them.

When the Governor called you to tell you that he was going to ask you to resign, did you tell him about your disturbing conversation with Mr. McDougal?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator BOXER. You did not.

Did he raise anything about what Mr. McDougal had discussed with you? Did he ask you anything specific about preferred stock or anything else?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator BOXER. He did not.

Could he have had someone else call you, do you think? Could the Governor have had one of his top staff call you, rather than him calling you?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator BOXER. He could have, but yet the Governor called you and told you that he needed this appointment for someone else. I think that's an important point, Mr. Chairman.

I would say that when you take this witness' testimony, and you include in it his description of Mr. McDougal, added to what Senator Murkowski said, which I think drives it home—that Mr. McDougal felt that he, in fact, owned the Clintons—it leads me to believe that perhaps these conversations took place.

I don't question your veracity, sir, but that it was a bragging kind of a situation. Because when you line it up against, as we have seen from, I think, the excellent questioning of our Counsel, it simply doesn't add up. That is backed up by none other than Jay Stephens of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro.

Now, I just want to pick up on one more point that the Ranking Member said, and then whatever time remains I would yield back, I hope there will be some. That point is your comments about a Gestapo, and I greatly appreciate your apologizing. In fact, you didn't mean it for this Committee, you meant it for, quoting you, "Mr. Starr's Committee." Do you really feel that Mr. Starr's people are using Gestapo-like tactics?

Mr. LYON. Ma'am, in Arkansas, a small State, there are over 40 FBI agents and I don't know how many special prosecutors. This has gone on for many, many months, and you asked me a question that I would really like to forget. I would like to go away, if you all know what I mean. But, gentlemen, enough is enough. It's a small State. Get on with it and get it over, one way or the other.

Senator BOXER. If I could thank you for that comment, my point in asking that question, Mr. Chairman, has to do with when you are going to ask the Senate to continue this investigation. And I have to say, everything that is being covered here is being covered by Mr. Starr, and that this gentleman described the type of intensive questioning that he has gone through.

Now, once again, we line up the testimony. We see the time-frame. And as far as I'm concerned, it adds up to the fact that Mr. McDougal was a braggart, he was grandiose, and he threw names around of important people. Because the facts are, according to Jay Stephens—who is not a Democratic partisan individual. To the contrary. All that he states, that there was no work being done by Hillary Rodham Clinton at that very time when that conversation had to take place, given the facts before us.

I would yield to Mr. Ben-Veniste whatever time I have left.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I just want to ask one question. Earlier, you were asked, Mr. Lyon—and let me direct your attention back to this project that Mr. McDougal was involved in, because it is of some interest to us—when Castle Grande was known as Castle Grande. First of all, what you're referring to is a trailer park, basically, is that correct? Castle Grande is a development?

Mr. LYON. It was a development mostly on trailers, and then there were other things planned, I'm sure. But it was a development, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have heard it described as Castle Grande Estates. Did you ever hear the "Estates" part of that mentioned?

Mr. LYON. I believe on the advertising I have heard that. It was Castle Grande.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did that have some particular meaning in terms of the land that it was on? What did Castle Grande mean?

Mr. LYON. Castle Grande, I believe, came from the name of the trailers that he was putting on the lots and selling. But I don't know that. I don't remember that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You think the trailers themselves. Is that a brand name of a trailer?

Mr. LYON. That's kind of what he said, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. A super-jumbo trailer, some kind of extra-wide trailer?

Mr. LYON. Very nice trailers.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Hence "Castle," and then large, "Grande." OK.

So very nice large trailers were going to go on there, and that was going to be the name. It wasn't that this land was called Castle Grande before Mr. McDougal got ahold of it.

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It wasn't that people from that area walked around and said, "Oh, that's the Castle Grande neighborhood."

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This was all something that was dreamed up and then promoted.

Mr. LYON. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. My question is, you had been on the land, and you hauled some timber or some such off the land?

Mr. LYON. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It wasn't known as Castle Grande then, when you hauled the timber off of it?

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was only until somebody started to promote it and tried to sell it. Do you remember—and I know it's hard going back all this time—but do you remember when these ads started to come out? Was that associated with anything in your mind?

Mr. LYON. He had a development named Maple Creek, and then went immediately to Castle Grande. It was associated with nothing in my mind, no. It was just a name.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So when people in Arkansas started to refer to it as Castle Grande, that was after all the promotional material had been in the newspapers, or billboards, or whatever might have been out there?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You never seriously considered relocating your brewery to this warehouse, did you, if I understand your deposition testimony?

Mr. LYON. I seriously considered it until I found out he wanted me to buy the building and do all of the—and then I unseriously considered it. OK?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. McDougal's idea was that you would pay for the whole deal and finance it, and move your brewery there?

Mr. LYON. He would finance it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. But you'd be responsible for paying it back.

Mr. LYON. Right. I knew who was going to pay for it, and he's sitting right here.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that was not appealing to you, and conversations thereafter were strictly on the basis of trying to be nice to Mr. McDougal, who was holding the note on all this money you owed him. You listened, but you weren't that serious anymore after he had revealed what he had in mind for you in this project?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK.

The CHAIRMAN [presiding]. Mr. Lyon, we're going to take a break right after this line of questioning. I'm going to try to do this in 2 minutes, if I can, and then turn to Senator Shelby.

You have testified basically—and if I'm wrong, again, I want you to correct me; I'm not trying to put words, I'm trying to summarize—that there came a point in time sometime in 1983, early 1984, when Jim McDougal came to you and said, "Look. I want you to go on this different Bank Board. And the reason is, we have this preferred stock. That board is going to be making a decision. I'd like you to support it." Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. Basically. He didn't necessarily say "preferred stock." He was trying to raise capital for his bank or his savings and loan.

The CHAIRMAN. You told him, and I'm quoting you, "hell no." Is that right, about going over to that board and just giving it an approval to his proposition?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The reason you told him "hell no" is not so much the details of the deal, but the fact that he wasn't going to have your vote in his pocket, so to speak, just because you got on that board. Is that right?

Mr. LYON. Yes, that's right.

The CHAIRMAN. Then he told you that if you weren't going to do this, that the Governor was going to call. He first said, "I want your resignation from the board you're on now." Is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. You told him no. Is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. You said, "That's something the Governor has to ask me to do that." Is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. He said to you, basically, "I'll have the Governor call you." Is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. And within a period of about 2 months, you got a call from the Governor. Is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. In your deposition, and that's in front of you, you say: "He called me at the Pine State Bank." That's page 62. Would you put it up on the Elmo? Is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. Moving up to page 61, you're talking about the Governor, line 15: "The Governor called me over at the bank and he told me that Jim had indicated to him that I would resign if he asked me to." Did Governor Clinton tell you that Mr. McDougal had spoken to him and said that you would resign if the Governor asked you? He told you this?

Mr. LYON. Not in those terms. He said, "Jim said that you would be willing to resign." And as I told you, Governor Clinton was very nice about it. There was no——

The CHAIRMAN. There was no pressure. He just told you as a matter of fact that Jim had told you this?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. And repeated his position?

Mr. LYON. He thanked me and told me that he needed the appointment. And he was a super-nice man.

The CHAIRMAN. McDougal had told you that they needed this appointment for some fellow who came from a town that helped raise a lot of money. Is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's what he told me. Whether it was true or not, I don't know.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you surprised when the Governor called?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You were disappointed, weren't you?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir. I was disappointed.

The CHAIRMAN. And the reason you were disappointed was that McDougal could actually get the Governor to call you and ask you to resign. Isn't that true?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir. That's true.

The CHAIRMAN. You were disappointed. As you said, the Governor's a good man, but the fact—you never really believed when McDougal first told you this, you weren't sure whether he was bragging or not. But it did come to pass. What he told you turned out to be more than bragging, and that surprised you, didn't it?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And you were disappointed.

Mr. LYON. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Senator Shelby.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR RICHARD C. SHELBY

Senator SHELBY. When Governor Clinton appointed you to the State Bank Board, was that probably about 1982?

Mr. LYON. I think it was some time around 1980.

Senator SHELBY. About 1980? OK.

Was Mr. Jim McDougal—is that his name, Jim McDougal? Mr. McDougal at that time was working for Governor Clinton?

Mr. LYON. When I was appointed, Mr. McDougal was Governor Clinton's number one aide, as I understood it.

Senator SHELBY. Number one aide at that time. So was your contact regarding being appointed to the Arkansas Bank Board—is that what you call it, the Arkansas Bank Board—was that done in a sense through Mr. McDougal's contact with you?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir. From years ago, yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. And you said the year was about 1980?

Mr. LYON. I believe it was, yes.

Senator SHELBY. Did Mr. McDougal tell you or indicate to you that in 1980 or thereabouts, that he would get Governor Clinton at that time to appoint you to the State Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. How long was it between when Jim McDougal told you he was going to get or recommend that the Governor appoint you to the State Bank Board and the appointment? How long was it before the appointment came through, more or less?

Mr. LYON. Well, it really was not very long. Once again, I do not remember—

Senator SHELBY. The exact date?

Mr. LYON. That's right.

Senator SHELBY. Was it within weeks?

Mr. LYON. I'd say probably months.

Senator SHELBY. About a month, several months?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. But your contact was with Jim McDougal regarding the appointment to the Bank Board, which later the Governor of Arkansas, Bill Clinton, appointed you to; right?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Senator SHELBY. Did Governor Clinton call you and tell you he was appointing you to the Bank Board in 1980?

Mr. LYON. No, sir.

Senator SHELBY. You served on the Bank Board for how long? From 1980 approximately until you resigned.

Mr. LYON. Until at least 1984, yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. How long was your appointment for? What was the term of your appointment?

Mr. LYON. I do not remember.

Senator SHELBY. Whatever it is is a matter of record, is it not?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. Now, in Arkansas, I assume that the State Bank Board deals with banks, and the savings and loan deals with thrifts. You have a separate board that deals with savings and loans or savings banks?

Mr. LYON. As far as I know, yes.

Senator SHELBY. As you were sitting as a member of the State Bank Board, you did not deal with savings and loans, did you?

Mr. LYON. We had no dealings with savings and loans, no.

Senator SHELBY. I know this has been asked, probably, in certain ways—but when did Mr. McDougal first mention to you about the possibility of a change from the Bank Board to the Savings and Loan Board? In other words, did he tell you that he needed help over on the Savings and Loan Board, or whatever you would call it in Arkansas; a different regulatory board?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. What did you say, if anything, when he mentioned this to you?

Mr. LYON. I will say it again. I told him not "no," but "hell no."

Senator SHELBY. "Hell no." Did you feel like again that something didn't smell right, didn't sound right, wasn't right?

Mr. LYON. It wasn't that as much as the fact that Mr. McDougal was not basically going to tell me what to do or how to vote. It may have been fine, I don't know.

Senator SHELBY. At that time, you told him that you would not resign from the Bank Board unless Governor Clinton asked you to, is that right?

Mr. LYON. That's correct, yes, sir.

Senator SHELBY. Did he tell you that the Governor would be asking you to?

Mr. LYON. Yes, he did.

Senator SHELBY. You didn't believe the Governor would be calling you until he actually called you?

Mr. LYON. No, I did not. I didn't believe, I never believed it.

Senator SHELBY. You believe it now, don't you?

Mr. LYON. Yes, I believe it now.

Senator SHELBY. As a matter of fact, it's a reality. The Governor at that time, Governor Clinton, called you as McDougal told you he would, or suggested that he would, and asked you to resign, in other words, is that correct?

Mr. LYON. In other words, that's correct.

Senator SHELBY. Going on to another point, did Mr. McDougal say to you that Mrs. Clinton was on retainer for his bank, the Madison Bank, at the Rose Law Firm?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. He didn't say that anyone else at the Rose Law Firm was retained, did he?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator SHELBY. He said Mrs. Clinton was on retainer at the law firm?

Mr. LYON. He did not say the Rose Law Firm.

Senator SHELBY. Did he say Mrs. Clinton was on retainer for his bank?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. He didn't mention any other lawyer, did he, other than Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator SHELBY. And is the Bank Commissioner in Arkansas appointed by the Governor?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. Mr. Marlin Jackson, who was the Bank Commissioner of Arkansas in November 1985, who signed this letter we've been talking about here today you're familiar with—he was appointed by Governor Clinton?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SHELBY. Did you know Mr. Jackson real well?

Mr. LYON. I believe Mr. Jackson was one of the finest banking commissioners we've ever had. I know him, yes.

Senator SHELBY. Do you know of your own knowledge if Mr. Jackson and his predecessors in Arkansas as Bank Commissioner just routinely used State stationery to transact private business like this? Was this what they did all the time, or do you know?

Mr. LYON. I would hope not, sir.

Senator SHELBY. I would hope not.

The CHAIRMAN. We're going to take a 15-minute break, Mr. Lyon. Counsel has requested that. I don't know how much longer we'll go, but whatever the time is—no longer than 5 minutes? Do you want to try to finish it now? OK. If that's the case, let's go to this side. But we have about 5 minutes, no more than 10 minutes.

Mr. Lyon, does that meet with your approval? We could probably wrap this up in maybe 15 minutes, the whole thing, and then we won't have to take a break and come back. Or do you need a break?

Mr. LYON. No, sir, that's fine. Let's do it all.

The CHAIRMAN. Try to finish it? OK.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I'm going to be brief. Let me try to finish up a couple of points. Mr. Lyon, the questions that have come to you have been designed to suggest that Mr. McDougal was just throwing the Governor's name around and just making things up, and none of it was true. I think it's your own words; you said that when you had the experience that Jim McDougal said the Governor would call, and the Governor did call, and the Governor mentioned Jim McDougal's name, that made it believable. Is that fair to say?

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal, the way he is pictured by the press now, at that time was a far, far different man than he is now.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Different in what way?

Mr. LYON. You're talking about a man that was in business with Governor Clinton; had done business with Jerry Jones, owner of the Dallas Cowboys; and with Shef L. Nelson, who almost beat Clinton for the race. Mr. McDougal was, as I say, a very likable and very fine man. And because he was Bill Clinton's friend, or because he was my friend, doesn't necessarily mean that he was a braggart all the time. I brag, too. You would have to take him with a grain of salt sometimes. But he was really at that time a pretty good individual.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There are things that you did know. In those days, Mr. McDougal was a respected man in the community.

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was known to be close with Governor Clinton.

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew him to be involved with this Madison Bank. He owned the bank, right?

Mr. LYON. He owned a bank originally.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whatever you want to say about Mr. McDougal, whether you had to take him with a grain of salt—I mean, we have in the record a memo on the Governor's office stationery which says, plain as the light of day, "Banking Board, ask McDougal." And I want to put another one on now, which is MG 759.

This is a memo of February 7, 1985, to Governor Bill Clinton from Jim McDougal. And it says, "Kathy called yesterday to ask for my recommendations for two people to fill the vacancies on the State Savings and Loan Board." Do you know who Kathy was? Did you know a Kathy in the Governor's office? Did you ever hear of a Kathy?

Mr. LYON. I do not know a Kathy in the Governor's office, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In this memorandum, Mr. McDougal writes to the Governor in response to this request for his recommendations that he was going to recommend two people. One is John Latham, whose name you've already heard, who was Chairman of the Board of the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and later pled guilty to creating a false document. And then a Jerry Kendall of Camden. Do you know Jerry Kendall?

Mr. LYON. I don't; no, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know John Latham?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you know John Latham?

Mr. LYON. John Latham was President, I believe, of Madison Guaranty at one time; a very young CPA.

Mr. CHERTOFF. A pretty young guy, young fellow?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me complete the picture by putting up DKSJ 25966, which is the page of announcements of the actual appointments made, about a month later. True to form, as you've told us with your own experience, Mr. McDougal's recommendations, in fact, became appointments. John Latham became appointed and Jerry Kendall became appointed. So I guess even into 1985, Mr. McDougal was still able to have a big say in the appointment of the people who were on the Savings and Loan Board.

Now, let me ask you this. This 1985 memo is a couple of years after that Cease and Desist Order at Madison Bank and Trust that we have talked about, where the regulators essentially applied an order to cease and desist bad banking practices at Madison Bank and Trust. Does it surprise you that an individual who was sanctioned by the Federal regulators and the State regulators in 1983 for bad banking practices, or unsafe banking practices, would be making determinations about who would be a savings and loan regulator 2 years later?

Mr. LYON. Not really. And when I say that, if he'd straightened his act up, you know—if he was doing something wrong, they told him he was doing something wrong, he straightened it up and he still was able to do that, it doesn't surprise me all that much, no. If he didn't straighten it up, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think, Mr. Chairman, that's all I have.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Senator Kerry.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR JOHN F. KERRY

Senator KERRY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lyon, I just want to try to understand if I can some of the dates here. Because I gather that, by your own testimony, you are not certain of all the dates. Is that accurate?

Mr. LYON. That's accurate.

Senator KERRY. So when you testified in your deposition that it was in 1982, during Clinton's first term as Governor, that Mr. McDougal approached you and asked you if you wanted to serve on the Bank Board, you were incorrect in that deposition about that date. It couldn't have been 1982, correct?

Mr. LYON. It was just, I believe, that in the deposition I said I know it was Clinton's first term.

Senator KERRY. So the first term, in fact, would have been 1978. Is that right?

Mr. LYON. I do not know.

Senator KERRY. 1979 to 1981. Wasn't he elected, then he lost an election, then he came back?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir. He was elected, he lost the election, then he came back.

Senator KERRY. What year was he first elected?

Mr. LYON. I have no idea.

Senator KERRY. 1979, I believe. So if it was in his first term, you were off by 4 years on that particular date in your deposition. I mean, you're sure it was in the first term?

Mr. LYON. I don't know, sir. You can catch me on dates every minute of this year, OK? I am trying to answer your questions truthfully.

Senator KERRY. Sure, I realize that.

Mr. LYON. I do not know whether it was his first term or his second term. I do know that Jim McDougal was an aide I think it was his first term.

Senator KERRY. The reason it is obviously very important—and I'm not trying to catch you, believe me, I'm not trying to catch you. I'm just trying to know what the weight of your testimony is, and whether it is the first term or the second term. When somebody asks somebody something here it is very important. Don't you acknowledge that?

Mr. LYON. It may be very important, but it doesn't necessarily put recall in a person's mind. Because when the date was, or the year even, over a long period of time——

Senator KERRY. Fair enough.

Mr. LYON. We're talking about 15 years ago, what you asked me about; 16.

Senator SARBANES. Didn't you say that you served through Governor White's term?

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. And Governor White came after Governor Clinton's first term?

The CHAIRMAN. That's correct. Is it fair to say that you might not be exactly, as you have testified—if the Senator will yield, I'll yield the time back to my colleague—that you might not be sure exactly when the Governor's first term started, but that you came to this position in approximately 1980, during his first term?

Mr. LYON. Right. I don't know exactly when Jim McDougal started being an aide.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Kerry—just to the point, again, of what he did testify to, he doesn't recall. Senator Sarbanes has pointed out that he did serve, and I think we can check the record through; that the following Governor was White, and you continued to serve on through the next Governor's term, for the next 2 years. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. Part of the next Governor's. May I answer your question, sir?

Senator KERRY. Sure.

Mr. LYON. You wanted to ask me a question.

Senator KERRY. At the time that Mr. McDougal came to talk to you, he was working for the Governor. Correct?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator KERRY. When he asked you to serve on the board?

Mr. LYON. On the Bank Board?

Senator KERRY. Correct.

Mr. LYON. Yes, he was working for the Governor.

Senator KERRY. So it was in the normal course of his business as an official working for the Governor of Arkansas that he invited you, on behalf of the Governor, to join the board. Correct?

Mr. LYON. That's correct.

Senator KERRY. There's nothing unusual about that?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator KERRY. It is an appropriate role for him to perform as Governor?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator KERRY. You at that time worked for a bank? You owned a bank?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator KERRY. You owned the smallest bank in the State?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Senator KERRY. So subsequently, since you served at the pleasure of the Governor, did it strike you as unusual that conceivably the Governor might want you to serve on a different board, or might have different plans when he was reelected to be Governor as to who he might want to have serve on the Bank Board?

Mr. LYON. Would you mind rephrasing the question?

Senator KERRY. Would you not say that in the normal course of the Governor's rights and privileges as Governor, that he might want to move you onto another board and have someone else serve on the Bank Board in the course of having been reelected at a subsequent point of becoming Governor?

Mr. LYON. That would be possible, yes.

Senator KERRY. Again, I am just trying to understand this in terms of dates and times. Because, again, I think that's important.

You have testified in your deposition that when you were asked by Mr. McDougal, with respect to going off the Bank Board, you were also asked about the preferred stock option. Is that correct? You said he wanted you to vote for the preferred stock option?

Mr. LYON. I was asked to resign from the Bank Board and go on the Savings and Loan Board, and it was explained to me in general terms. That's what I'm telling you.

The conversation was, he explained to me that—he didn't necessarily say "preferred stock"—his stock deal, that he had to get it through, and that he wanted me to help him get it through on this board. That doesn't mean that I could have, that doesn't mean that I would have had any influence. That doesn't mean anything except he wanted me to go on another board and vote his way. He may not have needed any help. I don't know.

Senator KERRY. In your deposition on page 57, line 12, you said,

He came over and asked me to resign and serve on the Savings and Loan Board, and he was bound and determined to get the stock issue through so he could get his capital increase. It was a preferred stock deal.

So you were certain in your deposition, I take it, that it was a preferred stock deal. Now you apparently have a different view.

Mr. LYON. I was certain then. I'm certain now. What I'm telling you is that he didn't necessarily say to me, in a conversation 10 years or so ago, "preferred stock." I knew it was preferred stock. He said, I think, "stock deal."

Senator KERRY. Do you know that the preferred stock offering work didn't begin until 1985?

Mr. LYON. No.

Senator KERRY. If you had documents that showed you that the work on the preferred stock did not begin until 1985, would you then think you might be mistaken about this conversation in 1984 or earlier, 1983?

Mr. LYON. I have no idea, sir, what date the conversation was held. I repeat, I have no idea what date the conversation was held.

Senator KERRY. You will acknowledge that if you don't have any idea what date the conversation was held, then it's very hard for you to be able to add weight to the question of whether or not your testimony refers to a preferred stock deal or not. You would agree, would you not?

Mr. LYON. Sir, I do not care if I add any weight to the testimony, all I have told you is the truth.

Senator KERRY. I understand that. But see, I'm trying to get at what the truth is. If there was no preferred stock deal until 1985, and you went off the Bank Board—you were asked to go off 2 months prior, according to your testimony, in 1983. Because the records show you went off the Bank Board in February 1984. So if you're off the Bank Board in 1984, and no work began on a preferred stock deal until 1985, it's very hard for me to understand how you could have a conversation about it in 1983.

Mr. LYON. I don't know that it was 1983.

Senator KERRY. That's critical, I think that's very important.

Mr. LYON. It might be critical, but I do not know.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lyon, you have told us, though, that this conversation took place a couple of months before the Governor called you and asked you to resign. You've repeated that a number of times here today, have you not?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. So then, the date when the Governor asked you to resign would be relevant. You don't remember when that date was, correct?

Mr. LYON. Correct.

Senator SARBANES. But the records show that the Governor, in a sense, indicated you had resigned and named someone else to the board in a release from the Governor's office on February 28, 1984. And the minutes of the Bank Board, which you looked at earlier, showed that at their April 17th meeting, it was indicated that you were gone and someone else was there. So, all of this had to take place before those dates. Is that not correct?

Mr. LYON. If you say so, sir. I'm just testifying, trying to answer a question.

Senator SARBANES. I am working off of the fact that you told us, I think repeatedly, that the conversation with McDougal was—first of all, I asked you did it happen before the Governor asked you to resign. And you told me obviously it did, which follows.

Mr. LYON. Yes, sir. I'll tell you again; obviously, it did.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. If there's other questions, we'll pursue it. But it becomes rather obvious, if one looks at the record, that the Governor announced in February the new appointments.

Senator SARBANES. February of 1984.

The CHAIRMAN. February 1984. And that was approximately 2 months after Mr. McDougal spoke, as this is Mr. Lyon's testimony, that the Governor called him. So necessarily it would follow that some time in late 1983, or very early 1984, that this took place. Mr. McDougal spoke to you, and then the Governor 2 months thereafter spoke, and I don't see any inconsistency; or that the fact that Mr. Lyon could not have had a conversation with Mr. McDougal—I certainly don't think he created a story about a stock offering, because it was the very basis upon which he refused to serve on that board.

He said, "hell no." Thereafter, it may have been fully a year plus thereafter before that stock offering was pursued. But I have no doubt, and I don't think that anyone here who has heard Mr. Lyon testify doubts the veracity of his conversation or his recollection and his testimony; that, indeed, Mr. McDougal approached him, told him about his plan to have him serve on another board, and when he turned him down, he told him the Governor would call to ask him to resign.

He was surprised, thereafter, when the Governor did, within about 60 days. We know that, as a matter of fact, he did resign. And in early 1984, two other people were appointed.

Now, the question as to the stock offering: He had no way of knowing at that time when that was pursued. Indeed, I think he's testified he wasn't really aware of it. But that was Mr. McDougal's conversations to him. Then the next we know, it's not until 1985 that there is a stock offering a year later.

That took place. There was an attempt to get the regulators, and the regulators did approve a stock offering plan. So—

Senator KERRY. I'm constrained to say that the Chairman's memory is an awful lot clearer than the witness'.

The CHAIRMAN. Only because I've had the benefit of listening and seeing the records.

Senator KERRY. There's sort of a double standard here. When this witness can't remember anything, it goes to the truth of what is being asserted. When Maggie Williams doesn't remember anything, it goes to the guilt.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it does, Senator, really characterize very clearly what took place. He's not willing to specify a particular date and say that it took place 32 days thereafter that I got the call. He says within a period of about 2 months.

But having said that, I think the substance of his conversation is quite clear. If we want to say that we don't have confidence, I'm willing to say that I believe that he's testified to the best of his ability, with all due candor. If others see it differently, why, they have to make that interpretation.

From my point of view, and I admit it's mine, my colleagues have a right to their own opinions, as we all do, but I want to thank you, Mr. Lyon, for participating in what is not an easy situation. I said that we don't expect total recall from any or all of the witnesses. But from my perspective, I want to thank you for being candid, and you have indicated that this has not been pleasant; that you have had some unfortunate experiences. We are glad to learn that it was not with the staff of this Committee.

I am ready, after my colleagues make whatever closing remarks they want, to adjourn this hearing until next Thursday.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Lyon, I think the problem arises that the conversation about the preferred stock and the retention of Hillary Clinton on a retainer by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan did not occur until the spring of 1985. You recount that as part of a conversation with McDougal which obviously had to take place some time in early 1984 or late 1983. Let me put this question to you, though. You've been interrogated, I take it, at great length by the staff of the Independent Counsel. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. Not necessarily by the staff of the Independent Counsel. It just seems to go on, and on, and on.

Senator SARBANES. I include the FBI agents.

Mr. LYON. I would rather not say any more about this. As I say, I apologize to you all.

Senator SARBANES. I would rather not pursue that. But what happens in the course of these extended questions, that often questions are put to you repeatedly, and then you sort of incorporate them into your own thinking, and your own thinking becomes part of the story. Let me give you an example here.

You were asked in your deposition:

Question: So you were attempting to get this bill passed through Senator Scott for the brewery that you owned in Little Rock, and at the same time Mr. McDougal wanted you to invest in a brewery, move your brewery to Castle Grande.

So you were concerned about the restrictions on both places in terms of the manufacture of beer and the sale of it on premises. Correct? That's the question that was put to you. And you said, "Yes, sir."

Now, when you looked at it earlier today, when we went over it here, you expressed some problems with that. As I understand it, the problem was that moving the brewery over to Castle Grande did not come at the same time as you were trying to get the bill through with Senator Scott. You said later that these were two separate things. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. I very much appreciate counsel bringing that out. I have tried and tried to explain that I was trying to get a brew pub at my brewery.

Senator SARBANES. Right.

Mr. LYON. All of the information that shows up that McDougal wrote about a brewery may have been about mine. But I wasn't as concerned about that as I was in going through Senator Scott and a man named Bennett. The McDougal deal would have been later.

Senator SARBANES. Would have been later?

Mr. LYON. Would have been later if it were possible. But it was financially impossible for me to do what he wanted to do, and it would be to most people.

Senator SARBANES. Right. The point I am making is, as these queries are put to you, you sometimes simply accept them. They become part of the story. In this instance, the phrase, "and at the same time" really was inaccurate. It shouldn't have been there, because the other came later.

Mr. LYON. Oh, yes, sir. Like I say, you can always find one word.

Senator SARBANES. OK. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff, let's wind it up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to leave you with a last question, Mr. Lyon, because I think you should go out of here without feeling that people necessarily think you have been totally confused, or contradicted, or whatever.

I understand you told us at the beginning of the deposition that in terms of dates, you were sometimes a little unclear as to the dates, which is completely understandable. At the same time, the conversation you described with Mr. McDougal at the brewery where he talked to you about the Savings and Loan Board—I mean, you have never deviated from your description of that conversation. My understanding is, and correct me if I'm wrong, that you have a memory of that. You can almost in your mind picture where you were when you had that conversation, and it's that memory you're drawing upon.

And just so you understand, in terms of your own memory, there is evidence in the record that the Rose Law Firm, which was Mrs. Clinton's law firm, was retained by the Madison Bank from 1982. In fact, the evidence is Hillary Clinton's own statement to investigators.

As far as the question of the stock offering, am I correct that all you knew from Mr. McDougal when he talked to you about the stock offering was that he was thinking about the stock offering. Is that right?

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You have no way of knowing, when you said "no" to him, how much longer he worked on it, when he began to get other people involved in it, why it took him a year to finally get it through when they had a new commissioner. Because there was eventually a new commissioner appointed the following year, who's the one that had blessed this thing.

All you have come here to tell us about is that which you remember, that which you experienced, and that which you know to the best of your ability—to tell the truth. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. That is correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Lyon, simply on the basis of what has been said here, it's not as though we are operating in a vacuum about when this preferred stock question was first raised. We have John Latham's statement and we have Mr. Massey's testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, let me say this to you. For the record, we know when the proposed stock offering was put, the letters to the Committee. We know that it was about a year after Mr. Lyon testified that he had this conversation with Mr. McDougal.

I think it's not fair to the witness. He cannot testify to it. He can't tell you why it took a whole year thereafter. He testifies as to events that he is aware of.

If you want to stipulate in the record that indeed—and we know, and we've had ample testimony that this did not take place, the offering itself, until 1985, so be it. It's part of the record. It's there.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, we know that the thinking about the offering took place more than a year later.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. That's when all of this occurred, and that it was well over a year later when the retainer——

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we'd have to get Mr. McDougal in here to ascertain why it is that it took longer.

Senator SARBANES. More than a year later when the retainer arrangement was entered into with respect to Hillary Clinton. We know that from previous testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words——

Senator SARBANES. We have a conversation in late 1983 or early 1984 which encompass subject matter which applies to the spring and later of 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, then I think we have to be specific. If we say that thereafter following this there was a stock offering plan, I think that's consistent with Mr. Lyon's testimony.

I don't think it is totally consistent as it relates to Mrs. Clinton's retainer. That's a separate matter. However, I believe there is testimony in the record that Mrs. Clinton has given to regulators that indeed she did work, and the Rose Law Firm did work, for the Madison Bank back in 1980.

Mrs. Clinton said that she believed Madison, then as Madison National Bank, had been a client of the Rose Law Firm since 1982. So the fact that thereafter there was another retainer agreement does not contravene what Mr. Lyon said.

And, by the way, we cannot attribute to him the truthfulness of all of Mr. McDougal's statements. He's gone to great lengths to say, "Look, I know sometimes he brags." So he's not here as a witness to testify to the truthfulness of all of Mr. McDougal's statements. But I think it is key that he can say that within 2 months after Mr. McDougal telling him that the Governor would call and ask him to resign, that that's exactly what happened.

He did say, with specificity—and he wasn't angry at the Governor; he said the Governor was polite. He said that, "Jim has told me, you know, that you would be willing to step aside." Was that not your testimony, Mr. Lyon?

Mr. LYON. That was my testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. So, to say that the stock offering didn't take place, or the planning for it, for at least a year later, that is correct. That is true. There's no argument with that.

Senator SARBANES. Now, Mr. McDougal wanted you to go on the Savings and Loan Board, right?

Mr. LYON. I testified that's right, yes, sir.

Senator SARBANES. That was because the preferred stock offering was going to be pertinent to a savings and loan, not to a bank. Otherwise he would have left you on the banking board, right? So he wanted you to go over to the Savings and Loan Board to act on a stock offering. Is that correct?

Mr. LYON. At that time, I don't even know that Jim McDougal owned any portion of the bank.

Senator SARBANES. Of the bank?

Mr. LYON. Of the bank.

Senator SARBANES. You mean, he was out of the bank?

Mr. LYON. As far as I know.

Senator SARBANES. So the references he was making, as you understood it, involved the savings and loan.

Mr. LYON. As I understood it, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You well understood the difference between a savings and loan and a bank?

Mr. LYON. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Even though Mr. McDougal seemed to like the name "Madison," there was a big difference between these two institutions?

Mr. LYON. There's a great difference between the two institutions. And incidentally, you have been more than fair to me. But go ahead.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

In connection with the conversation that you had with him, there was no doubt in your mind that he was talking to you about the savings and loan that he was running, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

Mr. LYON. Right. As far as I knew at that time, and I believe that I'm correct, he was out of the bank at Kingston.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Whether or not you're telescoping in your own mind is going to be something that others will look at this testimony and say nobody's accusing you of venality here. But you have been questioned at length by various people, may have suggested information to you. You may have gotten this all in the same line.

What we know is that Mrs. Clinton was not retained by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and her firm was not retained, until April of 1985.

Let me ask you this. You know Mr. McDougal is the kind of a guy who had six ideas a minute, and he would run these by you and other people from time-to-time. You knew that he was constantly generating new ideas and deals, correct?

Mr. LYON. Mr. McDougal had about 20 ideas a minute.

[Laughter.]

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. He was, is it fair to say, an impulsive kind of a guy. If he had something on his mind, he'd get it out.

Mr. LYON. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If he had an idea, he was going to bounce it off somebody; sometimes you, clearly others. Correct?

Mr. LYON. I would think so, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The notion of Mr. McDougal sitting quietly with some idea about financing, and waiting a year and a half to talk to anybody about it, would not fit your profile of McDougal's character.

Mr. LYON. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed, we have the testimony of Mr. Latham, who said that this matter regarding preferred stock was not discussed until early 1985 at the earliest, and that is at page 1 of the RTC interview with John Latham, July 12, 1995.

That's all I have, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Again, Mr. Lyon, we want to thank you for your cooperation. We stand in recess until Thursday at 10 a.m.

[Whereupon, at 5:10 p.m., the Committee was recessed, to reconvene at 10 a.m. on Thursday, January 25, 1996.]

[Appendix supplied for the record follows:]

change 6 copies

GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

June

RE: Nov / Dec Appnts.

DSTCC are probably imp. - talk with Brady - know him visit with Ed Yung - store on Bd of Health.

② Stream Presentation (?) I assume recent Appnts. have care of.

③ Soil Classifier -
Major Rutledge of Fay'sville is friend - he was one calling for Don McGuire - probably should reappt. if he wants it. (over)

DKSN013314

- ④ #30 - ~~Watters~~ is acc. to 60V - ~~Watters~~, confirm.
- ⑤ Boring Bd - ask McDougal.
- ⑥ Dr. Mung on Health Bd is my friend but not supportive (at this time) of Yong so no need to reappt. If choice is from Fey's list, I'd go for Dr.
Jay McDonald.
- ⑦ Anticipate support from Nurture for F. Rodgers to Platte Bd.

DKSN013315

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

WASHINGTON, D. C.

In the Matter of

MADISON BANK AND TRUST
KINGSTON, ARKANSAS

(INSURED STATE NONMEMBER BANK)

NOTICE OF CHARGES AND OF HEARING

FDIC-8) -3b

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC"), being of the opinion that Madison Bank and Trust, Kingston, Arkansas ("Bank") has engaged and is engaging in unsafe or unsound practices and that the Bank has violated and is violating certain laws of the State of Arkansas, and certain provisions of the Federal Reserve Act and regulations promulgated thereunder as made applicable to insured state nonmember banks, is instituting this proceeding for the purpose of determining whether an appropriate order should be issued against the Bank under the provisions of section 8(b)(1) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act ("Act") (12 U.S.C. § 1818(b)(1)). The FDIC issues this NOTICE OF CHARGES AND OF HEARING under the provisions of the Act and the FDIC's Rules of Practice and Procedures (12 C.F.R. Part 308). In support of this action, the FDIC alleges:

1. (a) The Bank, a corporation existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Arkansas and having its principal place of business at Kingston, Arkansas is and has been at all times pertinent to this proceeding an insured State nonmember bank. The Bank, therefore, is subject to the Act (12 U.S.C. §§ 311, et seq.) and the Rules and Regulations of the FDIC (12 C.F.R. Chapter 111)

(b) The FDIC has jurisdiction over the Bank and the subject matter of the proceeding.

2. As of September 8, 1982:

2-1

HOUSE W/W RPT. 5551

VCH000367

- (a) The Bank's total capital and reserves equalled $596,300;
- (b) The Bank's adjusted capital and reserves equalled $394,500;
- (c) The Bank's ~~adjusted-total assets~~ equalled $7,494,300;
- (d) The Bank's total deposits equalled $6,650,500; and
- (e) The Bank's total loans equalled $4,538,700.

3. The Bank has engaged and is engaging in banking practices that are unsafe or unsound within the meaning of section 8(b)(1) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. § 1818(b)(1)) and has violated certain laws of the State of Arkansas and certain provisions of the Federal Reserve Act and regulations promulgated thereunder as made applicable to insured state nonmember banks. In particular:

(a) The bank has an excessive and disproportionately large volume of poor quality assets in relation to its total capital and reserves.

- (1) Total classified assets as of September 8, 1982 are $663,800 including $235,900 classified Doubtful and $83,900 classified Loss.
- (2) Total classified assets as of September 8, 1982 are equal to 111.3 percent of total capital and reserves.

(b) The Bank has an excessive and disproportionately large volume of loans to borrowers residing or conducting business outside of its defined trade area, many of which have been granted without protective collateral, are lacking in supporting technical documentation, and some of which represent poor credit risk.

- (1) Total loans to borrowers residing or conducting business outside of the defined trade area as of September 8, 1982 are $1,302,100, representing

-3-

223.01 of the Bank's equity capital.

- (2) Total loans to borrowers residing or conducting business ~~outside of the~~ defined trade area advanced on an unsecured basis amount to $455,200 as of September 8, 1982.
- (3) Loans to borrowers residing or conducting business outside of the defined trade area contain $562,100 in loans ~~scheduled for~~ technical exceptions as of September 8, 1982.
- (4) As of September 8, 1982 loans to borrowers residing or conducting business outside the trade area in the amount of $162,600 are classified Substandard.

(c) The Bank has failed to maintain an adequate reserve for loan losses based on the volume and quality of its loan portfolio.

- (1) As of September 9, 1982 the Bank's Valuation Reserve for loans was $12,400.
- (2) As of September 8, 1982 loans classified Loss totaled $24,10. loans classified Doubtful totaled $235,900; and loans classified Substandard totaled $311,600.
- (3) As of September 9, 1982 unclassified loans totaled $3,967,100.

(d) The Bank is being criticized with an inadequate level of capital protection in view of the volume and quality of assets held. In part, this inadequate capital level is evidenced by the fact that as of September 8, 1982, the Bank's adjusted capital and reserves of $394,500 was 5.3 percent of its adjusted total assets of $7,494,300. Adversely classified assets not considered in computing adjusted capital and reserves totaled $462,100 and these adversely classified assets equalled 112.1 percent of adjusted capital and reserves.

HOUSE W/W RPT. 5553

VCH006369

(e) The Bank has followed hazardous lending and lax collection practices, and has failed to adhere to prudent loan practices as evidenced by, among other things, the following deviations from its own written lending policies:

- (1) Loans of $50,000 or more have not been submitted to the Bank's board of directors for approval.
- (2) Loans to closely held corporations have not been guaranteed by the principals.
- (3) Loans have been made or renewed without current financial information being required when applicable.
- (4) Loans have been made to borrowers residing or conducting business outside of the Bank's defined trade area without approval of the discount committee when applicable, and
- (5) Loans have been made to businesses for working capital with maturities exceeding the suggested 90-day period.
- (6) Loans totalling $722,300, which represent 15.9% of total loans, are delinquent as to principal and/or interest as of September 8, 1982.

(f) As of September 8, 1982, the Bank had committed certain violations of laws, rules and regulations as follows:

- (1) The Bank has extended credit to Jack Fies and Hudgins, Inc. in amounts which exceed the statutory maximum lending limit as provided in Section 67-507 of Arkansas State Banking Statutes.
- (2) The Bank has extended credit to Directors Julia A. Baldrige, Felix S. Brashears, II, Gary Easterling,

VCH000376

HOUSE W/W RPT. 5554

James B. McDougal, Susan H. McDougal, and Stephen A. Smith, and their related interests which lacks required approvals and/or exceeds the limitations as provided by Sections 215.4 and 215.2 of the Federal Reserve Board's Regulation O as made applicable to insured State nonmember banks by 12 U.S.C. § 1818(j)(2). In addition, the Bank has failed to maintain records as required by Section 215.7 of the Federal Reserve Board's Regulation O, and has failed to submit an annual report as required by Section 215.10 of that regulation.

- (3) The Bank has extended credit to affiliated organizations, Riverwood Farms, Inc., Great Southern Land Company, Inc., Kings River Land Company, Inc., Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association, Inc., Madison Properties, Inc., Park Place, Inc., and Whitewater Development Company, Inc. which do not meet collateral requirements and/or exceed the limitations provided by Section 22A of the Federal Reserve Act as made applicable to insured State nonmember banks by 12 U.S.C. § 1818(j)(1).

(g) The Bank has allowed excessive concentrations of credit in its loan account. Credit totaling $1,875,300, or 321.2 percent of the Bank's total equity capital has been loaned to borrowers, directly and indirectly, as follows:

- (1) Borrowers residing outside of the Bank's defined trade area (223.0% of total equity capital),

- 6 -

(2) Hudgins, Inc. (49.4% of total equity capital),

(3) James B. and Susan McDoogal (48.8% of total equity capital), and

(4) C. E. Ransom (17.2% of total equity capital).

4. The Bank's board of directors failed to provide adequate supervision over the active officers of the Bank to prevent the above described unsafe or unsound banking practices and violations of law.

5. Notice is hereby given that a hearing will be held at Fayetteville, Arkansas commencing within 60 days from the date of service on the Bank of this NOTICE OF CHARGES AND OF HEARING for the purpose of taking evidence on the charges hereinbefore specified in order to determine:

Whether an appropriate Order should be issued under the Act requiring Madison Bank and Trust, Kingston, Arkansas to cease and desist from the unsafe or unsound practices and violations of laws herein specified, or any of them, or to take affirmative action to correct the conditions resulting therefrom, or both.

6. The hearing referred to in Paragraph 5 is to be held before an Administrative Law Judge to be appointed by the U.S. Office of Personnel Management pursuant to Section 3344 of Title 5 of the United States Code. The hearing will be private, unless the FDIC shall determine that a public hearing is necessary, to protect the public interest, and in all other respects will be conducted in compliance with the provisions of the Act and the FDIC's Rules of Practice and Procedures. The Bank is hereby directed to file an answer to this NOTICE OF CHARGES AND OF HEARING within 20 days as provided by section 308.06 of the Rules of Practice and Procedures of the FDIC (12 C.F.R. § 306.06).

HOUSE W/W RPT. 5556

VEH000372

By direction of the Board of Review pursuant to delegated authority.

Dated: January 5, 1983

Alag J. Kaplan
Deputy Executive Secretary

00595-2

HOUSE W/W RPT. 5557

VCH000373

Madison Bank and Trust

101 PUBLIC SQUARE - KINGSTON, ARKANSAS 72743

June 5, 1984

RECEIVED

JUN 5 1984

STATE BANK DEPT.

Mr. Marlin Jackson,
State Bank Commissioner
1 Capitol Mall
Little Rock, AR 72201

Dear Mr. Jackson:

Enclosed is our June progress report showing the loans that were listed in the Examination Report of June 27, 1982. We have broken them down showing the balance, the current balance, and what we are doing with them.

As you can see, the reduction in principal is considerably less than what we started with. We feel that we are making very good progress in getting loans paid off or a reduction in principal.

If we can be of further assistance, please let us know.

Sincerely,

Gary W. Bunch
Gary W. Bunch
President

cc: FDIC

ARKANSAS

STATE BANK
DEPARTMENTTower Bldg. - Suite 500
323 Center Street
Little Rock, Arkansas 72201-2511Martin G. Jackson
Commissioner

November 1, 1985

Mr. Charles O. Campbell
Vice President
Security Bank
P. O. Box 670
Paragould, Arkansas 72450Re: Note No. 957-585 - Bill Clinton
Note balance - $15,300.00; Accrued Interest - $2,322.42

Dear Charles:

I am enclosing the Extension Agreement which Governor Bill Clinton signed yesterday.

It is my understanding that Jim McDougal, a close friend as well as business associate of Governor Clinton, is to forward to you a check for $2,322.42 representing the accrued due on the note.

In discussing this matter with Jim today (his-a-his telephone), he indicated that he intended to make a $4,000.00 principal reduction in addition to the interest payment.

After making the appropriate approval of the Extension Agreement, please return the appropriate copy to me and I will personally deliver it to Governor Clinton. Also, please return copies of the receipt to me.

So that Jim McDougal may know that the proper credit has been given, please provide Jim with a copy of the receipt for the payment of the interest and principal along with a copy of the Extension Agreement.

I trust this meets with your approval and that it will soon remove the note from the past due list.

Sincerely,

Martin G. Jackson
Bank Commissioner

MGT/s

Enclosure

CONFIDENTIAL

CONFIDENTIAL - PRODUCED BY THE RTC TO THE
HOUSE COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND FINANCIAL SERVICES

STATE OF ARKANSAS
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
State Capitol
Little Rock 72201

Bill Clinton
Governor

CONTACT: Kay Gaines 371-8035

February 28, 1984
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Governor Bill Clinton's office today announced the following appointments:

FRANKLIN COLLIER, Augusta--State Banking Board. Collier replaces James Atkins, Little Rock, whose term expired. Collier's term expires December 31, 1988.

JAMES ATKINS, Little Rock--State Banking Board. Atkins replaces William C. Lyon, Fordyce, who resigned. Atkins' term expires December 31, 1988.

ADELINE RUTLEDGE, Batesville--Independence County Quorum Court. Rutledge replaces George A. Rutledge, Batesville, who is deceased. She will serve until the next election.

ROCHELLE BETTON, Little Rock--Educational Television Commission. Betton replaces Emmett Smith, Paragould, whose term expired. Betton's term expires March 23, 1991.

WILLIAM P. DAUGHERTY, Little Rock--Savings and Loan Association Board. Daugherty replaces James L. DeLoach, Osceola, who resigned. Daugherty's term expires January 14, 1989.

MARVA DAVIS, Little Rock--Community Based Rehabilitation Commission. Davis replaces Darrel F. Brown, Little Rock, who resigned. Davis' term expires July 1, 1985.

Governor Clinton's office also announced the following reappointments:

SHERMAN CULLUM, Fisher--Plant Board. Fisher's new term expires January 25, 1986.

DR. WIN THOMPSON, Jonesboro--Arkansas Science and Technology Authority. Thompson's new term expires January 14, 1990.

JEROME MCGEE, Jonesboro--Arkansas Science and Technology Authority. McGee's new term expires January 14, 1990.

# #

DKSN026346

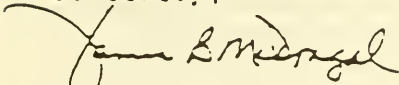

December 12, 1984

Ms. Betsy Wright
Governor's Office
State Capitol
Little Rock, Arkansas 72201

Dear Betsy:

Governor Clinton has made a commitment concerning this bill which I need to discuss with you at your convenience. Best wishes.

Sincerely,

James B. McDougal

JBMCO/ra
Enclosure

STRATEGIC PLAN OF ACTION FOR ADVERSELY CLASSIFIED ASSETS Loans to Borrowers Residing Outside the Bank's Normal Trade Territory-Concentration				NAME OF BANK Seaboard	DATE OF THIS REPORT 6-12-4-1984	DATE OF EXAMINATION June 27, 1983	TOTAL
OBLIGOR'S NAME	AMOUNT ORIGINALLY CLASSIFIED	BALANCE AS OF DATE OF THIS REPORT	ACTION TO BE UNDERTAKEN (INDICATE TIME FRAME)	DATE OF ACTION TAKEN BY OBLIGOR AND/OR BANK SINCE DATE OF EXAMINATION
Hallatt, James L. Little Rock, AR	5,000	0			PAID OFF
Beggs, Paul D. & Taylor, Vandy D. Fayetteville, Arkansas	10,324	6,524 6,000	Require regular amortization		Paid $4,000 on account
Rodman, Hilary Little Rock	26,192	0	To be paid within 60 days		Current- Paid off
Bush, Charles Pea Ridge, Arkansas	2,000	0	file suit		Charge off
Scott, Sam & Yarbrough L. B. Rogers, Arkansas	1,125	1,125 900	Require payoff at maturity		Current

(5) to you that there was some big contributor involved.
 (6) That was from Mr. McDougal.
 (7) THE WITNESS: That came from Mr. McDougal.
 (8) sir. Governor Clinton was very nice. He asked me to
 (9) resign.

(10) BY MR. GICALE:

(11) Q All right. And so that we are clear, could
 (12) you restate this?

(13) What was it exactly the governor said to
 (14) you?

(15) A The governor called me over at the bank and
 (16) he told me that Jim had indicated to him that I would
 (17) resign if he asked me to. And that he appreciated it
 (18) very much because he really needed the position to
 (19) fill an obligation.

(20) He thanked me for serving and asked that I
 (21) send a letter in, and I did. And that was that.

(22) Q Now when you say that he called you at the

Page 62

(1) bank, which bank did he call you at?

(2) A He called me at the Pine State Bank.

(3) Q Now did McDougal tell you that the governor
 (4) was going to be calling you on this?

(5) A He told me, yes, the day that he asked me
 (6) to resign. He told me that the governor would call.

(7) Q The day that McDougal asked you to resign,
 (8) he told you that the governor would call.

(9) A That's correct, that the governor would ask
 (10) me to resign. He didn't say call.

(11) Q Did the governor make any reference to
 (12) having you move to the state savings and loan board?

(13) A No, sir, he did not. And if you really
 (14) think about it, it's inconceivable to me.

(15) A banker, a person that's a banker, is
 (16) completely different from a person that runs a
 (17) savings and loan.

(18) They don't like each other.

(19) That he would even think that any banker
 (20) would serve on that board.

(21) Q Did the governor make any reference to the
 (22) preferred stock offering from Madison Guaranty that

Page 63

(1) McDougal talked to you about?

(2) A None whatsoever, sir.

(3) Q Did you have any further conversation with
 (4) the governor at that point?

(5) A No, sir.

(6) Q Did you submit your resignation shortly
 (7) thereafter?

(8) A Yes, sir.

(9) Q Did you talk to McDougal about the call you
 (10) had from the governor?

(11) A No, sir.

(12) Q Did you ever talk to McDougal again about
 (13) the resignation or the request of the governor to
 (14) resign?

(15) A I did not.

(16) MR. MAYS: Please.

(17) MR. GICALE: I'm sorry. Do you want to go

(18) off the record for a minute?

(19) Do you want to go off the record?

(20) MR. MAYS: Yes.

(21) MR. GICALE: Okay.

(22) (Discussion off the record.)

Page 64

BY MR. GICALE:

(1) Q As a member of the bank board, did you have
 (2) any responsibility for savings and loans?

(3) A No.

(4) Q So you would not have had any
 (5) responsibility for Madison Savings and Loan.

(6) A No, sir.

(7) Q Madison Guaranty. I'm sorry.

(8) A Whatever. Any of that stuff.

(9) Q You did not have oversight responsibility
 (10) for that bank.

(11) Correct?

(12) A I do want to say that Mr. Mays is right.

(13) I'm really not sure what board, I've forgotten. But I
 (14) do know it concerned savings and loan. I do not
 (15) think

(16) it was the securities board or what have you.

(17) I don't know.

(18) Q But the point is that Mr. McDougal wanted

(19) you to resign your position to move to some other

(20) position which would allow you to make a decision on
 (21) his preferred stock offering.

(22) Is that correct?

Page 65

(1) A Yes, sir, that's right.

(2) Q Were you on the bank board at the point in
 (3) time when McDougal owned Madison Bank and Trust,
 (4) which was the Bank of Kingston, I believe?

(5) A Yes, sir. I was on the bank board at the
 (6) time that they bought the Kingston Bank.

(7) Q Were you aware of a cease and desist order
 (8) on that bank, the Bank of Kingston, that the Federal
 (9) Home Loan Bank Board had with that bank?

(10) A Yes, sir, I was.

(11) Q Were you involved in that at all?

(12) A No, not really. The bank commissioner is
 (13) the one that issued that order.

(14) Q The state bank commissioner?

(15) A Yes, sir.

(16) Q Who was that at the time?

(17) A Martin Jackson. And I say Martin Jackson.

(18) I believe that's who it was.

(19) Q Do you recall why a cease-and-desist order
 (20) was issued on that bank?

(21) A Yes, sir.

(22) Q What were the reasons?

Page 66

(1) A They were loaning too much money, mainly to
 (2) politicians, without collateral.

(3) They were loaning money from out of the
 (4) territory of the bank.

(5) Q Do you recall which politicians they were
 (6) lending the money to without collateral?

MEMORANDUM

McDougal/Clinton
98

February 7, 1985

TO: Governor Bill Clinton

FROM: Jim McDougal

Kathy called yesterday to ask for my recommendations for two people to fill the vacancies on the State Savings and Loan Board.

For the industry position from the 2nd Congressional District, I recommend John Latham, who is chairman of the board of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan Association. Mr. Latham is a CPA and a licensed attorney. He is a major contributor to your campaign. His board of directors is 50% Black, giving his institution the largest minority representation of any financial institution in the state.

For the consumer position from the 4th Congressional District, I recommend Dr. Jerry Kendall of Camden. Dr. Kendall is a popular figure at Camden. His wife, Nancy from Magnolia, is widely and favorably known. Their complete support of your administration is a certainty.

Bill, we are down to only about 15 state chartered savings and loan institutions and I am about the only one around who has any interest in this board.

JRM/ss

1 MG 0000759 1

CLINTON APPOINTMENTS
Page Two
March 4, 1988

Columbia ETHEL WRIGHT, Magnolia--State Board of Cosmetology.

Wright replaces Ida B. Thomas, Pine Bluff, who resigned.

Wright's term expires January 15, 1989.

Columbia DONNA PITTMAN KINNAIRD, Magnolia--Arkansas State Plant Board. Kinnaird replaces Dick Enderlin, Conway, who resigned. Kinnaird's term expires June 30, 1985.

Miss RALPH WILSON, JR., Osceola--Natural Heritage Commission. Wilson replaces Ray Fitzhugh, Augusta, whose term expired. Wilson's term expires January 14, 1994.

Little Rock JOHN LATHAM, Little Rock--Savings and Loan Association Board. Latham replaces Ike Carter, Benton, who resigned. Latham's term expires January 14, 1987.

Camden DR. JERRY KENDALL, Camden--Savings and Loan Association Board. Kendall replaces George McClure, Jr., Malvern, whose term expired. Kendall's term expires January 14, 1990.

Governor Clinton also announced the following reappointments:

Nashville GEORGE STEEL, JR., Nashville--Judicial Ethics Committee. Steel's new term expires December 21, 1988.

Texarkana LYNN LOWE, Texarkana--Red River Commission. Lowe's new term expires January 14, 1993.

Camden EUNICE PLATT, Camden--Arkansas Waterways Commission. Platt's new term expires January 14, 1992.

# #

DKSN025966

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

---

THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
*Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Today the Committee will hear from Beverly Bassett Schaffer, the former Arkansas Securities Commissioner, who was in charge of regulating the Madison Guaranty S&L from 1985 until 1989 when Madison was taken over by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation.

The Committee is now investigating the operations of Madison S&L, a failure of which cost the American Taxpayer $60 million. Madison was run by Mr. Jim McDougal, the Clintons' Whitewater partner.

As I said at Tuesday's hearing, the Clintons and the McDougals were supposed to be 50/50 partners in Whitewater, but we now know that the McDougals put far more money into Whitewater than the Clintons. In fact, until mid-1986 the McDougals put more than $158,000 into Whitewater, while the Clintons put in at most $35,000.

The Committee is now investigating whether Governor Clinton provided any special benefit to Jim McDougal or Madison. Did Jim McDougal obtain improper influence with the Governor or his administration?

This past Tuesday the Committee heard William Lyon, a former Arkansas Bank Regulator, testify that then-Governor Clinton, at Mr. McDougal's request, asked Mr. Lyon to resign from the Arkansas Bank Board. Mr. Lyon testified that he was asked to resign after he refused to become Mr. McDougal's puppet on the State S&L Board, and particularly to approve Madison's issuance of preferred stock.

Today the Committee will examine Ms. Schaffer's oversight of Jim McDougal's Madison S&L. We now know from the Rose Law Firm billing records recently discovered under rather unusual circumstances in the Book Room of the President and Mrs. Clinton's residence at the White House, that Mrs. Clinton while a lawyer at the Rose Law Firm directly communicated with Ms. Schaffer on behalf of Madison.

The Committee will look into why Mr. McDougal was allowed to run the Madison S&L into the ground at a cost of $60 million to the taxpayers.

These are some of the issues that the Committee will address today.

Before turning to Senator Sarbanes for any comments he would like to make, I am going to ask our three witnesses to stand for the purposes of taking the oath.

[Do you swear or affirm that the testimony you are about to give is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you, God?]

Ms. SCHAFFER. I do.

Mr. BRADY. I do.

Mr. HANDLEY. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

After Senator Sarbanes or his colleagues make their remarks, I will then extend to Ms. Schaffer, Mr. Brady, and Mr. Handley the opportunity of making any remarks or any statement that they would like to give to the Committee.

Senator Sarbanes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, in view of the report that was submitted earlier this week with respect to the projected work timetable of this Committee, I would like to inquire of the Chairman what work program he sees before us, for instance, for next week, the week after, and the following week?

It is my strongly held view that this Committee ought to intensify its hearing schedule. We have met just 2 days this week and 2 days last week. In 1987, the Iran-Contra Committee held 21 days of hearings between July 7th and August 6th, and, in fact, this Committee this summer held 13 days of hearings between July 18th and August 10th.

It seems to me, given Resolution 120 and the February 29th date contained therein, it is incumbent on this Committee to move very expeditiously in holding these hearings.

Now, we could meet 4 or 5 days a week; we have done that before, as we now move into this Arkansas phase. I have to say to the Chairman, we have had difficulty getting from the Majority staff any real work schedule. The deposition schedules are done about a week at a time. We have no laid-out deposition schedule, and we have no laid-out hearing schedule. Are there going to be hearings next week?

The CHAIRMAN. I hope that we would have at least 3 days of hearings next week and the following 2 weeks. That would give us at least approximately 9 days of hearings. I think that is a very ambitious schedule, given the fact that many of the witnesses have not been interviewed. Some we may not even have an opportunity to interview.

That would probably encompass the work weeks of Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, to help accommodate those Members who may have to go home over the weekend, et cetera. So I think it is an ambitious one, but we will attempt to get in, at least, 9 hearing days over the next 3 weeks.

Senator SARBANES. Well, it would help in projecting the work schedule since apparently that is a plan in mind, if we knew who you intended to have in the hearings, and if there were some effort to work out a joint work program. I mean, do we know who is going to testify at these hearings at this point?

The CHAIRMAN. Again, we're trying to accommodate the various witnesses' schedules, so while we do have some idea—and I believe we have begun the process of scheduling next week's and the following week's witnesses and certainly the Majority with the Minority Counsels will continue to work together. And I will ask them to do so.

I am in the position to answer my colleague's question only because, prior to coming down this morning, I reviewed with our Chief Counsel and others our ability to conduct these hearings, and what witnesses we would be able to bring in, and what their intention is. Now some of them we may not be able to get in on a particular day, but it does look as if we can have 9 days of hearings in the course of the next 3 weeks.

Senator SARBANES. I think it is imperative, then, that there be a meeting between the Majority and the Minority to review the proposed hearing schedule: Who you plan to call; to review the deposition schedule; and to have some sense of what the lay of the land is. We ought to be able to do that and, if we are going to do our work properly, it seems to me incumbent upon us to do that.

The CHAIRMAN. We have no problem doing that. I would suggest after today's meeting we will do that, and that Counsels also can begin, and Associate Counsels, to lay out where we are going to attempt to go—recognizing that there always is the possibility that a witness, or a particular attorney at a particular time may ask for a certain accommodation. But it is the intent of the Chair at this point to move forward as expeditiously as possible and to have I think a rather ambitious work schedule. Given the fact that we cannot control all of the witnesses' times and appearances, and that we have and will continue to attempt to recognize the needs of people; this is our intent and we are going to proceed that way.

Senator SARBANES. I think we should have that discussion on the ambitiousness of the work schedule, I would like to review that with the Chairman. Today is Thursday, do we know the witnesses for Tuesday's hearing?

The CHAIRMAN. I will attempt during a break at lunch to see how many of the witnesses we have contacted and what the precise schedule is for Tuesday. And if we can go further in terms of spelling out Wednesday and Thursday, we would be happy and we should work with the Minority in making that information available. Certainly this is a matter of scheduling. There are some difficulties, but we will certainly share these with the Minority.

Ms. Schaffer, do you have a statement?

SWORN TESTIMONY OF BEVERLY BASSETT SCHAFFER, ESQ.
FORMER COMMISSIONER
ARKANSAS SECURITIES DEPARTMENT

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Brady.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM B. BRADY
FORMER ATTORNEY
ARKANSAS SECURITIES DEPARTMENT

Mr. BRADY. No, Your Honor.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Handley.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF CHARLES F. HANDLEY
ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER
ARKANSAS SECURITIES DEPARTMENT

Mr. HANDLEY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let me suggest you move the mikes a little closer.

Ms. Schaffer, during the period of time you were the Arkansas Securities Commissioner in the mid-1980's, you had responsibility to supervise savings and loans?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. One of those was the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were familiar with the fact that the Governor, Mr. Clinton, had a relationship with Mr. McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well to the extent that I knew what their relationship was, what I thought was that they were personal friends—a friendship from politics, and a personal friendship of a nature like he had with many other people in the State; a political supporter, and that's about all I—I mean, that is all that I knew about Jim McDougal's relationship with Bill Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the basis of your knowledge about this relationship?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The basis?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. Did the Governor talk to you about it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, he didn't—he never talked to me about Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who talked to you about it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Nobody had to talk to me about it. I think—

Mr. CHERTOFF. How—

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, if you were paying attention, you could have determined that Jim McDougal and Bill Clinton were personal friends. I think my husband told me that from politics over the years. I was aware that Jim McDougal told other people that they were friends. I was aware that he told people in the Securities Department before I ever got there that they were friends. Just by listening.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you believe they were friends?

Ms. SCHAFFER. My impression was that Jim McDougal exaggerated his relationship with Bill Clinton; that he exaggerated what the relationship was, and may have talked about the relationship in ways that I don't necessarily know that Bill Clinton would agree with.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you—

Ms. SCHAFFER. My impression was that he bragged about it, and that he wasn't necessarily to be believed as to what the relationship really was.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you believe they were friends?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I believed they were friends.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you believe the Governor took a special interest in what happened to Mr. McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that Mrs. Clinton represented Mr. McDougal, or the bank, the savings and loan, with respect to a matter that came before you as Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew that because Mrs. Clinton called you on that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to be quite clear on this. You did not have a belief or an understanding that the Governor had any particular interest in what happened to Mr. McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. A particular interest?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes. Was it a matter of interest to him—to the Governor—what happened to Mr. McDougal and his bank?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I don't know that it was of a particular interest. I think Bill Clinton was probably interested in a lot of people who had business before our department. I don't think—at the time I'm sure I didn't think of Mr. McDougal as some special individual; as far as Bill Clinton having an extraordinary interest in him, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember when in June 1986 it became apparent the Federal regulators wanted to have Mr. McDougal removed from his position of authority at the savings and loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I do.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember, in fact, you went to a meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Dallas in July 1986, for the purpose of discussing the fact that Mr. McDougal would have to be removed?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew about that in advance?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you feel a need to let Mr. Clinton know about the fact that Mr. McDougal was going to be removed before that meeting took place?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I don't know that Mr. Clinton was told that Mr. McDougal would be removed from the savings and loan. I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you try—Finish your answer.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know that Mr. Clinton was told. I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you try to tell him?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did not tell Bill Clinton. I had a conversation with Sam Bratton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who is Sam Bratton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Sam Bratton was the liaison between the Governor's office and the Arkansas Securities Department. He was the person in the Governor's office to whom we reported regularly on matters, you know, that the department had jurisdiction over. He was our liaison. He is the person that I talked to and told when we closed our other savings and loans in 1985. He is the person, if I had a problem that needed to be discussed, I was to talk to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He was your contact with the Governor, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Bratton, Sam Bratton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You talked to him over the time you were Commissioner about Madison Savings & Loan; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. And all of the other savings and loans that we had jurisdictions over.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You talked to Sam Bratton shortly before the meeting at which Mr. McDougal was removed?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told him there was going to be a meeting?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told him that Mr. McDougal was in trouble?

Ms. SCHAFFER. What I told him was—I told Sam essentially the same thing—gave him the same notice I gave the year before on another savings and loan that we closed. Which is that it appeared to me that this savings and loan was not going to survive.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you tell Mr. Bratton about the fact that Mr. McDougal was going to be removed from the savings and loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I don't know that I told him that. I wrote—my communication with Sam was this savings and loan is in trouble. This savings and loan, as far as I'm concerned, is going to need to be closed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you tell him that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. For the same reason I told him the year before about Guaranty Savings & Loan in Harrison, Arkansas, because I wanted them to know that a savings and loan in the State might well be getting ready to be closed and what could happen, the results—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Schaffer—

Ms. SCHAFFER. Let me finish—and I was also concerned, I had had press calls.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Press calls?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I had. You know, Arkansas is a small State and it doesn't take long for information to get around.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So why did you call—

Ms. SCHAFFER. I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you want the Governor to know that Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan was in trouble, and that—

Ms. SCHAFFER. May I finish?

Mr. CHERTOFF. —there was going to be a meeting about it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. May I finish?

Because I had had press calls that week asking me if Madison Guaranty was going to be closed; that they had heard Madison Guaranty may be closed. The word was starting to get out that Madison was in trouble.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would explain why you would call the press office, but why would you call the Governor's office?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I didn't call the press office. The press office? What press office?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you contact Mr. Bratton to have him notify the Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm trying to finish. OK?

Press calls—the press calling me and asking me, “Is Madison Guaranty going to be closed; we heard it?” They were down in the lobby of Madison Guaranty.

My concern with them finding out some other way, like the press calling the Governor's office, was I didn't want them to hear about it that way. I did not. And I was concerned that Mr. McDougal was getting word from those same press people, or other people, that something was afoot, or something may be fixing to happen, that they were panicking.

I really wanted to convey to Sam that this was very serious and that they should not have anything to do with Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you wanted to warn him off having anything to do with Jim McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Had you warned him about Jim McDougal previously? The Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. My impression was that Jim McDougal was the kind of person who would call up the Governor's office and very likely or very possibly go over there and try to involve the Governor's office—it could happen—in what was happening to his savings and loan, or what might—I didn't want him to have anything to do with him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Isn't it a fact that the reason you contacted Mr. Bratton was because you wanted to have a discussion with Mr. Bratton and the Governor about Madison Guaranty's trouble because you knew about the Governor's relationship with McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did know about the Governor's relationship, yes; that's why. And what I wanted to say to him was: This is not something anybody ought to talk about. This is not something you ought to have anything to do with. This is—you know, stay out of it. Lock the doors.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You wrote a note to Mr. Bratton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you see the note for the first time since 1986?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Oh, probably sometime in the fall of last year.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In the fall of last year?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who showed you the note?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The Independent Counsel.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. Let's put the note up. It is No. CCBW 884. I guess this is your handwriting; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is to “Sam”; that's Sam Bratton; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The note reads as follows: “Madison Guaranty is in pretty serious trouble. Because of Bill's relationship w/[ith] McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it. The meeting referred to in the attached letter has been moved up to July 11, 1986 and the FHLBB"—that is the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, is that right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —"has asked me to be at the meeting. Please note that while all of the FHLBB restrictions in the letter are serious, numbers 5 & 6 effectively put Madison out of business. Thank you for your support, BB." And "BB" is you; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And is there a mention of the word "press" in the note?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You attached a letter to this; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm going to ask that you look at CCBW 885, 886, and 887. For your information, these are a production of documents from Betsey Wright that we received a couple of days ago.

This is a letter addressed to the Board of Directors of the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan on June 19th concerning an examination being conducted of its operations. Is that the letter you attached to this note to Sam?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I believe so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't attach any press clippings, did you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Press clippings? There were no press clippings. I mean, the rumor—there was nothing but rumor at this point. The press would call our office asking about the rumor, which indicated to me that the information was starting to leak out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you wanted to have a conversation with the Governor and Sam Bratton about what was coming up with Madison; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. No, I did not want to have a conversation with the Governor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, "We probably ought to talk about it."

Ms. SCHAFFER. "We," Sam Bratton and I.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't want to talk to the Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I didn't need to talk to the Governor.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you wanted to talk to Sam Bratton before you went to the meeting; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I wanted to talk to Sam Bratton to tell him what was coming. Not necessarily before the meeting. I mean, I wasn't thinking the meeting is something that—that didn't set the timetable.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there any reason you couldn't simply have written a note to Sam saying Madison Guaranty is going to be closed. There are rumors about it. We just want to let you know that is going to happen?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I guess I could have said that. I didn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did you put in here, "Because of Bill's relationship with McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it"?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I just explained that, I think. Because of their relationship, and because of Mr. McDougal's history of bragging about his relationship with Bill Clinton, because of his having told people over the years that he was friends with Bill Clinton, you know, bragging about that relationship, I was concerned that he might try to involve the Governor's office and I didn't think they should have anything to do with it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't say in the note because McDougal brags about his relationship with the Governor. You said, "Because of Bill's relationship with McDougal." Was that true? Did you believe there was a relationship between the Governor and Mr. Jim McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I believed they were friends. I believed that Jim McDougal abused his relationship with Bill Clinton and might again.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He abused it in order to get influence? Is that what you are saying?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, he didn't get any, but he certainly tried.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't he have something to say about the appointments to the Arkansas Savings & Loan Board?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, he did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact, wasn't he the person that Bill Clinton looked to to make recommendations on that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was during your period of time; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Bill Clinton didn't talk to me about it, so I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But he did talk to Jim McDougal about it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I don't know that for a fact. I've read that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There have been documents the Committee has seen that say, "Bank Board, ask Jim McDougal"—

Ms. SCHAFFER. I haven't seen those.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. The Committee has seen them—but let's get back to this. You send this note, and you also sent along with it the letter that went to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Now you got a copy of this as Securities Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And was it confidential?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It's not something that should go to the press, or just a member of the public in general.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You sent it on up to the Governor; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now you make specific reference to 5 and 6, "Which could put Madison out of business." Those are on page 2 and page 3 of this letter; right? Number 5 and number 6?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Number 6 is a restriction, a proposed restriction that would prevent the savings and loan from doing business, any new business with a number of entities which are listed on the last page of the letter; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. One of those is Castle Sewer & Water Company; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. One of those is Industrial Development Company of Little Rock, IDC, a name that we have heard recently. Did you know that Mrs. Clinton was representing or doing work for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan with respect to IDC?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you did know she was representing Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan with respect to preferred stock; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, a year-and-a-half earlier, a year earlier. I did not know in 1986 that the Rose Law Firm was doing anything for them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew that because you had had a conversation in which she had called you; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, the purpose of her calling you was what, back in 1985?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know the purpose. I can tell you what happened in the call.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did she say to you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. You'll have to ask her for the purpose.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did she say to you in that call?

Ms. SCHAFFER. She called and said that—well, let me be careful about that because I can't remember exactly what was said. I'll be happy to tell you what I think happened in the conversation, what I remember happening, and I just want you to keep in mind I can't remember word for word.

What I recall from the conversation is this: That she introduced herself, said she was representing Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan; that they had a proposal that was—either had been sent to us, or was going to be sent to us—I thought she said it had been sent to us.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you know now it wasn't sent until the next day; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know. I have heard or I have read that she—her billing records show that she called on the 29th of April, but I—

Mr. CHERTOFF. And the letter was dated the 30th of April.

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct, but I remember—I mean, I don't remember it being before the letter came. That's my memory. I don't know—her billing records show the 29th. That's not my memory. My memory was that the call was after we had the letter.

In any event, she called and said that they had a proposal, and what it was about; and I said I'm familiar with that; I've already looked at that. You know, I agree with the—basically I have no problem with that position, and you will be getting a letter soon to that effect, or something—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you mean to tell me that in the conversation you had with her you told her you were familiar with the proposal, she discussed it with you, and you told her you agreed with her position?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well—

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's what you just said.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm paraphrasing. I'm saying—

Mr. CHERTOFF. In substance, I don't mean the exact words. This is very important because, frankly, we have heard other statements from the other participant in the conversation about this.

So your testimony now, it's abundantly clear, in substance is that she called you on this day, which is whatever is on the billing records—

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I don't know that it's whatever—I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. She called you on "a" day.

Ms. SCHAFFER. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You remember one call. She told you about this proposal. You told her you were familiar with it, and you told her you were going to agree with her and the letter would be coming.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I didn't tell her I was familiar with their—"the" proposal. I said, I'm familiar with the issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you—

Ms. SCHAFFER. Familiar with the issue, which I thought was very simple, very basic, very straightforward; and the reason why I can remember that we didn't discuss—the details, or the substance—the merits of the proposal is because I remember saying something very brief like, yeah, I'm familiar with that issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you—

Ms. SCHAFFER. I remember distinctly that in my mind I had already thought of that, looked at that; that it wasn't something new to me at all.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you told her, as you just said a moment ago in your testimony, that you agreed with her position. Right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well I think—I think what I said—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Don't—

Ms. SCHAFFER. —I think what I said was—I may have said, I agree with you. I think in substance I said, basically I agree with the position—I mean, that preferred stock can be issued pursuant to the Business Corporation Code.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told her that a letter would be coming, as you just indicated a moment ago?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I can't—I mean, the best I can do—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right.

Ms. SCHAFFER. —the best I can do is say that I really believe that I said something to the effect of, I don't think that's a particularly difficult issue. I have looked at that. You ought to be getting a letter. We'll try to do something as soon as I can get to it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now just for the record so you understand, and you remember only one call, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fairness I should say there was only one call listed on her billing records which we just discovered in the last 2 weeks. What is interesting about that, and which may interest you, Mr. Brady, is that the telephone call that occurred and which you have just described to us occurred before the Rose Law Firm sent the letter out.

Now, I want to switch back to 1986, a year later. You give Sam Bratton, the liaison with the Governor, this note about Madison Guaranty. You say you probably ought to talk about it because of Bill's relationship with McDougal. Then you send the letter listing the troubled transactions, one of which is IDC.

Did you know that within less than 2 weeks after you sent that note to the Governor through Mr. Bratton with that letter, that less than 2 weeks later Mrs. Clinton sent a letter back to the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan saying that they wanted to terminate the relationship representing them?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I've read that in the newspaper.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll put it up. It is RLF2 3062-3063.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, could I make an inquiry here? I take it what Ms. Schaffer said is she didn't know. To the extent you know it now, it is because you might have read about it in the paper? Is that right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I think it is very important that we be clear here and get out of this witness what she knew.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know about this at the time?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know about any other steps that were taken by the Governor—well, let me withdraw the question.

Am I correct in saying basically that the reason you wanted to let the Governor know through Sam Bratton about what was going to happen with respect to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan was to help him protect himself from McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I can't let you—I do not think that I told Sam Bratton what was going to happen to Jim McDougal. I think what my note says is that it looks—that I believe that they needed to be closed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I think what it says is, “. . . is in pretty serious trouble. Because of Bill's”——

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —“relationship with McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it.” Was the purpose of letting Sam Bratton and the Governor know about this to let them know so they could protect themselves with respect to McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So they could distance themselves from Mr. McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Or do whatever they wanted to do with respect to Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You would agree with me that one way to distance yourself from McDougal is to return your retainer and say you're not going to represent them anymore; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's Hillary Clinton. That's not Bill Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know whether there were any discussions in the Governor's office at that point in time about whether the Governor was holding Whitewater stock with McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I have no idea if there were discussions in the Governor's office. I never was told about Whitewater Development Company. I had no idea that Bill Clinton had a business relationship with Jim McDougal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well let me see, just to make sure we know whether you have any familiarity with it. I want to put up CCBW 888, and it is another Betsey Wright document. It is a slip of paper that says: “State of Arkansas, Office of the Governor.” It says: “To: Gov” and there's a little checkmark; from “BW,” Betsey Wright. It's dated July 14th. “White Water stock [McDougal's company]—Do you still have? [Pursuant to Jim's current problems.] If so, I'm worried about it.” And then there is, in other handwriting, scrawled, “No—Don't have any more.” Then there's a “B.” I take it you're not that “B”?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That “B” is Bill.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that's Bill Clinton's handwriting?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you can help us with this document to the extent of letting us know that when Betsey Wright on July 14th writes, "White Water stock [McDougal's company]—Do you still have? [Pursuant to Jim's current problems.] If so, I'm worried about it." That the person who responds, "No—Don't have any more," was Bill Clinton. Right? Because that is his handwriting?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go back to the issue of Mr. McDougal a little bit more because something you said intrigued me. You said that Mr. McDougal was someone that you viewed as—you understood that he had some kind of a friendship and a relationship with Governor Clinton? Correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You understood that he was, shall we say, had problems or was a questionable type of character even before the middle of the summer of 1986 when the Federal regulators decided to kick him out of the bank? Correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm not sure what the question to me is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, did you know that he was a kind of a shady character, to use a kind of a common term, even before you heard from the Federal regulators in the middle of 1986 that they wanted him out of the bank?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Are you asking my personal opinion of McDougal? Or my professional—

Mr. CHERTOFF. I am asking what your knowledge was as of 1985 when you got a request from the First Lady on behalf of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Did you know that Jim McDougal was a guy who had done things in the past that were illegal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. I don't know Jim McDougal. I didn't know Jim McDougal. I didn't have the benefit of 4 years of knowledge that I have today about Jim McDougal in 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In 1984, you represented Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did not represent Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. The law firm in which I was an associate represented Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Jim Guy Tucker, the current Governor, was one of the partners working on that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You prepared a memo for him regarding Campobello Island Estates?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to make sure you have it. It is dated March 14, 1984. Are you familiar with the memo?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, no, I'm not. As you know, Mr. Chertoff, I have not been deposed by the Committee, so, of course, I don't have this document or any other documents. Everybody else has seen it but me I think in the last 4 years, but the Independent Counsel has shown it to me.

The CHAIRMAN. We will give you the memo. One moment.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In fact what I would like to suggest, Mr. Chairman, is that we could maybe pause for a moment—

The CHAIRMAN. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. —and give the witness an opportunity to read the memo, because I gather you have not actually had an opportunity to read it in recent years.

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, not in 10 years I think, or 12.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you did write it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I did.

Senator SARBANES. Well, the way it works around here, Ms. Schaffer, I think you had better read it first before you agree that you wrote it, just so we can be sure. OK?

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes, I don't think that was necessary. We have given this to Ms. Schaffer, and we have asked her to take her time and to review it to ascertain whether this is the case. Have you had an opportunity, Ms. Schaffer, to—

Ms. SCHAFFER. Some of it is hard for me to read, but I can get the gist of it.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We can start the clock again. Do you agree you wrote the memo?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would you agree with me that the gist of the memorandum is that with respect to Campobello Island Estates, which was one of the real estate properties in which Madison Guaranty through Madison Financial had invested, that there were legal problems with the sale of the land?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That there might be.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was because he had not registered the land sales as he was supposed to; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That was my understanding.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also had the understanding that it wasn't the first time he violated the Act because you, right in your memo at page 3, say that McDougal did not make a filing with respect to Maple Creek Farms or Gold Mine Springs; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I'm a little concerned about that sentence in that I don't know that I had—that might have been an assumption. I think that there was an effort later to find out whether they were required to have filed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But in your state of mind as of 1984, you had an awareness that Mr. McDougal was in violation, was operating in violation of the law?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, no. I think what this does is alert them to the fact that there may be a violation. It may be to advise Mr. Tucker that a filing may be required. If it hasn't been made, then one should be made and they need to take the steps to deal with it. Here are the penalties. Here are the possible sanctions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me read you from the next-to-the-last paragraph on page 3. And I want to emphasize, this is something that you wrote in 1984, in March, which is about a year before you heard from Mrs. Clinton with respect to the desire of Madison to offer stock. It says:

Although the likelihood of criminal sanctions being imposed against a developer appears to be relatively small, it has to be done.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry,

It has been done. Evidence that the developer willfully violated the Act would have to be fairly strong. The only concern I have on this point is the fact that McDougal did not make a filing with the OILSR on Maple Creek Farms or on Gold Mine Springs, and, to the best of my knowledge, there was no exemption available for those developments. This must be disclosed in the Statement of Record for Campobello Island Estates. The failure to comply with the Act in connection with one or two previous land development projects is some evidence that the failure once again to comply with the Act was willful and not just a negligent oversight.

Would you agree with me that if there is a willful violation of the Act, it is not merely subject to civil penalty, it is a crime? Right? That's what the memo says, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to end with your conclusion—

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think I need to add, however, that I don't have—I said, "to the best of my knowledge," which was extremely limited. That is the point. "To the best of my knowledge," what I was telling them was, you need to deal with this. "To the best of my knowledge," which was almost none, "as to any other projects." That was strictly from a reading of the Act. I didn't know the details of the other projects.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In 1985—I want to read you the end, and then I am going to ask you this question—whether in 1985 when you got indication from Mrs. Clinton that Jim McDougal wanted to issue stock in this very same savings and loan, I want to know if you had any information that changed this between the time you wrote this in 1984 and your understanding then—

Ms. SCHAFFER. I didn't even remember this—

Mr. CHERTOFF. —in 1985.

Ms. SCHAFFER. —in 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't remember? You didn't remember you had done work on McDougal's savings and loan a year earlier?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did not remember having done this memorandum—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you—

Ms. SCHAFFER. —a year earlier on—that's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You didn't remember having done work on Mr. McDougal's sales of land for the savings and loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I didn't even think about it, Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Here we are. I want to read you the last page, the last two paragraphs:

Perhaps just as potentially devastating to the project is the possibility that upon discovering the failure of McDougal and Wade to make a filing and determining that they should have complied with the Act and did not, HUD would seek an injunction against them to force them to stop selling lots or making any improvements whatsoever until they comply with the Act. . . .

Then to go to the next paragraph, you go:

These risks should be weighed against the benefit of moving forward now on the initial 93 lots without first complying with the Act. The obvious benefit of moving forward is that the sale of those lots will provide critical capital needed immediately to fund the start-up of the project and will hopefully generate more widespread interest in the project as well. On the other hand, the more interest there is in the project, the higher profile it will have, thereby increasing the likelihood that HUD, unfortunately—

And they're the regulators, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you say:

Will also be interested in the project. These, of course, are business risks which require business decisions.

When you were a regulator, Campobello Island came up in the discussion of Jim McDougal's bank; right? When you were at that Federal Home Loan Bank Board meeting; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you mention this? Did that bring this memo to mind?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, it did not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me leave you with one last question, or one last statement I want to put in for the record.

You have given us a recollection as best you can of your conversation with Mrs. Clinton which took place, you don't know the date, but the records establish the day, concerning her representation of Madison in connection with the issuance of the stock. You have described what she said to you. You have described what you said to her.

I will tell you what she said in her interrogatory responses to the RTC that were dated—"In the Matter of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association." I don't know that I have the date on them, but it is at page—it is, sorry, the Order of February 4, 1994.

She goes at page 41:

I was not involved in any meetings with State regulators on these matters. I may have made one telephone call to the Arkansas Securities Department to find out to whom Mr. Massey should direct any inquiries regarding an S&L matter. I do not remember to whom I spoke. Insofar as I am aware, my name appears only three times in the many documents exchanged by Rose and the State regulators.

I will also put in for the record another answer given by Mrs. Clinton in the same set of interrogatory responses. This has to do with her sending back that retainer to the Madison Savings & Loan within 2 weeks after you let the Governor know through Mr. Bratton—I'm not saying you knew he was going to do it—but within 2 weeks after you gave the Governor that information, that the regulators were going to be meeting about, among other things, IDC, she sends back the retainer.

When she is asked about it, she says, and this is on page 38:

When I wrote my July 17, 1986 memo to Herb Rule (. . .) and my July 14, 1986 letter to Messrs. McDougal and Latham (. . .), I do not believe I had heard anything about a July 11, 1986 meeting in Dallas between FSLIC and Madison Guaranty personnel.

Yet, you will agree, having seen your own note to Sam Bratton, that you specifically indicated that there was going to be a July 11, 1986 meeting between the regulators and the people at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan because Madison Guaranty was in serious trouble. That is in your note, right, which we just put up there, your note of July 2nd?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The question is what?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I correct that your note of July 2nd, within 2 weeks before that retainer was sent back, does tell Sam Bratton to convey to the Governor that there was going to be a July 11th meeting between the regulators and Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan because the Bank was in serious trouble. Right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It doesn't say that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, it does not say to "tell the Governor" anything. I don't know—whatever they wanted to do with it after that was their business, but it doesn't say, "tell Bill Jim's in trouble."

Mr. CHERTOFF. Well, why don't we put the note up on the Elmo. It says, "Madison"——

Ms. SCHAFFER. It says, "we should talk," you and I should talk.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says:

Because of Bill's relationship with McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it. The meeting referred to in the attached letter has been moved up to July 11, 1986, and the FHLBB has asked me to be at the meeting.

And then you attached to this note the 3-page letter, which I have shown you earlier, which actually sets forth the problems the FHLBB has with, among other things, IDC. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. My note clearly mentions the meeting in Dallas and attaches the letter. I just want to make sure I'm answering the question in that and not answering everything else you said.

Mr. CHERTOFF. All right. So your note mentions the July 11th meeting and attaches the letter?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I would also—may I say something?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Ms. SCHAFFER. In this conversation with Mrs. Clinton, I have—I mean, I didn't get to finish what happened in the conversation.

She did ask me—that's how come it was so brief. That is the reason it was brief, as I recall, because I didn't give her an opportunity to say much else when I said, "I'm familiar with that issue," and really brushed it more or less aside.

She said, "Who should we work with at the Department?" I referred her to Charles Handley. I said, "He is the one who is working on this. He is the one who knows all of this, all about it; work with Charles."

I don't think that my recollection is inconsistent with that, at all.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. Thank you.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Schaffer, how long did this phone conversation with Mrs. Clinton last? Do you recall?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Five minutes.

Senator SARBANES. It was a short, brief conversation?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Now the reason I ask you that question, and you've probably seen it, is the press is reporting it as an hour-long conversation.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator SARBANES. The reason the press reports it as an hour-long conversation is because Mrs. Clinton on her timesheets indicated an hour. She indicated that hour not only for the telephone conversation with you, but for other matters as well.

What has happened is that has been abstracted now in the report that she had an hour-long conversation with you, even though her own billing records show that, while she listed that conversation, she listed other matters as well when she put the hour on her billing sheets. So I want to be very clear about it. Your conversation with her was a matter of minutes, you said; maybe as much as 5 minutes, at most?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you, Senator Sarbanes.

Good morning, Ms. Schaffer, Mr. Brady, Mr. Handley.

We have gone back and forth over a period of some years, and questions have been asked in kind of rapid form. Let me ask a question that has not been asked yet. Ms. Schaffer, did anyone apply any pressure upon you to do any favor for or on behalf of the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan or Mr. McDougal, ever?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Brady, do you feel that any pressure was put on you to do any favor, or to do anything untoward on behalf of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. BRADY. Sir, I only dealt with them on this one issue that you already have my statement on. No, I do not—nobody ever attempted any pressure on me in regard to Madison.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you do anything improper or untoward?

Mr. BRADY. I do not believe I did.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And did Ms. Schaffer do anything improper or untoward, as far as you know?

Mr. BRADY. Well, I had suggested that the whole matter be referred to the Attorney General for his opinion on the propriety of the issuance of the stock. I was not as sure of that as the Rose Firm attorneys would have been—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We understand.

Mr. BRADY. —and she took their position, and she was more sure of it than I, but I can't say that was wrong; no.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And, Mr. Handley, did anyone put any pressure on you to do anything improper or untoward to favor Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you or Mr. Brady or Ms. Schaffer do anything to favor Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now let's go back to this memorandum which has been marked CCBW 884 of July 2, 1986, Ms. Schaffer, your handwritten note to Mr. Bratton. Can we put that up, please?

If I understand your testimony, you knew that Mr. McDougal had worked for Mr. Clinton; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think my husband told me that—I didn't know that. I think he told me sometime later that Jim McDougal had worked maybe in the Governor's office for Bill Clinton during his first term.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. You knew that there was some relationship between the two men?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you were also aware that Mr. McDougal had the reputation of throwing names around and of being something of a braggart?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now if I understand your testimony here this morning, your concern was to advise Mr. Bratton about the circumstances and the condition of the Bank and what was likely to happen with respect to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, and that you were also concerned that Mr. McDougal might blindside somebody.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed the Governor, or somebody in the Governor's office, with some request and you wanted them to be prepared for it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I wanted them to be prepared to stay out of it; to tell them to get lost.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that is not an unusual occurrence in connection with the head of a regulatory agency dealing with the Chief Executive Officer? Would that be fair to say?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No—I regularly—I think this is what is unfair about the characterization of me calling the Governor's office and telling them, informing them as to the perilous condition of Madison Guaranty. I had done the same thing in 1985 with regard to two other savings and loans. In fact, I'd had several conversations in 1985 with Sam Bratton about the savings and loan we eventually closed that year. The State had money in that savings and loan that was possibly not insured. We had several conversations.

In addition, we were worried about press calls, that it may provoke a run on the savings and loan. Another savings and loan in Conway, Arkansas, that I wrote a lengthy memorandum, a 2- or 3-page typed memorandum to Sam Bratton about in 1985, and I'd like for somebody to get that. I don't have it. I've asked the Securities Department to find it. They say they can't find it. But that kind of communication was not unusual. In fact, I took a day or two to write the memo to Sam in 1985 about a small savings and loan in Conway, and he had no relationship with anybody there.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well rest assured that we will try to get it, and that you will have the opportunity today—it may not come at the moment that it occurs to you to give it, but you will have the opportunity to put these things in the proper context before the day is out. So I want to assure you of that, and we will probably be here for several hours.

Now with respect to the suggestion that maybe it was improper—and I do not say that my friend, Mr. Chertoff, made that allegation—but lest there be any confusion about it, that the communication that you had gotten from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board was somehow something that it was improper for you to share with the Chief Executive Officer of the State, could you comment on that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That is not my interpretation. Obviously the Federal Home Loan Bank Board documents are confidential, and we had a confidentiality agreement with them, the purpose of which obviously was not to disclose damaging information about a savings and loan to the public in general, that might trigger a run on the savings and loan and cause its collapse. Clearly you have to be careful with that.

But in my view it was important that the Governor's office know in advance that the savings and loan might be closed; that a rumor was on the street that it might be, and be prepared to take those calls from constituents who feel free to call the Governor's office to complain about their checking account in Arkansas if they don't like the way it is being handled; that if those calls came in, they needed to be prepared to answer them and assure people that—not to worry.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The whole question about a confidence in the savings and loans and the threat of runs on particular banks that were in trouble was of grave concern both in Arkansas and also throughout the country at that time, increasingly so?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me go to this question which has become part of the reflected wisdom or mantra that is recited about the Whitewater matter in general as it relates to the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan failure and what it cost the American people. When did you recommend that the bank be taken over?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That it be closed?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Ms. SCHAFFER. And transferred to FSLIC?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Ms. SCHAFFER. In 1987, December, I think December.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Of what year?

Ms. SCHAFFER. 1987.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When was it actually closed?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It was transferred to the FDIC I think in March 1989, in a management consignment program I think to await funding of the RTC.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was the reason why your recommendation for the closing of the bank and the takeover by Federal authorities not acted on by you independently of Federal authorities?

Ms. SCHAFFER. In my view—and I have told this story many times—that although we did have the statutory authority to do that, as a practical matter we did not believe it was feasible, or advisable, or a responsible thing to do without the concurrence and the participation of the Federal Home Loan Bank in that process. Because without their participation, there would be—FSLIC would not be participating and there would be no depositor payoff at the time of closing the institution.

It concerned me greatly that if you proceeded with a State receivership with no participation of the FSLIC and had to tell depositors at the time that there would be no depositor payoff, that—this was in 1985 and 1986, and no one was aware really generally in the public that the FSLIC didn't have any money, or was asking for money from Congress and didn't have enough money—that that would immediately disseminate that information everywhere. I thought that was an irresponsible thing to do.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. As a matter of fact, the Federal authorities really advised that they would get to this in time, and that prudence should dictate, and this was a larger question than just Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And we have your letter of December 10, 1987, to Mr. Stuart Root, the Director of the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation here in Washington, which is Document No. 5000326 and 7. I am not going to take the time to go through that now, but rest assured that we do have that document and it is corroborated in the record that you made that request.

Let me go to the question of how much money was lost as the result of the delay between the time that you asked that the bank be closed and the time that the bank was actually closed.

I want to refer the Committee to the CNN interview of Walter Faulk. Could we put that up, please. Walter Faulk was the former Federal regulator who was a Senior Vice President with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Dallas, Texas, and he would have had authority over Arkansas S&L's. Correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. He was the supervisory agent for many of the Arkansas savings and loans.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Camp, an interviewer for CNN, was asking Mr. Faulk the following questions, and I will read from the record:

Mr. CAMP: At the time of Mrs. Schaffer's letter, this audit report estimated Madison was about $10.5 million in the hole. By 1989, when Madison was finally closed, losses had climbed to $15 million. Since then, the Federal Government has sold off Madison's holdings at bargain-basement prices and taxpayer losses have soared to $68 million today.

Mr. FAULK: Had it been timely acquired [meaning acquired by the Federal authorities], it's my opinion that whatever the ultimate loss is, it could greatly have been curtailed, by the taking of more timely action.

Mr. CAMP: So this would have been a Federal problem, not a State problem?

Mr. FAULK: That's correct.

Mr. CAMP: And what about Beverly Bassett Schaffer's role?

Mr. FAULK: She acted responsibly at all times and I don't see how anyone could say, that knew the history of this case, or who would look into the history of the case, could say that she acted irresponsible or delayed or drug her feet in any manner whatsoever.

Now let me turn, Ms. Schaffer to the question of the appropriateness of the raising of capital through the sale of preferred stock that was a year-and-a-half or so before this Federal Home Loan Bank Board meeting that we have described here today together with your memo to Mr. Bratton.

So a year-and-a-half before you were advised that the Rose Law Firm has been retained by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan to look into the possibility of raising capital through the issuance of preferred stock. Is it correct that this is a matter—that is, the raising of capital through the issuance of preferred stock—that was widely considered throughout the United States at this time?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The preferred stock instrument that was being considered, the kind of instrument that was being considered by Madison, was being considered and recommended really everywhere by Federal regulators particularly for small savings and loans, closely held entities without a market, no public market for common stock, as an alternative or as a way to raise capital. Obviously, debt, you know, would not be counted as part of their regulatory net worth. For a small institution with no other way of—no public market, you know, for common stock of any kind, preferred stock was probably the only realistic instrument available to raise equity to infuse capital in a savings and loan during this time, and that is why the Federal Home Loan Bank was pushing it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All right. When you say the Federal Home Loan Bank was pushing it, in other words this was something that the Federal regulators saw as a salutary way, a good way for the banks in trouble to raise their capitalization?

Ms. SCHAFFER. One of the few ways.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me refer you to a November 1985 article that appeared in The American Banker, and refer to it very briefly. This is obviously a LEXIS-NEXUS printout from that publication, and I refer to the paragraph on the first page of the article—it is a long article, and I am not going to go into all the details—but it says: “The capitalization of the thrift industry gradually declined during the 1970’s and early 1980’s. Only in the past year has the slide in the industry’s average capital-to-asset ratio been halted, and the capital bases of many thrifts still remain too thin.” That was a problem of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes. Without sufficient capital, with the losses in real estate, there was no capital to write those losses off against. As their net worth eroded, the more capital they needed to book any losses against down the road.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They would be in a net loss position and insolvent? If they were too thin, the danger was they would go under the line?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now skipping a paragraph: “In response to the concerns over their soundness, thrifts, like banks, have employed a variety of methods to improve capitalization, including increasing their retained earnings, issuing new common and preferred stock, and instituting new forms of long-term debt.” Correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And this was very commonly known throughout the country, and something which the Federal regulators were encouraging savings and loans to do, as well as banks, in order to improve their position?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That’s my belief.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In fact, the work that the Rose Law Firm was doing and handled by Mr. Massey, Mr. Brady and Mr. Handley, did you have contact with Mr. Massey?

Mr. HANDLEY. I did.

Mr. BRADY. I did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So Mr. Handley, you had contact with Mr. Massey and what was the issue over which you had contact?

Mr. HANDLEY. Well, initially it was the preferred stock issue; and later they filed a broker-dealer application.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the preferred stock issue, while you all agreed that under Arkansas law it would be permissible for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan to increase its capitalization through the issuance of preferred stock, there was a hitch, wasn’t there?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, they had to file a specific application to do so. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was that, Ms. Schaffer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The specific application?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The “hitch” that was—the condition that was attached to their ability to do it.

Ms. SCHAFFER. The initial approval, so-called “approval” of the novel stock plan was really just an opinion that State law didn’t prohibit issuance of preferred stock by State-chartered thrifts. But they never followed up with a specific proposal on the form of instrument, and a specific amount of dollars they would raise, and a disclosure document, and all the sorts of things that would have to have been done in advance.

In addition, they filed a broker-dealer application that they wanted to be approved to begin operating, we feared, in order to utilize it to place the preferred stock, and that is precisely what we did not want.

The condition attached to the approval of the broker-dealer was that they first raise the $3 million in capital through whatever means, a third-party, an independent arms' length transaction, not an affiliated broker-dealer, infuse the capital, demonstrate financial responsibility, and then operation of the broker-dealer might could be approved, but they would not have been—they were not allowed to use that vehicle to place their own stock.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. First they would have to raise funds in compliance with Federal regulations—

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —in advance of issuing the preferred stocks?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The Minimum Net Worth requirements were actually Federal regulations. The State's requirement as to the financial condition of the savings and loan was that they be solvent. So actually the Minimum Net Worth requirements that we told them they would have to meet in advance were a higher standard than the State law required.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They could not meet those requirements by selling the preferred stock? They could not get there through the vehicle of the preferred stock?

Ms. SCHAFFER. They could if they placed the preferred stock through an unaffiliated third party brokerage firm. They had to place that capital independently of the savings and loan itself. In other words, we did not want them using their own subsidiary to place this stock that they claimed would be the way to recapitalize the institution. That was not acceptable.

Senator SARBANES. You were not going to allow them to use their own broker-dealer to place the preferred stock?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator SARBANES. They put a condition on that; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator SARBANES. You said, if you are going to raise this capital by preferred stock, what you ought to do, you're going to have to raise it independently and not through your own broker-dealer subsidiary. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Handley, that was clear to you that you were imposing a requirement that exceeded the State requirement on Madison in terms of increasing their capital-to-loan ratio?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, as Ms. Bassett said, the Federal regulation benchmark at that time was 3 percent of total assets. We told them they had to meet that benchmark before we approved their broker-dealer application.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You had considerable back-and-forth with Mr. Massey about this, but he accepted that this was a requirement with which Madison would have to comply in order to go forward?

Mr. HANDLEY. Mr. Massey and Mr. Latham, through correspondence and meeting with them, it was well understood that before we approved the broker-dealer application—we also give them a time limit in which they had to meet the net worth requirements.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now in the vernacular, did anyone approach you to cut them any slack in connection with this requirement?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did Ms. Schaffer tell you, well, look the other way, or give them more time than you were prepared to give them?

Mr. HANDLEY. I have always said what I thought and did what I wanted to.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that is exactly the way your department treated this matter?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In fact, as a result of the requirements which you imposed, Madison was unable to comply and never went forward with the issuance or sale of any preferred stock. Correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. They didn't issue any preferred stock, and they also didn't have a broker-dealer subsidiary.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Nor was that approved. Nor was there any approval for the sale of the preferred stock through that vehicle of a broker-dealer by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's correct, because they never did bring their net worth up.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So all of this business about having a cozy relationship and taking advantage of a personal relationship to get a favor for Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan is pure hokum, isn't it?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, in my opinion, I can only see benefits of issuing the preferred stock. I mean, it would help the regulators; it would help the depositors; it would help the insurers. I just—I don't see what's bad about it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If they could have complied with the requirements that you laid down, it would have been a good thing; but they couldn't; they didn't; and nobody asked you to try to find a way to get around those requirements for them?

Mr. HANDLEY. Absolutely not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me turn to the question of—and I know it is somewhat unfair, Ms. Schaffer, to ask you about things that you did not know about contemporaneously. I refer to the fact that the Rose Law Firm refunded the remaining retainer funds that were in its possession to Madison, and responded to a request within the firm to see whether the firm would be able to represent the FSLIC in anticipated matters relating to the savings and loan and banking crises of the late 1980's.

Let me ask you this question as a general proposition: Is it within your ambit of knowledge that law firms around the country were all trying to determine at that time whether they would be in a position to bid for and to get Federal FSLIC or FDIC business at this time?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I was not in private practice at this time so—I think that is probably true, but I'm not sure I have personal knowledge of what private law firms were doing at the time, since I was a regulator at that time. There certainly was a lot of the business to be passed around. I know that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The question was that if there was a conflict at the law firm, that business would not be available. So that the managing partners or other partners in the firm were trying to canvass their firm to see what business they had in the firm and whether that would make it impossible or infeasible for the firm to bid on the Federal business?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That would be the right thing to do for bidding on it, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Finally, with respect to the meeting in Dallas, did you take any action at the meeting in Dallas inconsistent, in your view, with the best interests of the depositors of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We knew in advance of the meeting in Dallas what the plan was, and we fully supported that and encouraged it, and met with Walter Faulk and his people before the meeting and discussed what he was going to say. He was going to conduct the meeting. I sat with him at the head of the room. He conducted the meeting. We knew what was to take place; that an ultimatum was going to be given; that the Cease and Desist Order would be entered, or there would be a filing made in Federal court to force it. We fully supported that.

I have heard last summer in House Banking Committee hearings that I wasn't invited to that I didn't say anything. I didn't have to say anything. Mr. Faulk said all and more that needed to be said.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And Mr. Faulk—

Ms. SCHAFFER. He said it well.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. —is the—

Ms. SCHAFFER. The only reason I would have needed to talk is to—you know, for myself. It wasn't necessary. He told them the way it was going to be, and they accepted it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And Mr. Faulk is the same gentleman whose comments I read earlier who said that you acted in all respects appropriately?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, we fully supported the action and encouraged it, and hoped that—

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, my red light is on.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bond.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER S. BOND

Senator BOND. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Good morning, Ms. Schaffer.

Did you know a fellow named Mickey Brown who was the savings and loan supervisor in Missouri. He worked for me about the time that you came into office as the Commissioner of Securities?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator BOND. Well, I was interested. I think that you all perform similar functions. Among the responsibility that you had as Commissioner was to ensure the safety and soundness of State-chartered S&L's in Arkansas, was it not?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We had oversight of State-chartered S&L's.

Senator BOND. And did you have examiners who examined State S&L's?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We did not.

Senator BOND. How did you conduct the examinations of State S&L's?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We did not. My understanding is that sometime in the 1970's—and Charles is probably more knowledgeable about this than I—that perhaps, or late 1970's or early 1980's, that the department did not do joint examinations anymore; that in lieu of the examinations they required an independent audit.

I really think I am going to have to let Charles address that, because that was the policy in place when I came to the department. My department's primary responsibility was to regulate the securities industry, and then other things like credit unions and savings and loans.

I suspect that part of the reason that on-site examinations fell by the wayside or an audit was determined to be better, or in lieu of that, was just a lack of staff and resources to do that.

Senator BOND. The FHLBB was doing the audits?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator BOND. In any event, were they the ones solely who had the safety and soundness responsibility?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well——

Senator BOND. Did your office review the audits to ascertain whether they were adequate, of the S&L's?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The Federal Home Loan Bank audits? Or the independent audits?

Senator BOND. No, the independent audits.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator BOND. You did. So you had the audits?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator BOND. Did you have any responsibility to take any action at the State level where a savings and loan had its net worth impaired?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Most of our savings and loans' net worth—most of the savings and loans had impaired net worth at this time that we had jurisdiction over.

We had statutory authority in the event—I don't have the statute in front of me—that an institution became insolvent, that we could appoint a receiver. It did require us to tender that receivership, though, to the FSLIC.

Senator BOND. But you did work with the FHLBB?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, we did.

Senator BOND. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator BOND. They apparently kept you advised of what steps were going on and what steps they were going to take with respect to Arkansas State-chartered savings and loans?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator BOND. They required you to keep that confidential?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We had a confidentiality agreement with them, and it was my understanding and belief that the documents could not be distributed. I don't think that meant to other State officials.

Senator BOND. Was there any exemption for other State officials?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm not sure what the confidentiality agreement we have said. I don't even know. I'm not sure I ever saw it.

Senator BOND. Who was the one that developed the practice of communication with Sam Bratton about a potentially failing Arkansas savings and loan? Was that something that Mr. Bratton of the Governor's office asked? Or was that something that you initiated on your own?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I initiated that on my own.

Senator BOND. That had not been the previous practice?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, until I got there there were no—I mean, the savings and loans failed—the first ones in history failed, unfortunately for me, while I was there. So there wasn't really—

Senator BOND. I know the feeling.

Ms. SCHAFFER. —anything to look to in the past in terms of how to communicate, or a method of communication, or appropriate communication about them.

Senator BOND. I went back to check because Mr. Ben-Veniste has said that it was standard practice to advise the Governor or the top officials. I believe that he is dead wrong on that.

You have adopted that practice. Today, I asked Mr. Brown specifically who would be notified if they were going to take down a savings and loan, if they were going to close it or take regulatory action. He said the only people they would notify would be the Federal Home Loan Bank Board; that nobody else would know. When they took down a big savings and loan in Missouri, he said he did not even advise the director of his department.

I asked him why not, what if one of my big contributors was involved in a financial institution that was going down? He said, you would be the last one to know.

I said, why? He said, well because if anybody found out that we were going to take down a savings and loan, somebody could be juggling around, doctoring the books, or Mickey Mousing—not artful, perhaps, but I think you understand what he said. He said it would be like a pitcher telling a batter what he was going to throw, because there are changes that could be made in the institution if they know in advance that a Cease and Desist Order or other regulatory action is being taken.

Can you give us any assurance that the information that you conveyed to Mr. Bratton did not reach Mr. McDougal or any of the other people, or Mr. Latham, prior to the July 11th meeting?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think they already had some sense something was coming at the July meeting because there were press inquiries. I think that that information was already leaking out. I don't think they knew what was going to happen, but I think they were beginning to panic.

Senator BOND. But they didn't have the knowledge that you had of the regulatory action.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I am not sure that I knew when I wrote this note to Sam Bratton, or I don't think I told him what was going to happen at the Dallas meeting. I'd have to ask Sam, but I don't think I told him what was going to happen at the July meeting.

You know, you have probably taken his deposition, but I haven't talked to him, because if I talk to him then I'll have a problem, another problem, because I talked to Sam Bratton. So I'm trying to recall as best I can without talking to him what I may have said, but I don't believe I told him what was going to happen at the Dallas meeting. I may have, but I don't have—I had trusted Sam Bratton with the information. I never thought that they[sic] would pass that kind of information along.

Senator BOND. But you did expect him to pass it along.

Didn't you testify earlier that the purpose of the July 2, 1986 memo, that handwritten note to Sam signed "BB" was to let the Clintons know that they ought to slam the door or have nothing further to do with Mr. McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I wanted to let Sam Bratton know. Sam could do whatever he wanted to with that. My advice was, to him, to Sam, who is my only contact.

Senator BOND. Yes.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, this is not something anybody ought to meddle with.

Senator BOND. Yes. But you also stated earlier today, if I recall, that you told him that so that they would either shut the door or the Clintons would have nothing further to do with Mr. McDougal, did you not?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It was my impression that Mr. McDougal abused his relationship.

Senator BOND. Yes, I understand that.

Ms. SCHAFFER. And I suspected that if he was panicking, that he might do it again.

Senator BOND. So you passed that information to Mr. Bratton for the purpose of protecting the Clintons—

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I—No—

Senator BOND. Let me finish. You have been cut off, and I think that is unfortunate and I apologize for that, but let me finish. You told us that you conveyed that information for a purpose, and you stated here today that the purpose was that the Clintons should have nothing further to do with McDougal. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I conveyed the information so they would know what I believed the condition of Madison was, like I did with the two other savings and loans in 1985. I also did not—you don't understand. I mean, that's the kind of thing—somebody would call up the Governor's office and—that's not—because everybody knows everybody.

Now, I know that has been talked about in terms of, you know, some sinister force, but my goal was not to protect the Clintons. I am not interested in protecting the Clintons. I wasn't interested in protecting anybody. My purpose was to make sure that Jim McDougal—

Senator BOND. Was cut off from the Clintons?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Not "cut off." You don't understand.

Senator BOND. Oh, I think I do.

Ms. SCHAFFER. What did I know about the relationship?

Senator BOND. I think I do. You applied for the position of Securities Commissioner. Your brother, Woody, wrote letters. President Clinton wrote him back saying he needed you to do something else.

Then did you ask Mr. McDougal in the fall of 1984 to recommend you to the Governor for appointment as Securities Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Did I what?

Senator BOND. Did you ask Jim McDougal to submit your name or to make a recommendation to the Governor for you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I do not know Jim McDougal, I did not ask Jim McDougal, and I would not have wanted Jim McDougal's recommendation.

Senator BOND. Who made that request on your behalf?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Who?

Senator BOND. Who made that request to the Governor on your behalf?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I have no idea what Jim McDougal did. I have read in The New York Times that he said that he did. That is the first I knew of that.

Senator BOND. All right. Mr. Chairman, my time is up, but I think just to end this conversation we ought to put up DKSJN 26305, which is a message submitted to us by the Governor's office, which says, "Message telephoned. For: Governor. From: Jim McDougal. Home Phone: 663-8690. Reference: Beverly Bassett for Securities Comm. Date: 12/22." That was a few days before the appointment of Ms. Schaffer, or Ms. Bassett at the time it was made.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Thank you, Ms. Schaffer.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Dodd.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I won't take a great deal of time here. A lot has been gone over.

Let me first of all say I hope we are not necessarily going to try and ask our witnesses to be responsible for reviewing securities laws as they may be in all 49 other States. I say that with all due respect to my colleagues, but States are different in how they perform their functions. I would not expect you to respond to how Connecticut does, any more than I think you should be expected to respond how Missouri might conduct its affairs.

To me the critical question here, going back about who makes recommendations, I mean, the question of how you have done your job it seems to me to be the fundamental question we ought to be asking ourselves.

The best witness I think on this is probably the Federal regulator, Mr. Faulk, who is the guy in Dallas who has no axe to grind here. He is asked: "How does this person here, how does she do her job?"

I think Mr. Ben-Veniste or maybe Senator Sarbanes introduced it in the record, but first of all it is pointed out by the interviewer, Mr. Camp, on CNN, 15 months, 15 months before the Feds close Madison Guaranty, 15 months!

It was this witness that urged the FSLIC to take over the troubled S&L. "Your prompt attention to this serious matter is requested." Fifteen months! You can't get much more responsible than that.

I remember the debate, by the way, in this Committee. A few of my colleagues who are present here recall going back to the Reagan Administration—I am trying to recall the Federal regulator who came up all the time and begged us to put more money into that account—who was it? Mr. Gray came up and begged this Committee to put more money into the account to avoid a catastrophe.

I recall because it has come up on a number of occasions. I remember my colleague, Senator Gramm and I, and I think one other Member of the Committee, actually voted to put more money into that account, much to the disappointment of my constituency groups, to the point that we actually, many could argue, in Congress were not acting terribly responsibly in those days and we could have avoided some of this. That is my own personal view.

But I think it is very important that 15 months before the Fed took action, this witness recommended that the Fed's move in. Then Mr. Faulk in that same interview, when asked by Mr. Camp, "And what about Beverly Bassett Schaffer's role in all of this?"

Here is his statement. Now this is the Federal regulator in Dallas who chaired the meeting in Dallas: "She acted responsible at all times and I don't see how anyone could say, that knew the history of this case, or who would look into the history of the case, could say that she acted irresponsible or delayed or drug her feet in any manner whatsoever."

Again, looking at the totality of all of this, it seems to me that the testimony of Mr. Faulk, the fact that she recommended this 15 months before this happened says volumes about this witness.

Whether or not someone sent a message to someone else and says you ought to hire this person or not, my Lord, all of us on this Committee have certainly called and left messages one way or the other about someone who ought to have a job or not have a job. I hope none of us on this side of the table are going to find that terribly surprising that those things go on. I mean, that is not exactly a great revelation in politics.

What is important is how she did her job. That is important to this Committee. The fact that more than a year before they actually took action she recommended they do so, and that the chief regulator out of Dallas said she did her job well is enough for this Senator. You did your work, and you certainly didn't anticipate 11 years ago that you would be sitting before this Committee and answering for your actions then. So I commend you for your job you did. I think you did a good job.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Just one point. Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan was a State-chartered savings and loan; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Federally-insured; State-chartered.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You had certain responsibilities in connection with the fact that it was a State-chartered savings and loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In that connection, the Chief Executive of your department was indeed the Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And you have explained why it would be important, particularly when there were rumors around in the press about actions to be taken, why the Governor's office and Mr. Bratton who was the person who supervised your regulatory affairs and was the liaison with your department, should be apprised of what was going on; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Your testimony is that this had been done a year before in connection with two other institutions. I take it those institutions were not being represented by the Rose Law Firm, or Mrs. Clinton, or any such thing?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now with respect to the action that was taken in Dallas in December 1987, it was not to close the bank, was it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was not something that some insider would perhaps have the opportunity to profit by or manipulate if that insider was advised, and so forth and so on, as we spin out a hypothetical situation, the action that was taken was to remove the McDougals from that institution; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, Mr. McDougal was well aware of the fact that his actions were under scrutiny and he had been so advised for many months?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The hope was that he would do something to improve the situation; correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there some secret thing that he could do if all of these chains in the hypothetical scenario had been linked up, that he could have done of a harmful nature to the depositors of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan in the interim between the time of your memo and the time that action was taken?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think based on the March 1986 examination report, preliminary examination report, the damage had already been done.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That is why he was being removed?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That is correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, the institution remained open under new management. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Senator Moseley-Braun.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. I just have a couple of questions which are kind of general, really, and it gets to the implications and the statements that are not being made as much as those being made today in the questioning of Ms. Bassett Schaffer.

I suppose the question to you, Ms. Schaffer, I mean, I believe it has been made clear, and certainly you have made it clear to me, but just so that we put an underscore and a period at the end of the sentence, did you in any way feel that you were being encouraged or pressured to do something untoward or inconsistent with your job description with regard to this Madison issue?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, not with regard to Madison, and not with regard to any other matter. In the 6 years that I served as Securities Commissioner, I was the regulator and Bill Clinton was the politician, and that's the way it worked. He did not do that. There was no pressure. There was no fear.

I think they knew full well that I was going to do what needed to be done no matter who liked it, regardless of who it helped or who it hurt. That is, I believe, what he appointed me to do.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Sometimes it needs to be said again and again, and I think this is an instance in which that happens.

To take it one step further, in addition to being pressured, was there even a wink and a nod, or a suggestion to you to do anything that was not professional and not consistent with your obligations to the citizens of Arkansas?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think the fact that—and I would like to say that I was not deposed by this Committee; I was not given the opportunity before today to see anything—you know, now I understand why, of course—but the note and the fact that Bill Clinton definitely had the opportunity to interfere, or intervene, or to do something untoward or suggest something improper and he did not, is the best evidence that exists that he did not.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. In fact on December 10, 1987, you were the person that wrote to the FSLIC regarding Madison's insolvency?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did. I think the Federal Home Loan Bank had for a number of years delayed and postponed placing institutions into receivership.

Everybody knows now that FSLIC had no money, and it was not until 1987, I believe, when they asked for $30 billion, or $50 billion, or whatever, and got $7 billion in 1987, that until a recapitalization was done, the policy at the Federal level was to delay, to manage, to try to hold onto the situation, and to try to postpone recognition of those losses. That was something unavoidable from their standpoint, but it also had nothing to do with Bill Clinton and it had nothing to do with me or the State of Arkansas.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Do you not find it just a little ironic that from 1987, here you are that many years later, having done a job that was free of politics, here you are testifying before this Committee because of politics?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I am a little distressed by the whole affair.

Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Schaffer, I can understand your being distressed with this whole affair.

I want to welcome Mr. Brady and Mr. Handley, as well.

I do want to go back, though, to the phone call or the conversation, I think maybe is the way that you referred to it, between Mrs. Clinton and yourself with respect to the question of preferred stock for the savings and loan. I wonder again if you would just kind of lay out for me that conversation?

Ms. SCHAFFER. As best I recall, she telephoned me. I was not in the office. I returned the telephone call sometime after lunch that day. In that conversation—I still think it occurred after the 30th, but it really probably doesn't matter—we had, as early as April 3rd, been asked by the savings and loan this question of preferred stock and whether State law authorized the issuance of preferred stock.

I had a memorandum of April 3rd from Charles Handley going over that question, one he sent to the institution and one he also sent maybe to Rick Massey.

Senator MACK. That was not in reference to Madison? That——

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, it was.

Senator MACK. It was? OK.

Ms. SCHAFFER. In which the question was discussed, and Charles had invited them—in his memorandum—had invited them to submit whatever documentation or arguments they had in support of their position.

So when the telephone call—if the telephone call occurred on the 29th of April, then it is true we did not have the April 30th letter at that time. But clearly the issue was before us through Madison, the Savings & Loan, not from the Rose Law Firm.

In the conversation with Mrs. Clinton, what I believe I did was I believe she just identified herself and said they had a matter that was coming, or had been sent, or whatever, depending on which day it was, concerning the preferred stock and whether State law authorized the issuance of preferred stock, just briefly identified it.

I believe that what I said was, generically, generally speak, you know, I'm familiar with that. Charles sent me a memo on it. You know, I think I generally agree, generically.

I didn't say Madison Guaranty's proposal is approved, but generically I think, I did say, that seems to me to be a fairly straightforward question and simply said something to the effect that we'll try to get to it, you know. I didn't get to it until 2 weeks later. But I'll try to get to it and send a letter to that effect. But we did, when the letter came in, then we did further discuss it, the people on my staff and I discussed it.

Senator MACK. Can I ask you one question about that particular point? I think I heard you say earlier something like I generally agree with that, and we'll get the letter out.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think what I said was we'll respond, we'll send the letter, we'll respond. Something to that effect. And I think the reason I think that's important is because I think that indicates to me, from my recollection, that the fact that she called and she raised the question in my mind didn't influence what I was thinking about the issue in general. But she did ask who would be handling that at the department, which individual should they work with, and I referred her to Charles.

Senator MACK. Mr. Brady, I wonder if I could draw you into this conversation at this point? In your deposition, you had indicated that you thought, in fact, you may have already indicated this morning that it was your opinion that the Attorney General should have been involved or this should have been referred to the Attorney General for an opinion. I wonder if you would tell me a little bit about that, and why you thought that was important?

Mr. BRADY. Yes, sir.

I wasn't so sure that, lacking statutory authority, an Arkansas savings and loan could issue preferred stock. That goes back to my involvement in a case years before that involved insurance companies in which the issue of whether or not they could enter into a voting trust with their shareholders had come up. It had been decided that they could not, although in the General Corporate Code there was a provision for such a fund.

I felt that this was too far a stretch for us to make as a department on our own, giving them power to do something when everybody knew they could use additional capital. But whether this was the way to do it or not, I had strong feelings.

I suggested the route through the Attorney General's office, because Ms. Bassett would have been protected in reliance upon an Attorney General's opinion that that was an acceptable capitalization practice.

Senator MACK. Why would she need protection? What do you mean by that?

Mr. BRADY. The department was being asked to interpret, as I understood it, a provision of the code of the statutes dealing with State S&L's, and it has always been the practice in Arkansas that if an officeholder relied upon an Attorney General's opinion in making a decision, that they were absolved from any personal liability that might follow as a result of the impropriety of the action.

Senator MACK. I gather from your comment a moment ago that you felt pretty strongly about this, that you then, therefore, informed Ms. Schaffer. I guess you did that through a memo?

Mr. BRADY. Another one of those memos that hasn't surfaced yet. Yes, I did.

Senator MACK. Or maybe it's from a deposition. I don't mean to imply—

Mr. BRADY. Obviously I did that, and she obviously did not agree with my analysis.

Senator MACK. Did you all have discussions about that after the memo?

Mr. BRADY. No, not particularly.

Senator MACK. So you sent the memo, you felt strongly about it, and the letter went out?

Mr. BRADY. I don't say I felt strongly about it. In the letter, I did suggest that this alternative approach to giving the department assurance that they were on sound ground.

Senator MACK. Did you have other situations where you and Ms. Schaffer had differences of opinion where, in essence, Ms. Schaffer went ahead with her particular point of view?

Mr. BRADY. None that I can remember offhand.

Senator MACK. I guess maybe it might be fair here to ask this. How long did you all work together, over what period of time?

Mr. BRADY. When did she become Securities Commissioner? I was at the Department from February 1979 through April 1986, and I don't remember when she became—she was about the third commissioner I worked for.

Senator MACK. Ms. Schaffer, the question that comes to my mind again is, and listen, I've been in positions where obviously I've gotten advice or recommendations or input without the force of any kind of recommendation where people have a different opinion than I did. And like all of us here, we've gone on from our own personal perspective to make those decisions. I'm just curious why you didn't accept the recommendation of Mr. Brady?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Because I accepted the recommendation of my Assistant Commissioner, Nancy Jones, who interestingly enough is not here today.

Mr. Handley, I also talked to Charles about it on several occasions. Charles really is the expert.

Senator MACK. I assume Charles is Mr. Brady.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Charles is right here, Charles is who I relied on heavily on savings and loan matters. That really was Charles' area, and I talked to both. I asked Charles and Charles asked me, and brought it to my attention. My Assistant Commissioner, Nancy Jones, was a CPA. I also had her look at it. There's a note in the file, which nobody has produced. I don't know where it is. I know that it exists. It's not here today I guess. The note indicates that she agrees with the Rose Law Firm's position, that she very clearly thinks that the Business Corporation Code, that that analysis was appropriate.

Charles' comments to me were not that he didn't think that they could do that, but that it might be advisable to do it under the "Wild Card Provision" of the Savings and Loan Act, as opposed to the Business Corporation Code.

That's right, the decision was mine. If we had to ask the Attorney General to pass on routine matters like that that came before the Department, then there would be no need for the Securities Department or the Savings and Loan Supervisor. I mean, you make the decision, you take the heat. There's no need to ask an elected official, an Attorney General at the time who of course, if I had, I guess he'd now be testifying before you rather than me.

The problem here is that there was no influence exerted in this process. It was a normal decisionmaking process in which everybody—disagreement was allowed. I don't think a good decision is ever made unless there is disagreement about it in arriving at the final conclusion.

I would not have asked Mr. Brady. By the way, I have to say that I do not remember any memorandum to that effect. I haven't seen one.

Senator MACK. You are talking about this disagreement about the Attorney General?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right. I am not saying at all that he might not have. It's just that, as far as I know, nobody has seen it.

Senator MACK. I may have misspoke when I suggested that.

Ms. SCHAFFER. My point is I can't, I don't remember that, and I haven't seen anything to refresh my memory to that effect.

Senator MACK. Again, because my time is up, let me just make one further comment, if I can, without at this point drawing any conclusion.

The problem that we have, as we observe what we have and look over the various documents, there is a memorandum, when you worked for a law firm, which you indicate you don't remember or didn't remember at the time, where you raised questions about the possibility of the breaking of law by an entity controlled by Mr. McDougal. So we have that in our mind.

We also know that you are aware that Madison had financial problems and one could make the argument that's why they were looking at getting the preferred stock. They needed to build their capital up.

With those two points added to a recommendation within your office that you ought to get an opinion from the Attorney General for something that's never been done before in Arkansas, and then added to that, at least from our perspective, a phone call that comes in from the First Lady, the Governor had appointed you just 4 months before that, and I don't even make the charge about the specifics of the conversation.

It certainly can be a reasonable position to draw the possibility that Mrs. Clinton was merely just kind of subtlety passing on to you, by the way, we have something important that's coming down there, and what I see is when you start adding those things up, plus the other things that we have learned about the whole Whitewater investigation, is that the Clinton Administration, in their Administration here in Washington, we know from the previous discussions about the people in the Treasury Department, that they've been active in using Government information for their own benefit.

So as I say, I'm not going to draw a conclusion at this particular point, but I think there are a series of things that have occurred here that really raise serious questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Simon.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL SIMON

Senator SIMON. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

My friend and colleague from Florida says he isn't drawing any conclusions, but he's coming very close to drawn conclusions.

Senator MACK. If I can say to my dear friend, and I mean that, I have not drawn a conclusion. I think I could have been a lot more forceful about what I thought Ms. Schaffer could or could not have done. The point I was making is, not making a statement about what I think the intentions of the witness. I think that was a reasonable thing for me to do this morning. I think it's also reasonable that people can draw some conclusions from the outline that I just stated.

Senator SIMON. First, I'd like to just underscore the exchange between Mr. Ben-Veniste and Mr. Handley. This was at a time when the Federal Government was encouraging savings and loans who were in trouble all over this Nation to issue preferred stock. So this is not some kind of sleazy kind of operation where they are trying to do something untoward.

Second, Mr. Massey testified, maybe if Madison could have had more capital, it could have survived. Mr. Handley, you and your colleagues properly tried to protect and did protect people who might buy stock. And I'm not critical of you for that decision at all.

Ms. Schaffer, when Governor Clinton appointed you, did he have a private conversation in which he said you know I have to call on you for a favor or two while you're over there? What kind of a conversation did you have when he appointed you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. The answer to that, let me just get that on the record first. No, he never asked anything like that of me in the 6 years that I was at the department, and he had opportunities to do so on a regular basis.

The conversation was about the problems generally facing the financial services industry and what he expected generally of the office, which was to be tough but be fair. It was the Securities Department, and that was the focus of our conversation. He asked me about my securities experience at the law firm, why I wanted the job, and what kind of a job I felt like I could do with it. There wasn't any discussion about taking care of friends, or I want this done; nothing like that ever took place.

Senator SIMON. There was no hint of anything other than he wanted you to do a good, conscientious job? Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

Senator SIMON. May I ask all three of you, and my colleague, Senator Moseley-Braun, has by implication already asked this of you, Ms. Schaffer, but let me ask all three of you. Did either at any point on Madison or any other issue, did Bill Clinton or Hillary Clinton ask you to do anything either illegal or unethical?

If I can ask all three of you. Ms. Schaffer.

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator SIMON. Mr. Brady.

Mr. BRADY. No, sir.

Senator SIMON. Mr. Handley.

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Senator SIMON. Then my final question, and I will yield my time to Mr. Ben-Veniste. I was interested in your comment to my colleague from Illinois, Ms. Schaffer, when you said you were distressed by the whole affair. Meaning, I assume, this hearing and what is going on. What causes that sense of distress for you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, it's personal. I don't think it's been fair to me, actually to the entire State of Arkansas. It's really been very personal, very vicious, it's been an effort to vicariously destroy Bill Clinton piece-by-piece, you know, by ruining the people that he trusted, that worked for him, good people, who didn't do anything wrong. The job's been done very well. A lot of people have been hurt unnecessarily for purposes of winning an election. I just think there's something wrong with that.

Senator SIMON. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Schaffer, let me reassure you that we do, in fact, have the note that you are alluding to that came from Ms. Jones and was produced by the FDIC under Bates Stamp number 5000290. Let me put it up for you and provide you with a copy of it. I believe it's the note that you were referring to, but I don't get to testify, you would.

Ms. SCHAFFER. It is.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Can you tell us again what the significance of that note is?

Ms. SCHAFFER. When I came to the department, I had a very small staff. It had actually been reduced by about a third before I came to the department. I had a handful of people I could really rely on. The Assistant Commissioner was Nancy Jones. She had been with the department for, I don't know, 15 years. Charles had, I think, been with the department about that long. Those are the people I relied on to participate in decisions like this.

I asked both of them for their input on this. There were conflicting impressions and opinions in the very beginning. Nancy and Charles had worked together for many years. Nancy Jones was his immediate supervisor, and so I think the importance of this to me was that I felt comfortable with her review of it and her approach to it.

I think she very definitely says in here, I agree with the Rose Law Firm. So as far as I know, she didn't have any relationship with the Clintons; she agreed with the Rose Law Firm. I think the relationship with the Clintons is irrelevant.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me turn to the fourth point that was made, that they have to get through our registration section and FSLIC too, with an exclamation point. That is the matter to which we have addressed our attention earlier in terms of the capital requirements that have to act as a prerequisite to being able to issue this stock and to use the proceeds of the sale of such stock to satisfy capitalization requirements. Is that correct?

If I understand what you're saying, this was a matter which was discussed by all the people here. There were different views. The one thing that was clear was that this was something which would benefit both the savings and loan and its depositors if it could be done. That it had been done in other States and it was something which the Federal regulators were suggesting should be done to raise capital, one of the few means of raising additional capital would be through the issuance of preferred stock. The manner under which it could be done was the subject of some technical and legal discussions among all of you.

You came to a conclusion that there was an appropriate way to do it, but before that way could be accomplished, there was a prerequisite that had to be satisfied, and that no one attempted to influence you one way or the other, to give favor to Madison in terms of satisfying that prerequisite. They were unable to satisfy the prerequisite and therefore the whole proposition fell and was never implemented. Is that a fair reiteration or summary of what occurred back 10, 11 years ago in Arkansas?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I think it was handled in a routine manner and nobody at the time was giving it this kind of scrutiny or attention, and I don't remember hearing anybody mention Hillary Clinton's name in our office in considering this matter at all.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And for purposes of completeness, we now have, I think, with the exception of the memorandum that you had written a year or so before the situation with Madison came up to Mr. Bratton, hopefully we've been able to show you the materials that you have requested of us.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, quickly, just for clarity, I want to put this memo back up. This is from Ms. Jones? Let me be clear who that's from. This is from Ms. Jones.

Ms. SCHAFFER. She was the Assistant Securities Commissioner. She had been in the office for 15 years or so.

Senator DODD. Civil Service? How does it work down there?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Career.

Senator DODD. Career person worked a number of different administrations?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Several.

Senator DODD. Professional individual?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator DODD. Was it a political appointee when she got the job initially? How does that work?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, no, no. Not at all. She is just a State employee, no political appointment.

Senator DODD. I heard you say she was a CPA?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator DODD. Because if you can't read this, if you look at this thing here, there are four points to this note, and this is 1985 now. It's 11 years ago. She talks about Charles. In this note, she's talking about you, Mr. Handley, is that correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Senator DODD. Number one, she agrees with you about the permanent capital stock payable to liquidation. Number two, she disagrees with you that it has to be done through this so-called "Wild Card Statute." Number three, she gets involved in, I guess, the non-voting portion and so forth. Maybe I don't know. And the last point is that you have to go through not only the registration section of the Arkansas statutes but the Federal areas as well. That's the point. Have you seen this memo before, Mr. Handley?

Mr. HANDLEY. Oh, yes, several times. I had several discussions about it.

Senator DODD. OK, Mr. Chairman. I just thought this thing is going to sit out there. I'm trying to follow it.

The CHAIRMAN. I think when our Members are on a particular issue, we want to give them the opportunity to go through it.

Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do I understand you to say, Ms. Schaffer, that you didn't bring up Hillary Clinton's name in discussions with Mr. Brady or Mr. Handley regarding this issue?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, you didn't hear me say that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You did bring up her name?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I don't remember discussing, in connection with discussing this matter, that anybody mentioned Hillary Clinton as being a factor in any of this, in what we did. Of course her name was mentioned. Her name was on the letter and she called me, and of course her name was mentioned.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell Mr. Brady about the call?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know, I probably told him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Brady, did you get told about the call?

Mr. BRADY. I didn't understand that it had been a telephone call, but I knew that she had had information from Mrs. Clinton that the Rose Firm was sending over a request on this issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you hear about the telephone call?

Mr. BRADY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Handley, did you hear about the telephone call?

Mr. HANDLEY. Not until the newspaper articles came out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Not until what?

Mr. HANDLEY. The newspaper articles came out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You mean recently?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Not at the time?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You wrote at the top of this memo, which I am glad we have uncovered here, this was Nancy Johnson, you said, or Jones?

Mr. BRADY. Jones.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is four parts, one through three and four. That's your handwriting, Ms. Schaffer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, it is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Part number three talks about a problem not addressed by the Rose Law Firm, having to do with the non-voting portion. That was something that she indicated to you that the Rose Firm had not addressed, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Right across the top is a notation and it says, "Brady, please review and draft response to Hillary." Is that your writing?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That is.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is there some reason that you particularly mentioned to Mr. Brady that he should respond to Hillary?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just an accident?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, it wasn't an accident, it was very deliberate. She called me. So the response in my mind was to go to her. I didn't have to involve Mr. Brady at all. I could have just written a letter, which I did, Dear Hillary, without ever telling anybody.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who drafted the response to Hillary Clinton? Who did you ask to draft the response?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I asked Bill to draft the response. Apparently, this is when Bill came to me. He says he wrote a memo. I don't recall any memo. It doesn't matter in any event. This is obviously when Bill came and said, what he's recited today, what he remembers having said. I don't remember that but obviously he had some concern. My impression is that's the reason why I wrote the letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you wrote the letter yourself?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I would not ask Mr. Brady or any other lawyer to write a letter over their signature that they didn't feel comfortable with. I would not write one like that and I wouldn't ask another lawyer to do it either.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You said in your statement that you gave to the RTC at page 2, I referred the matter to the ASD Staff Attorney, Bill Brady, asking him to draft a letter to Hillary Clinton concerning this matter. He drafted a letter which I revised somewhat, signed, and sent to Hillary Clinton. Are you changing that how?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That was my answer based on the best of my knowledge at the time. I did not have the benefit of Mr. Brady's recollection at the time.

By the way, that statement was 2 years ago and 9 years after this conversation had supposedly occurred. To the best of my knowledge at that time, that is what I believed to have happened in 1986 or 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go back to the conversation you had with Mrs. Clinton, which is an important conversation. In that conversation, you've now told us she called you and you returned the call, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She indicated to you, and I try to take notes, she raised the question with you about this issue in preferred stock, is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think, I mean, I have to assume that she defined why she was calling.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you said to her that you understood, you were familiar with the problem, you were familiar with the issue, and you had a little discussion with her about the substance of the issue, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I didn't have a discussion. That is why I am saying that we didn't discuss the merits.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Schaffer, didn't you say that you had been advised of this matter prior to the phone call because of on-going discussions within the Department? Isn't that correct? In other words, this was not the first time you had heard of this?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. When you say "this" Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. I'm talking about the matter of preferred stock.

Senator SARBANES. Not the Madison matter, the general question of the preferred stock?

The CHAIRMAN. No. I think the testimony was, and we can have the reporter go back, that the matter, as it related to Madison and the preferred stock, was something that had been within the Department for about a month or so, and had been discussed and it had been brought to the Department through the Madison Bank people, not the Rose Law Firm. That is what I was led to understand you said.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I haven't seen these documents in a number of years. But I've seen them periodically here. But I think that earlier that month, that Charles had had an inquiry from somebody at Madison Guaranty in a telephone conversation. He wrote a memo to them, copied me on it, in which the question was, State-chartered thrifts' authority to issue preferred stock. That's why I am saying that earlier in the month, the issue was already——

The CHAIRMAN. On your radar screen, so to speak?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, yes, in generic terms, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So that when Mrs. Clinton, and again we can refer to the court reporter, when Mrs. Clinton brought this up, your testimony was you were aware of this, and you indicated that you didn't see any problem and that you would get an answer within a couple of weeks, you would get back an answer to her.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I think maybe I wasn't specific enough in my response, but I think what I said was that I was familiar with the question, with the issues, you know, generally on that issue. I didn't cite Madison Guaranty's specific proposal, I said generally.

The CHAIRMAN. Because it had been on the radar, and there had been some discussion about whether Madison had not come initially to you personally, but to the Commission, and so consequently Charles had discussed this and sent a memo to you, giving you general notice. So Mrs. Clinton then brought this up to you, that there was going to be this question about preferred stock in Madison?

Ms. SCHAFFER. She must have. I can't remember the exact words but she obviously did because that's the reason she was calling.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In substance, and when you wrote the letter back you responded specifically to Madison, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, the letter was concerning a proposal, that they would generate the proposal, but I think it says the State law, in regard to any State-chartered savings and loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Is that in reference to a specific proposal about Madison, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, we have the letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me ask you, when Mrs. Clinton said to you what this was about, and you indicated you were familiar with it, you also said—and it is in the record, we had it a couple of hours ago—that you agreed with her. Let's put the letter up. It is marked Bates Stamp 84.

The CHAIRMAN. Can we get Ms. Schaffer a copy of the letter, please?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I have the letter in front of my eyes.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we make sure she has that letter because it's tough reading it off that screen.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says:

Re: Authorization and Issuance of a Class of Preferred Stock by Madison Guaranty ("Madison"), a Savings and Loan Association chartered under the laws of the State of Arkansas.

Dear Hillary:

I have reviewed your letter of April 30, 1985, regarding the proposed authorization and issuance by Madison of a class of non-voting preferred stock.

You then have a discussion, and you conclude:

Accordingly, as the Savings and Loan Supervisor, I concur in your opinion that Madison's proposed capitalization plan is not inconsistent with Arkansas Law.

That is what you wrote, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Except that we did not have a specific proposal in front of us.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you approved a proposed capitalization plan without having a proposal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Of course not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says right up here, a proposed capitalization plan is not inconsistent with Arkansas law.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think you have to—that that's not fair. That is unfair.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Am I misreading it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. You are partly reading it. Why don't we read the whole letter.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll be very happy to read the whole letter.

Ms. SCHAFFER. You can read it.

Senator SARBANES. The front part of paragraph 2 to which you read the conclusion.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm very happy to do it.

Senator SARBANES. Let's do that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You wrote:

I agree with your analysis and conclusion of the question whether an Arkansas-chartered savings and loan association may under Arkansas law create, authorize, and issue a class of preferred stock. Arkansas law expressly gives State-chartered associations all the powers given regular business corporations under the Arkansas

Business Corporation Act, including the power to authorize and issue preferred capital stock. Further, there is no express prohibition against such action contained in the Arkansas laws governing building and loan, and savings and loan associations. Accordingly, as the Savings and Loan Supervisor—

That was you, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You say:

I concur in your opinion that Madison's proposed capitalization plan is not inconsistent with Arkansas law.

Now, is it your position that you did not understand that this inquiry was with reference to a specific question of issuing preferred stock by Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It is not my understanding. It is a fact. There was no proposed specific capitalization plan. That came later when we had to determine how much capital they had to raise.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew that Madison wanted to issue capital.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Of course I knew they wanted to issue preferred stock.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I was going to say, Mrs. Clinton called you up on the telephone and you had a conversation with her and you told her you were familiar with the issue, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. To the best of my knowledge.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told her, in earlier discussions you had had with people, people at Madison Guaranty—

Ms. SCHAFFER. Not with her, yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you told her, right?

The CHAIRMAN. You said yes?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Counsel let me finish.

Specifically not with her but with other people Madison had with the Department?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you informed Mrs. Clinton of that in the telephone call?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Of what?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I will take it slowly. In the phone call with Mrs. Clinton, you told Mrs. Clinton you were familiar with the fact that Madison had raised this issue of issuing preferred stock?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I disagree, no.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell her—

Ms. SCHAFFER. The conversation didn't last that long. I believe what I said was generally it was not a specific proposal we were talking about. The issue—no, I disagree.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Look, you had discussions with people. You knew Madison wanted to issue the preferred stock, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Absolutely.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You had some discussion with people from Madison before you talked to Mrs. Clinton about it, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I had not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Someone in the Department had?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were aware of it, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When Mrs. Clinton called you, you knew what she was calling about, right? She told you and it rang a bell?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You told her, yes, I am familiar with that? We have had discussions in the Department about Madison's interest in issuing preferred stock, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I can't remember if I said we. I am familiar with the issue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And then she?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I believe that it's a very simple, straightforward issue that—and basically I agree with the analysis.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You agreed with the analysis?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Mr. Chertoff, this was 11 years ago.

Mr. CHERTOFF. As fully as you can, tell us?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think I have done it as fully as I can. The gist of it was that she identified why she was calling, and I simply said something to the effect of I am familiar with that. I think—as the way I would describe it as being something I already knew about and had, I mean, a very simple issue that I had looked at. Beyond that there wasn't any discussion of a specific proposal or a specific Madison's involvement in it. We didn't talk about Madison Guaranty as a specific interest or proposal.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You used the phrase a moment ago, you said that you had agreed with the analysis and I am just trying to ask you, in the conversation that you had with Mrs. Clinton, there was a reference in the conversation to an analysis, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Mr. Chertoff, I'm doing the best I can.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I understand.

Ms. SCHAFFER. To give you the context. I can't give you the precise dialogue.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Not precisely, generally.

Ms. SCHAFFER. The context was that I was already familiar with the question of whether a State-chartered savings and loan could issue preferred stock. That that issue was out there, was something that needed to be resolved, and I was comfortable with, I was comfortable myself with that. I don't know that I said an analysis. What I think I indicated was my comfort with the concept.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Schaffer, we are going to turn this over to the other side, but is it fair to say that you had reached a conclusion about the general proposition as it related to the issuance of preferred stock for a savings and loan? Is that what you're saying? In other words, you had a certain comfort. I'm not putting words in your mouth, I hope? Is that fair to conclude? Is that what you meant, that you had a certain comfort level?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think so.

The CHAIRMAN. At that point, when you spoke to Mrs. Clinton, you said basically I have an understanding of the issuance of preferred stock. Now, you knew though that this was in reference to Madison?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did.

The CHAIRMAN. All right.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me take this a step further. At the time of your conversation, there had been some discussions, not with Rose Law Firm employees or attorneys, but with Madison Guaranty personnel and your Department?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think, perhaps, Mr. Massey was part of those conversations with Charles Handley.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You were not a part of the conversations?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I believe my information came through Charles.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Handley, before Mr. Massey came into the picture, had there not been some inquiry from Madison employees?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes. During my depositions by various parties, I have seen a copy of the handwritten memo and the Employees' Association phoned me up the first of April and said, "We want to think about issuing preferred stock. Do you have a form? What do we have to do?" I told them I would have to look at that. I didn't know whether they could, but we would welcome a filing made by them, and a legal opinion.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that sort of started everybody thinking?

Mr. HANDLEY. And I gave a copy of that to Beverly.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, Ms. Schaffer, when you wrote your letter to Mrs. Clinton, you were saying, if I understand your testimony, that you had looked at this, you had considered it from the standpoint of legality and practical possibilities that you agreed that this was something that was doable?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This wasn't a letter that you sent to say OK, you go and tell Mr. McDougal he can go sell the stock? It's not the way it worked?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Not at all. The position that was taken here—obviously there was a public policy question, there was a matter of public interest, and there was something that if it was OK to issued preferred stock, it might be done by any other State-chartered savings and loan, and in fact, it has been done since then by other State-chartered savings and loans. The opinion was in general terms: Can this be done?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the proposal that was talked about is the proposed concept that this could be done by a Federal savings and loan in Arkansas regulated by the State authorities, State chartered?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right. I did understand, as Senator D'Amato has pointed out, I did understand that Madison intended to do that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They were going to pursue it.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The idea was, you don't have to worry about spinning your wheels, OK. This is something that can be doable. But to mix a metaphor, there are other hoops that have to be jumped through, as Mr. Handley, Mr. Brady, you, and Ms. Jones all got together and worked out. And that had to do with raising additional capital to meet Federal requirements that were even more stringent than State requirements, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it would be overly simplistic to say anything beyond this but that, OK, the checkered flag is coming down, you can start the race. Go and work out the details, fill out the forms, follow the regulations, but in theory, this is a proposal upon which you can get started and try to perfect?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right. Obviously, there would be no point in pursuing a specific offering of preferred stock if the State was going to take the position that it was not allowed, that that instrument could not be issued by a State-chartered savings and loan. There would be no point in pursuing any effort to raise capital in that manner.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. All this did was to give the green light to go further on this proposal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you.

Ms. Schaffer, your responsibility to the State of Arkansas, as Commissioner of Securities—is that the correct title?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Was to protect investors with regard to any issuance of stock, and I assume you had on-going knowledge of the difficulties associated with Madison S&L, is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I'm curious with regard to the two exhibits that have been before you. One is your letter of May 14th, and the other is a letter from Mrs. Clinton on May 23rd. You indicate in your letter, I concur in your opinion, and that is referring to whom?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, the letter is addressed to Hillary.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So one could deduce that there was an opinion that you had received from Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did. The letter that came April 30th was signed Rose Law Firm. It wasn't signed by an individual lawyer but it is in that letter in which the analysis of the Rose Law Firm was.

Senator MURKOWSKI. They did give you an opinion as to the merits of the transaction?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It was just an analysis of the relationship between the Arkansas Savings and Loan Laws and the Arkansas Business Corporation Code.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Would you acknowledge that this opinion, since you referenced it in your letter to Mrs. Clinton, was some of the substantiation that you used to basically approve the so-called Madison capitalization plan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I didn't approve a Madison capitalization plan. Specific—

Senator MURKOWSKI. It says, from the letter, I concur in your opinion that the proposed Madison capitalization plan is not inconsistent.

Ms. SCHAFFER. We did not have before us a specific capitalization plan. The concept, that is what that means. Perhaps inartfully worded, but it means the concept.

Senator MURKOWSKI. In other words, you did not know the amount of capitalization?

Ms. SCHAFFER. And the form of the instrument would have to have been acceptable, the disclosure document, a number of things.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Going back and making a reference to the opinion, the opinion was drafted by the Rose Law Firm. Do you know the involvement, or did it bear the signature of Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The signature was the Rose Law Firm. It was not signed by an individual attorney. It said the Rose Law Firm. If you have any questions please contact Richard Massey or Hillary Rodham Clinton at this law firm, I believe.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Why did you respond in a letter to Mrs. Clinton specifically then if you were getting an opinion just from the Rose Law Firm? Why was Mrs. Clinton selected as the respondent to your letter?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I obviously could not address the letter, "Dear Rose Law Firm." I suppose I could have addressed it to Rick Massey, although my conversation was with Hillary Clinton.

Senator MURKOWSKI. OK. While the opinion that was submitted didn't bear her signature, you had conversations with Mrs. Clinton regarding the preferred issue?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And in that series of discussions, there was no indication of what the necessary capitalization requirements might be?

Ms. SCHAFFER. In this letter? In my letter?

Senator MURKOWSKI. In your letter there isn't, but I am curious to know in the opinion, you say I concur with your opinion.

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, no, no. The opinion was just an application of State law. It had no reference to a specific dollar amount. That would have been the specific proposal I would have been looking to get later.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Now on May 23rd, we have a letter here that says, "Enclosed is a letter for your files"—and this is to Jim McDougal—I believe you have seen this letter from Hillary Clinton, dated May 23rd? If not, perhaps—

The CHAIRMAN. Can we identify that?

Senator MURKOWSKI. This is a letter dated May 23rd from Mrs. Clinton to Jim McDougal.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Obviously, I haven't seen the letter.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I assumed maybe you had in the course of the hearing today.

The CHAIRMAN. Do we have copies for the Members too, please? Do you have it? OK. I don't have it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. This letter comes 9 days after your letter to Mrs. Clinton, which you have before you. And this letter is from Mrs. Clinton to Mr. Jim McDougal and it says: "Enclosed is a letter for your files from Beverly Bassett, approving the proposed authorization."

Now if one looks at the word "approved," one would assume that it has some term of approval associated with it, rather than just a conformance to Arkansas State Law, that it's OK to issue preferred stock from an S&L. Would you suggest that Mrs. Clinton was a little ahead of herself in writing a letter and using the word "approved"?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I think it's just generally confusing, the concept being approved from a specific proposal being approved. If the concept was not allowable, then there's no need in developing a specific proposal. So I am not going to quarrel with the use of the word "approving." I think we can quibble over that.

The concept was what——

Senator MURKOWSKI. Clearly at the time this letter was written, you had not approved much of the preferred issue, including the capitalization amount. Is that a fair statement?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We did not have a proposal as to the dollar amount, the method in which it would be placed, the disclosures.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So it really wasn't approved then?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. As the reference to the terminology here?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The concept that they wanted to utilize of going forward with issuing a class of preferred stock, I believe my letter does——

Senator MURKOWSKI. You referenced that quite clearly, that it's appropriate with Arkansas State law. My concern is the letter from Mrs. Clinton to Mr. McDougal, where she says, "Enclosed is a letter for your files from Beverly Bassett approving the proposed authorization." But at that time, you had not approved it. The amount had not even been determined. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Just very briefly, as far as your obligation as Commissioner of Securities, when the protection to investors you scrutinize the risk, is that right? Do you do a due diligence?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, not on a private placement.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Now, do you depend on attorneys to do due diligence?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, due diligence is done by the attorneys for the client.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Do you review those?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Had you done so in this case?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It was never submitted.

Senator MURKOWSKI. It was never submitted?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So even at that point, had you had an opportunity to measure the risk, based on the information you had relative to the issuance of the proposed stock? That's part of your job, wasn't it, to kind of measure what the risks would be?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I would disagree with that characterization.

Senator MURKOWSKI. OK, tell me.

Ms. SCHAFFER. It would have been our job to see that the risks, whatever they were, were disclosed.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Had you gotten that far in this case of examining?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So you never really got very far?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. They never even submitted the disclosure document or registration exemption requests that would have entailed all those sorts of things.

Senator MURKOWSKI. The reason was the S&L failed before that happened, is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, it did not. We gave them until the end of December 31, 1985, to accomplish that, and the time expired, and they had not completed it, or they didn't do it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. There was no request to extend it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Can you just explain, in conclusion, a series of events, your appointment process has got some inconsistencies in it that probably are quite easily explained. I think you indicated you met Clinton back in 1974 or thereabouts and did some volunteering?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You also worked for him as a law clerk in 1977 when he served as Arkansas Attorney General?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Your brother, Woody Bassett, is a friend and supporter of the former Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, he is.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You are aware that your brother wrote not one but two letters to Governor Clinton and urged that you be appointed to the position of Arkansas Securities Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I know that he did that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. There's apparently a reference in one of the letters that your brother wrote to Governor Clinton, there's a handwritten note from Governor Clinton at the top of the letter. Have you seen that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Perhaps it would be appropriate for us to provide that.

On the note, as I read it, it says, "She'd be good but may need to do something else." Do you see that up there?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I wonder if one of the staff could point it out? It is very poorly written, but that's what I conclude it reads. Have we got anybody down there.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, she's taking a look at it. It's right up at the top, the initial handwriting.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Right on the first line. "She'd be good but may need to do something else."

Senator MURKOWSKI. And then it has BA. Have you seen that or are you familiar with that notation?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. "She'd be good but may need to do something else." Do you have any question whether that refers to you or not?

The CHAIRMAN. I think in fairness, you haven't seen this letter, at this point, it would appear to be a letter written by your brother.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. In which he's asking you to be considered for the appointment of Arkansas Securities Commissioner.

Senator MURKOWSKI. "I would like to submit the name of my sister, Beverly, for your consideration as the next Securities Commissioner." Is what it reads the last sentence of the first paragraph.

Then we have this notation on the letter which I can only assume that Governor Clinton noted.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You have no explanation of why he would consider you for something else?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I think that means I might not get it. I think that means he might appoint somebody else.

Senator MURKOWSKI. It's certainly complimentary. It says, "She'd be good but may need to do something else."

Now would you agree that a comment by the Governor doesn't say that you necessarily got the job. In fact, it sounds like at that point, that you probably wouldn't be considered for the job. One might conclude that at least. I think that's a fair analysis, because otherwise he'd say she'd be good for the job. He says, "She'd be good for the job but we may need her to do something else."

Senator SARBANES. It doesn't say that necessarily.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think that it means he may need to appoint someone else.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That's fair enough.

Are you aware that a few weeks later, Jim McDougal leaves a phone message to Governor Clinton that says, "Beverly Schaffer for Securities Commissioner."

Ms. SCHAFFER. I testified that I had no idea that Jim McDougal had any reference to my name, used my name, made any—

Senator MURKOWSKI. We have, I gather, a copy of that phone message, and that phone message to Governor Clinton says, "Beverly Schaffer for Securities Commissioner." And you have not seen that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Do you have any comment with regard to that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I was never told about it. I certainly didn't ask for it, and I wouldn't have wanted it, had it been offered. So—

Senator MURKOWSKI. You mean from McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You don't really know McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I have never met Jim McDougal. I don't think I have been in the same room with him.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Can you give any explanation of why Mr. McDougal would be communicating this to the Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, no. Obviously I can't answer that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. No conjecture. OK.

Yet a few weeks after Mr. McDougal's telephone message, the Governor's office sends out a press release that announces you as the new Securities Commissioner, and I guess that's just the way things happen.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Jim McDougal had nothing to do with my appointment as Arkansas Securities Commissioner.

Senator MURKOWSKI. So it is just a coincidence that he would communicate to Governor Clinton, "Beverly Schaffer for Securities Commissioner."

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know what it is, but it had nothing to do with my appointment, I believe. I believe that I got the appointment, my brother asked for it, I don't believe Jim McDougal's telephone call had anything to do with the decision.

Senator MURKOWSKI. At least it appears to have been a communication on your behalf. Whether it had anything to do with the Governor's decision, we'll never know.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

One other question. How do you know that McDougal didn't have any influence? I mean, you seem pretty convinced of that. You didn't know McDougal. How do you know he didn't have any influence? He says he did.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, OK. I guess that's something this Committee can resolve.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Fair enough. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Dodd.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I want to go back, and maybe just put up the 7/2/86 note. I'd ask the staff to put that one up.

The CHAIRMAN. Which note is that?

Senator DODD. That's the handwritten note.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Senator DODD. The reason I am putting it up, Mr. Chairman—he's not here now, but our colleague from Missouri raised the point here that this note to Sam—

The CHAIRMAN. If I might just ask my colleagues' indulgence. We have had the witnesses up here for an awfully long time because we want to try to get through this, so just to give you a sense of where we are, after Senator Dodd and Senator Sarbanes have an opportunity during this next 10 minutes or so, why don't we take a 5- or 10-minute break?

Mr. HANDLEY. Mr. Chairman, I'd like that.

The CHAIRMAN. I just wanted to let you know for your own well being.

Thank you, Senator.

Senator DODD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

As I understand it, this note, Ms. Schaffer, had attached to it a letter from Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator DODD. The implication was, by our colleague from Missouri, of course, that by transferring this letter from the Home Loan Bank Board to Sam here in a sense, you're giving, through the back door, a heads-up to Mr. McDougal that he might be in trouble. That was the implication, as I heard it, from our colleague in Missouri.

The point I want to make, Mr. Chairman, if I can, I don't know if staff has this, but to put in the record at this point, a letter dated June 19, 1986, several weeks before the July 2, 1986 memo, in which the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of Dallas sent the identical letter to the Board of Directors of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. The point being, obviously, you are not revealing something to Mr. McDougal. He had already been sent the very same letter by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in June. So the implication here that they were somehow providing backdoor information to Mr. McDougal is just not borne out by the facts.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think, Senator Dodd, that that was the point Senator Bond was making, but rather the question, and I think it did come up, and Ms. Schaffer did indicate that she really wanted to warn the Governor about this problem, and McDougal might be attempting to get to him. I wrote it down, and I'm going to speak to her about that later. She just wanted to warn him.

Senator DODD. The point is that McDougal had gotten a letter in June, so you couldn't very well tell Mr. McDougal something.

The CHAIRMAN. Look, McDougal had gotten warnings before. He knew about it. I don't think that was the point that Senator Bond was attempting to make.

Senator DODD. I don't know. At this point, at any point, that this seems appropriate. The June 19th letter to the Board of Madison Guaranty, so it will make it clear in terms of the sequence.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't we put that in the record—oh, they tell me, it is in the record.

Senator DODD. That's the point I wanted to make. It seemed to me, when that was raised, it sounded like, well this could be a problem because if you'd given Mr. McDougal a heads-up about something from a State regulator, that poses real problems. But I didn't realize—

The CHAIRMAN. He had a heads-up. He already knew about this.

Senator DODD. That's very, very important.

The CHAIRMAN. By the way, I don't mean a heads-up improperly. He obviously was in frequent contact with Federal regulators who had noted both to the State Commission, as well as to himself and to his Board, that they had serious problems.

Senator DODD. Here's my problem, because here you have today, 1252, the wire service story about his testimony, and the update with Ms. Schaffer giving the Governor's office early warning about Fed's moving at the savings and loan owned by Clinton's White-water partner. So the press is missing it. You may think so, but the stories are going out suggesting somehow that the sending of that letter to Sam from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board was giving the Governor a heads-up. That's wrong.

The CHAIRMAN. No. It was, I believe, whether properly or improperly, whatever the motivation, and we are not going to ascribe anything to that, that the Commissioner has testified that she wanted the Governor to be aware of his liaison and the fact that McDougal and his bank were in trouble. She wanted him to know that. That wasn't a question of—was that not your testimony, Ms. Schaffer?

Should we take a little break now?

Senator DODD. Let me just finish the point. Isn't that the danger here? It's not so much the Governor knowing about it, it's the Governor then letting Mr. McDougal know about it.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't think that's the point at all, not at all. But we'll get into that.

Senator SARBANES. Let me make another point. The Governor was the Chief Executive Officer of this department.

The CHAIRMAN. Listen—

Senator SARBANES. An effort's been made here, I think, I'm very frank to say that consistently tried to lead Ms. Schaffer down certain paths. I think she's trying very hard to give her answers to these questions, and I think she ought to be allowed to do that. We can then evaluate it. But I don't think this questioning that we have been through about this authorization with respect to preferred stock is incredible. She's been very clear on that point. What they approved was that the concept of preferred stock could be done, as I understand it. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. And there's been a repeated effort made here to turn that into the approval of some sort of specific proposal that was never before them. You never had a specific proposal before you, did you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator SARBANES. Did you ever approve a specific proposal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator SARBANES. If you didn't have it before you, how could you approve it? So the only thing that was approved was the analysis of Arkansas law under which a State-chartered association could issue preferred stock. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, with respect to this confusion that Senator Dodd has cleared up now, I think it was raised by the suggestion that some confidential document from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board might make its way in some untoward way to Mr. McDougal so that he could take some action to thwart the regulators. Was this mythical construct that is completely repudiated by the fact that they communicated directly to Mr. McDougal and had been for quite some time telling him that the day of reckoning was going to come. Then, kaboom, it came, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to the matter that Senator Sarbanes raised, this was documented in communications between your department and both the Rose Law Firm and the bank, that is that there were requirements that they needed to meet, that they had a specific timeframe to meet those requirements, and when they were approaching the time cutoff, you advised them.

Let me show you RS000648. If we could put that up, please, and provide Ms. Schaffer with a copy.

Here is a letter dated December 9, 1985, from you via Mr. Handley to Mr. Massey, that specifically advises that you need to receive the progress and status of Madison's $3 million preferred stock issue and steps taken to meet the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's minimum net worth requirements.

Since the Department has not yet received a filing for the preferred stock issue, we are concerned about the ability of Madison to complete the sale of such stock and meet the minimum net worth requirements of the Bank Board by December 31, 1985, as earlier agreed.

That is what you are referring to in your testimony, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Senator DODD. Just on that point, has this letter been around for awhile?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Since 1985.

Senator DODD. I understand, but part of the hearing record, I mean, we spent at least an hour or an hour-and-a-half on this question of the word "approval." Yet here's a letter dated December from the State Securities saying you haven't filed. Why would you spend an hour-and-a-half asking the question when this letter's sitting here? I don't understand that.

Senator SARBANES. We've spent time on questioning Ms. Schaffer that why, when she got a letter from the Rose Law Firm, she sent a letter back to Hillary Clinton. And the sentence in the Rose Law Firm letter, before the signature, says, "Should you require further information or assistance, please advise Hillary Rodham Clinton or Richard Massey of this firm."

We had all this questioning, you know, it said Rose Law Firm. Why did you send it back to Hillary Clinton. As Ms. Schaffer said, she couldn't send it back to Dear Rose Law Firm.

Senator DODD. I didn't realize this letter was there. But if you have a letter, and staff had these matters, it answers the question. Why are we spending an hour-and-a-half on a question that's being answered by the very letter sent by the State Securities Office that answers the question. What's the point of that? Here it is saying, are you going to file in December, are you going to file. You can't approve something that hasn't been filed. That's appalling. Let's stop that.

The CHAIRMAN. We have allowed Senators and Counsel to go over their time to complete subject areas but we have gone well over. I believe there should be a response to certain questions.

Number one, Senator Bond was not raising a question in that manner. There is a very legitimate question concerning whether Mrs. Clinton asked Ms. Schaffer about the issuance of preferred stock and whether she spoke to her about that in connection with Madison Savings and Guaranty.

Now the record is complete. I won't characterize Ms. Schaffer's response. She said this basically had been on the radar screen, and that she was familiar with it and that she would get back a response, and she didn't see any problem.

So the question was, did the Department, at some point, approve or say it would be proper for Madison to go forward with a preferred stock offering, with the details of the plan obviously to follow.

That's the manner in which it was put. No one suggested that there was a particular plan. Ms. Schaffer was quite clear there had not been a particular plan. Thereafter, they became engaged in that process and various concerns were raised.

I will say to you that there are very legitimate questions as it relates to this bank and its owner.

Senator SARBANES. But those are not to Ms. Schaffer.

The CHAIRMAN. No one said that. Wait a minute, Senator, I listened to you. I didn't interrupt. And I did not say Ms. Schaffer.

Senator SARBANES. I understand that, but this woman has been berated at this table. A note ought to be made that she's been consistently berated here this morning.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, there is no need for you to raise your voice, especially with me.

Senator SARBANES. At some point—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator—

Senator SARBANES. —when a witness has been subjected to this kind of treatment, something needs to be said about it.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, are you suggesting that the Chairman has in any way abused the Commissioner? As a matter of fact, on a number of occasions, I have attempted to provide time for the witness to see documents that she was asked a question about. I have attempted to provide an atmosphere in which she could testify freely.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, you haven't been doing the questioning. The abuse has come in the questioning.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm sorry you characterize it that way, but I only was attempting to make a point.

There is a very legitimate question concerning the appropriateness of the Commission's action, even, at least in my mind—and we're going to explore this and take a brief break—its saying Madison can go forward with a preferred stock plan, given the fact that the weaknesses of the bank was already documented.

Also, it would appear to me—excuse me, you can make your point—I think I have probably spent the least time of any of the Senators making observations or asking questions. So I don't think it is inappropriate, and it is on my time, to be permitted to do that.

But there's a very real question as it relates to whether, given the Commission's knowledge as it relates to Mr. McDougal himself, and previous actions, they should have gone ahead and said, yes, you can move forward with a stock plan for Madison Guaranty. I believe that we should explore that, and I will when we come back from the recess.

So we'll take a 5-minute recess, and maybe we can all calm down a little when we come back.

[Recess.]

The CHAIRMAN. I'm waiting for Counsel, but I'm going to call on Senator Dodd who has an observation or a question.

Senator Dodd.

Senator DODD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Going back to the point I made about this, I appreciate that our Counsels and staff follow all these matters. I was not aware of the letter from Mr. Handley or Mr. Brady to Mr. Massey, if I recall, saying when are you going to file.

The reason I brought that up is because it seems to me the issue that was raised, I think it might have been Senator Murkowski that raised the issue about whether or not the approval that you wrote, Ms. Schaffer, was approval of a specific plan.

My point was that the question was answered by a letter that had come from the Department in December, saying where's the filing. So you couldn't be writing a letter in a sense approving something that hadn't even been filed, as the later letter indicates.

The second point, Mr. Chairman, I was going to raise, and I thought it's coincidental, but there is a letter from an analyst by the name of John Mitchell to the file, "Subject: Madison Guaranty, dated April 3, 1985." Because the issuance of the preferred stock—that date is the very date, there's another inquiry, as it just happens, on that specific date. This is to you from Charles, regarding this question of whether or not a State-chartered savings and loan association can issue preferred stock.

Interestingly, just to the file, the analysts at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board were analyzing this whole question, and in fact, specifically on this issue. The Madison Guaranty, this memo says, and I am quoting from it, "The Association plans to issue $600,000 of preferred stock, for which the buyer is awaiting issuance, and a second issue of an unknown amount will follow shortly thereafter."

The memo says the S.A., that is, the analyst here indicated general satisfaction with Madison's business plan, as well as corrections and improvements.

So while the State agency is inquiring as to the legality of this, the Feds are actually promoting or, at least, endorsing the idea. And as we know from previous history, of course, they promoted this idea generally around the country as a way to try and avoid the drain that we saw happen when these institutions failed.

It can get mind-numbing here, as I said earlier, some of them follow this, but there's a clear pattern here in that there's enough documented information, it seems to me, that would answer a lot of these questions by just going back and looking at the materials we have in front of us.

In fact, it was the very weakness of Madison Guaranty of the institution that caused the Feds to promote the issuance of the preferred stock, and the memo dated on April 3rd to the file by the Fed's analyzing the issue approves of the business plan, so you then follow on with the inquiry or rather the letter going back approving at least the legal question. Then the further note coming in December saying, where's your plan.

It seems to me if you just take all of these things and look at them, it's pretty self-explanatory. It can be a bit confusing if you're looking at it for the first time, but there's a clear chronology here of what was going on in the Fed's interest aside from what the individuals in particular were promoting.

I don't know if that memo of John Mitchell, dated April 3, 1985, has been included in the record or not, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. It has been.

Senator DODD. Again, I think it is a very important memo. Coincidentally, it occurs on the very same day that makes the case the Fed's think put it on the right track. And the question became whether or not it could be done legally.

If that's all the case then of whether or not they filed, and they ultimately never filed. It seems to me here you have a pretty clear record of the Fed's responding to the situation as well.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

I am sorry that we have to do some of this, but I think it is important because I want to set the record straight. I don't think that the media needs Senator D'Amato, or any Senator for that matter, defending them. But I think that their account of what Ms. Schaffer has testified to, and I'm speaking specifically of, I guess, today's AP wire, at 12:52-16 p.m., and I'm going to take the time to say:

Kraft says that early warning of Governor's office focused the Fed's warning against McDougal. It goes on to say, update, with Schaffer giving Governor's early warning about Fed's moving against savings and loan owned by Clinton's wife, and pick up second graph.

Nine days before the Federal Government moved against the failing savings and loan owned by Clinton's Whitewater partner, an Arkansas regulator warned the Governor's office that the crackdown was coming.

The Senate Whitewater Committee disclosed today, in a handwritten note to a top aide to the Governor, Beverly Bassett Schaffer wrote, "Because of Bill's relationship with the lending institution's owner, Jim McDougal, we probably ought to talk about the situation."

Indeed, that's what the note said and that's what you testified to. Is that correct, Ms. Schaffer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's what it says.

The CHAIRMAN. It goes on, and I want to go over this with you.

Schaffer told the Committee she knew that McDougal and Clinton were friends, and she wanted to warn the Governor's office to have nothing further to do with McDougal.

Is that not what you said? That's correct, isn't it? OK.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I haven't been listening very carefully to what I have been saying.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall saying the reason you wrote this is that you wanted to warn the Governor's office, and you said you had nothing to do——

Let me just go on a little further and read this in context.

Schaffer said that she did not know that Clinton and McDougal were Whitewater business partners.

That's what you testified to?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. And it says,

She testified that she wrote the note because, "I believe Jim McDougal abused his relationship with Bill Clinton."

Did you not say that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did.

The CHAIRMAN. It also says,

She said McDougal had tried previously to influence Clinton and that she wanted the Governor's office not to respond to further overtures from him.

Is that true?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I mean, am I going to have to comment on the press account?

The CHAIRMAN. I just want to because——

Senator SARBANES. What Senator D'Amato is doing is reading you the press account.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I don't interrupt you. I don't need my questions characterized. Now, I'm asking you please, try to constrain yourself. I told her that I was reading this press account.

Ms. Schaffer, do you have a copy of this in front of you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me get you a copy, please, so that you can follow along. It's not a trick question, but I think it's not fair to characterize it and I'm not going to attempt to characterize. I want to ask you what you agree with and what you don't.

If you'll go down to the middle of the first page, do you see the middle? That sentence says, "She testified that she wrote the note because, 'I believe Jim McDougal abused his relationship with Bill Clinton.'" I can have the reporter read that back, but did you testify to that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. You were concerned and you wanted to warn the Governor that McDougal would have trouble. I think you said, and I wrote a note here some time ago, "If he panicked," meaning McDougal, "what he would do in terms of attempting to reach out to the Governor." Isn't that what you said? That's not there.

In your testimony, you talked about your concern that McDougal might panic, right? And might reach out to the Governor. And if that's not what you meant, I'd like to hear it.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes. I mean, that's good enough, I guess.

The CHAIRMAN. That's what you meant. I mean, you wrote this note and you talked about the Governor's relationship with Mr. McDougal, and you said because, and I'm reading the note now, "Because of Bill's relationship with McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it."

Now when we asked you what you meant, you wanted to give the Governor, to tell him, look, this guy has got some problems here with this bank. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did not want Jim McDougal to abuse that relationship and try to draw somebody else into it. There was no place in it for anybody else. I did not want that to happen. I don't know that I testified that I knew that he had tried previously to influence Clinton. I don't believe I said anything like that.

Senator DODD. Ms. Schaffer, my problem was, earlier the paragraph reads, let me just give you the story, "Schaffer is giving Governor's office early warning about Fed's moving." Here's where I have my trouble, and this is why I raised the issue. The implication is that somehow maybe the Governor is then going to provide that information to Mr. McDougal when, in fact, Mr. McDougal already knew about it.

The CHAIRMAN. I wanted to put this in context.

Senator DODD. Our colleague from Missouri said this is like the catcher, it would be like the pitcher telling the batter what to throw. If you recall, that's the analogy he used.

Clearly the implication there is then by providing information to the Governor, the Governor then tells Mr. McDougal. That is the pitcher telling the batter what he's going to throw when, in fact, the batter already knew in June. That's my point.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I understand your point. I think it's a point well taken, and that's why we spent a little time doing it.

Senator DODD. But you understand my point? You say that, the pitcher telling the batter. The batter knew.

The CHAIRMAN. That certainly has not been the thrust of Mr. Chertoff's questions.

Senator DODD. I didn't say it was.

The CHAIRMAN. Some of our colleagues may examine from a different aspect.

Senator DODD. The story says, "early warning."

The CHAIRMAN. The article speaks for itself and we can go over this over and over again, but let me address this because this disturbed me. It didn't disturb me, but it raised a question.

I think Senator Murkowski and several others alluded there was a message that was taken in the Governor's office. Can I have that call slip? The message, one of the call messages.

The message says Governor from Jim McDougal and it has a date and it makes a reference to Beverly Bassett Schaffer for Securities Commissioner.

Now, you said you were not aware that Mr. McDougal had made a recommendation. Is that correct? You weren't aware that he had recommended you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I wasn't ever told that he had a conversation with Bill Clinton or that he sent a note or whatever he did.

The CHAIRMAN. He may not have even had a direct conversation. It appears that there was a message taken down. But you were not aware that he called on your behalf?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You testified to that. You went further and then said that you wouldn't want him to do that, and you were quite emphatic. I wouldn't want him to make a recommendation. Why did you say that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Because of just my impressions of Jim McDougal.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, tell me.

Ms. SCHAFFER. It is broader than that probably, because when I sought this appointment, I specifically asked members of my law firm and others to stay out of the process because I was a little concerned about asking clients of the firm or clients to write letters or lobby on my behalf for the appointment, because I did not want to feel any obligation to those companies, or firms, or individuals in the event I did get the appointment. I made it very clear that I did not want that kind of effort made by my law firm on my behalf.

The CHAIRMAN. But you were quite emphatic when you said you wouldn't want McDougal in particular.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I am saying, in broader terms, I mean, I don't want to limit it to just Jim McDougal. But I am saying that I absolutely, that was my big concern. I really did not want that effort made.

Specifically with regard to Jim McDougal, I didn't even know the man. I wouldn't want somebody talking to the Governor on my behalf that I didn't even know.

The CHAIRMAN. It had nothing to do with the fact that you knew he had been involved with a number of transactions that were improper? You did not think about that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I didn't think about that.

Senator DODD. One point here. He could have been calling to oppose the nomination.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, I don't think we want to engage in that speculation.

Senator DODD. All he says is Beverly Bassett for Securities Commissioner.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not even going through the note. It says Beverly Bassett for Securities. The point I am making is that Ms. Schaffer testified that she didn't even know that Jim McDougal had made this recommendation, and she was quite vehement. You said, "I wouldn't want his recommendation." I wanted to ascertain why you wouldn't want his recommendation.

You know of Mr. McDougal and you knew about his general reputation, didn't you? I mean, he had been around in government for a long time. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I knew some things about Mr. McDougal. About a fraction of what I know today.

The CHAIRMAN. But even then, you had a reason, you didn't want his recommendation, did you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. My impressions of Jim and Susan McDougal were formed in large part by the TV commercials, the ads that they ran. They were pretty silly.

The CHAIRMAN. Which ones were those?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Maple Creek Farms and there's another one.

The CHAIRMAN. Castle Grande?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't remember the Castle Grande.

The CHAIRMAN. They were quite extensively advertised. And you don't remember them?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Maple Creek Farms is the one that I remember.

The CHAIRMAN. And you are saying that it wasn't colored by the memorandum?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I would not have wanted a recommendation from any S&L operator at the time. I had a pretty good idea what S&L's were headed for.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you also telling me that in addition to generally not wanting any recommendation from outside sources, and specifically S&L operators, more than just McDougal, that it had nothing to do with any reservations that you may have had about him in terms of him not following the law?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That was not what was on my mind.

The CHAIRMAN. You really didn't remember at that time the memorandum in which you specifically mentioned the illegality of the transactions and actually warned that there might be criminal liability?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That memorandum has been grossly mischaracterized. If you take those few sentences, and that's all there is to it, then that may be what it says. It's 3 or 4 pages. It broadly looks at the entire issue. If you or I are a partner in a law firm, you give me the lowdown. You don't leave out the fact that there might be this ultimate penalty down the road. I mean, it's your responsibility to cover the whole ground.

The CHAIRMAN. With some specificity, you mentioned a number of properties that obviously the Federal people were not aware of, some of which failed to comply with Arkansas law. For example, you were aware that Campobello Island wasn't handled properly, right? That's one of the properties you mentioned.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I would have to read this memorandum.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you take a look at it. Can I see a copy of that memo? I think it's the last page, and I think it goes down to the last two paragraphs where you begin to talk—page 4. Do you see page 4, the last two paragraphs there. Here's what draws my attention, and again, this is the first time I've seen or heard of this. But when you start with that second paragraph,

Perhaps just as potentially devastating to the project is the possibility that upon discovering the failure of McDougal and Wade to make a filing determining that they should have complied with the Act and did not, HUD would seek an injunction against them to force them to stop selling lots or making any improvement whatsoever until they comply with the Act. In that case, it is likely that there would be a substantial delay in the progress of the development, and if no lots could be sold during that time there would be no income from sales to fund operations.

These risks should be weighed against the benefit of moving forward now on the initial 93 lots without first complying with the Act. The obvious benefit of moving forward is that the sale of those lots will provide critical capital needed immediately to fund the start-up of the project and will hopefully generate more widespread interest in the project as well.

On the other hand, the more interest there is in the project, the higher profile it will have, thereby increasing the likelihood that HUD, unfortunately, will also be interested in the project. These, of course, are business risks which require business decisions.

If you go to your third page, you talk about, and you go down to the second-from-last paragraph, actually right in the middle,

Finally, S 1714 of the Act authorizes the Secretary of HUD and the Attorney General to seek and obtain a temporary or permanent injunction or restraining order without bond against any person who is engaged in or is about to engage in any acts or practices that would constitute a violation of the Act, namely, selling lots subject to the requirements of the Act but not in compliance with those requirements.

Although the likelihood of criminal sanctions being imposed against a developer appears to be relatively small, it has been done. Evidence that the developer willfully violated the Act would have to be fairly strong. The only concern I have on this point is the fact that McDougal did not make a filing with the OILSR—

Ms. SCHAFFER. Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there an office in Arkansas?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that Federal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. [Continuing.]

—on Maple Creek Farms or on Gold Mine Springs, and to the best of my knowledge, there was no exemption available for those developments.

Then you mention Campobello Island Estates, so they are all clearly mentioned. You say,

The failure to comply with the Act in connection with one or two previous land development projects is some evidence that the failure once again to comply with the Act was willful and not just a negligent oversight.

So you see—

Ms. SCHAFFER. Can I say something?

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just pose this to you and then you can respond. Here is where I have difficulty. I understand when you say I wouldn't want McDougal recommending me. And, remember you wrote this memorandum just months before and it is about McDougal's actions.

So I think it does comport with your obvious—I'm characterizing what I detected—disdain for McDougal. Then you sent a note to the Governor, and I'm not questioning whether it should or should not—and you say, "Because of the friendship with McDougal." Then you testify that you didn't want the Governor to be pulled into this.

Now, Ms. Schaffer, I can't understand your conduct because you did review this when you were working for Governor Tucker's law firm. Yet when the question arose whether this bank could issue preferred stock, it didn't enter your mind that we were talking about Madison and McDougal, and those transactions that you previously reviewed and characterized as basically subject to criminal sanctions.

That troubles me. The First Lady calls, and you say, "Yes, we have been discussing this. It's been in the shop, and we'll get back to you on it." I'm wondering if the First Lady didn't call but someone else had called, what your response would have been, given the fact that you were aware of Mr. McDougal's shady practices in the past? And you knew the bank was weak. I'm not suggesting that you didn't say certain conditions relating to the broker-dealer relationship had to be met, but that's where I have a problem. I just want to share that with you and you can respond, so please do.

Ms. SCHAFFER. This was a legal research memorandum. That's what it was. It was one of hundreds and hundreds I did. At the time, it was not outstanding in my mind. I believe that it says, I don't believe it draws a conclusion that any of these projects in fact violated any law. It suggests that they may, they could, they might, and here's what could happen if they do.

The other projects that are mentioned, I have no knowledge of the facts of those projects. I raised the question, a reasonable question to raise. I would have been negligent had it not been raised. Look at the other projects. Look at them.

I don't say in here this is in fact, I know for a fact, here are the facts about these projects, because I didn't know the facts about those projects. I wasn't privy to any conversation ever about these projects. So this is a legal memorandum.

Now it doesn't arrive at the conclusion that, in fact, that occurred. And you're asking me, you're telling me——

The CHAIRMAN. He didn't register, did he?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, he did. He most certainly did.

The CHAIRMAN. He was registered at that time?

Ms. SCHAFFER. They corrected it. My understanding is, I was not involved in it, but yes.

After this memorandum, I don't know what happened to this memorandum. I have no idea. I did what I was supposed to do. I gave it to Jim Guy Tucker. I don't know what they did with it, but I do know that they did make a filing with the HUD office, with the Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration, and corrected the problem I brought to their attention.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you find that out, Ms. Schaffer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know. I've found so much out in the last 4 years, I don't remember when that fact emerged.

The CHAIRMAN. But at the time that you wrote this, you raised this as a very real problem.

Ms. SCHAFFER. They should comply with the law.

The CHAIRMAN. But they weren't at that point?

Ms. SCHAFFER. But they should.

The CHAIRMAN. That is true.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Schaffer, I must say, as we have probed each of these issues, it comes through that you tried to handle yourself in a very proper and professional manner. You made the point here today that you didn't want anyone, with the possible exception I guess of your brother, who went to the Governor two or three times, you have a good brother, he thinks a lot of you, to try to say that you ought to be the Securities Commissioner. But you didn't want anyone sort of recommending you and particularly people in the industry which you would be involved in overseeing. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. That is what I understood you to say. Is that right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. As Commissioner, I'm interested in this effort this morning to take an approval given by you and your department on the general legal question that an S&L could, under the Arkansas business law, issue preferred stock and try to turn it into an approval of a specific Madison proposal. Now a specific Madison proposal was never approved by you or your department, was it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator SARBANES. What you approved and authorized was the concept that preferred stock could be issued by an S&L under the Arkansas Business Law, is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That is what I intended, that is what I thought I was approving.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I think that is what you did. I don't think that your abilities, capacities, and professionalism as a lawyer ought to be cast in doubt here, because I think you acted as a good lawyer. Are you practicing now? Are you still in practice?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I was. I am on leave of absence because I really have to deal with this.

Senator SARBANES. I didn't know that. I'm sorry to hear that. I think what's being put to you is very difficult and the implications that are being made about you I think are extremely unfair. You have gotten a difficult press. I gather you were, as Commissioner, harassed down there. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think most of the press has been pretty fair to me, and pretty professional, and used some manners and just did their job. But I had a few upsetting events that sort of overshadowed the good.

But, yes, it concerns me that it's gone past, or seems to have gone past the effort to gather the facts, if there ever was a true effort to gather the facts in any of this, to a real personal smear, and it's just really unfortunate that that's what this is about in a lot of ways. I'm not suggesting that the vast majority of the press had anything to do with that kind of thing.

Senator SARBANES. How long were you the Securities Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Six years.

Senator SARBANES. Were you ever subjected to any improper pressures from the Governor as Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator SARBANES. Did you feel you were able to do your job as the public interest required and the law called for?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. What was your perception, Mr. Handley, of how the Department operated during that period when Ms. Schaffer was the Commissioner? Any improper influences brought to bear on it that you discerned?

Mr. HANDLEY. I was never asked to do anything illegal or improper by anybody. I always got the chance to say what I thought and what I believed and that's what I did.

Senator SARBANES. Was it your perception the department's decisions were being guided by the public interest?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. I have no questions. I'm finished, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Schaffer, so there's no lack of clarity about the point, I am getting into this July 2, 1986 note to Sam Bratton, CCBW 884, 885-887. I believe your testimony was that on other occasions, or on occasions where there was a bank closing or savings and loan closing, you would contact the Governor's office to give the Governor some notes of the closing, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's because the closing affects depositors, is that right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But in this case, in July 1986, there was not going to be a closing of Madison, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I still believed that there would be. I hoped that there would be. That's what I thought should have been done.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When did you write your letter to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board suggesting a closing?

Ms. SCHAFFER. When we had the final proof of insolvency in 1987.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When in 1987?

Ms. SCHAFFER. December.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in December 1987, you first requested a closing due to insolvency, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Let me clarify that. I don't believe when I talked to Sam Bratton that I knew what the plan was for the Dallas meeting. So in my mind, it was still a distinct possibility that based on the unsafeness and unsoundness of the institution, that it might well be closed. And so I don't know that I knew what the plan was. That would have clearly taken the savings and loan away from the McDougals. The plan, as it evolved, did the same thing, and left the institution under new management. Even before new management was there, the McDougals were gone. There was hardly an immediate crisis and need immediately to close the institution.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The point I'm making, Ms. Schaffer, and it's confirmed by the letter of June 19th. The letter of June 19th merely indicates there's going to be a board of directors' meeting. It doesn't say anything about an imminent closing of the bank that's going to cause a crisis for depositors.

Ms. SCHAFFER. We weren't going to tell Jim McDougal in advance that we were going to close the savings and loan.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me finish. In fact, you yourself didn't recommend, I think you have taken the position publicly that you couldn't have recommended or taken steps to close the savings and loan until you had a certification of insolvency.

Ms. SCHAFFER. On the grounds of insolvency. But there were other grounds that were available, the grounds of substantial dissipation of assets or unsafe and unsound conditions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So in July 1986, which is 18 months before you wrote the letter to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, what was on the table was a meeting of the board of directors, not an imminent action that would affect depositors, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I disagree.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was an action that would, however, affect Mr. McDougal, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I disagree.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The removal of Mr. McDougal in the meeting of July 11th was not something that was going to affect McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Of course it would. But it also affected depositors. At the point in time when I had the conversation, it was still my belief and my hope that it would just be closed. Closed. I believe that's what my note says. I think they are going to have to be closed. The fact that they came up with a plan that would not involve a depositor payout that accomplished the same thing was fine with me.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is quite clear, and let's make sure there is no dispute about it, that of course the board of directors of the savings and loan knew that there was going to be a meeting with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board because they were required to attend, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The question here is, the notification to the Governor through Mr. Bratton accompanied by the letter that sets forth the particular items that are problem items, including Castle Sewer and Water and IDC, or Industrial Development Company of Arkansas. Do you know whether Mr. Bratton communicated what you had asked him to convey to the Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I didn't ask him to do anything with the information, Mr. Chertoff. I don't know what he did with the information. I didn't ask him to do anything with it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You asked to talk to him?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I told him he needed to know that. I don't know what he did with it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't you say that we probably ought to talk about it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Sam and I.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you talk to him about it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you tell him?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I've testified to that, I think for an hour or so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We'll check the record.

In your discussion with Mr. Bratton, did he tell you he was going to tell the Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. He did not. He said, I agree with you.

Mr. CHERTOFF. About what?

Ms. SCHAFFER. With what I said.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What specifically did he agree with you about?

Ms. SCHAFFER. He agreed with what I told him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That McDougal was in trouble?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, he agreed with my recommendation that the Governor's office should have nothing to do with this issue in any way. It should not involve itself in any way with what the Department was planning to do, was going to do, no matter who liked it, what the fallout was, whatever. He agreed that there was no role for the Governor's office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you essentially were moving preemptively to make sure that if McDougal reached the Governor, that Sam Bratton was aware and would recommend, no, have nothing to do with McDougal, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Basically.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to read to you from Mr. Bratton's deposition on page 161.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's make sure that she gets that first. Why don't we put it on the Elmo before we start reading it. This is the only one? Let's wait a moment and make some copies of this?

Mr. CHERTOFF. If we can resume again, I want to direct your attention, you can read along with me starting at page 161 at line 16, and this is from Mr. Bratton's deposition.

Question: After discussing Madison issues with Beverly Bassett Schaffer, did you then subsequently discuss your discussions with Beverly Bassett Schaffer with the Governor?

Answer: On occasions I would if—probably not every time I had a conversation with Beverly Bassett Schaffer in which Madison was mentioned would I have a follow-up conversation or memorandum to the Governor. There would have been occasions when I would either give him an oral report or perhaps send him a short memo about it, but not on every occurrence where she and I had a conversation in which Madison was mentioned.

Question: Do you recall any specific occasions?

Answer: I think a specific occasion, I think I probably wrote him a memorandum, either shortly before or shortly after or possibly both, the action of the FSLIC, enforcing McDougal out at Madison, I think I probably wrote him a memo about probably one, in advance that it was likely to happen, and perhaps a subsequent one that it had happened.

Question: Did you have any discussions about those memos with the Governor?

Answer: I don't recall whether I did. I may well have.

Let me ask you with respect to this particular note we're talking about, I understand that on other occasions, you communicated with the Governor's office about actions that you were going to be taking with respect to various savings and loan, is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were there any other occasions in which, when you made that communication with Mr. Bratton, you said it was because of Bill's relationship with the guy who was operating the savings and loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I handled them all the same way.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The only contact you had with Mr. Bratton concerning action on a savings and loan in which you put in the note that you were having the contact because of Bill's relationship with somebody was on this particular Madison Guaranty closing, right, or Madison Guaranty action?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm sorry, I don't understand the question.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'll read it again.

The phrase, "Because of Bill's relationship with McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it." Were there any other savings and loan where you told or indicated to Mr. Bratton that you need to talk to him about action on this savings and loan because of Bill's relationship with the owner of the savings and loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The other two savings and loans from 1985 were handled in the same way, advance notice, what was likely to happen, that's correct. They were handled exactly like Madison, and Jim McDougal didn't own either one of those.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But there's a difference.

Ms. SCHAFFER. There's not a difference.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In those other two instances, did you tell Sam that you needed to get this information to the Governor because of the Governor's relationship with the owner of the savings and loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Jim McDougal didn't own the other two savings and loans.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Whoever the owner was on those other occasions, the reason you communicated with Mr. Bratton didn't have anything to do with the relationship—let me finish—between the Governor and the owner.

In this case, when you state a reason for why we ought to talk about it, you don't say because of the depositors, you don't say because of the shareholders, you don't say because of the confidence of the citizens of the State of Arkansas. You say, and these are your words, these are not my words, you say, "Because of Bill's relationship with McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it." My question to you is, did you ever make a similar type of comment with respect to any other savings and loan involving some other owner of the savings and loan besides McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know. I might have on Guaranty Savings & Loan at Harrison.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was the owner of Guaranty Savings & Loan another friend of the Governor's?

Ms. SCHAFFER. A lot of people in Arkansas were, and I have no idea. I don't know whether they were campaign contributors, they might well have been. I do know I believe that they did, the owners of that savings and loan, in 1985, were angry and I don't know whether they contacted the Governor's office. I wouldn't be surprised if they had.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You also knew that Mr. McDougal had a lot of influence in appointing people to posts involving savings and loan regulations.

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I have learned that since 1985.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you didn't know in 1985 that it was Mr. McDougal who appointed Latham or who recommended Latham and Kendall to the State Savings and Loan Board?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Charles may have known that. I don't know exactly how that information came. It is obvious to me that if John Latham was the appointee, that Jim McDougal might have had something to do with it. But you asked me if I knew that Jim McDougal had a lot of influence over appointments to the State Savings & Loan Board. I don't know that for a fact. You'll have to ask him or Bill Clinton.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We have a document, but that's what you've said, is an interesting point. You say that you surmise at the very least, from Mr. Latham, it was kind of obvious that McDougal has some influence.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I can tell you that nobody else wanted the appointment. That may be the reason that he got it is because nobody wanted it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, we get back to the question of your state of mind and your knowledge about Mr. McDougal going into this thing in 1985. Again, we've come back to this memo that the Chairman asked you about regarding Campobello Island Estates. Are you telling us now that the Campobello Island Estates sales were subsequently properly registered?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's my understanding.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Where did you get that? Did someone tell you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I have no idea, Mr. Chertoff. I can't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But what is clear in your memo, and we talked about the question of whether you knew the facts, when you were an associate, I assume they taught you what they teach every other associate, that when you are assuming something you should state explicitly in a memo, I am assuming the following, so that you identify it.

Ms. SCHAFFER. It says, "it is my understanding." That's close enough to, "I assume."

Mr. CHERTOFF. When I look at the next-to-last paragraph on page 3, and I'm sure you have the document in front of you, it says, in the third line, "The only concern I have on this point is the fact that McDougal did not make a filing with the OILSR on Maple Creek Farms or on Gold Mine Springs, and to the best of my knowledge, there was no exemption available for those developments."

You were giving this in your memo to a partner, and the top of the memo indicates, "Send copy to McDougal." Did you understand this was going to go to the client?

Ms. SCHAFFER. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Top of the memo, very first page, the handwriting says, "Send copy to McDougal."

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's not my handwriting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No, I am saying did you know this was going to the client?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Tucker didn't tell you that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You indicated to us that in 1985, when you were confronted with a request relating to Madison, you don't remember that you had done work on Madison issues the year before. Is that right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It didn't occur to me. That wasn't what was on my mind in 1985? Is that the question?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes, about 8 months or a year after you had written the memo, when the Madison matter, a year after you'd written the memo.

Senator SARBANES. When in 1985 are we referring to?

Mr. CHERTOFF. April 1985.

Senator SARBANES. And this memo was?

Mr. CHERTOFF. March 1984.

Senator SARBANES. Thirteen months later.

Ms. SCHAFFER. If somebody had asked me about it, I might have.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If somebody had asked you about Madison?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. About whether, if I had been the issue in 1985 instead of Madison.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were shown a memo earlier since the break. It is an April 3, 1985 memo from John Mitchell. "Subject, Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association." Had you seen this memo before?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Have I seen it before?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you seen it before?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I had a microfilm copy of a copy. But I couldn't read it.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you get it at the time?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm sure I did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you looked at this memo at the time, did you make note of the fact that two of the projects that were listed here were projects that were the subject of your memo a year before where there was a problem with the land registration?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When you went to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board meeting, you went there on July 11, 1986, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who represented Madison, what firm?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I believe John Selig and Breck Speed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What firm were they from?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The Mitchell Law Firm.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was that the firm you'd been at in 1984?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When they came into the room representing Mr. McDougal or representing, I'm sorry, Madison Savings & Loan, did it ring a bell with you that, you know, I worked on something to do with Madison Savings & Loan?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I wasn't thinking about that. No, Mr. Chertoff, that was not what was on my mind.

The CHAIRMAN. I know Mr. Chertoff wants to go into this matter further, and he's going to get back to it, but I think if he does it's going to go well over the time and we are up to 14 minutes. So I am going to go to Senator Sarbanes, then we'll come back.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Thank you.

Since we are back to this memo that you sent on July 2, 1986, let's review the various reasons why you sent that memo. As I understand it, one reason was because you would keep the Governor's office apprised whenever there was activity or action that could affect the savings and loans, that might have an impact on the depositors, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In this case, you had heard that the press was making inquiries about the upcoming meeting of the Bank Board?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The inquiries were general in nature. Is Madison fixing to be closed? Is Madison going down? We heard they are in trouble? Like that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In addition to the general proposition that you would keep the Governor's office apprised, as you did, with respect to the closings a year before of two other institutions, completely unrelated to, as far as you knew, friends or acquaintances or associates of the Governor, now you had to deal with the rumors that were circulating about Madison and possible regulatory action, if that right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that was reason number two.

Reason number three was that you thought it prudent and useful to let Mr. Bratton know that action would likely be taken affecting Mr. McDougal personally and that he ought to know that information in case Mr. McDougal had sought to make a direct approach to the Governor's office, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes. Although I don't think, I told him what action might be taken. I think the point I intended to convey was that whatever action was taken, the Savings and Loan would be either closed, or something to that effect. I mean, basically you were right. I just want to make it clear that what was on my mind was not Jim McDougal is, you know, being personally affected.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So there were three separate and pretty much independent reasons prompting your writing this note, and you discussed it with Mr. Bratton.

Mr. Bratton, in his sworn testimony, has testified fully about your conversations with him, both in connection with the other institutions and with respect to Madison Guaranty. The testimony is completely consistent with yours, in my view, about what had occurred back then 11 years ago.

So now the question arises, as a result of writing this note to Mr. Bratton, and enclosing a copy of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board letter, that the Madison Board of Directors had already received, can you point to any bad thing that happened? Did something bad happen as a result of you writing that memo?

Ms. SCHAFFER. To Sam?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Other than the bad thing that's happened to you by being mired down, to the extent of giving up your partnership on a temporary basis and focus on all this. I mean, this most importantly because we tend to lose sight of the focus here and what it is we are talking about.

Here is a memo that is sent to Mr. Bratton. Can anybody here point to something untoward, irregular, or improper that resulted or that flowed from this communication?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When we go back to the question of what you had done 13 months before when you were an associate in a law firm looking at issues regarding regulatory requirements with some other agency, it is the job of lawyers to point out deficiencies of that nature so that they can be corrected.

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's what I thought I was doing.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This is not rocket science. This is what you were doing? You were pointing to thing that were out of order that could be placed in order, and that is frequently what happens in a variety of regulations to which businesses are subjected. Sometimes lawyers can prove quite helpful in pointing a client or associate of a client in a direction to take remedial action as appropriate. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The effort here was to make sure compliance was made. It needed to be made and had not been made. Then, you need to know the consequences of that and correct it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you, in terms of the assignment you were given, identified the areas where corrective action could be taken. Did you have any reason to believe it wasn't taken?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I don't. I have no idea. I wasn't involved in anything after that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. A research project came across your desk. You identified the issues. You focused on it. You wrote a memo, and that was it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That was it.

Senator SARBANES. You didn't know at the time whether these failures to file were willful or negligent?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I did not.

Senator SARBANES. You said that specifically in the memo, as I read it.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think it repeatedly says also, "to the best of my knowledge," "to the best of my knowledge," which was quite limited. Maybe I should have said: Based on my limited amount of information that I have been told, but "to the best of my knowledge" means that. It doesn't mean I've drawn a factual conclusion and that it is irrefutable. I don't know. It is an abundance of caution, it looks to me like, and everybody else here has gotten to read this several times before today. I have not.

Senator SARBANES. It seems to me you were just laying out the options, the possible implications, but I note that you say, you raise a point about whether it was negligent oversight or willful. So you didn't know for a fact whether it was one or the other, I take it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Bond.

Senator BOND. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Ms. Schaffer, let me go back to clear up a couple of things with respect to the approval of the preferred stock issuance.

We have discussed, or you have seen I believe, the memoranda from Jim McDougal which, for background purposes, indicated that he wanted to sell preferred stock immediately. We have the memorandum saying, "I want this preferred stock matter cleared up immediately as I need to go to Washington to sell stock," and the business plan which we have, is another memo.

Senator SARBANES. What are you referring to?

Senator BOND. Excuse me. Has Ms. Schaffer seen 99003746? That is a Letter to File from John Mitchell and S-KR03131?

The CHAIRMAN. You do have the April 3rd letter there?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. It says, "To File from John Mitchell"?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator BOND. Have you seen the memorandum dated April 18th to John Latham from Jim McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't think so.

Senator BOND. We'll put it up. It is very brief. I offer that for background to say that the documents have indicated that they want this matter to go forward. My question to you is—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, can you see that on the Elmo?

It is a very short one page: "I want this preferred stock matter cleared up"—what is that?

Senator BOND. ". . . cleared up immediately as I need to go to Washington to sell stock."

Ms. SCHAFFER. "Washington"? "Washington"?

Senator BOND. Who knows? I'm not going to—

The CHAIRMAN. This is a memo from, obviously——

Senator BOND. McDougal to John Latham.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you seen this before?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Senator BOND. Thank you. That's all I needed to know.

But I would like to ask now, after the May 14th approval letter, you had done what was requested of your department? Correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We had responded to their letter.

Senator BOND. The conditions you placed were conditions upon the activities of the broker-dealer, the service company's broker-dealer activities. Did you put any conditions at that time on Mr. McDougal or limit his ability to sell stock, the preferred stock?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Not in the May 14th letter. That was, I believe, in a July letter to Rick Massey, the broker-dealer application, and discussions about that I think followed this May 14th letter sometime during June, July, or August.

Senator BOND. That's the point. I think there has been confusion because there are restrictions on the broker-dealer matter, and I want to set that aside and just focus on the preferred stock.

Once you issued the approval on May 14th, then it was up to Mr. McDougal, if he could find a purchaser who thought he was going to sell $600,000, then he would have to come back with another filing specifically, but he did not do that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. He didn't.

Senator BOND. So in terms of that process, you granted the approval that was requested, and the reason nothing further happened was not any failure to act on your part with respect to the preferred stock?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right. They never submitted the proposal that would have been required to be submitted in advance before they could offer or sell the stock.

Senator BOND. Thank you. I think that was a little bit confused because there were questions asked about the broker-dealer and what went on afterwards, and what limitations were placed on the broker-dealer.

Now did the Madison Service Agency acquire a broker-dealer prior to getting approval from you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It did what a lot of other companies did at the time, and some other S&L's. They acquired a dormant, inactive broker-dealer shell that wasn't licensed to operate.

Senator BOND. Then they came to you, and that is what began the process of your discussions of an examination of and/or restriction of the operation of the broker-dealer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, that is good enough, I guess.

Senator BOND. Thank you.

Let me go back to the July 2, 1986, memorandum to Sam——

Ms. SCHAFFER. "Bratton."

Senator BOND. Sam Bratton. At the time you sent the memo, did you have a meeting with Mr. Bratton or a telephone conversation in respect to that memorandum?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I didn't have a meeting with him. I had a telephone conversation, but I don't know what day. That was the 2nd of July. I couldn't tell you.

Senator BOND. But you did have a conversation with him that referenced matters in that memorandum?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator BOND. Do you recall what that conversation was?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, yes. I've testified I think today fairly extensively about the conversation. I can go through it again, if you like.

Senator BOND. Again I apologize. I had to speak to the Mayors today and I was not present for it. If it is fully in the record, I will come back and not take up more of your time going through it.

At the time you had that conversation, you had been in discussions with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board about Madison Guaranty and other troubled savings and loans?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Senator BOND. Did they give you continual status reports and updates on what they planned to do?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I wouldn't call it "continual." Periodic.

Senator BOND. Did they tell you in advance of July 11th what steps they were going to take at the July 11th meeting?

Ms. SCHAFFER. They did at some point. We discussed it. They asked our recommendation about that, and I suppose this is where—this really aggravates me—I suppose I could have said, well, we don't want you to do that because, after all, Jim McDougal is a friend of Bill Clinton's; but what I did instead was say, absolutely, you know, let's do it.

So I think it is unfair—you know, I had an opportunity there to do the wrong thing and I didn't. But in those conversations, we did discuss what would happen or the mechanism if it were to be closed and what action would be taken. I do not know when that jelled. I mean, I do not know when it was settled and resolved that that is what would be done.

Charles I believe had some of those conversations, so he might know better than I; but we did know before we went to Dallas.

Senator BOND. All right.

Then the letter which was attached to your July 2nd handwritten note which went to the Board of Directors of Madison Guaranty was, as I believe you stated, kept confidential. This was to be known only to the Board Members and the people involved that these restrictions were being placed upon Madison Guaranty? You included a copy of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board letter of June 19th in the note to Mr. Bratton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I believe that the State—we are all State. I mean, we are an agency of the State. So I will not make the distinction between the Securities Department and the Governor's office in terms of the State's right to look at that document. That is too narrow for me.

Senator BOND. I think that point was raised previously, and I think there is a very good reason for that. I stated why in my State we did not do that. I think some of my colleagues may have drawn the wrong inference. I think there are problems involved with that.

I guess the final question was that you had with the transmittal of this letter to Mr. Bratton, the point I believe you made earlier was that you felt that the Governor needed to know about the action to be taken in Dallas by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think I have said this repeatedly. I didn't say that Sam Bratton should tell Bill Clinton. Sam was my liaison. Sam was the person I wanted to know. Sam, do whatever you want to with it after that. I didn't have anything to do with it anymore and didn't want to. But that was my purpose. I wanted the information in describing—I was asked about the relationship, Bill Clinton's relationship, what does that mean? Well, I've said that I believe that Jim McDougal abused his relationship with Bill Clinton. That's not something I wanted to see occur again.

Senator BOND. But the reason you talked to a liaison with the Governor's office is because that is information the Governor's office needs to have? That is why they have liaisons. Right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well——

Senator BOND. OK, well——

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right. I think it is a fair conversation to have. If something is done with the information that is inappropriate, then I think that is a different matter altogether.

Senator BOND. All right. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I have to ask a question. You said, and I asked Mr. Chertoff to write it down, "I didn't want Mr. McDougal to abuse his relationship with the Governor. It's something that happened. I didn't want it to happen again." What didn't you want to happen again?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think you're just over-reacting to that——

The CHAIRMAN. I am not over-reacting.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I should choose my words more carefully.

The CHAIRMAN. You said, "I believe he abused his relationship with the Governor." Is that what you said?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think he threw Bill Clinton's name around every chance he got.

The CHAIRMAN. You knew it back then?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, he did it. He did it everywhere he went.

The CHAIRMAN. You were aware of it, then?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Of course I was aware of it.

The CHAIRMAN. As a matter of fact, you knew that he was Bill Clinton's top assistant at one point, wasn't he?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't think I really knew that. His top assistant? I don't think so.

The CHAIRMAN. You knew he worked for the Governor?

Ms. SCHAFFER. At some point, at some time he did in some capacity, as a liaison, I think. I wasn't paying any attention to Jim McDougal in 1978. I was in law school.

The CHAIRMAN. But you said you never wanted him to do it again?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Then I withdraw the comment. As I say, I am going to have to choose my words more carefully.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Schaffer, this is not the first time. Starting from the beginning, the record indicates you wrote this note, and the note says quite clearly—and I think Mr. Chertoff raised it—did you ever suggest, because of someone's relationship with the other failed banks, "Because of Bill's relationship with McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it."

Ms. SCHAFFER. I've said all I can say about that.

The CHAIRMAN. We have several more minutes.

Mr. Chertoff, let me say I have gone to 15 minutes because we have less than four Members, and this way we will have a better flow. At 15 minutes we will conclude, and then we will go to the other side.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

This Federal Home Loan Bank Board meeting on July 11th, that was actually sparked by an examination at the savings and loan that took place starting around February 28th; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Sometime in the Spring you knew there had been an examination?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You knew there had been discovery, and a lot of I guess what we could call financial shenanigans, including using straw men to purchase property?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know what I knew at that point in terms of the details. Charles brought it to my attention, but, no, I am not going to say that I knew in detail.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know what a "straw man" is?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just to lay it out on the record, your understanding of a straw man is somebody who—and this could be a straw "woman"—is used as really a fictitious purchaser, someone who really is not buying the property for themselves but they are lending their name so as to conceal the real identity of the person who actually has the real ownership. Is that a fair description?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I guess.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to give you a document which is a record of this Board of Directors meeting at the Federal Home Loan Bank on July 11th, which I am going to put before you.

The CHAIRMAN. Does Ms. Schaffer have a copy of that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Of course I don't have a copy of it.

The CHAIRMAN. We are going to get it to you. Don't try to read it off the Elmo.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Have you ever seen this before?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It is produced by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. It lists a number of people who attended the meeting: Rolf Coburn, Beverly Bassett, Charles Handley, Bob Young, Larry Staten, Karen Bruton, and a number of other people, including John Selig, who was from your old law firm; right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's what it says.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to see if I can help you. For the record I will identify it. This is a typed version from notes or minutes that were kept by one of the Federal Home Loan Bank personnel of what occurred at the meeting.

The CHAIRMAN. This is the Federal Home Loan Bank Board meeting down in Texas concerning Madison Guaranty?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. This is the meeting that Ms. Schaffer indicated in the note was going to take place on July 11th?

Mr. CHERTOFF. That's right.

By the way, we have talked about the Federal regulators and what they were doing and what they thought about Madison. Just to be clear, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board that you dealt with was located in Dallas? Right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You were in Arkansas and they were in Dallas?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to have you follow this with me and see if you can shed some light on your recollection of these conversations. Let me ask first, do you need a break?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Are you ready to go forward?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. OK. On the second page under the description for "Faulk," Item No. 6, it says, "Misuse of position and usurpation of corporate opportunities. The Association has been making sales to people without financial wherewithal that are characterized as 'straws' as to generate business." Do you remember the discussion about straws?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't remember the specific discussion 10 years ago or so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. They talk about financial false and inaccurate information having been given to the examiners. Do you remember that discussion?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I just remember that the examiners—I guess not in much detail. I remember the examiners being angry and feeling like at the on-site examination that they weren't given all the documents that they needed in a timely fashion to complete the audit and to pursue the things they were looking for.

The CHAIRMAN. I am going to ask Counsel to suspend because we are over.

Senator Sarbanes.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Handley, if I could ask you about the issue of regulation of Madison Guaranty, after the meeting in July 1986, that we have been discussing, do you recall whether a Cease and Desist Order was entered against Madison Guaranty by Federal regulators shortly after that meeting?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. COLE. I am not going to put the document in the record, but I have a copy of it here, a 30-page order laying out the manner in which the institution would be operated. Is that consistent with your recollection of what occurred?

Mr. HANDLEY. Effectively that Cease and Desist Order placed the Federal Home Loan Bank in control of the management decisions of the Savings and Loan Association. They controlled the Savings and Loan with this.

Mr. COLE. So from the perspective of your department, was it necessary for you to take any further action at that time in view of the actions that had been taken by the Federal regulators?

Mr. HANDLEY. We felt that that agreement effectively got the McDougals out, and the Federal Home Loan Bank put the management in that they wanted and controlled the management.

Mr. COLE. Was there anything further in your department that the State of Arkansas could have done at that point to take further action against Madison Guaranty?

Mr. HANDLEY. We could have. We could have closed them down. As Beverly testified, we could have filed in State court for a receiver, but I think that would have been disastrous to the insurance system in the State of Arkansas and the insurance system in the whole United States if FSLIC wasn't going to participate in that receivership.

Mr. COLE. In other words, if the Federal funds had not been available to pay off the depositors—

Mr. HANDLEY. In my opinion, that would cause a mass run on the Association, and probably would affect the whole system. If the depositors learned that the Federally-insured savings and loan accounts were not going to get paid, they would lose confidence, certainly in that particular Association, and probably the whole system.

Mr. COLE. I take it you had an understanding from the Federal regulators at the time that that was something they did not want your department to do. Is that correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. Right.

Mr. COLE. In fact, Mr. Handley, if you had filed such an action in State court, you would have needed proof of insolvency, is that not correct, in order to have a receiver or a conservator appointed?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes. Capital wouldn't pay it.

Mr. COLE. Did you have proof of insolvency at that time in the summer of 1986?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. COLE. In fact, you did not have proof of the insolvency of the institution until almost a year later, in 1987, when an independent auditing firm completed their annual audit of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. Is that correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's correct, when a newly employed CPA firm by the new management put in place was employed to go over the books again. Peat Marwick was hired, and we received a copy of their audit report.

Mr. COLE. That is the national accounting firm of Peat Marwick that conducted that audit?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. COLE. That firm was retained by the new management of Madison Guaranty that was put in place pursuant to the Cease and Desist Order by the Federal regulators?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. COLE. The McDougals, and parties related to the McDougals, had been removed from the management at that time?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's correct.

Mr. COLE. So to sum up, during that interim period between 1986 and 1987, from the perspective of your department, the matter was being handled by Federal regulators in both a normal and appropriate way?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, pursuant to the Cease and Desist Order that had been entered into.

Mr. COLE. Ms. Schaffer, was that consistent with your understanding of what was occurring at the time? Did you feel that it would have been necessary and appropriate for you to take any further action in view of the action that the Federal regulators had taken?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, it wasn't necessary. The purpose of collaborating on what to do was to take care of it. One action—no, I don't think any other action was necessary, having accomplished the removal of the McDougals.

Mr. COLE. So you had consulted with the Federal regulators, and they had advised you of the course of action that they had intended to take, and you concurred in that action at the time?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Absolutely.

Mr. COLE. Did there then come a later time when the situation at Madison Guaranty worsened, and that you recommended to the Federal regulators that further steps be taken?

Ms. SCHAFFER. After the Cease and Desist Order was entered. Part of the Cease and Desist Order required that they fire the accounting firm, Frost and Company, and hire new auditors, and order appraisals on the properties in order to determine their value, so they could actually assess the financial condition of the savings and loan. Those audits were not completed when Peat Marwick was brought in until 1987. There was a significant delay in getting appraisals returned on real estate that they owned.

When they were completed, and we received them in 1987, it was at that point that we had the first proof of insolvency available to us to act on; and that's when we did it.

Mr. COLE. That is the point in time when you urged the Federal regulators to close the institution and pay off the depositors?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. COLE. Is my understanding correct that they did not do so at that time?

Ms. SCHAFFER. They did not.

Mr. COLE. What was the reason they didn't take that action, even though you recommended it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. They didn't have any money, it was a low priority for them, given particularly the Dallas regional office had all of Texas and Louisiana. They had a number of disasters on their hands. If there was money available in the FSLIC to close an institution and pay off depositors, this would not be one of them.

The active policy at the Federal level with regard to insolvent savings and loans during this period was to leave them open, and to delay recognition of those losses forever, just about, at least, I mean—and it was—until after the 1988 election. I don't know that that was deliberate, but it's not a coincidence, I don't think, that all of them were closed in Arkansas that had been insolvent for a long time in March 1989.

Mr. COLE. So that we're all clear here, your department and the State of Arkansas did not have the funds to shut down either Madison or any other State-chartered savings and loan, and pay off the depositors?

Ms. SCHAFFER. They were Federally-insured, that money would have to come from the FSLIC. It would involve their agreement. They would have to agree that they would accept the receivership of the institution at the time, at the designated time.

We were told repeatedly that it was just not a high priority. There were many others waiting in line, and I think their attitude generally was the McDougals were the problem. They had been removed. There is new management. So there's not an emergency in terms of closing the institution, in that if it's left open there might be some further damage done to the institution. I mean, I think that generally the policy was to leave them open.

Mr. COLE. Finally, as we have seen here today, your efforts and activities as a State S&L regulator have been under tremendous scrutiny. Even looking back with hindsight today, is there anything more that you could have done beyond what you did to regulate this institution and prevent losses to the Insurance Fund and the taxpayers?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Not unless I could change the facts and the circumstances and the timing, and some of those things, too. I used my best judgment at the time.

Mr. COLE. And in terms of the powers that were available to you and to the State?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm comfortable with what we did.

Mr. COLE. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Senator SARBANES. Can I ask how much longer, Mr. Chertoff?

The CHAIRMAN. Probably about a half hour.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Schaffer, if you had knowledge or reason to suspect that a man who owned a large share of the stock in Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan was doing things that were illegal, it would have been incumbent upon you to notify the Federal authorities in Dallas and tell them that there was a problem going on at the bank, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's not a question—I can't answer that question. If I had known from an examination our department did—we didn't do examinations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. If you knew just from anecdotal evidence, just from general knowledge?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Anecdotal evidence? A regulator should act on anecdotal evidence?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Could a regulator investigate based on anecdotal evidence?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Sure.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, I want to go back to this meeting at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Have you had an opportunity to look at this memo?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Parts of it. By the way, who wrote this memo?

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was written by someone at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Someone? I'm not allowed to know who?

Mr. CHERTOFF. I can't tell you the identity of the person offhand. We have some notes. I guess somebody could compare them with the notes, but it was produced from the files. I'm not deliberately withholding it from you. It was one of the people who attended the meeting. By the way, if you disagree with one of the characterizations, you're free to do so. I'm not suggesting it's your document.

As you go down the second page, it says here, he refers to Faulk, "He also said that a Section 407 investigation will be started into whether any 'shenanigans' are going on in the developments." Do you know what those "shenanigans" referred to?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm sorry. I don't know where.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Second page, right toward the bottom, right before Mr. Selig comes in and says something, the paragraph before that. Faulk says, "He also said that a Section 407 investigation will be started into whether any 'shenanigans' are going on in the developments." Do you know what the "shenanigans" were?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know the developments were various real estate developments that Madison Financial, the investment subsidiary of Madison Guaranty, was making?

Ms. SCHAFFER. What?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you know what the developments were? They are talking about the real estate developments, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I am not going to interpret somebody's memo. I don't even know who wrote this. I don't know what whoever wrote this is referring to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You don't remember any discussion about developments or problems with the real estate developments?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm sure there was discussion of problems in real estate developments, although I have absolutely no memory of any specific discussion of a specific real estate project.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Handley, you were at the meeting, right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember a discussion about shenanigans in the real estate development?

Mr. HANDLEY. I don't remember very much of the details of the meeting, just the general overall tone.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The general overall tone was that there was a lot of fishy activity at the savings and loan?

Mr. HANDLEY. There's a lot of bad problems at the savings and loan, and Mr. Faulk took a very firm and direct approach.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Also, Mr. Faulk was the Federal regulator, right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Schaffer, you suggested earlier that it would have been, I guess you implied that it would have been possible, had you wished to do something improper, to mention to the Governor—to prevent this proceeding from going forward. I'm not suggesting you would have wanted to do that. The fact of the matter is, at this point, on July 11, with the condition of this savings and loan as it had been found by the examiners, with straw men and fictitious purchasers and excessive compensation and inadequate documentation, there's no way that even the Governor of Arkansas could have stopped the Federal Government from going in and having this meeting and kicking Mr. McDougal out of the savings and loan, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I suppose he could have tried.

Mr. CHERTOFF. He could have tried. Do you think he would be successful in the face of all this?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't think he would have tried.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to go further on to this memorandum. There is a particular discussion on page 6 that I want to direct your attention to.

Again, I want you to bear in mind that in 1984, you did legal work with respect to this Campobello property, which is part of Madison Financial; that you did it for Jim Guy Tucker, who was a partner of Mr. Selig who came in in 1986 to represent the savings and loan. And Mr. Coburn says that he has a concern with the marketability of the deed to the Campobello project. Examiner Clark has not received a copy of the title insurance policy for the property as yet.

When you heard Campobello come up, did a bell go off? Did you say, "You know, I think I did something?" There it is; they're your former colleagues in the firm sitting at the table. It's not like it comes out of the blue. Your former colleagues at the firm are sitting at the table. There's a discussion of Madison. You recognize what Madison is. You just, in fact, contacted the Governor's office about the fact that this thing is coming up, and all of a sudden Campobello comes up.

At this point, did you say to yourself, "You know, I think I may have done something on this. Maybe I ought to recuse myself, or maybe I ought to say something about it?"

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Didn't ring a bell?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Further down, Mr. Selig raises an issues. It says here, "John questioned the prohibition against doing business with Castle Sewer and Water. He indicated that it was necessary to do business with Castle Sewer and Water so that Castle Grande Estates can be a viable development project. He indicated that an agreement was being negotiated at the time but was not consummated." Do you remember this?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Would it refresh your memory if I told you that this refers to the fact that the Castle Sewer and Water Utility—one of the issues that Mr. Tucker and Mr. McDougal were trying to deal with was to get a hookup between that profitable utility and the Castle Grande Estates real estate development. Does that ring a bell?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you know that Mrs. Clinton had done work at the Rose Law Firm with respect to Castle Sewer and Water?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think I found that out about the same time the rest of America found that out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you didn't know that at the time?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I take it that that never was brought to your attention either by Mrs. Clinton or by the Governor, either directly or indirectly?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What about you, Mr. Handley? Do you remember the discussion about Castle Sewer and Water?

Mr. HANDLEY. No, I don't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Finally, let me turn to the last page. You appear, Ms. Schaffer, under the name Beverly Bassett.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It says, and this is part of a private meeting—

Senator SARBANES. That was her name, I think.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm not suggesting anything sinister. It was your maiden name, right?

Senator SARBANES. You said she appeared under the name of. She appeared. That was her name.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is a private meeting that occurs after the main meeting.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I object. It wasn't a private meeting. I don't even like that word.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I'm sorry, it says, "private meeting."

Ms. SCHAFFER. And I'm telling you it wasn't.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was a non-private meeting?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It's not a private meeting.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I wouldn't even call it necessarily a meeting. It says what it says.

The CHAIRMAN. This was not a public meeting, was it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The earlier part of the memo doesn't say. All the first was a private meeting too, then. It didn't just get private on this page.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. That's a very good point.

Mr. HANDLEY. I do recall that. I think they asked the attorneys representing the S&L to leave, and the board of directors—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Actually, I think if you look at the names, it sounds to me that what they asked was that the principals from the board of directors leave, and they wanted the attorneys to stay.

The CHAIRMAN. So there came a point in time when they asked the principals of Madison—that's what the notes refer to—and they wanted to speak without them there. So the regulators themselves—

Mr. HANDLEY. Could talk to the board of directors.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. That's what the notes meant.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Schaffer, it says here under your name, "She first got truly concerned about the Association . . ."—referring to Madison—" . . . when Sarah Hawkins called and asked for the Campobello files. Sarah said she couldn't find the Association's files. Beverly stated that she was not entirely convinced some files are not hidden." Who was Sarah Hawkins?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Sarah Hawkins worked for Madison Guaranty. I'm not sure what her title was, or position. She worked for Madison Guaranty in some capacity. I know she was the one interacting with the examiners on-site in terms of giving them documents and dealing with them about what they needed.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Why did she call you as the Commissioner, or why did she call the Securities Commission and ask for the Campobello files? What does this refer to?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't think she did.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What was the point you were making here?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's why I would like to know who wrote this. I have no idea what this means. I have no idea what Sarah Hawkins called me about, or the Securities Department. I suppose that's what it says. I have no idea what this means.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you don't remember getting truly concerned about Madison Savings & Loan when someone called and asked for the Campobello files?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you remember expressing the view that you were not convinced that some files are not hidden?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think I told you earlier that during the examination process that we were told by the Federal examiners on-site that they couldn't get documents from Madison. Madison was not cooperating with the examination. They were not providing the documentation requested. They did not cooperate. They did not turn over things that they had. If I made a comment about files being hidden, it was because somebody at Madison might be hiding files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So you were getting reports during the examination itself from the examiners about what was going on?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think Charles got some reports. I know that the examination report in March of 1986 made mention of the fact that they did not cooperate. Sarah Hawkins herself had been an examiner in the Dallas office and was hired by Jim McDougal from the Dallas office, so she had previously worked in the Dallas office as an examiner. Now, I have no idea what this means, and it doesn't even sound familiar to me. It doesn't even ring a bell.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Handley, do you remember this?

Mr. HANDLEY. Not specifically. But I think Sarah Hawkins phoned me and asked for copies of the Campobello files. She told me that the examiners wanted them, and she couldn't find hers. I thought that was real strange.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you tell that to Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. HANDLEY. I can't remember specifically, but I think I did, because we both thought that was real strange.

Mr. CHERTOFF. When was that? When did that happen?

Mr. HANDLEY. It was while the examination was going on.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That would have been in the spring of 1986?

Mr. HANDLEY. The first part of 1986.

Mr. CHERTOFF. In late February or early March?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Ms. Schaffer, does that refresh your memory that Mr. Handley talked to you about that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Charles told me a lot of things during that time about Madison, what was going on, he could have. I mean, you expect me to remember because the word "Campobello" is there. And what I'm telling you is, in your mind, that's a lot more important than it is in mine, or was in mine at the time.

Mr. CHERTOFF. There's an indication from Sam Bratton's deposition that from time-to-time you would report to him on matters that touched on savings and loans. Did you talk to Mr. Bratton during the spring of 1986 about the examination that was going on at Madison?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I have no memory of talking to Sam about that.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Mr. Handley, I want to ask you a question from February 1992, specifically around February 11. You were working at the Securities Commission, right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did a newspaper reporter come and seek to look at documents relating to any transactions involving Madison or Madison Guaranty, or any of its subsidiaries?

Mr. HANDLEY. We probably had 50 or 60 reporters come in and out.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was there someone, do you remember specifically, early in February someone coming in from, maybe, The New York Times and asking to see some documents related to Madison?

Mr. HANDLEY. There were so many of them I can't keep them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you call anybody at the Rose Law Firm as a consequence of getting any of those inquiries from reporters?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. No?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you call anybody outside of the Securities Commission?

Mr. HANDLEY. Did I call anybody? No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you ask anybody else to?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I want to be comprehensive in this. After receiving inquiries from a reporter or reporters in February 1992, about Madison or any entity connected with Madison, did you in any way communicate with somebody outside the Securities Commission, except for the reporter, about these newspaper inquiries?

Mr. HANDLEY. Well, there's people from the campaign that came to our office to look at them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you reach out to the campaign and say that there are newspaper reporters looking at or asking questions about Madison?

Mr. HANDLEY. I think maybe when they came over, they asked that question, and I said, "yes."

Mr. CHERTOFF. When who came over?

Mr. HANDLEY. The lady was named Lynch.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Loretta Lynch?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, she came to our office.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did she come to come to your office? How did that come about? She just appeared one day?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes. She talked to the Commissioner at the time, Joe Madden, and said she was coming over in the morning to look at the files. And she came over and looked at the files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How did you meet her?

Mr. HANDLEY. I was in charge of the files. So all the reporters—I got the pleasure of being with all 50 or 60 of them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So how did you first learn that Ms. Lynch was coming over?

Mr. HANDLEY. I told you. The Commissioner said he had gotten a phone call from her, and she was coming over.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did he tell you why she was coming over?

Mr. HANDLEY. To look at the files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Any other explanation or background or what caused her to come over?

Mr. HANDLEY. She told me she worked for the Clinton campaign.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What files did she want to look at?

Mr. HANDLEY. All the files. All the public files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On Madison?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you have any conversation with her?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, we talked while she was looking at the files.

Mr. CHERTOFF. What did you talk about?

Mr. HANDLEY. Just the files and how many reporters had been there.

The CHAIRMAN. So you had discussions with her about how many reporters had been there, what they had seen, and what they had been looking for?

Mr. HANDLEY. Well, everybody else asked what they had been looking for.

The CHAIRMAN. This is in February, or what is it?

Mr. HANDLEY. I can't remember the date.

The CHAIRMAN. The time that Ms. Lynch came to see you, do you recall?

Mr. HANDLEY. I can't remember the exact date.

The CHAIRMAN. How many reporters came in to see you before Ms. Lynch came? It wasn't 50 or 60, was it?

Mr. HANDLEY. I can't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose I told you it was one?

Mr. HANDLEY. I can't remember how many.

The CHAIRMAN. You said you were dealing with all these reporters. That's after. Isn't that true?

Mr. HANDLEY. It could be. I can't remember the dates they came.

The CHAIRMAN. You remembered Ms. Lynch coming over to see you. You remember the Commissioner saying, "By the way, someone from the campaign is going to come over to see you." Is that right?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the name of the Commissioner?

Mr. HANDLEY. Joe Madden.

The CHAIRMAN. So Commissioner Madden said to you, "By the way . . ."—was it "Charles?"

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. "Charles, there's a reporter who's going to come to see you."

Mr. HANDLEY. In her case, it wasn't a reporter. He told me she was working for Bill Clinton's campaign.

The CHAIRMAN. So Loretta Lynch came over to see you. Up until that point in time, did you have any reporters come to see you?

Mr. HANDLEY. I really can't remember. I can't remember when they came in. But I have dealt with them.

The CHAIRMAN. At some point, yes. Lots of reporters.

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. But up until that point, no reporters had come to see you, had they?

Mr. HANDLEY. Well, I can't remember. I am sure that some had, because—

The CHAIRMAN. Some had. Maybe one?

Mr. HANDLEY. I can't remember how many.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you remember the reporter coming to see you, or did you get a telephone call?

Mr. HANDLEY. There were so many, I can't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. Let's go back. The first time, no one had spoke to you about Madison. There came a time when you got an inquiry from a reporter. Is that correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, after I talked to, I think, Jeff Gerth on the phone several times.

The CHAIRMAN. So you got a call first from whom?

Mr. HANDLEY. Jeff Gerth.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is that? That's a reporter?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. With whom?

Mr. HANDLEY. The New York Times.

The CHAIRMAN. Isn't it a fact that you first got a call from Mr. Gerth—you got the call, right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. When Mr. Gerth called, what did he ask you?

Mr. HANDLEY. We had about three or four conversations.

The CHAIRMAN. Tell me what he said when he first called you.

Mr. HANDLEY. He was asking about Madison Savings & Loan, and our regulation of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he ask you if you had files on that?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. You told him you did, obviously.

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And there were subsequent phone calls, or did he come to see you?

Mr. HANDLEY. I don't think—he may have. I can't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Gerth called you—let's go back. I know this is not easy. This is 4 years ago. He called you and said: "I'm a reporter for The New York Times." You had never gotten a call from a reporter for The New York Times before this, did you?

Mr. HANDLEY. I don't know if he said he was with The New York Times. He said he was a reporter.

The CHAIRMAN. But you remember Mr. Gerth, because in fact there is a Mr. Gerth with The New York Times?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you tell someone about this phone call?

Mr. HANDLEY. I think Loretta Lynch asked who had been over to look at the files.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you tell someone in the Commission that you had received this call?

Mr. HANDLEY. Joe, my boss, Joe Madden.

The CHAIRMAN. Joe who?

Mr. HANDLEY. Joe Madden, the Commissioner.

The CHAIRMAN. So you did tell him?

Mr. HANDLEY. Sure.

The CHAIRMAN. "Joe, I have an inquiry from a reporter, Jeff Gerth." Is that right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What did he say to you?

Mr. HANDLEY. I don't think he said anything.

The CHAIRMAN. How long after, then, did he tell you that someone from the campaign would come over to talk to you or to see the files?

Mr. HANDLEY. I honestly can't remember.

The CHAIRMAN. But he did tell you someone's going to come from the campaign.

Mr. HANDLEY. That someone had phoned him.

The CHAIRMAN. And indeed, did he tell you that it was going to be Ms. Lynch?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. He said, "Loretta Lynch from the campaign is going to come to see you"?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes. Look at the files.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just one last question. Could it be that the sequence of time between the time you went to Mr. Madden and told him about the calls from Jeff Gerth and the time that you heard Loretta Lynch was coming over was about a day?

Mr. HANDLEY. It could be, I honestly can't remember.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It was real short, wasn't it, Mr. Handley?

Mr. HANDLEY. I don't really remember. I have dealt with so many people, even with Mr. Gerth, so many times.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Handley, be careful. Because at first you led the Committee to believe that there were 50 or 60 reporters. The fact of the matter is, one reporter made an inquiry and that was Jeff Gerth. That's the first person you remember making an inquiry?

Mr. HANDLEY. He was the first, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. You told that to the Commissioner. I am not suggesting you shouldn't have related that, but you did tell the Commissioner.

Mr. HANDLEY. I told him about everyone.

The CHAIRMAN. Exactly. And then he related to you this is what Counselor is asking you; was that pretty shortly after that?

Mr. HANDLEY. It could be. I mean, honestly, I can't remember now.

The CHAIRMAN. He recounted to you or said to you that someone from the campaign—and it was with specificity Loretta Lynch—was going to come over to look at the files. Is that correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. But it wasn't that 50 or 60 reporters descended upon you initially. It was one inquiry.

Mr. HANDLEY. Most of them come after The New York Times.

The CHAIRMAN. How long after? Several weeks at least elapsed, didn't they?

Mr. HANDLEY. Some time after.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were documents removed by Ms. Lynch?

Mr. HANDLEY. No, she got copies of them.

Mr. CHERTOFF. She got copies of things. Did anyone else come with her from the campaign at any time?

The CHAIRMAN. We're well over the time, so we'll return to this. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Handley, what was it that they came to look at?

Mr. HANDLEY. Just all of our public documents.

Senator SARBANES. These were public documents?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Publicly available? Anyone was entitled to come in and look at them?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Did you show them documents that were not publicly available?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Senator SARBANES. So any reporter could show up and see these documents? Any citizen?

Mr. HANDLEY. And a lot of reporters did come in.

Senator SARBANES. That's right; over the course of time, I gather. And what they came and what they saw are documents that were publicly available. Is that correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did Ms. Lynch, when she came in, did she ask you for something that was not public; that was secret or that was confidential?

Mr. HANDLEY. She never asked.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was anybody from the campaign shown preferential treatment or provided with documents that weren't available to the press?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So if I understand what we have been spending the last 15 minutes on, someone from the press asked for public documents. You showed the public documents to the press. Someone from the campaign asked about it. Those were made available?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, we have no choice in that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's why they're public documents.

Mr. HANDLEY. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the public can see them.

Mr. HANDLEY. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, we cleared that up.

Now, let me ask you about the Federal Home Loan Bank Board meeting in Dallas. At the meeting, things were discussed about how Mr. McDougal had run the bank improvidently, correct? There were things that were mentioned in there that gave the Bank Board a problem.

Mr. HANDLEY. You're asking me?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Handley?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Schaffer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Absolutely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The whole purpose of it was to see whether some action would be taken against Mr. McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So it was not a surprise that they should discuss things that they felt had been done by Mr. McDougal that were improvident, correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It did not come as a surprise to you that there should have been such a discussion?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. HANDLEY. That was the purpose of the meeting.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, you all—if I understand correctly—were in accord with the action that was to be taken; that is, the removal of the McDougals. Correct, Mr. Handley?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Schaffer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There wasn't any mystery about that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No one asked you to intercede on behalf of the McDougals with the Federal authorities, did they?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No one misused any position of access to you in any way so that you could take action in some surreptitious or non-surreptitious way to benefit the McDougals. Is that correct, Mr. Handley?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Schaffer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We cede back all of the time we may have accrued here, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Schaffer, did you have any discussions with anyone from the 1992 Clinton Presidential Campaign about Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I had several discussions.

Mr. GIUFFRA. With whom did you have those discussions?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Loretta Lynch.

Mr. GIUFFRA. When did you first speak with Loretta Lynch?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't remember. Sometime in February 1992.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Sometime in the second week of February, or before that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you recall about your discussions with Ms. Lynch of the Clinton Presidential Campaign in February 1992?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Just that she was the person on the campaign team who was trying to put together facts and a response of the campaign to questions that had been presented to them by a reporter from The New York Times.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall why Ms. Lynch was coming to you in particular? Had she been directed to come to you by anyone?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Because I'm the one who knew the most about it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you show Ms. Lynch any files that you maintained at your law offices?

Ms. SCHAFFER. What?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you show Ms. Lynch any files that you maintained at your law office?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I was in Fayetteville, Arkansas. She was in Little Rock, Arkansas. She didn't come to my office. I didn't have files in my office that I know of about Madison Guaranty.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did she come down to Fayetteville to see you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, she did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you come up to Little Rock to see her?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you speak on the telephone?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did you tell Ms. Lynch about Madison Guaranty during the campaign when you spoke to her?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I told her what I told Jeff Gerth.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, how much time do we have? I wrote at least two memorandums to him, and had several conversations with him. But I provided her with those memorandums after I sent them to The New York Times.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you speak to anyone else from the Clinton campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. About Madison? I don't think so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall ever speaking to Mr. Lindsey during the 1992 Clinton Presidential Campaign about Madison?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Not about Madison.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did you speak to Mr. Lindsey about?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think some time much later in the campaign, I had a brief conversation with him about a question that had come up about a securities matter. I think basically it was a real general question about bond firms in Arkansas. It had nothing to do with savings and loans.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did it have to do with something called ADFA?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did it have to do with Dan Lasater?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. I think it was just—I had a conversation with Loretta Lynch, I think maybe, about Dan Lasater. But I didn't have that conversation with Bruce. Bruce, it was some general inquiry of a broad nature about securities firms, and it didn't involve a specific firm or a company.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you recall about the context of the conversation that you had with Mr. Lindsey about securities firms in Arkansas? Do you remember why he was asking you that question?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't really remember. Somebody made a general inquiry about bond firms in Arkansas, and Bruce asked me about it in a real quick conversation that I can't really remember any details on. I think I may have sent the campaign some information on that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall specifically what sort of information you would have sent the campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think it was a memorandum, maybe, that had to do with a general overview of what our office had done in addressing problems with bond firms in Arkansas. I would have to look and see.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was this a memorandum that you had prepared while you were the Arkansas Securities Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You had taken the memorandum with you when you left your position?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think I got the office maybe to either get it for me—I might have had a copy.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Then you sent it to the Clinton campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think so. That was much later in the campaign.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was this after Governor Clinton had been nominated to be the Democratic nominee?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't have any idea.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You mentioned you spoke to Loretta Lynch about Dan Lasater.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think maybe—I just don't know—I think maybe I was asked a question about that. Oh, I think maybe the L.A. Times was doing some story about that, and I think there was an inquiry about it that maybe I sent a press clipping or something like that. I don't remember.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you know about Dan Lasater?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I know a lot about Dan Lasater.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Had you regulated Dan Lasater during the time you were Securities Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall the specific question that the L.A. Times put to you about Dan Lasater?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't think the L.A. Times talked to me.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That Ms. Lynch put to you from the L.A. Times?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I think she just wanted the records from the Arkansas Securities Department, which she got, was my understanding.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you make any calls to anyone to get all those records?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you provide any records to Ms. Lynch about Dan Lasater?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I wouldn't have had any official records. I might have written a memorandum. I just don't remember. I'll be happy to look and see and give it to you, but you all subpoenaed, served a subpoena back in August, that was included in that. I'm sure you have it if I had it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did the question Ms. Lynch put to you about Mr. Lasater have anything to do with Mr. Lasater's relationship with Governor Clinton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I don't think so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did it have anything to do with Mr. Lasater's bond firm and its underwriting of bond contracts by something called the Arkansas Development Finance Authority?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't think so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you discuss Madison during the campaign with Susan Thomases?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I have never had a conversation with Susan Thomases.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you discuss Madison with Webster Hubbell?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you discuss Madison with Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Governor Clinton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you discuss anything having to do with the Rose Law Firm's representation of Madison with anyone during the 1992 campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. With anyone?

Mr. GIUFFRA. With someone from the campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. With someone from the campaign? I mean, to the extent my memos and responses to Jeff Gerth address that, I'm sure I told them the same thing.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So was your only point of contact Loretta Lynch at the campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's who I dealt with with the campaign, Loretta Lynch.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall the number of occasions that you spoke to Ms. Lynch during the campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Half a dozen.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Half a dozen, you say. Do you recall any of the questions that Ms. Lynch put to you during the campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The same ones that Jeff Gerth had put to me. The same ones we're still talking about.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And did she ask you whether you had ever spoken to Mrs. Clinton in connection with a preferred stock offering by Madison?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Did she what?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did she ever ask you whether you had spoken to Mrs. Clinton in 1985 about a proposed preferred stock offering by Madison?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know, she might have. At that time, I probably would have said no, because I didn't remember having a conversation with—I mean, that brief phone conversation is not something I remembered having when I initially reviewed in my mind what happened with Madison Guaranty. It was not until I was trying to figure out why the letter was written to Hillary—I mean, it's taken me 4 years to recall this kind of detail about that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. When you were Arkansas Securities Commissioner, do you recall a case involving Mr. Lasater's firm? There was a complaint by a man named Dennis Patrick involving money that was going through his account without his knowledge.

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't recall any complaint by a man named Dennis Patrick involving Mr. Lasater's firm?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I wouldn't necessarily see a customer complaint. It wouldn't be brought to me by the staff, and they certainly all weren't.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So the record is clear, other than Ms. Lynch, you don't recall speaking to anyone else from the Clinton campaign about Madison Guaranty. Is that right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The Clinton campaign? The best I can recall, Loretta Lynch was the person I talked to. She was the one who called and asked me about Madison. I gave her my memos.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you give her any other documents besides your memos?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I asked for the documents from the Securities Department, but I didn't have them.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They were sent to you from the Securities Department?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, copies of microfilm copies were sent to me. I couldn't read them, really. They're not legible. But that's what I asked for from them. I didn't have those.

Mr. GIUFFRA. OK, then. Did you send those back to the campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, I didn't do that. Loretta was in Little Rock. I think she could go get them herself.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you speak to anyone else during the campaign that you recall from the campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. From the campaign about Madison?

Mr. GIUFFRA. About Madison Guaranty, yes.

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So you didn't speak, for example, to Betsey Wright?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I didn't talk to Betsey, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Diane or Jim Blair?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I might have had a conversation with Diane when I was trying to get ahold of Loretta. I think they were in the same little area.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ever visit the campaign?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. She might have answered the phone, but I don't think we talked in any detail. I mean, I might have said, "Where is Loretta? She asked me to return the call." Something like that, and generally had a discussion like that.

I did talk to Jim Blair on, I don't know, a few occasions during this time period. He did not work for the campaign, it's my understanding.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did you speak to Mr. Blair about with regard to Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. He was interested in finding out what I could remember about the telephone conversation that occurred between Hillary Clinton and myself.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did he indicate to you why he was interested in finding out about the telephone conversation between yourself and Mrs. Clinton?

Ms. SCHAFFER. My understanding is it was an effort to respond—actually, you know, I think that it was after The New York Times story ran.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall anything more about any communications you might have had with Mr. Blair about Madison during 1992?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I'm sure it's possible. Gosh, I don't know. I'm sure that he discussed it with me on more than one occasion. I just can't—I mean, you know, it could have been two or three. I don't want to limit it here. I'm sure we talked about it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Mr. Blair ever indicate to you that he was speaking to a man named Sam Heuer, who was a lawyer for Mr. McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. He might have.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know Mr. Heuer?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm acquainted with Sam.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Have you ever spoken to Mr. Heuer about anything having to do with Madison or Mr. McDougal?

Ms. SCHAFFER. You mean since the campaign?

Mr. GIUFFRA. At any time.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't think so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But it was your understanding that Mr. Blair was speaking to Mr. Heuer during this 1992 period?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know that I knew that from Jim Blair or Sam Heuer. I knew there were a lot of people talking to a lot of people trying to get the facts as to what happened, to respond.

Initially, I think the effort was to respond to the questions of the reporter. But I think—I am not sure that some of these conversations didn't occur after the story ran in attempting to continue to respond to it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did anyone indicate to you that there was concern about whether Mr. McDougal might make any allegations about the Clintons?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Say that again.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did anyone indicate to you that they were concerned in any way that Mr. McDougal might make any allegations about the Clintons?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I think he already had.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What allegations were those that Mr. McDougal was making that you're aware of?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Whatever The New York Times story, the basic thrust of the story was, that's what I understood to be the concern.

Mr. GIUFFRA. After January 20, 1993, did you speak to anyone at the White House about Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. After when?

Mr. GIUFFRA. After January 20, 1993, did you speak to anyone at the White House about Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Myself?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes. Did you ever speak to Mr. Lindsey, for example, about Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't think Bruce and I talked about it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You don't think you ever spoke to Mr. Lindsey during 1993 or 1994 about Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I may have talked to Bruce. I talked to so many people during this time, I can't remember a specific conversation. But it is entirely possible I talked to Bruce in an effort to get the information to him, get the facts to him about what did happen. The whole question had come up again, and they were attempting to respond to the question. So it's entirely possible I was asked by him directly for some information. I just don't know. It wasn't of any consequence to me that he asked.

The CHAIRMAN. Could you suspend for just a moment?

We've gone over the 15 minutes. I don't know. Do you have much longer to go on this line? With the acquiescence—or, we'll yield to Senator Sarbanes at this point. Then you can pursue it thereafter.

Senator SARBANES. Why don't we finish up.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Schaffer, do you recall speaking to anyone named Neil Eggleston, who was an Associate White House Counsel during 1993 and 1994?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you know who Neil Eggleston is?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I saw him here last week.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would it be your best recollection you might have spoken to at the White House during 1993 or 1994 about Madison Guaranty would have been Bruce Lindsey?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Probably.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you think you might have spoken to Mr. Kennedy, William Kennedy?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Bill Kennedy? No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. How about President Clinton himself?

Ms. SCHAFFER. About the fact of Madison Guaranty?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Anything having to do with Madison Guaranty. The fact that you were the Arkansas Securities Commissioner during 1985, 1986, 1987.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes, I'm sure he mentioned it to me.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you recall about any conversations that you had with President Clinton? Let me start at the beginning. Do you recall specifically when you might have spoken to President Clinton about anything having to do with Madison Guaranty during 1993 or 1994?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, in 1993, it could have been, probably was, because it would have been very few occasions when I would have seen him. But it is possible that it was—I know my husband and I sometime in 1993, I can't remember exactly when, went to the White House. We attended a movie, you know. The movie room—

Mr. GIUFFRA. The screening room at the White House?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right. We were invited by a mutual friend of ours and the President's to come.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who was the mutual friend?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Paul Berry.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Who is Paul Berry?

Ms. SCHAFFER. He's an Arkansan who works in Washington.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who else was present during this movie?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know, 30 people or so.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Do you recall approximately when it was you attended this movie at the White House?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well, I don't come to Washington very often. I think it was in January—it would be January 1994.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What do you recall the President saying to you about Madison Guaranty in January 1994?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That he was sorry. He apologized to me about what had happened to me, that he felt badly about all that I had been put through because of it, and was sorry to see that happen.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did he ask you any questions having anything to do with what you might have done as Arkansas Securities Commissioner during the 1980's with regard to Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. He didn't talk, we did not talk about the substance of the matter. He apologized to me for what had happened.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did he in any way indicate to you that he thought you had done a good job in the campaign with regard to responding to press inquiries about Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Did he tell me that?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did he indicate to you in any way that he thought you had done a good job with regard to responding to press inquiries about Madison Guaranty?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, no. He told me he was sorry.

Mr. GIUFFRA. No further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff, do you have any follow-up?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Just a couple, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Handley, am I correct—this issue in the spring of 1985 regarding permission to issue preferred stock for Madison Savings & Loan was the first time that came up in Arkansas?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. How many times since then have the savings and loans sought to issue preferred stock in Arkansas, let's say during the next couple of years, through the balance of 1985–1986?

Mr. HANDLEY. None. But we have lost a lot of savings and loans due to the mergers and liquidations.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So your answer is “none?”

Mr. HANDLEY. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This was the only one?

Mr. HANDLEY. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. Prior to 1985, did you know of any savings and loan in Arkansas that applied for the issuance of preferred stock to recapitalize?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been there?

Mr. HANDLEY. Since 1969.

The CHAIRMAN. So from 1969 through the 1985–1986, you're not aware of any savings and loan attempting to issue preferred stock?

Mr. HANDLEY. No. None has.

The CHAIRMAN. This was novel, wasn't it?

Mr. HANDLEY. Well, the Fed started doing it—

The CHAIRMAN. Please do not direct how I pose questions.

Now, let me ask you. This, indeed, was the first time permission was asked—

Mr. HANDLEY. For a State-chartered savings and loan? Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. So, are you an attorney?

Mr. HANDLEY. No, I'm an accountant.

The CHAIRMAN. Did Mr. Brady express any concern to you?

Mr. HANDLEY. I never talked to Mr. Brady about it.

The CHAIRMAN. As it related to this matter?

Mr. HANDLEY. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. You never had any conversation with Mr. Brady?

Mr. HANDLEY. No, I didn't.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you aware that Mr. Brady had a different opinion?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You were not aware?

Mr. HANDLEY. I was not aware.

The CHAIRMAN. And you were not aware, nor did he tell you that he thought you should seek the counsel of the State's Attorney General?

Mr. HANDLEY. He didn't tell me that. I wasn't aware of that.

The CHAIRMAN. How did this come to your attention?

Mr. HANDLEY. That he disagreed?

The CHAIRMAN. No, the question relating to the issuance of preferred stock by Madison.

Mr. HANDLEY. I returned a phone call to a Madison employee in the first part of April named Fitzhugh.

The CHAIRMAN. Somebody called you in April? Who?

Mr. HANDLEY. His name was Fitzhugh. He was an employee of Madison. He was talking about issuing preferred stock, and wanted to know if he had to make an application or what he had to do.

The CHAIRMAN. You brought this up to Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. HANDLEY. I wrote a memo telling Beverly and Nancy that that occurred. I told Mr. Fitzhugh that he should write a letter setting forth that, and a request that we approve that issue.

The CHAIRMAN. The next time you received anything on that matter, would it be fair to say, was when you received the letter from the Rose Law Firm from Mrs. Clinton?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, the April 30th letter.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Brady, when did you commence working for the Securities—the State Home Loan Bank Board? Is that—

Mr. BRADY. Well, I work for the State Securities Department. But the Securities Commissioner wears several hats, and one of them was Savings and Loan Supervisor or whatever.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you start working for the Commission?

Mr. BRADY. Well, just a moment. I don't want to misstate.

February 1979 through April 1986.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it fair to say that you have never experienced a request of an application before the Commission to issue preferred stock on behalf of a State-chartered S&L?

Mr. BRADY. Yes, sir. This is the only time I know of that that issue came up.

The CHAIRMAN. So it was a novel issue when it came to you. Is that correct?

Mr. BRADY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How did it come to your attention?

Mr. BRADY. Ms. Bassett gave me the memo in there. There's a copy someplace. She has a note up there. It says, "Brady—Please review and draft reply to Hillary. May 6, 1985."

The CHAIRMAN. I see. You reviewed it and you drafted a reply?

Mr. BRADY. I don't know that I drafted a reply.

The CHAIRMAN. You drafted a memo?

Mr. BRADY. In my recollection, I drafted or would have drafted a memo explaining my objection to the plan. The fact was that I was not sure that that was permissible, as the Rose Firm was—as I say, that memo has never shown up. I don't know who has it or had it or what. But I'm sure I sent it, and she disagreed with me, as I said earlier today.

The CHAIRMAN. After you made your report or your memo or your recommendation, you're sure you disagreed—and by the way, you did have an opportunity to review the Rose memo?

Mr. BRADY. I did see that. That was handed to me.

The CHAIRMAN. After you indicated the questions that you—

Mr. BRADY. Those are questions of Nancy Jones, that 1, 2, 3, 4 on the thing that's on the screen here. Those are Ms. Jones' questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Those are Ms. Jones' questions.

Did you have occasion, then, to speak to other members of the Commission, or other staffers or other people, with regard to your opinion?

Mr. BRADY. In looking through my deposition I assumed, I guess improperly, that I had spoken to Charles about it or to Ms. Jones.

The CHAIRMAN. Why do you say you assumed?

Mr. BRADY. I would normally have said something about this memo. But if I don't remember it, I guess I didn't.

The CHAIRMAN. In your normal course of business, would you have then discussed this with Charles or some others? I mean, Ms. Schaffer came——

Mr. BRADY. Not really. It was asking for a legal opinion, and they were accountants. But I might have discussed it.

The CHAIRMAN. And that was your legal——

Mr. BRADY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Who asked you for the legal opinion?

Mr. BRADY. Ms. Bassett. I mean, she asked me to sign off on a memo that the Rose Firm had sent over, saying their suggested reply was it's permissible.

The CHAIRMAN. Your reply, as you have testified previously and indicated in your deposition, was that you felt they should go to the Attorney General. This was a novel question, wasn't it?

Mr. BRADY. It was a novel question, and it would protect the Commissioner. She could rely on the Attorney General's decision as to whether it was permissible or not, and not involve herself.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Handley, you're not an attorney, are you?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You had never had occasion to research this previously, had you?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. How did you reach this conclusion that this should be done? What was your basis?

Mr. HANDLEY. Initially I had a question about it. There's a memo in here that I wrote to Beverly and Nancy that said our Act only speaks of permanent capital stock, not preferred stock. So I said I think we should get a legal opinion on this, whether it should be done. If we can do it, I think we can do it under the "Wild Card Provision." That provision in our Act says that a State charter can do anything that a Federal savings and loan can do. So initially I had concerns about it, but after talking to Nancy and Beverly——

The CHAIRMAN. Who is Nancy?

Mr. HANDLEY. Nancy Jones.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. HANDLEY. She was the Chief Examiner at the time.

The CHAIRMAN. She was the Chief Examiner?

Mr. HANDLEY. My immediate supervisor.

The CHAIRMAN. Was she an attorney?

Mr. HANDLEY. No, she was an accountant.

The CHAIRMAN. She was an accountant. And to the best of your knowledge, she had never——well, you had been there since 1969?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. This is the first time you ever received a request for this kind of treatment. Is that true?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. What did she base it on? Did she go to the Attorney General, do you know?

Mr. HANDLEY. I don't know. I'm sure she didn't. This note that's on the screen is her reply.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, I see that. "The problem, not addressed by the Rose Firm, is the Non-Voting portion. I don't know if 'Capital Notes' authorized under Federal statute is non-voting, but the preferred stock is a similar debt/equity instrument."

I mean, did she have the legal background to give you—you didn't rely on this. You went to the legal officer. Do you recall Mr. Brady's memo? He says he thought you would have discussed this.

Mr. HANDLEY. I have never talked to Bill or seen him about this.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, Ms. Schaffer, this was an unusual request then, wasn't it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, it was not an unusual request.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, look. Here is a memo, and if you want to interpret the memo—this was the first time the Commission had ever received such a request, to your knowledge. Were you aware of any similar requests made by a State-chartered, Federally-insured institution to be authorized to issue preferred stock?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I had to make decisions like this everyday on questions of interpretation, on matters that hadn't been done precisely that way before.

The CHAIRMAN. But this is the first time you had ever received such a request?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's too broad for me. That's too broad a statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me try to narrow it. When did you become Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. In January 1985.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, prior to this letter, and any feedback, Mr. Handley indicated to you that someone from Madison Bank had inquired about the issuance of preferred stock. Had you ever reviewed the legal implications with regard to permitting a State-chartered institution to offer or sell preferred stock?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Until March?

The CHAIRMAN. Until this inquiry came to you. This question was unique, right? It had never been raised before?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It hadn't been decided prior, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. Isn't this the first time, indeed, that an application or the question of whether such a proposal was legal—whether involving Madison or another State savings and loan—had been raised?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. It was the first time, so it was unique.

Ms. SCHAFFER. It was the first time, I'll agree with that.

The CHAIRMAN. Obviously if something hadn't taken place before, it certainly wasn't the custom or the practice. And, it was the first time. As a matter of fact, are you aware of any other similar request to the Commission after that one?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Pardon me?

The CHAIRMAN. Did any other application requesting similar treatment ever come before the Commission?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I believe there was a savings and loan in Arkansas, a State-chartered savings and loan, in 1990 or at some point—and I don't know what year—but it did issue preferred stock.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Schaffer, this was unprecedented, wasn't it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. What was unprecedented?

The CHAIRMAN. This request to issue preferred stock. It was unprecedented. It had never been asked before. It was unique. Isn't that true?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The question had never been interpreted. I mean, the issue, the question of whether State law prohibited or authorized issuance of preferred stock had not been decided.

The CHAIRMAN. So this is the first time it had ever come up. It was unprecedented. It was unique.

Ms. SCHAFFER. It's the first time that it had been decided, as far as I know, or interpreted by the department.

The CHAIRMAN. Had you ever made a ruling? Had the Commission ever made a determination prior to that with respect to the issuance of preferred stock one way or the other?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The department?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Ms. SCHAFFER. No. We were charged with interpreting our own laws.

The CHAIRMAN. But the question had never come before, isn't that right? This is the first time.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. Others—not you or me—have characterized this as routine. Indeed, what was Mr. Brady's position at the time with the Commission? What was your position, Mr. Brady?

Mr. BRADY. Staff attorney.

The CHAIRMAN. You were the staff attorney. Would the Commission regularly approach you for legal opinions on matters similar to this matter related to securities issues?

Mr. BRADY. While I was there, there was often more than one attorney that opinions would be requested of.

The CHAIRMAN. By the way, did you discuss this with other staff attorneys or just with Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. BRADY. I don't believe there were other staff attorneys on board at that time.

The CHAIRMAN. You were the only staff attorney?

Mr. BRADY. I believe so.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Schaffer, so you went to Mr. Brady for his expertise. He was the staff attorney. You assigned him this. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. He was the only attorney on the staff, and I asked him to draft the letter. Had I had an attorney on the staff that I had hired, in whom I had confidence and could delegate something to in confidence, send it out that way, that's the way it would have been done. That's the way it would have been handled.

The CHAIRMAN. You would go to your staff attorney and ask him?

Ms. SCHAFFER. If I had confidence in—

The CHAIRMAN. Good. By the way, again, the purpose of this—because this is the first time I've heard it rumored that there was no similar request which resulted in an initial alternative response. We understand that they never did go forward. But this was unique, and I think that the American people have been told that this wasn't anything unusual. Indeed, in the State of Arkansas, this was a unique request.

Therefore, I don't think it's unreasonable when we find out the Rose Law Firm, and Mrs. Clinton made a call, sent a letter, for people to say, "Well, what do you think? Why is it?" You knew, obviously, who Mrs. Clinton was, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Obviously.

The CHAIRMAN. She was married to the Governor.

Ms. SCHAFFER. And she was a partner in the Rose Law Firm.

The CHAIRMAN. But the Governor appointed you, whether as a result of his relationship with your brother, you knew that. You knew that this was the first time this request had ever come in. It was indeed impressive. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did not spend nearly as much time thinking about it as everybody else.

The CHAIRMAN. I'd like to attempt to deal with something. It's been an impression that's been put out—not by yourself, although you've commented too, as it related to this whole situation of when you can close a bank down and when you can't close a bank down.

I have just received, for the first time, a copy of the Act 1043 of 1985 and Act 45 of 1987. It deals with the ability and the powers of the State banking regulator.

Pursuant to that, I've been advised that as of 1985, that your title was Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Banking Commissioner?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, Arkansas Securities Commissioner.

The CHAIRMAN. But weren't the State-chartered banks under your control?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, State-chartered savings and loans.

The CHAIRMAN. Until today, it has been repeated that you had no authority to do anything, that you needed the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal authorities to enter into an agreement.

I have been told that the law as it still exists gave you the authority to close that bank, and that notwithstanding even a State institution or State superintendent—or Commissioner, as in your case—ordering a bank to be shut down, that the Federal people would still be responsible for paying back the depositors. Isn't that the case?

Ms. SCHAFFER. If they agreed to accept the receivership.

The CHAIRMAN. They didn't have to take the institution into receivership. You had the ability to close them, and that indeed they were, pursuant to FSLIC, responsible for paying back those depositors. Isn't that true?

Ms. SCHAFFER. In theory, that's the way it should have worked. But we know that's not how it worked.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Schaffer, if you know someone's a rogue and a scoundrel, and is doing the kinds of things that that board outlined at the meeting in Texas, that you attended—you did have the ability to close him down.

Ms. SCHAFFER. I have never said we didn't have the statutory authority.

The CHAIRMAN. I think it's been indicated that was not the case.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Not by me. I will stipulate that we had the statutory authority. We had to go through certain steps to do that, and it had to be tendered to the FSLIC, and the grounds had to be proved in a court proceeding. So all of that, that statutory grounds existed for a receivership.

The CHAIRMAN. I just wanted to put the situation in context. I have no further questions.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Schaffer, what did the Federal regulators say to you about Madison? You consistently followed their advice, did you not, or their counsel?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I did.

Senator SARBANES. I take it the Chairman is suggesting that you would have had to show they were insolvent in order to close them down?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We would have had to have proof that they were insolvent, there was a substantial dissipation of assets, and/or—I think the other ground might be operating in an unsafe and unsound condition. Those grounds would have to be proved in a court proceeding. The institution would have to be tendered to the FSLIC.

In other words, they would have to agree in that court proceeding, appear in that court proceeding, and accept the institution. I had been told on several occasions in 1985, with other institutions, that they weren't prepared to accept institutions at this time like our small institutions. They had Texas institutions waiting to be closed, and no money. The active policy was to delay, to do everything that's possible to make sure that the depositors' money was safe, but short of closing the institution and making the depositor pay off.

Theoretically, we could have ignored their advice to us, which was, we don't want an institution closed that we're not ready to accept, for all of the reasons that make perfect sense. If you tender the institution to the FSLIC, and they say, "We don't have time and we don't have money," the very next thing that's going to happen in 1985 when the general public isn't aware that their deposits may not be safe, there's a run on the institution. Not just that one, but every other one.

Because as far as I know, in 1985, there was no general discussion in the press, and common knowledge certainly didn't exist the way it did later in the 1980's, that their money was not really safe.

Senator SARBANES. So if you had moved in contradiction to the position of the Federal people, it might well have triggered a serious financial situation.

Ms. SCHAFFER. They were very concerned. They did not want us—in 1985, we had a discussion with them about another savings and loan in Conway. I suggested, "Well, we can just put them in receivership without you, whether you show up or not." That was a conversation—Mr. Faulk was involved with that one as well. And they said very adamantly they did not want that done; absolutely not, for all of the reasons that I have said previously and have told you today—because of the panic, because of the concern, and also because it would have been noticed. It would have been a public proceeding. You would have had to prove the grounds at that proceeding. There was no emergency acquisition authority.

So unlike the Federal authority, they could go in, take the institution, transfer it, and immediately go in there without advance notice to management and take control.

Senator SARBANES. You couldn't do that?

Ms. SCHAFFER. We could have done it only after a court proceeding.

Senator SARBANES. That's right. You'd have had to go through court first in order to do that.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator SARBANES. So you would have had all the repercussions of a proceeding, court action, before that came about.

Ms. SCHAFFER. We discussed that in 1985, and they had lost their emergency acquisition authority for a period of time in 1985 under Garn-St Germain. They explored the idea of using State law in some cases. When they found out that Arkansas law did not provide for emergency acquisition authority, they weren't interested in that. We had those discussions throughout 1985 and 1986.

Senator SARBANES. Fine.

Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So, to sum up, you saw problems in the bank; in that savings and loan and other savings and loans in the State because of the national problem of real estate loans going sour all over the country at this point, which triggered what became the S&L crisis.

In the earlier stages of that, the Federal regulators who would have the obligation of paying off under the Federal guarantees, under Federal insurance, were essentially pleading with you not to take any action that was not OKed by them, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's right. Plus, during the same period of time, they had indicated that they were going to find merger partners for the institutions to have them bought by larger savings and loan institutions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. They were in the process of looking for other ways to try to soften what they saw coming down the road in terms of these failures.

Ms. SCHAFFER. If the savings and loan were bought by another savings and loan, and that savings and loan then got to use that purchase as good will, and they didn't have to ever recognize the losses then from the savings and loan that was bought, then you continued to postpone the recognition of the losses that we all know eventually were recognized.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. One of the other things that the Federal regulators were proposing—and I'm referring to the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas' Supervisory Bulletin in 1985, Preferred Stock as Regulatory Net Worth—it is clear that under these circumstances that were afflicting S&L's throughout the country, one of the things that the Home Loan Bank Board was providing for or recommending was the issuance of preferred stock. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. A lot has been made of the so-called effort to keep Madison Guaranty afloat. And the policy at the Federal level was to keep every institution afloat. The only way to keep them afloat legitimately is to raise capital against which losses can be booked, and continue to be able to have that capital in reserve to stay afloat. I mean, staying afloat has taken on a negative connotation.

But it was most certainly what they wanted to see happen in order to avoid closing them and making depositor payoffs.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This was one of the things they were recommending at this time as the crisis loomed larger on the horizon?

Ms. SCHAFFER. It was a mechanism for raising capital that they believed should be available to other institutions looking for ways—who couldn't go to the public markets—to raise capital.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, the question has been raised whether in Arkansas, at the time the request came from the Madison Bank, whether this was a novel question; meaning this was the first time that you were called upon to determine for a State-chartered S&L whether, in fact, preferred stock could be issued. Correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. When you did that research, you came to the conclusion that it could theoretically, but that there were requirements imposed by Federal regulations more stringent than Arkansas State regulations that would have to be complied with by Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan in order for them to be able to go forward with the issuance of preferred stock. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Yes. The instrument itself would have to have all those characteristics that Charles has mentioned, that you were mentioning before. Obviously, there would be no purpose in going forward, in issuing an instrument that would not be counted in their regulatory net worth. So, that would be something that was examined at the time they submitted the specific proposal.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with Mr. Handley's responses earlier, Mr. Handley, let me direct your attention to the issue of how it came to pass that this was a novel question in 1985. Up until the 1980's, were State-chartered S&L's allowed to issue stock at all?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, ours were.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Was there a mutual versus stock regulation?

Mr. HANDLEY. We have both. They could be mutual associations or stock. Most of ours were stock.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The issues that are associated with the creation of a preferred class of stock were those which came on the horizon by reason of the extraordinary need to raise capital that was occasioned by the real estate crisis, in terms of the real estate market declining so substantially that the value of real estate loans dragged down the ability of the savings and loans to maintain the appropriate ratio of assets to capital. Correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes. I think it was necessitated by the general bad financial conditions of S&L's in the State that the Federal Home Loan Bank proposed regulations and pushed the issuance of preferred stock to increase capital.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Isn't it correct that in about 1985, there are only about 15 State-chartered savings and loans in the whole State of Arkansas?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's right, we had about 14 or 15.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So the idea that this was the first, and yet there weren't later examples of preferred stock questions being raised, is in part a function of the small number of State-chartered savings and loans afloat at that time?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, and they decreased substantially since then.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The word "afloat" then begins to get modified as the crisis deepens, and then most of these institutions sank—is that correct—or were merged?

Mr. HANDLEY. Most were merged.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So that virtually very few remained in the years 1987 and so on.

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, today we only have two State-chartered.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Today you're down to two State-chartered savings and loans in Arkansas, which in part I think puts into context the response to the question about whether it was novel, and how many other institutions were seeking the same kind of consideration in the State of Arkansas. But, at the end of the day, the requirements that you applied to Madison's desire to issue preferred stock were not met by Madison, correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You gave them a limited time period to come up and meet those requirements, correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. No one pressured you, if I understand it, to relax those requirements on behalf of Madison. Is that correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Then they failed to meet the requirements within the designated period. They never even submitted an application, did they?

Mr. HANDLEY. That's right.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. I have nothing further, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chertoff.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I'm just going to sum up with a few more questions myself on this issue of the Federal policy.

Mr. Handley, the Federal policy here was a general Federal policy to encourage banks to issue preferred stock nationally, so that they could get more capital in and firm up their financial support. Right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But every State has its own laws that regulate and control the manner in which stock can be issued, and tells you whether or not within a given State stock can be issued in preferred form for a savings and loan. Right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And your responsibility was to make sure that whatever the Federal policy was, that what was done in Arkansas met State law. Correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Did you call up the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to get an opinion from them on this unprecedented issue, whether under Arkansas law—

Mr. HANDLEY. No, because I was going to make one of the conditions when they filed the specific ones, that they had to meet the conditions of the Federal people.

Mr. CHERTOFF. On the legal question of whether under Arkansas law, preferred stock could be issued by an institution like Madison, did you solicit the advice of the Federal regulators about a question of Arkansas law?

Mr. HANDLEY. No, I didn't think I needed to.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Because whatever the Federal policy is, the question of Arkansas State law was a separate, independent issue that the Securities Department had to pass on as a matter of the State's authority. Right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes, its general application.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, you first heard about this from someone at the savings and loan itself, who gave you a call and had a discussion with you about this in April, right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Then you got back to them and you said, "We need a formal submission, something in writing with documentation in it and argument, and then we'll consider it." Right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You got that on April 30th, when you had the letter from the Rose Law Firm addressed to you, right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We have seen other documents that indicate that you sent a memo to Ms. Schaffer and to Nancy Jones, attached a copy of the April 30th letter—it's dated May 6th—and you set forth your analysis and your understanding of the issue, right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. This is RLF 13185. We are going to put it up. I don't know if you have seen this yet. It ties right in to what the Chairman was asking you a few minutes ago about exactly the way in which this was handled. You are not a lawyer, Mr. Handley, right?

Mr. HANDLEY. No.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We're going to make sure you get a copy of this. It's from Charles. You are Charles?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's your handwriting?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. The letter that's attached of April 30th you know to be the Rose Law Firm letter to you that sets forth the argument in favor of doing this under Arkansas law?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. It's dated May 6th.

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You say in the letter, "Perhaps one of our attorneys should review the matter and issue a legal opinion regarding such, and advise the Rose Firm and Madison." Right?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. That was your position on May 6th?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Now, Mr. Brady, you also had a position after April 30th, after this letter from the Rose Law Firm was received, that the Attorney General's office ought to issue a legal opinion, if that right?

Mr. BRADY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. We don't have that memo, but you remember that was your position, right?

Mr. BRADY. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And Ms. Jones in her memo, also dated May 6, 1985, raises a further question on item number 3 about the problem not addressed by the Rose Firm is the non-voting portion of the stock, which is what makes it preferred.

So may I ask you, Ms. Schaffer, whether you believe you got the note from Mr. Handley that's addressed to you and Nancy?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I'm sure I did. This is why I talked to him.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And you must have gotten the note from Nancy in which she indicated on May 6th what her views were, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Mr. CHERTOFF. So the state of play, as I understand it on May 6, which is 7 days after the April 30th letter was received, is that Mr. Handley, you have committed to writing the fact that there should be an attorney opinion on this. You're not an attorney. Mr. Brady, you have expressed the opinion that the Attorney General ought to offer an opinion on this novel issue. You are an attorney. And Ms. Jones, who's not an attorney, indicates there's a further problem that's not addressed by the Rose Firm.

Now, what is interesting about all of this—and there's nothing wrong with having debate like this—is that April 30th is when the first documentation comes in. As of May 6th, you, Mr. Brady, and you, Mr. Handley, are saying we need separate attorney opinions. On May 14th, however, without getting an opinion from the Attorney General, and without getting an unqualified opinion from Mr. Brady, Ms. Schaffer, you send out a letter saying that you agree with the analysis.

But most interesting of all is your conversation with Hillary Clinton in which, as you have testified, you expressed to her that you were comfortable with this concept, didn't come on May 14th. It didn't come on May 6th. It didn't even come on April 30th. It came on April 29th, because we know that from the indisputable billing records.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Well—

Mr. CHERTOFF. Let me finish, Ms. Schaffer, and then you can comment.

So, Mr. Handley, while you were saying on May 6th we needed an attorney review; Mr. Brady, while you were saying in early May we need to have an Attorney General review; while Ms. Jones was trying to figure out what's going on on May 6th—even before the April 30th letter had come, Ms. Schaffer, you had had the conversation on April 29th with Mrs. Clinton, in which you indicated that you had reached a comfort level with the views that this was OK as a first step. I understand it wasn't a completed issue, but this was OK as a first step.

Now, I just want to make sure that we don't have another phone call in here, Ms. Schaffer. You have testified at length that you had one conversation with Hillary Clinton, right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. If the billing records are indisputable, as far as I know. I don't agree that they are, but—

Mr. CHERTOFF. You think they're disputable?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I don't know that the billing records are indisputable. I'm saying I'm willing to accept that may have occurred on that date. I don't know.

Mr. CHERTOFF. But you know you had one conversation with her.

Ms. SCHAFFER. If the billing records are indisputable, and it only shows one conversation, then there's one conversation.

Mr. CHERTOFF. You only testified about one conversation, and you were asked earlier today how many conversations, and you said repeatedly one conversation.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Is there a question?

Mr. CHERTOFF. My question to you is, would you agree with me that your conversation occurred on April 29th, and that your conversation with Mrs. Clinton, in which you expressed the comfort level, preceded all of this analysis and all of this discussion of Mr. Handley saying you need a legal opinion, Mr. Brady saying you need a legal opinion—but even before they'd gotten the letter from the Rose Law Firm, you had already had the conversation with Mrs. Clinton and said you had a comfort level?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I've already testified about that today, but I'll be happy to go over it again.

I told you that this question had already been circulating through the department, had already been discussed at least as early as April 3rd. I also told you that I am not sure that conversation occurred on that day. It may have. But that I was perfectly capable of looking at the issue and deciding for myself.

However, after the letter came in, Charles did look at it again. Bill looked at it. Nancy looked at it. If I was going to write the letter, despite what anybody said, I should have written it the next day, May 1st, it looks like to me. I did not say, "You are going to get a letter that says this." I said, "I'm generally comfortable with the concept. I'm comfortable with the concept." That's why there was no more discussion probably than that. Who knows?

But in any event, it's unfair to characterize this as nobody having an opportunity to discuss it, nobody discussing it. We did discuss it. Charles has said that initially he had some concerns. He has said he did not, after discussing it—Nancy Jones immediately agreed. Her only question has to do with the non-voting portion, which was something that would come up at the time we examined the specific proposal and looked at the form of the instrument. That is not something that would change her general expression, "I agree with the Rose Law Firm."

That's right. She was not an attorney. She had the most experience in these matters with the department, and those are the only people I had, Mr. Chertoff. I had to be responsible for this decision.

The reason why you have staff attorneys is to do that, not to go get an Attorney General's opinion. I should have been able to rely on the staff lawyer to do something like that. Every decision? You send it over to the Attorney General, to tell you what to do? That's something you need to decide for yourself. You ought to be able to interpret your own laws.

In rare instances—in rare instances—you may seek an Attorney General's opinion, but not in something like this. Not at all. It was totally unnecessary.

The CHAIRMAN. Why do you say, "Not with something like this"? You see, Ms. Schaffer, if this had been a matter that was just routine—

Ms. SCHAFFER. It was routine.

The CHAIRMAN. You say this matter was routine?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I am saying that we frequently got letters from lawyers asking us to take a position or interpret the statute one way or another, or generally agree with the concept. I couldn't send every one of those to the Attorney General.

The CHAIRMAN. It related to the issuance of preferred stock by a State-chartered institution, this was the first time that your Securities Department, since 1969, had ever received this request. That's the testimony of Mr. Handley, is that correct?

Mr. HANDLEY. This is the first request that we received.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. And you were there since 1969?

Mr. HANDLEY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. This wasn't routine, was it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Just because—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just finish. Was this routine?

Mr. HANDLEY. It was the first request. It was different.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Brady, did you find this to be a novel question? Is that why you thought the Attorney General should review this?

Mr. BRADY. I thought that it was shaky enough that, to protect the Commissioner, we ought to get the Attorney General to sign off on it, if he would.

The CHAIRMAN. And you indicated that to the Commissioner, is that correct?

Mr. BRADY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Commissioner, even those people, if you want to interpret their decisions—Ms. Jones, or Mrs. Jones, and I look at the letter of 5/6/85. I mean, there are questions that she raises. And notwithstanding that—well, I guess 8 days thereafter, you send out this letter saying, "Go to it."

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's not what it says.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the letter speaks for itself.

Ms. SCHAFFER. It does.

The CHAIRMAN. The letter does indicate that there's no question legally as it relates to an institution being able to go forward with the issuance of preferred stock. And I just think that it is absolutely not the case that this was a routine endeavor. It had never been done before. Indeed, I suggest that's why the Rose Law Firm was brought into this case.

Indeed, let me suggest that's why I think people can come to the conclusion that Mrs. Clinton—she had never called you before on a matter, but she called you on this matter.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Did I testify that she'd never called me before—

The CHAIRMAN. Before on a matter?

Ms. SCHAFFER. —on any matter?

The CHAIRMAN. No. I didn't say "any matter." Did she ever call you before on a matter?

Ms. SCHAFFER. She hadn't called me before. But she called me in 1987, and asked me who in the department handled mortgage loan company applications.

The CHAIRMAN. But here she called you on a specific matter. And this is the first time the Commission ever had that. Isn't that true?

Ms. SCHAFFER. The first time you get a question does not mean that it's unusual or unique. I mean, we got a lot of those. We had never closed a State-chartered savings and loan before, either, and we had to make that decision.

The CHAIRMAN. So there was another occasion that Mrs. Clinton called you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Some time in 1987.

The CHAIRMAN. What was that with regard to?

Ms. SCHAFFER. To ask who in our department handled mortgage loan companies. Who should the questions be directed to in the department, mortgage loan companies.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to thank you for your testimony.

Again, I point out that we've been given to believe by others who have testified that this was some kind of routine matter, and that this was not new and not novel. Indeed, that is just the Chairman's observation—that is not borne out by the record; by Mr. Handley, who has been there for years, by Mr. Brady, and even by yourself.

Senator Sarbanes has some questions.

Senator SARBANES. Now, Ms. Schaffer, I want to address that very point.

My understanding, when you in a sense made reference that this was routine, is that it's routine for the department to get inquiries from lawyers requiring the department to interpret the law which the department administers.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right, all the time. We can't send those—we have to make those decisions and live with them. I mean, that is our job—and be able to defend them. They have to be right. It doesn't matter if you have another person in the office who is a lawyer to give it to. The decision has to be right.

Senator SARBANES. So this is the first time this particular issue came up?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right.

Senator SARBANES. But this was not the first time, or the last time, that you were called upon to interpret the statutes that you are required to administer. Is that correct?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That was an integral part of our job almost on a daily basis.

Senator SARBANES. If you referred all of those inquiries for initial interpretations of the statute over to the Attorney General's office, you wouldn't have been doing a good part of your work, would you?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Not only that, but the Attorney General's office didn't have the expertise in these sorts of laws, regulatory areas. That's not the kind of thing you—that was our job.

Senator SARBANES. That's right.

Ms. SCHAFFER. We were supposed to make that decision and take the heat.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Brady, someone might have said to you, "Why do you keep referring these things over to the Attorney General? Why don't you all sort of decide them?"

Mr. BRADY. In my experience, this was the only time that I had ever suggested that.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Jones said to you, I take it, in her memo, "I believe the Rose Firm's analysis regarding ordinary business corporations is correct." Is that right?

Ms. SCHAFFER. That's correct. And a lot has been made of the fact she was not a lawyer, but we did the best we could with the collective knowledge that we had.

Senator SARBANES. Now, the question she raises in number 3 on the non-voting portion is an issue that would be addressed, if necessary, when a specific proposal was submitted to the department, would it not?

Ms. SCHAFFER. Right. I think that was just—Nancy was just giving me the benefit of her advance look at this, that we needed to be on the alert to look at that. That was something that we needed to address, not in this response, but that it was an issue.

She told me what she thought—and that's what I wanted her to do, and that's what I wanted Charles to do, raise these questions. They need to be addressed, not necessarily now.

Senator SARBANES. I don't have anything further.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have anything?

Mr. CHERTOFF. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead. Let's wrap it up.

Mr. CHERTOFF. I have to just ask this last question with respect to this issue. Mr. Brady, you said this was the only time you ever suggested that something be referred over to the Attorney General's office for an opinion. Is that correct?

Mr. BRADY. I believe it's the only time I suggested that as a possible approach to mediating conflict of opinions.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Was it your impression that Ms. Schaffer was dissatisfied with the response you gave her on this matter?

Mr. BRADY. I will leave it to the Committee. You just heard from Ms. Schaffer.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Were you dissatisfied with his response on this matter?

Ms. SCHAFFER. I was not dissatisfied with the fact the response was, "We don't agree." I was dissatisfied with the reasoning, with the analysis. If the analysis is as Bill has described it today on the basis of an insurance regulation of some nature at some point in time, I did not see that that had anything to do with the Arkansas Business Corporation Code and the Savings and Loan Association Act. To me, the analysis on that basis—and we don't have the memo in front of us, if there was one to that effect—but he has said that was his analysis. I can see why I would have rejected that. It had no place in this particular analysis as far as I was concerned.

I didn't have another lawyer in the office. It was me. I was it. I had to sign off on it, make the decision, live with it, defend it. I would not ask Bill to do that on a decision in which he was not comfortable. I wouldn't want my name on that. That is why I wouldn't put my name on what he suggested. I wouldn't make him put his name on mine.

Mr. CHERTOFF. And time was of the essence on this, wasn't it?

Ms. SCHAFFER. No, it was not.

Mr. CHERTOFF. Nothing further.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

[No response.]

The CHAIRMAN. I want to thank all the witnesses. It has been a long day. Thank you for your cooperation and for your testimony.

Ms. Schaffer, notwithstanding that this has been not an easy time for you, I want to thank you for your candor. I think it was refreshing, and I want to thank you for that. The same with you, Mr. Brady, and Charles. So thank you all.

Senator SARBANES. Could I just make two comments, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Senator SARBANES. Ms. Schaffer, there was some questioning put to you on the other side that in effect said that you got the appointment because your brother was the Governor's friend. Other questioning tried to make a lot out of a McDougal note. I would like to suggest, as we close, that maybe the Governor made the appointment because he thought you'd do a good job as Commissioner.

Ms. SCHAFFER. Thank you.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask what the schedule's going to be for next week; and also when we will meet in order to review the schedule more broadly, and the deposition schedule, and get a stronger, clearer sense of what the work program is?

The CHAIRMAN. I think there is a fairly clear schedule. It seems to me that our attorneys have agreed to a schedule of witnesses for Tuesday and Wednesday, and they are waiting to confirm the availability of witnesses for Thursday.

So we are going forward on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, and we will identify as soon as we can the schedule of other hearings. I will ask staff to continue to coordinate with the Minority. Hopefully, we can have even a more definitive schedule.

Senator SARBANES. I have looked at what's proposed. It seems to me what's proposed for Tuesday and Wednesday could be done easily in 1 day. We ought to meet and discuss that.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now 20 minutes to 5, and the Senator knows I have always kept myself available, and am willing to work together. I note that we started a little after 10 a.m. With the exception of some short 10-minute recesses, with no lunch, we have moved forward. This Chair does not intend to slow things down. But I will suggest that we have some concerns relating to the normal needs of the Senators, staff, et cetera.

Now, this has been a grueling day for the three witnesses, especially Ms. Schaffer, as well as us. So we are going to continue to move the process forward and put in as much time as we humanly can. We can't work around the clock everyday, because we also must take depositions and accommodate the schedules of witnesses and their counsels.

I will be happy to discuss this, but I'm going to be quite candid. We're going to go into recess until next Tuesday at 10 a.m., and hopefully tomorrow we can iron out our schedule.

We stand in recess until Tuesday at 10 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 4:40 p.m., the Committee was recessed, to reconvene at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, January 30, 1996.]

[Appendix supplied for the record follows:]

7/2/86

Sam—

Madison Guaranty is in pretty serious trouble. Because of Bill's relationship w/ McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it. The meeting referred to in the attached letter has been moved up to July 11, 1986 and the FHLBB has asked me to be ~~at~~ at the meeting.

Please note that while all of the FHLBB restrictions in the letter are serious, #5 & 6 effectively put Madison out of business.

"Thank you for your support"

BEVERLY GASSETT
Securities Commissioner

DB

CC:HW 884.

FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK BOARD

Office of the Comptroller of the Currency

June 19, 1986

FHLBD No. 7601

Board of Directors
 Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan
 Association
 P. O. Box 1583
 16th and Main Streets
 Augusta, Arkansas 72203

Dear Board Members:

An examination of Madison Guaranty's financial condition and operating practices is currently being conducted by examiners representing the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. This examination is not yet complete. However, it has already disclosed matters of serious supervisory concern including unsafe and unsound practices, instances of noncompliance with the July 19, 1984 Supervisory Agreement and regulatory violations. Accordingly, we are scheduling a board of directors meeting for July 24, 1986 at 1:30 p.m. to be held at the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas, 500 East John Carpenter Freeway.

Furthermore, as a result of this office's ongoing monitoring of Madison Guaranty, we have noted your association's continued failure to comply with the minimum net worth requirement of Section 563.13 of the Insurance Regulations. At April 30, 1986, your association's regulatory net worth totaled $2.6 million, some $1.65 million short of its minimum requirement.

As you know, the July 19, 1984 Supervisory Agreement by and between this office and your association requires you to take actions to effect Madison Guaranty's compliance with the net worth requirement of Insurance Regulation 563.13. However, during 1985, Madison Guaranty's liabilities grew 120% from $48 million to $105.8 million. In the first four months of 1986, liabilities grew 25% (annualized) to $115 million. This recent growth by your association appears totally contradictory to your July 19, 1984 commitment to bring Madison Guaranty into net worth compliance.

As a result of the seriousness of the preliminary results of the examination in progress at your institution, we find it necessary to take immediate supervisory action. Accordingly, pursuant to Insurance Regulations 563.13(d), we hereby direct you to take the following corrective actions until the aforementioned meeting is held and/or you receive further notice from this office:

CCBW-885.

Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan
Association
Augusta, Arkansas
June 19, 1986
Page 2

CCBW-886.

- 1) The association shall upon receipt of this letter immediately adjust its savings rates to ensure that the rates it pays to attract savings deposits are not in excess of the rates paid on comparable deposits by competing institutions in the same market. Furthermore, until the July 24, 1986 meeting, the association shall immediately reduce its growth to ensure that it will not increase its liabilities in an amount that is in excess of the amount of interest credited on savings accounts and the amount necessary to fund any loans-in-process obligations or legally binding commitments existing as of the date of this letter.
- 2) Madison Guaranty shall comply fully with the restrictions and requirements of Insurance Regulation 563.9-8. Accordingly, among other things, the association may not make any additional "direct investments", as that term is defined in Section 563.9-3(b)(1) of the Insurance Regulations, without the prior written approval of this office.
- 3) The association, and its wholly owned subsidiary, shall immediately terminate the incentive compensation plans currently in effect for Messrs. McDougal and Henley, whereby they receive 10% of the net income generated by Madison Financial Corporation and Madison Guaranty, respectively. In addition, the compensation paid to these two individuals shall be immediately adjusted to a level commensurate to the compensation paid to officers with similar duties and responsibilities, who are employed by entities similar in size and operating practices to Madison Guaranty.
- 4) The association or any of its subsidiaries shall not make or commit to make, purchase or commit to purchase, all or any part of a loan secured by real estate, until such time as the following conditions have been met:
  - a) the documentation requirements of Section 563.17-1(c) of the Insurance Regulations are fully satisfied;
  - b) the appraisal report obtained is in compliance with requirements and guidelines of Memorandum 2-415; and
  - c) the loan has a loan-to-value ratio of 90% or less based upon the lower of either the security property's sales price or its appraised value.
- 5) ~~Madison Guaranty, or any of its subsidiaries, shall not finance any additional sales of real estate owned by the association or any of its subsidiaries, save for sales closed pursuant to legally binding commitments to provide such financing in existence at the date of this letter.~~
- 6) ~~The association shall not, and shall not allow any of its subsidiaries, to engage in business with any of the following named companies except for business transacted pursuant to contractual arrangements existing at the date of this letter. Furthermore, this office must be notified in~~

Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan
 Association
 Augusta, Arkansas
 June 19, 1986
 Page 3

writing prior to any payment of $1000 or more by Madison Guaranty or any of its subsidiaries to any of the following companies pursuant to such a contractual arrangement. The companies are as follows:

- 1) Castle Sewer and Water Company
- 2) Castle Industries, Inc.
- 3) The Wilson Co., Inc.
- 4) Hot Stuff, Inc.
- 5) Abernathy Development
- 6) Soreason Enterprise
- 7) Madison Marketing
- 8) Madison Real Estate
- 9) Designer Construction
- 10) Industrial Development Company of Little Rock (IDC)
- 11) Industrial Services Co. (ISC)
- 12) Madison Properties, Inc.
- 13) Dixie Continental Leasing, Inc.
- 14) Aunspaugh Designs
- 15) Master Developers, Inc.
- 16) Island Construction

If you have any questions regarding this letter or the July 24, 1986 meeting, please feel free to contact Chip G. Kieseewetter or myself at (214) 659-8500.

Very truly yours,

Walter H. Faulk
 Supervisory Agent

WHF:CK:jc

bcc: ADRO-DES Examinations

CCBW-887.

July 14, 1986

HAND-DELIVERED

Mr. Jim McDougal
 Mr. John Latham
 MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS & LOAN
 15th and Main Streets
 Little Rock, AR 72203

Dear Jim and John:

When you requested the Rose Law Firm to represent Madison on a specific matter in April, 1986, I advised you that the firm would credit fees against a monthly retainer and then bill for whatever fees might be in excess of the retainer at the end of each month. Since that time, Madison has run a credit in its account at the end of every month.

We are also aware that since that time Madison has been relying and continues to rely on a number of other law firms to provide ongoing representation, and that our representation has been for isolated matters and has not been continuous or significant.

You currently have a credit with the Rose Law Firm of $4,622.53. I am, therefore, returning the enclosed check our firm received for $2,000.00 as an advance against legal fees for the month of July, 1986, and a check for the retainer credit in the amount of $4,622.53.

RLF2 03062

DKSN001168

Mr. Jim McDougal
 Mr. John Lachen
 July 14, 1956
 Page Two

We do not believe it appropriate for us to take a pre-payment of legal fees when there is only one matter we are representing Madison on, namely the negotiations with Savers over the Babcock and Econolodge Loan participations. If you would like us to work on another specific matter, we would be glad to discuss it on a case-by-case basis.

Sincerely yours,

For the Rose Law Firm
 HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

ERC:sjc

Enclosures: Original checks to John Lachen
 Copies of letter and checks to Jim McDougal

cc: Mr. Vince Foster
 Mr. Bert Rula

RLF2 03063

DKSN001169

67TH STORY of Level 2 printed in FULL format.

Copyright 1985 American Banker, Inc.
The American Banker

November 4, 1985, Monday

SECTION: PLAYING BY THE RULES; Pull Out and Save; Thrift Update; Required Reading; Pg. 28

LENGTH: 8250 words

HEADLINE: Implications for Soundness

SYLINE: By Constance R. Dunham; Constance R. Dunham is a financial economist at the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston.

HIGHLIGHT:

Conversion from mutual to stock ownership is a complex process.

BODY:

THE CAPITALIZATION of the thrift industry gradually declined during the 1970s and early 1980s. Only in the past year has the slide in the industry's average capital-to-asset ratio been halted, and the capital bases of many thrifts still remain too thin. . . .

While regulators have raised required capital-to-asset ratios for commercial banks, they have treated the more severely damaged thrifts gingerly and have introduced several programs to give them additional time for recovery.

In response to the concern over their soundness, thrifts, like banks, have employed a variety of methods to improve capitalization, including increasing their retained earnings, issuing new common and preferred stock, and instituting new forms of long-term debt. One additional method, employed exclusively in the thrift industry, is conversion from mutual to stock ownership.

A mutual-to-stock conversion by a thrift changes the ownership structure of the institution from one mutually owned by all current depositors, who tend to be local customers, to one owned by equity shareholders, who may not be customers at all and who may live in distant parts of the country.

Although the conversion procedure has been discussed since at least the 1930s, it rarely was used before 1950, and for most of the period between 1955 and 1980 it was hampered by state and federal prohibitions, court challenges, and tax status uncertainties.

Most of these issues were resolved by 1980. Since then, more than 200 thrift institution conversions have been completed. While only 21% of thrift assets were held by stock thrifts in 1975, that figure grew to 40% by the end of 1983.

That was a record year for thrift conversions. In 1983, converting savings and loan associations raised $2.7 billion in new capital, an amount equal to 9% of the book net worth of all S&Ls combined. In part, this unprecedented volume was due to the conversion of some very large thrifts; the three largest together

LEXIS-NEXIS
A member of the Rand Elmer plc group

LEXIS-NEXIS
A member of the Rand Elmer plc group

LEXIS-NEXIS
A member of the Rand Elmer plc group

MESSAGE

☒ TELEPHONED
☐ CAME BY ☐ WANTS TO SEE YOU

☒ PLEASE CALL
☐ WILL CALL AGAIN
☒ RETURNED YOUR CALL

URGENT

FOR

AS MR

OF

PHONE

HOME
PHONE

TIME DEADLINE

REFERENCE

REFERRED TO

DATE

12-22

TIME

5:05 P

SIGNED

DKSN026305

F
File

May 14, 1985

Hillary Rodham Clinton
Rose Law Firm
120 East Fourth Street
Little Rock, AR 72201

RE: Authorization and Issuance of a Class of Preferred Stock by Madison Guaranty ("Madison"), a Savings and Loan Association
chartered under the Laws of the State of Arkansas

Dear Hillary:

I have reviewed your letter of April 30, 1985, regarding the proposed authorization and issuance by Madison of a class of non-voting preferred stock.

I agree with your analysis and conclusion of the question whether in Arkansas chartered savings and loan association may under Arkansas law create, authorize and issue a class of preferred stock. Arkansas law expressly gives state chartered associations all the powers given regular business corporations under the Arkansas Business Corporation Act, including the power to authorize and issue preferred capital stock. Further, there is no express prohibition against such action contained in the Arkansas laws governing building and loan and savings and loan associations. Accordingly, as the Savings and Loan Supervisor, I concur in your opinion that Madison's proposed capitalization plan is not inconsistent with Arkansas law.

Very truly yours,

SEVERLY BASSETT
Savings & Loan Supervisor

BB/ps

0000084

RLP1 02184

5000238

ARKANSAS

SECURITIES DEPARTMENT

71 CAPITOL MALL — 48-005

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201

TELEPHONE 501-377-1011

May 14, 1963

Hillary Rodham Clinton
Rose Law Firm
100 East Fourth Street
Little Rock, AR 72201

RE: Authorization and Issuance of a Class of Preferred Stock by Madison Guaranty ("Madison"), a Savings and Loan Association
chartered under the laws of the State of Arkansas

Dear Hillary:

I have reviewed your letter of April 22, 1963, regarding the proposed authorization and issuance by Madison of a class of non-voting preferred stock.

I agree with your analysis and conclusion of the question whether an Arkansas chartered savings and loan association may under Arkansas law create, authorize and issue a class of preferred stock. Arkansas law expressly gives state chartered associations all the powers given regular business corporations under the Arkansas Business Corporation Act, including the power to authorize and issue preferred capital stock. Further, there is no express prohibition against such action contained in the Arkansas laws governing banking and loan and savings and loan associations. Accordingly, as the Savings and Loan Supervisor, I concur in your opinion that Madison's proposed capitalization plan is not inconsistent with Arkansas law.

Very truly yours,

Severly Bassett

SEVERLY BASSETT
Savings & Loan Supervisor

35/75

COPY

RECEIVE

MAY 15 1963

ROSE LAY : 135

• የጥቅም ላይ የዋለው የጥናት ዘመን

ATTORNEY

110 EAST FOURTH STREET

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201

REGISTRATION NO. 275-0000

TELECOM: 001 225-2200

4. 10 0000
15 200000

1589-1591

May 23, 1985

[illegible]

1. JAMES L. BROWN
 2. JAMES L. BROWN
 3. JAMES L. BROWN
 4. JAMES L. BROWN
 5. JAMES L. BROWN
 6. JAMES L. BROWN
 7. JAMES L. BROWN
 8. JAMES L. BROWN
 9. JAMES L. BROWN
 10. JAMES L. BROWN
 11. JAMES L. BROWN
 12. JAMES L. BROWN
 13. JAMES L. BROWN
 14. JAMES L. BROWN
 15. JAMES L. BROWN
 16. JAMES L. BROWN
 17. JAMES L. BROWN
 18. JAMES L. BROWN
 19. JAMES L. BROWN
 20. JAMES L. BROWN
 21. JAMES L. BROWN
 22. JAMES L. BROWN
 23. JAMES L. BROWN
 24. JAMES L. BROWN
 25. JAMES L. BROWN
 26. JAMES L. BROWN
 27. JAMES L. BROWN
 28. JAMES L. BROWN
 29. JAMES L. BROWN
 30. JAMES L. BROWN
 31. JAMES L. BROWN
 32. JAMES L. BROWN
 33. JAMES L. BROWN
 34. JAMES L. BROWN
 35. JAMES L. BROWN
 36. JAMES L. BROWN
 37. JAMES L. BROWN
 38. JAMES L. BROWN
 39. JAMES L. BROWN
 40. JAMES L. BROWN
 41. JAMES L. BROWN
 42. JAMES L. BROWN
 43. JAMES L. BROWN
 44. JAMES L. BROWN
 45. JAMES L. BROWN
 46. JAMES L. BROWN
 47. JAMES L. BROWN
 48. JAMES L. BROWN
 49. JAMES L. BROWN
 50. JAMES L. BROWN
 51. JAMES L. BROWN
 52. JAMES L. BROWN
 53. JAMES L. BROWN
 54. JAMES L. BROWN
 55. JAMES L. BROWN
 56. JAMES L. BROWN
 57. JAMES L. BROWN
 58. JAMES L. BROWN
 59. JAMES L. BROWN
 60. JAMES L. BROWN
 61. JAMES L. BROWN
 62. JAMES L. BROWN
 63. JAMES L. BROWN
 64. JAMES L. BROWN
 65. JAMES L. BROWN
 66. JAMES L. BROWN
 67. JAMES L. BROWN
 68. JAMES L. BROWN
 69. JAMES L. BROWN
 70. JAMES L. BROWN
 71. JAMES L. BROWN
 72. JAMES L. BROWN
 73. JAMES L. BROWN
 74. JAMES L. BROWN
 75. JAMES L. BROWN
 76. JAMES L. BROWN
 77. JAMES L. BROWN
 78. JAMES L. BROWN
 79. JAMES L. BROWN
 80. JAMES L. BROWN
 81. JAMES L. BROWN
 82. JAMES L. BROWN
 83. JAMES L. BROWN
 84. JAMES L. BROWN
 85. JAMES L. BROWN
 86. JAMES L. BROWN
 87. JAMES L. BROWN
 88. JAMES L. BROWN
 89. JAMES L. BROWN
 90. JAMES L. BROWN
 91. JAMES L. BROWN
 92. JAMES L. BROWN
 93. JAMES L. BROWN
 94. JAMES L. BROWN
 95. JAMES L. BROWN
 96. JAMES L. BROWN
 97. JAMES L. BROWN
 98. JAMES L. BROWN
 99. JAMES L. BROWN
 100. JAMES L. BROWN

Mr. Jim McDougal
MADISON GUARANTY SAVINGS & LOAN
16th & Main Streets
Little Rock, AR 72206

Dear Jim:

Enclosed is a letter for your files from Beverly Bassett, approving the proposed authorization and issuance of a class of non-voting preferred stock. We appreciate the opportunity to work for you and look forward to continuing success in resolving whatever questions arise as you pursue your plan for growth.

With best regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

jkf
enclosure
cc: w/enclosure:
Mr. John Latham
Mr. Rick Massey

ARKANSAS

SECURITIES DEPARTMENT
HERITAGE WEST BUILDING, THIRD FLOOR
201 EAST MARKHAM
LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201

TELEPHONE 501-371-1011

December 9, 1985

Mr. Richard N. Massey
Rose Law Firm
120 East Fourth Street
Little Rock, Arkansas 72201

Re: Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association ("Madison")

Dear Mr. Massey:

Please advise the Department of the progress and current status of Madison's $3 million preferred stock issue and steps taken to meet the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's minimum net worth requirement. Since the Department has not yet received a filing for the preferred stock issue, we are concerned about the ability of Madison to complete the sale of such stock and meet the minimum net worth requirements of the Bank Board by December 31, 1985, as earlier agreed.

Thank you .

Cordially,

BEVERLY BASSETT
Savings & Loan Supervisor

Charles

BY: CHARLES P. HANDLEY
Financial Examiner Supervisor

CFH/ym

SUP/MON/MEE

TO: File
 FROM: John Mitchell
 DATE: April 3, 1985
 SUBJECT: Madison Guaranty S&LA ("Madison")
 Little Rock, Arkansas
 FHLBB No. 7601

At the request of Madison's management, a meeting was held today at 1:00 p.m. in the Pueblo Room, FHLB of Dallas. Attending were: John Latham, CEO; Greg Young, CFO; Sarah Worsham-Hawkins, Sr. V.P.; Jim Smith, Supervisory Agent; John Mitchell, Supervisory Analyst; Anna Mullican, Supervisory Analyst; and Jim Boggs, Supervisory Analyst. The purpose of the meeting was for Madison's management to become acquainted with regulatory personnel and to discuss the business plan previously submitted by Madison.

The SA indicated general satisfaction with Madison's business plan as well as corrections and improvements following the last examination report except that the rapid growth has not been accompanied by proportionate increases in Net Worth. Madison's business plan reflects projected total assets at December 31, 1985 of $100 million which would be 108 percent annual growth over the fiscal year. Projected net worth is $1.5 million which is only 1.5 percent of total assets and insufficient to meet the minimum net worth requirement. The institution has grown at an annualized rate of 192 percent through the first two months of 1985. The SA advised that, without adequate net worth, the growth would have to be curtailed. Ms. Hawkins stated that, under the new regulation, the estimated net worth requirement at March 31 would be $1.12 million, and net worth would be about $300,000 short of meeting that requirement. The Association plans to issue $600,000 of preferred stock for which a buyer is awaiting issuance, and a second issue of an unknown amount will follow shortly thereafter. The business plan projects total assets at $148 million at December 31, 1987, and management professes concern for its net worth position and an intent to meet all regulatory requirements.

A discussion was had regarding Madison's service corporation development projects, with which we have a reasonable comfort level. The service corporation, Madison Financial Corporation, is run by Jim McDougal, who owns 84 percent of Madison. Development has involved purchase of relatively cheap raw land and development into lots or tracts (1-5 acre) suitable for building. Madison has financed lot sales, but has not become involved in any commercial construction loans incident to any developments. The projects are:

- (1) Maple Creek - A highly successful residential development just southeast of Little Rock. Initial phases are sold out, with later phases over 70 percent sold.
- (2) Gold Mine Springs - A development in rural north central Arkansas. Within the last two weeks, this project is almost sold out; what has not been sold will be sold to a limited partnership.

032901

1018026

Memo to File
April 4, 1985
Page 2

- (3) Green Tree Farms and Fair Oaks - two projects of 50-55 tracts of 2-5 acres each in Camden, Arkansas. Green Tree Farms is completely sold, and Fair Oaks is over 70 percent sold in 4 months.
- (4) Campobello Island - A residential tract development in Nova Scotia. Sales have at least equalled Madison's investment in this project. Madison has only a one-fourth interest in this project by virtue of its one-half interest in a joint venture comprised of two limited partnerships. After the return of investment, some 3400 acres remain which can be developed. Madison is not obligated to be a lender or participant in further development, though it may choose to later participate. One acre tracts have been developed for summer homes, with plans by the joint venturers to later build a hotel, marina, etc.

The SA advised that Madison's growth, investment strategy and net worth compliance would be monitored closely. Though the institution was profitable ($104,000) in 1984 and shows a $128,400 profit for the first 2 months of fiscal year 1985, the SA advised that growth would have to be accompanied by adequate capital.

JHM:mm

bcc: ADRO/OES
DD/OES
State

Document Name: 3420

032902

1018027

BOARD OF DIRECTORS MEETING AT THE FEDERAL HOME
LOAN BANK OF DALLAS, JULY 11, 1986, 10:00 A.M.

Attending: Rolf Coburn, Beverly Bassett, Board of Directors of Madison Guaranty, Walter Faulk, Charles
Hanley, Bob Young, Larry Staton, Karen Bruton,
Chip Kiesweter, Jim Clark, two assistant examiners, John Selig, and Brack Speed

Faulk:

There will be a cease and desist order. There might be room for a little bit of negotiation, but he didn't see much room for change. He said the institution will change today.

Faulk identifies business problems:

- (1) Net worth of institution is $1.6 million short of regulations.
- (2) He is concerned that the institution is growing too fast.
- (3) The nature of the growth troubles him. There are no real estate feasibility studies. A supervisory appraisal has been ordered. The supervisory appraisal probably will result in the insolvency of the institution.
- (4) Accounting. Faulk outlined several accounting problems, including not cancelling profits for sale when the loans have been bought back, conflicts with the Association's accountant, documentation of loans, loan underwriting, the suspicious use of loans instead of direct investments.
- (5) The manner of compensation to Jim McScugal and John Latham may have led to the problem. The overall incomes of McScugal and Latham are excessive for size and problems of the Association. Young's compensation is tied to income he can find on the books, and this invites abuse.

LATHAM:

Greg Young does not have a contract, but a job description.

ACCT1

KFO425

FAULK:

Faulk asked again for all employment contracts.

(6) Misuse of position and usurpation of corporate opportunities. The Association has been making sales to people without financial wherewithal that are characterized "straws" as to generate business. Faulk questioned the payments to the companies noted on the June 19 letter. He questioned if payments are for real work.

Faulk stated in a general way that it seems if purpose of the Association is to generate income to certain insiders, such as Latham, McDougal, Henleys.

Inaccurate and unsupported appraisals and projections lead to early bad decisions. Better lots at the developments have been sold first, sales have occurred to straws, resale of property has occurred to add false value (land flips), and there has been failure of proper oversight by the Board of Directors.

False and inaccurate information has been given to examiners. There have been efforts by management, particularly Latham, to disguise information.

Day-to-day operations are unprofitable. Young's analysis, showing that the Association has reached a break-even point, assumes growth and relies on misbooked land sales. Faulk emphasizes that it is unusual to act on interim information, but there is serious concern. He calls to the Board to step up review. He indicates he thinks that net worth is fabricated. The cost of money of the Association is way above peer group.

Faulk suggested to the Board that they take the message to the McDougals that the McDougals get out of the business. He suggested that the Board request the resignation of Latham and elect a two-person committee to run the Association while a search is conducted for a new chief executive officer.

He also said that a Section 407 investigation will be started into whether any "shenanigans" are going on in the developments.

SELIG:

Selig agrees that this is not the time or the place to address specific issues. He asked to address general problems identified and offer solutions. Faulk declines to listen and tells the Board and the attorneys to review the cease and desist order offered them.

THE FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK OFFICIALS LEAVE THE ROOM.

The Board decides that it cannot sign the document because it is 19 pages long, and they have no time in which to review and analyze the proposed cease and desist order.

RECONVENE

(John Selig is absent, speaking with Karen Bruton in another office.)

FAULK:

Faulk enters and tells Board he likes to talk to Board without attorneys and asks for comments.

STEVE GIFFMAN:

Steve Giffman says Board has been active, well-intentioned, he notes that there has been a growth in net worth, he is concerned about the growth of the Association, he felt the service corporation was good because it was profitable. Steve said he relied in past on Jim McCougal to run the service corporation.

Sarah Hawkins states that spends her time on regulatory aspects of the Association. She sees some improvements in internal controls, but also sees concern in internal controls. Reworking old problems of the Association has taken time.

FAULK:

How much control has Board had over the service corporation. He questioned the Board's knowledge of the ownership. He asked what the Board's opinion of the ownership was. No one on the Board expressed an answer to his questions on the ownership.

Faulk indicated that he doesn't mind going along with well-documented and open transactions, but the transactions occurring in the Association today are not open or documented. RCGSZ

He never likes to see compensation based on a percentage.

(Selig and Bruton return.)

FAULK:

Problem is ownership and asset quality.

SELIG:

Selig outlines alternatives. He offers to terminate the employment of the McDougals and make Jim McDougal a consultant. He offers to reconstitute the board of the service corporation to mirror that of the Association.

FAULK:

Take the message back to Little Rock that the McDougals cannot be consultants.

SELIG:

Selig offers voting trust.

FAULK:

He wants total removal of McDougals and Bill Henley.

SELIG:

Selig says Henleys are needed to sell the service corporation's properties.

FAULK:

Faulk asks Board (in a slanted way) if they would rather have third party do appraisal.

Faulk says that he thinks the Association is beginning to fizzle (fizzle is a play on the FSLIC acronym). He says he sees this now as an FSLIC run project. He wants to see what assets there are. The Federal Home Loan Bank has lost faith in the present management.

ROG:1

The banks wants a new board, manager, and asset evaluation.

SELIG:

The Board generally recognizes problem and would have no trouble with a majority of the contents of the proposed cease and desist order.

On appraisals, FSLIC gets to sign off on choice of person.

FAULK:

Latham must be terminated. He may continue as an employee for 45 days, but he can no longer be chief executive officer or chairman.

STEVE GUTMAN

He would support third party appraisals.

SELIG:

He needs time to review the proposed cease and desist order for two reasons. He needs time to understand all 19 pages of the cease and desist order, and he needs time to see if the time-frames contained within the cease and desist order can be met.

It is decided that Wednesday, July 16, is the deadline for answer on whether the Board of Directors will accept the cease and desist order.

FAULK:

By Wednesday, a search committee should be formed, the McDougals situation resolved, and the appraisers named.

SELIG:

The June 19 letter listed several prohibited activities. Along with Sarah Hawkins, John Selig discusses several of the specific prohibitions. The prohibition contained in number 4 (c) of the June 19 letter concerning 90 percent loans can be modified as long as the loans have no insider relationship, a proper appraisal has been done, the borrower is credit-worthy, and the new compensation schedule proposed by the Board will be used.

ROG:1

ROLF COBURN:

He has concern with the marketability of the deeds at the Campobello project. Examiner Clark has not received a copy of the title insurance policy for the property as yet.

FAULK:

He restates concern about the availability of information. There have been problems in the past, and any future problems with information should be referred to the two-man committee to be formed from the Board of Directors.

SELIG:

He notes that Madison Marketing and Madison Real Estate are not included in the contents of the cease and desist order.

FAULK:

Madison Real Estate may continue operating as long as no commissions are paid to the Henleys or the McDougals.

SELIG:

John questioned the prohibition against doing business with Castle Sewer and Water. He indicated that it was necessary to do business with Castle Sewer and Water so that Castle Grande Estates can be a viable development project. He indicated that an agreement was being negotiated at the time but was not consummated.

FAULK:

Faulk said that they would consider any such agreement after the examiners had a chance to look at it.

ROOSZ

SARAH HAWKINS:

She saw no reason why the Wilson company should be included on the list of prohibited companies.

CLARK:

The Wilson company had a loan from Madison Guaranty and endorsed the check representing the proceeds of that loan back to the service corporation.

SARAH HAWKINS:

Sarah strongly disagrees with his conclusion..

MEETING BREAKS UP

PRIVATE MEETING AT WHICH STEVE CUFFMAN, JOHN SELIG, ROLF COBURN, WALTER FAULK, KAREN BRUTON, BEVERLY BASSETT, BRECK SPEED PRESENT

FAULK:

Faulk said he doesn't want to be so strict as to close the Association. He finds it hard to believe that there is no number two man in place, and the Association would fold without Latham. He indicated that he doesn't have any faith in Latham anymore.

STEVE CUFFMAN:

Steve reaffirms his faith in Latham. He states that there is no depth in management at the Association.

FAULK:

He says to use legal counsel. Latham is out. Latham was chief executive officer, and he must take responsibility.

He suggests a new board of directors be put in place.

You may have to pay extra for a new CEO that can do the job, but it is worth it.

HCCTE

SELIG:

Questions the time limit on the net worth compliance.

FAULK:

We plan to shrink the Association to the net worth limit. After that, grow at a slower rate. A new audit must be done because Jim Alford of Frost & Company is not independent.

SELIG:

Takes exception and questions when loans to Alford were made. If made after exam, then there should have been no conflict.

KAREN BRUTON:

We are not going to discuss the facts.

BEVERLY BASSETT:

She first got truly concerned about the Association when Sarah Hawkins called and asked for the Campobello files. Sarah said she couldn't find the Association's files. Beverly stated that she was not entirely convinced some files are not hidden.

RCCTZ

Grady - please review and draft proposal to Hillary
 5/6/85

- 1) I agree with Charles that this must be permanent capital stock payable in liquidation after savings accounts. I believe it would be.
- 2) I disagree w/ Charles that it has to be done under the will card statute. I believe the Rose firm's analysis regarding ordinary business corporations is correct.
3. The problem, not addressed by the Rose firm, is the NON VOTING portion. I don't know if "capital notes" authorized under federal statute is non-voting, but the preferred stock is a similar debt/equity instrument.
4. They have to get through our registration section! FSUC too!

5000290

RLF1 03186

INVESTIGATION OF WHITEWATER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS

---

TUESDAY, JANUARY 30, 1996

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE WHITEWATER
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION AND RELATED MATTERS,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met at 10:39 a.m., in room 216 of the Hart Senate Office Building, Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (Chairman of the Committee) presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ALFONSE M. D'AMATO

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will come to order.

Good morning. Today we will hear from James Clark and Dawn Pulcer. In 1986, Mr. Clark and Ms. Pulcer conducted examinations of Madison Guaranty in their capacity as Federal Home Loan Bank Board examiners. By any measure, Madison was a troubled thrift during that time.

In 1984, due to financial conditions, Madison was forced to enter into a supervisory agreement. In 1986, Jim McDougal, the Clintons' Whitewater partner, was forcibly removed from his leadership role at the bank. In 1989, Madison was taken over by the FDIC.

During that same time period, the Rose Law Firm provided legal representation to Madison. Madison's failure ultimately cost the taxpayers more than $60 million.

In connection with their examinations of Madison, Mr. Clark and Ms. Pulcer examined the Castle Grande transaction, a transaction which they described as a series of flips and fictitious sales that also involved the warehousing of land.

We know that in the fall of 1985, Madison Guaranty and Seth Ward, Seth Ward is Mr. Hubbell's father-in-law, jointly purchased more than a thousand acres of land south of Little Rock with the idea of reselling it.

McDougal and Ward called this property Castle Grande. In reality, Seth Ward was nothing more than a straw purchaser who was brought into the deal to evade laws limiting the amount of money that a savings and loan could invest in real estate. Madison sold the property in a series of transactions that resulted in a loss of nearly $4 million to the American taxpayers. The sales were typically made to Madison insiders and were financed by Madison loans that more often than not were not repaid.

Susan McDougal earned handsome commissions on these sales. Seth Ward was also well paid for his role in the initial purchase. The Rose Law Firm billing records recently found in the White House residence indicate that while she was a partner at the Rose Law Firm, Hillary Rodham Clinton had a dozen or more conferences with Seth Ward related to this matter, yet Mrs. Clinton has sworn under oath that she knew nothing about Castle Grande. The billing records also confirm that Mrs. Clinton prepared an option agreement for the purchase by Madison of a piece of the Castle Grande property owned by Seth Ward.

In the coming days, this Committee will be investigating whether that option was intended to be the mechanism by which Madison was to funnel commissions to Seth Ward to reward his participation in this sham transaction.

We will now hear from Mr. Clark and Ms. Pulcer. I will swear them in and then ask Senator Sarbanes or Senator Murray if they have any opening statements.

[Whereupon, James T. Clark, Bank Examiner, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and Dawn Pulcer, Bank Examiner, Federal Home Loan Bank Board; were called as witnesses and, having first been duly sworn, were examined and testified as follows:]

Senator Sarbanes, Senator Murray, do you have any opening comments?

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PATTY MURRAY

Senator MURRAY. Mr. Chairman, I do have a question for you. I am curious if this is the only panel we're going to have this week. I am becoming more and more concerned that this Whitewater investigation is dragging along. I know we're reaching the February deadline fairly quickly. And I notice that we have now surpassed the O.J. Simpson trial in length, number of days, and I think it's imperative that we have as many panels as possible, we come to a conclusion here because I think we're going to risk losing our credibility and start looking partisan if we don't finish on time within our allotted dollars. And I wanted to ask you today what your intent was in having more witnesses so we could complete this task on time.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, tomorrow we have two panels starting at 10 a.m. and will probably be working well through the day. Thursday, we have another panel, which I believe will take us well through the day, so we have three sessions.

Now, we didn't have one for Monday, given obviously the need to prepare and get ready for the witnesses, but this will be our first, and two other panels will be coming in. Tomorrow, we will probably work late into the day.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR PAUL S. SARBANES

Senator SARBANES. Has there been an addition to Thursday's schedule? Because I only have one person on Thursday.

The CHAIRMAN. No, no, but again, we have 3 days of hearings, and we are pursuing this matter, I believe, in as expeditious a manner as we can. Now the Senator points out, and correctly so, that if you were to take a length of time, you would say that this has been an extended period of time, but for about 7 months we were not able to go forward and examine various witnesses at the request of both Special Counsels. So I think we have been under 30 days, and I also believe that if we look at what we've accomplished in terms of gaining the facts and gaining information, I don't know how much harder we could work, but I intend to pursue it, we're going to continue to move it, and I certainly note the Senator's concern. And it is a well-founded one as it relates to seeing to it that we move the process as expeditiously as possible. And I share in that concern.

Senator MURRAY. I thank you, Mr. Chairman, and I know that we have worked long and hard to complete as much as possible, but I do think that this Committee has a responsibility to taxpayers. I know that there's been almost $30 million spent on the Whitewater investigation, although our part of that is a little over a million. But I think that it is important that we show our constituents that we can finish this on time, that we can get our task done, because again I really fear this Committee losing its credibility if we move into the campaign season, and I don't think we want to risk that.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Chairman, I just inquire, on Thursday, are we only to hear from Susan Strayhorn?

The CHAIRMAN. That's right.

Senator SARBANES. Just that one witness?

The CHAIRMAN. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. So you expect a very short session then on Thursday?

The CHAIRMAN. I don't know how long that session will be. That session will certainly go 3 or 4 hours, maybe more. I think it is tough to predict. We have had some sessions that we thought would go rather quickly and they went far longer, but I think that will be rather comprehensive.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I am a little mystified as to what we would spend 3 or 4 hours with Susan Strayhorn on. I guess what I am really suggesting is putting another panel on Thursday.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, this is Mr. McDougal's secretary, and I think it will be important. She's an important witness and may be able to shed light on this, and I think if Counsels want to discuss this later, they can, but Mr. McDougal's secretary, we believe, may be quite important to the process.

So again, I have instructed Counsel to work with Minority in giving them the witnesses as we are developing them. I think that there was a witness, for example, for tomorrow that was added to the panel at the Minority's request, so we will accommodate whenever we can.

Mr. Clark, do you have a statement?

Mr. CLARK. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you like to give it?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Can you pull that microphone up closer to you?

Mr. CLARK. Can you hear me now?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. OK. Thank you.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF JAMES T. CLARK
FORMER BANK EXAMINER
FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK BOARD
SIXTH FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK DISTRICT
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA

Mr. Chairman, Members of the Committee, I am James T. Clark, and I reside in Kalamazoo, Michigan. I am currently employed by the Comptroller of the Currency as a National Bank Examiner. I was previously employed in a similar capacity by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Office of Thrift Supervision. I worked in the Sixth Federal Home Loan Bank District headquartered in Indianapolis, Indiana.

In that capacity, I was Examiner-in-Charge of the 1986 examination of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association of Little Rock, Arkansas. After my arrival there in early March 1986, I learned that the supervisory authorities of the Dallas bank had several concerns about Madison Guaranty. These concerns included rapid growth, inadequate net worth, and self dealing.

During the course of our work, the examination crew found that a group of insiders was obtaining cash in what amounted to a pyramid scheme. The principal insider was James McDougal, who was a major stockholder of Madison Guaranty and the President of its subsidiary, Madison Financial. In evaluating Madison Guaranty's financial condition, we found that the thrift was insolvent.

By the time our field work ended in September 1986, Madison Guaranty's Board of Directors had accepted a Cease and Desist Order that restricted the thrift's activities. Members of senior management, including Mr. McDougal, also eventually left.

This past August, I testified before the Committee on Banking and Financial Services of the House of Representatives on these matters. Before appearing here today, your Committee staff asked that I address any significant issue not covered in my prior testimony. In that regard, I only wish to caution you and the Members of the Committee concerning drawing certain conclusions from the 1986 examination findings.

Specifically, in my testimony I said that the examination found no transactions involving then-Governor Clinton. I also said that based on the examination, it was possible that such transactions did occur. This last statement was not a formal reference to some small statistical possibility. Rather, it was an indication of the unknown. No one should conclude that any transaction did or did not exist unless it is cited in the examination report or in work papers. To go beyond this limitation requires further evidence or analysis that the 1986 examination did not do.

Several reports from that examination allude to the reasons for this warning. The records at Madison Guaranty were poor, missing, and in some cases, intentionally misleading. Much critical information was outside the thrift entirely and unavailable to the examiners. Though it lasted a long time, the examination only reviewed a small portion of Madison Guaranty's transactions.

I hope this clarification will correct any misunderstanding. To the extent of my memory, I will try to answer any questions you have.

Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Ms. Pulcer, do you have a statement that you would like to make?

Ms. PULCER. Yes, I do.

SWORN TESTIMONY OF DAWN PULCER
FORMER BANK EXAMINER
FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK BOARD OF INDIANAPOLIS IN DETROIT, MICHIGAN

Good morning, Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee. My name is Dawn Pulcer. I am here at the Committee's request to answer your questions regarding my participation in the 1986 Federal Home Loan Bank examination of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan located in Little Rock, Arkansas. Beginning in July 1985, I was employed by the Federal Home Loan Bank of Indianapolis as an Examiner in Detroit, Michigan.

In March 1986, I was assigned to assist Mr. James T. Clark in the examination of Madison Guaranty S&L. My review primarily focused on the real estate investments of Madison Financial Corporation and associated Madison Guaranty loans and transactions.

I remained with the Federal Home Loan Bank and later the Office of Thrift Supervision as an Examiner and Field Manager until November 17, 1995. Currently, I am the Assistant Director of the Internal Audit Department for Sterling Bank and Trust, F.S.B., in Southfield, Michigan.

This concludes my brief statement, and I would be pleased to answer your questions to the best of my ability.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much.

Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Good morning, Mr. Clark and Ms. Pulcer.

Mr. Clark, you have over 20 years of experience as a Federal bank examiner; am I correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you have participated in over 100 examinations of banks and thrifts?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You just testified that you were the Examiner-in-Charge of the 1986 examination of Madison Guaranty?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And Madison Guaranty was run by a man named James McDougal?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. As Members of the Committee know, Mr. James McDougal was the Clintons' Whitewater business partner. What are the responsibilities of the Examiner-in-Charge of an examination of a thrift?

Mr. CLARK. The Examiner-in-Charge is responsible for organizing the examination work, for determining its scope, for assigning various duties to the various crew members, for evaluating the institution on an overall basis, and for reporting findings to other supervisory authorities.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You started your examination in March 1986; am I correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's true.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And completed the exam in September 1986?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. The exam took 6 months. Assuming a bank is relatively trouble free, $100 million in assets, about how long should it normally take to conduct an examination?

Mr. CLARK. Perhaps 3 or 4 weeks, depending upon the circumstances.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why did it take so long to conduct this examination of Madison Guaranty?

Mr. CLARK. Well, because Madison Guaranty's problems were so severe and its records were so poor.

Senator MACK. Records were what? I'm sorry.

Mr. CLARK. Excuse me. I said because Madison Guaranty's problems were so severe and its records were so poor.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were there any indications to you as the Examiner-in-Charge that management insiders were actively obstructing your examination?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, there were.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Could you give some examples to the Committee?

Mr. CLARK. Loan files we asked to review were often retained for an inordinately long time. It was oftentimes difficult to get information from management in terms of talking to them and getting responses. Their responses were often evasive.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you believe that management had concocted documents to give to the examiners?

Mr. CLARK. In some cases we thought so, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And did you believe in some cases documents were backdated to be provided to the examiners?

Mr. CLARK. In some cases, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Based on your 20-some years of experience as a bank examiner, would you rank Madison among the top five worst in terms of self-dealing by insiders?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You have no doubt about that, sir?

Mr. CLARK. None.

Mr. GIUFFRA. How about in terms of safety and soundness, top five in terms of worst?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This bank was a complete mess; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. It was very bad.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now let's put on the Elmo the summary page from the examination report, you have a copy of it in front of you, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clark, did you say bank or S&L? I want to be clear on that, when you made that ranking.

Mr. CLARK. I'm sorry. I'm now examining banks, and sometimes I do use the wrong word. It was an S&L. It was a thrift institution.

Senator SARBANES. It was not a bank, it was an S&L; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CHRISTOPHER J. DODD

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate everyone has their views and opinions on this, and I say this with respect to staff, but why don't we let the witness describe and characterize how they see things rather than offer the witness ideas as to what it is? It seems to me asking whether or not this is—what the condition was makes a better way of proceeding rather than sort of suggesting.

The CHAIRMAN. I will ask Counsel to attempt to lead less but we are trying to get the story. This is not a court of law and I think the Senator makes a good point, so if you can—he is an articulate person.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have the summary page in front of you, sir?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I see it.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you indicated in your summary that Mr. McDougal was able, "To divert substantial amounts of funds from the projects to himself and others." Could you describe how Mr. McDougal did that?

Mr. CLARK. Yes. He had total control of Madison Guaranty funds. He could dispense those funds to anyone he wished at any time he wished. And he did so through the land development projects.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, am I correct that often in funding real estate projects, Madison would fund the entire purchase price of the transaction?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's not the normal procedure in funding a real estate project by an S&L?

Mr. CLARK. No, not at all. Normally, a borrower is required to have independent equity.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you discover a number of instances in which the buyer was often an insider of the company who was acting as a straw purchaser?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, a number of instances.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Who is a straw purchaser?

Mr. CLARK. It essentially is a sham purchaser who obtains legal title to a property without having any actual financial interest in the property simply as a means to hide the true ownership of the property.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In a number of instances did you discover that Madison insiders were receiving what might be called the down-payments in the form of real estate commissions or bonuses?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that is correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Again, is that a proper banking practice for an S&L?

Mr. CLARK. No, particularly since it was used to create the sham transactions, to allow the straw buyers to buy the property.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you recall any examples in the course of your examination in which Madison insiders engaged in such transactions, sham transactions?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, there were a number of them. Particularly on—well, with several of the projects, including Maple Creek, Castle Grande, and Campobello.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now in your opening statement you described how Madison insiders were obtaining cash through a pyramid scheme. What did you mean by that?

Mr. CLARK. Simply they would start by investing in a project. They would sell land through one of these sham transactions to a straw buyer. As a result of that sale, they would recognize on the Madison Financial, the subsidiary, and in Madison Guaranty's books, profit. That profit went into net worth. The increased net worth allowed them to obtain more deposits. They paid a very high rate on these deposits so that in terms of normal operations, it would not produce earnings for the bank, they couldn't reinvest the funds at a high enough rate to produce those earnings.

So—but the additional deposits brought in more cash, more cash then to invest in the land developments so you have a cycle where, assets that is in the land developments, deposits are ever increasing where—and the net worth of the—net worth of the institution, the real net worth of the institution is not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Am I correct that ultimately U.S. taxpayers bore the risk of this pyramid scheme?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. How would this pyramid scheme come collapsing down?

Mr. CLARK. Well, if you evaluated—for instance, one way to do it would be to evaluate the assets of the institution. If you looked at their true worth and reduced the assets in the institution to their true worth, it would wipe out the net worth of the institution.

Another way is to look at the accounting rules. If you applied the accounting rules correctly, all of those profits I spoke of would have to be deferred. That also would wipe out the net worth of the institution. It would make the institution insolvent, and in fact that's what we found during the exam.

Mr. GIUFFRA. During the examination you visited most of the sites of the larger Madison-financed real estate projects?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you determined that most of these projects were not feasible?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, we did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, I would like to focus your attention on the Castle Grande project. We've learned from the RTC that taxpayers lost almost $4 million in connection with this project. In your examination report, you refer to this project as the Castle Grande project; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did Madison officials refer to this project as the Castle Grande project?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I believe they also called it Castle Creek many times.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did they refer to it by any other name that you were aware of?

Mr. CLARK. On one or two of the records they may have referred to IDC.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But in most instances they referred to it as Castle Grande?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Pulcer, you were also involved in the examination of the real estate investments of Madison?

Ms. PULCER. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In your dealings with Madison management, how was this project, Castle Grande, normally referred to?

Ms. PULCER. Normally it was referred to as Castle Grande.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Clark, if we could turn a little bit later into your report, and this would be page BL 10728, this is the discussion of the Castle Grande loan in your final report. I'll just read it, "This land was purchased and sold in a series of fictitious transactions involving McDougal-Henley Group members and Madison Financial." What did you mean by that in your report?

Mr. CLARK. Simply that a series of these fictitious land sales to straw buyers occurred. Again, the funding was entirely by Madison Guaranty or its subsidiaries, so that the straw buyers had no financial interest in the transactions. It created the appearance of sales when in fact there were no real sales.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Clark, you actually went out and looked at Castle Grande. We have a map of it up on the board, and I think you have a map in your packet as well. Now the map indicates that the entire project is called Castle Grande. Could you just describe for the Committee this entire project?

Mr. CLARK. It was approximately a thousand acres, north and south of 145th Street. The original acquisition was as an industrial development from a corporation called IDC. The original acquisition was for the entire thousand acres, although part of it was purchased through the straw.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you describe the land north of 145th Street? For example, was the land swampy, good for development?

Mr. CLARK. Well, no. North of 145th Street I would say, as I recall, the land was logged over, but it was higher ground and rolling. South of 145th Street, the land dropped off rather rapidly and became very swampy, especially in the area I believe that's marked on the chart as floodway.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So that would be the bottom right where it says floodway?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you believe this land was suitable for the type of development that was proposed here by Madison?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now the land was acquired in connection with a workout of a project that had not succeeded. Do you know whether Madison obtained a feasibility study before moving forward?

Mr. CLARK. No, they did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put up on the Elmo chart number 1 that we prepared.

The CHAIRMAN. What chart is that? Would you explain it to him?

Mr. GIUFFRA. These nice blue charts that the Senate was able to obtain. Was it your understanding, sir, that this property, the Castle Grande property, was purchased by Madison Financial and a man named Seth Ward jointly?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Ward, I gather, purchased the land north of 145th Street?

Mr. CLARK. I believe that's correct but I would have to look at our exam work papers to make sure.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was it your understanding that Mr. Ward's purchase was fully funded by Madison?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was for $1.15 million?

Mr. CLARK. Based on my recollection, that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Nonrecourse loan. What does it mean to be a non-recourse loan?

Mr. CLARK. My understanding of the term is that Madison Guaranty would have no recourse, that is—well, no recourse against Seth Ward, that is, if he defaulted on the loan, the only thing they could do would be to take the property back. They couldn't seek any of Seth Ward's other assets.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have any understanding as to why Seth Ward was put in this transaction by Madison?

Mr. CLARK. Well, he had a relationship with Madison, and—

Mr. GIUFFRA. He was a consultant to Madison; isn't that right?

Mr. CLARK. Based on my recollection, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you describe Mr. Ward as a straw purchaser?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. By using Seth Ward, was Madison able to circumvent an Arkansas State law requirement limiting the amount that Madison could invest in Madison Financial which was its service corporation?

Mr. CLARK. I believe so. I would have to check precisely what Madison's net worth was at the time versus the amount of its investment in—direct investment in its service corporation to make absolutely sure, but in effect, that's what it would do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That was your understanding, though, as to why Mr. Ward was involved in this particular transaction?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it is.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you come across any documents in the course of your examination that led you to believe that Mr. Ward was put in place in order to circumvent this limitation under Arkansas law and the amount of money that a bank—that an S&L could invest in a service corporation?

Mr. CLARK. To the best of my recollection, we did run across at some point an agreement between Mr. Ward and Madison to that effect. I don't recall whether it mentioned the limitation in investment and service corporation. I did bring up the matter of limitation, the limitation in service corporation with the President of Madison Guaranty, Mr. Latham.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did he say about the limitation?

Mr. CLARK. He said it had been waived by the State.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you ultimately determine that that had not been the case?

Mr. CLARK. We did not determine one way or the other.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now what was the purpose of the limitation, as far as you know?

Mr. CLARK. To limit the amount of risk the Madison Guaranty or any Arkansas thrift could take. Direct investments in service corporations or in property are considered to be more risky than just lending on property.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you expect counsel advising a client in structuring—an S&L in structuring a land transaction such as this to have been aware of the investment rule?

Mr. CLARK. I'm sorry, would you repeat the question?

Mr. GIUFFRA. If outside counsel were involved in structuring this transaction, would you have expected outside counsel to have been aware of the Direct Investment Rule?

Mr. CLARK. I am not an attorney, but as an examiner, looking at a thrift institution, I would have expected their outside counsel to be familiar with the laws of the State in which the institution operated.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this particular case, that would be Arkansas?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you consider this direct investment limitation to be an important regulatory requirement for a thrift?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Could we just put up briefly the Massey billing record, DKSJN 28962. In fact, the Committee, just to make an observation, has learned in the billing records that were discovered at the White House that Mr. Massey, who was an associate at the law firm at the time, had done some research July 1, 1985, in connection with trying to learn about the Direct Investment Rule.

Ms. Hawkins was someone you came across in the course of your examination; am I correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this conference, this billing reference that Mr. Massey has, it indicates he spoke with Ms. Hawkins and she was a former Federal Bank Examiner; isn't that right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, she was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now if we could put chart 2 on the Elmo, this is a chart the Committee has prepared. This indicates that almost immediately after the initial purchase of the property, Ward and Madison sold various parcels of land to Madison insiders. Do you recall that?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And purchasing the land for $1.75 million, the thousand acres, just in these six transactions the land was sold for over $3 million. How would you account for that disparity, that over $1 million increase in the short period of time and the amount that the land was sold for?

Mr. CLARK. Well, again, most, if not all, of these transactions were not arm's length. They were to straw buyers who had no financial responsibility. Therefore, they would be willing to pay any price that Madison Guaranty or James McDougal were willing to fund. As a result of these sales, Madison Guaranty recognized—Madison Financial and Madison Guaranty recognized substantial profits creating the net worth I spoke of earlier.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But those were illusory profits?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, they were.

Mr. GIUFFRA. They were not, in fact, properly accounted for on Madison's books?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to the next chart. This is chart 3, this indicates how the sales were financed by Madison Guaranty. On the left-hand side we indicate the purchase by Mr. Fitzhugh and we have a sales price of $500,000, and then a nonrecourse loan of $475,000 and then a commission of $50,000. Below that we have 35 acres to Mr. Tucker, $125, with a $260,000 nonrecourse loan. What I will be doing now is taking you through each of these transactions, but it was your understanding that they were all—almost all 100 percent financed by Madison?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And that's not a proper approach for funding a real estate transaction by an S&L?

Mr. CLARK. No, it's very risky indeed.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let's turn to chart number 4. This chart depicts the acquisition of 6.6 acres at Castle Grande and a Levi Strauss building that was on the property. Do you recall the Levi Strauss building?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this particular instance, that transaction was Mr. Fitzhugh paid Madison Financial $500,000, and it was funded by a $475,000 nonrecourse loan, and Mr. Fitzhugh also received a $50,000 commission. Now is it unusual for someone who is basically selling the property to themselves to receive a commission?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. What was the purpose for this—giving the person who was buying the property a commission?

Mr. CLARK. Well, since Mr. Fitzhugh in essence did no work, he didn't—selling it to—essentially selling it to himself, one can conclude that the $50,000 was not a true payment for realtor services rendered. What in effect it did was allow Mr. Fitzhugh to buy the Levi Strauss building with no funds of his own. All the money came from Madison Guaranty or one of its operating entities.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And in fact, Madison Guaranty we learned booked paper profits of $439,000 on this particular transaction?

Mr. CLARK. I believe that's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were there problems with regard to the appraisal of this particular property that you can recall?

Mr. CLARK. I can't recall specifically on this particular property. However, generally there were very serious problems with all of the appraisals that were done on various pieces of property at Madison—excuse me, at Castle Grande.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now let's put chart 5 on the Elmo. This is an acquisition of 35 acres of Castle Grande by Jim Guy Tucker, who was then an attorney, outside attorney to Madison Guaranty. He purchased this land for $125,000, and received a $260,000 nonrecourse loan. What does that indicate to you, sir?

Mr. CLARK. Well, that not only did Mr. Tucker receive funding from Madison Guaranty for the full purchase price of the land, but also he received approximately $135,000 cash in addition to the purchase price.

The CHAIRMAN. What a bank. That is a great bank. You actually go and—

Senator MACK. It's an S&L, though.

The CHAIRMAN. A great S&L, excuse me. You buy the land for $125,000. They give you $260,000 to buy the land for $125,000 so you actually put $135,000 in your pocket and then besides that, they agree that they won't sue you if you can't pay.

Mr. CLARK. It is quite a deal, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the sweetheart of sweethearts. I mean, that is absolutely—

Senator MURKOWSKI. You looking for one of those?

The CHAIRMAN. No, no, I am not looking for one of those.

[Laughter.]

When you saw that, did that bother you?

Mr. CLARK. It surely did.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, the other stuff is wild, where a guy buys property for $500,000, he gets $475 plus a loan plus $50,000 commission so he can put the $25,000—he only got $25,000. He bought the land and he put $25,000 in his pocket; right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Next fella comes along, he bought the land, he has a nonrecourse loan, he puts $135,000 in his pocket.

Mr. CLARK. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. That's all taxpayer money.

Mr. CLARK. Well, it's Government-insured deposits, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. In the final analysis it comes out when that bank goes under and there's no way a bank can survive if it's going to operate that way, that the taxpayers are funding this kind of stuff.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. Ultimately the insurance would guaranty deposits.

The CHAIRMAN. Sure, OK.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Clark, did you discover that in a number of instances the loan files did not sufficiently document the disbursements of the loan proceeds?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that was true of almost all the loan files.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this particular case, you had to look through the check clearing records to try to find out how the money was used?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this particular instance I believe the $135,000 went to Tucker and some of that money was supposedly to be used to clear trees on the property?

Mr. CLARK. That's my recollection of what we were told.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you think it would have cost $135,000 to clear those trees?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir, we didn't feel that at the time.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Just a few more questions. If we could put on—one other point on this one. There was a $12,500 commission paid to Susan McDougal. She was the wife of Jim McDougal?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you troubled when you saw this commission being paid to Mrs. McDougal?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you think Mrs. McDougal did any work in connection with this particular transaction?

Mr. CLARK. No, I don't think any benefit accrued to Madison Guaranty.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So this was just a way to funnel money to Mr. McDougal and his wife?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. If we could put on another chart, number 6, this is an acquisition of 59 acres by something called Master Developments, Inc. Master Developments, Inc. was a company that was set up by Mr. Randolph, who was someone who was a Madison insider and the Henleys. The Henleys were related to Mrs. McDougal; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that was Mrs. McDougal's family. They were Jim McDougal's in-laws.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In this particular instance, Mr. Henley received a $47,200 commission for selling the land to himself?

Mr. CLARK. Essentially, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Again, that was just a means to funnel money to Mr. Henley to fund the transaction?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. An improper practice by an S&L?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We've subsequently learned that the RTC sold this property for $100,000 in 1992. Mr. Chairman, this will just take 5 more minutes. Mr. Clark, during the examination——

The CHAIRMAN. With the indulgence of the Minority, I would ask that we give Mr. Giuffra another 5 minutes to at least complete this so we don't have to come back to that and we'll have that over.

Go ahead.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were State examiners actively involved in your examination?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would you normally have expected State bank examiners and regulators to have been more actively involved?

Mr. CLARK. Normally, I would. The arrangements between Federal examiners and State examiners at the time varied from State-to-State, but usually there was more contact.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Typically when you examine an S&L, the State S&L regulator will be more involved and sometimes participating side-by-side with the Federal regulator?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, particularly when the problems at the thrift were as serious as those at Madison Guaranty.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now did there come a time when you learned that Ms. Beverly Bassett Schaffer—who was Ms. Schaffer?

Mr. CLARK. At what time?

Mr. GIUFFRA. In 1986.

Mr. CLARK. At that point my recollection is that she was the State Supervisor of Thrift Institutions but that was among other things.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you learn that Ms. Bassett had done some legal work for a McDougal project while in private practice in the course of your examination?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, we did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you troubled when you learned that Ms. Bassett had done some legal work for Mr. McDougal in the past?

Mr. CLARK. I became troubled when I learned that she would attend the supervisory meeting with the board of directors in July 1986, and at that point I learned who she was, that is, the State Supervisor.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you believe that Ms. Bassett should have recused herself from Madison matters because of the fact that she had represented Madison while a lawyer in private practice?

Mr. CLARK. I'm not an attorney, but I do think based upon my experience as examiner, it may very well have been a conflict.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Did you think she had a conflict?

Mr. CLARK. I thought so.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Pulcer, you took notes at this particular meeting that was held on July 11 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Dallas?

Ms. PULCER. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. This will be the last question. If we could put up Ms. Pulcer's notes.

The CHAIRMAN. Are those the notes we saw last week?

Mr. GIUFFRA. Yes, these are a little different.

Now, Ms. Pulcer, you attended this meeting of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Dallas?

Ms. PULCER. Yes, I did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Faulk was the supervisory agent in connection with this examination; is that right?

Ms. PULCER. Yes, he was.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Faulk, according to your notes, asked Beverly Bassett if she wants—

The CHAIRMAN. Look, let me say this. Because the Minority is questioning the fact that the light has been on for several minutes now and they want to attempt to hold, I want you to be able to ask Ms. Pulcer these questions without having to speed through them. If you're going to do it the way you should, it's going to take more time, we're going to be over the clock, so we'll come back to that and will recognize Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clark and Ms. Pulcer, did you testify before the House Banking Committee?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Ms. PULCER. Yes, we did.

Senator SARBANES. Was that in a public hearing?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Was that on the very matters that you are being asked about here this morning?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. Was that an extensive public hearing on the House side?

Mr. CLARK. It lasted around a day.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Clark, in your opening statement, you have suggested that before appearing here today, the Committee staff, and by which I take it that's the Majority staff, asked that you address any significant issue not covered by your prior testimony. You've testified for about a half an hour here this morning. Is there anything here that you have not written or testified about?

Mr. CLARK. Is your question is there anything that you've said this morning where I did not testify to it previously?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. I may not have gone into all of the details previously but certainly the general area was covered previously.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed your concern about the inside deals at the Madison Bank which involved flipping various properties and sham transactions was the subject of your report back in 1986 and 1987, 10 years ago.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that is what concerned you 10 years ago so that you wanted to come down pretty hard on Madison Bank?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So to the extent that Madison Bank was operating in a way that benefited insiders and sweetheart deals, none of this is new information, this is stuff that's been kicking around for at least 10 years?

Mr. CLARK. To the extent it was covered in our exam report, it's been around for 10 years.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. This is stuff that's been kicking around for at least 10 years.

Mr. CLARK. To the extent it was covered in our exam report, it's been around for 10 years.

Senator SARBANES. Were you interviewed or deposed by the Pillsbury people in the course of their inquiry?

Mr. CLARK. I was interviewed.

Senator SARBANES. You too, Ms. Pulcer?

Ms. PULCER. No, I was not.

Senator SARBANES. Just Mr. Clark. Was that at some length, Mr. Clark?

Mr. CLARK. My recollection is the interview covered 2, 3 hours.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And of course we have the transcript of your interview at the House Committee, and it is extensive, is it not? You have gone over it in preparation for your testimony?

Mr. CLARK. No, I have never seen the transcript, sir.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Oh, really? Well, it is extensive.

Mr. CLARK. It appears to be, sir.

Senator SARBANES. You were part of a panel on the House side?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I was.

Senator SARBANES. How many people were on that panel?

Mr. CLARK. As I recall, five.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you, sir, whether there is a distinction to be drawn between the evasion of the 6 percent Direct Investment Rule in connection with the acquisition of the IDC property and the land flips that you have talked about by the insiders?

Mr. CLARK. I am not sure that I understand your question.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me see if I can clarify it. In connection with the acquisition of the land, is there a suggestion that Madison somehow designed to pay an inflated price for the property in the first place?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. There is no indication that there was some collusion between the seller of that land and the Madison interests?

Mr. CLARK. That I am not sure of.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Did you see any evidence of it?

Mr. CLARK. We thought there might have been some connection between the attorney, Tucker, and IDC and the purchase. I believe one of the Madison insiders acted as a go-between in the purchase.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who are you referring to?

Mr. CLARK. I'm sorry, I don't recall the name. I would have to refer to the work papers.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let's be very clear. I know you are a careful fellow. Do you, as you sit here now, have reason to believe that Madison, at the very inception of this transaction, paid an inflated price for the land?

Mr. CLARK. I have no evidence of that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. Let's talk about the involvement of the Rose Law Firm in the transactions that you have described here today. Did the Rose Law Firm represent either buyer or seller in any of the land flips and sham transactions that you've testified about?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know. I have not seen any documentation to that effect.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now the testimony that you gave with respect to—strike that—that this is one of the top five worst banks that you have—savings and loans that you have examined back in that period of time. If I understand it, you came into the district of Arkansas under some kind of a special arrangement; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What was your regular jurisdictional territory at that point?

Mr. CLARK. I normally worked within the Sixth District, that would be Indiana and Michigan, I generally worked in Michigan.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So in terms of Texas and Arkansas, that was not your regular territory?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Indeed, is it fair to say that you were assigned to this S&L in Arkansas because the examiners out of the Dallas region were up to their eyebrows in problem savings and loans in Texas and Arkansas?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's fair.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And that they had relegated to themselves the most serious cases in Texas and Arkansas?

Mr. CLARK. That I don't know. I don't know what the basis for their decision was concerning who was assigned to which thrift.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In terms of the size of banks, are you aware of where Madison Savings & Loan was in the hierarchy of troubled savings and loans in Texas and Arkansas?

Mr. CLARK. It was one of the smaller ones.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is it fair to say that the examiners out of the Dallas office were trying to marshal their resources to deal with the most serious problem banks in their districts?

Mr. CLARK. When you say, "marshal their resources," I presume you mean the Dallas banks' resources?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. OK. Again, I don't know what their selection criteria was. Certainly they were marshaling and deploying their resources to the best of their ability to treat the problems that existed.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And it is clear that you knew that, among the hierarchy of banks, Madison Savings & Loan was among the smallest problem banks in that district?

Mr. CLARK. It was toward the smaller end, yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me ask you about the three problem areas that you'd focused on as causing the more serious losses to Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan. You listed Maple Creek, Castle Grande, and Campobello; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who was the attorney representing Madison bank in connection with Maple Creek?

Mr. CLARK. I don't recall.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. It was not the Rose Law Firm, was it?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know one way or the other.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you have any reason to believe it was?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. With respect to Campobello, do you know who the law firm was representing Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan?

Mr. CLARK. Well, I know that, with respect to at least one issue, it was the Rose Law—the—advice from representatives of the Rose Law Firm was sought. In other aspects, I don't recall.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. What is the one aspect that you believe the Rose Law Firm worked on in Campobello, sir?

Mr. CLARK. That would have been compliance with the Interstate Land Sales Act.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And who at the Rose Law Firm do you think worked on that project?

Mr. CLARK. To the best of my recollection, Beverly Bassett was at least one.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you think that Beverly Bassett worked for the Rose Law Firm. If I were to tell you that you were incorrect in that assumption, then your assumption that the Rose Law Firm played some role in Campobello would also be incorrect?

Mr. CLARK. I don't—it may be incorrect.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Bassett testified before us that she had worked, prior to her appointment to be Securities Commissioner, at the Tucker law firm; is that correct? Will you accept that?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know what she testified.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So putting aside the mistaken belief that Ms. Bassett worked for the Rose Law Firm, do you have any reason to believe that anyone from the Rose Law Firm worked on a Campobello transaction?

Mr. CLARK. I don't recall any other documents, sir, that would indicate one way or the other.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So I take it that is a yes, you have no reason to so believe? Let's move on.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I have no reason to so believe.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the Campobello loss, would you explain to the Committee how that loss occurred?

Mr. CLARK. It was in a similar manner to all the projects. Funds were disbursed to buy the property without due consideration of whether the development was feasible or not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who were the insiders who were involved?

The CHAIRMAN. Counsel, if you have any records that you could give to him to refresh him as you go through this, I think that would be helpful as opposed to asking him to testify by recollection. In other words, if you do have, then I would share them with him so that he could be more responsive to your questions.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Chairman, there is an entire report that was prepared under the authority of Pillsbury Madison & Sutro by a law firm called Jordan & Keyes, LLP. It was a report to the Resolution Trust Corporation which was delivered on September 27, 1995. It cites chapter and versus on this subject. But since these two examiners are apparently here to testify what they saw 10 years ago, I thought I would continue along that line.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, if you want to, why don't you make available, if you have this and you want to ask him about various specifics of this, it is only fair to send it down to Mr. Clark. He is not a defendant. And then review those questions that you would want to put to him, but give him the record so that he can do that as opposed to just asking questions in which he has no reference to any documents. I think you would get more out of it.

Senator SARBANES. If Mr. Clark doesn't recollect, he should say he doesn't recollect; and if he does, he ought to try to recollect—

The CHAIRMAN. He has—sure.

Senator SARBANES. —and then we may seek to refresh his recollection.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm saying he has indicated, on a number of occasions now, he hasn't recollected, and if you are going to continue to persist when he says he doesn't recollect, then I'm going to be forced to ask you to either give him something to help him refresh his recollection or cease and desist from that line.

Senator SARBANES. I don't think we got an answer to the question that was put.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, put the question to him and let him answer it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Clark, do you remember who the insiders were? I don't mean to be unfair to you.

Mr. CLARK. I remember some of them; obviously with reference to documents, I might be able to recall more.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Ms. Pulcer, did you have responsibility for reviewing the Campobello transaction?

Ms. PULCER. No, I did not.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who do you remember?

Mr. CLARK. OK, obviously Mr. McDougal, Susan McDougal. I believe Sorenson, Kuca. There may be others, I just don't recall at this point.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We will get you some material to try to help your recollection. Does the name Sheffield Nelson ring a bell with you?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it does.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Who is Sheffield Nelson? Do you know who he was in Arkansas?

Mr. CLARK. No, I recognize the name, but I can't place it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know who Mr. Nelson's partner was?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And do you know whether Mr. Nelson and his partner made a considerable profit in connection with the Campobello transaction?

Mr. CLARK. I'm beginning to recall it, now that you mention it. I believe there was some involvement there between buying and selling pieces of the Campobello property.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know whether Mr. Nelson and his partner made a substantial profit?

Mr. CLARK. I don't recall that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know the relative size of the loss between Castle Grande and Campobello?

Mr. CLARK. Do you mean in the examination report?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. Well, the loss classification from Castle Grande was $1,787,000, approximately; and there was no loss classification for Campobello. The entire amount was classified as doubtful, that was $3,733,000.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now at the time of your examination, those numbers obtained, but at the end of the day, after the savings and loan was taken over and the assets were sold, do you happen to know what the figures turned out to be in terms of the loss sustained?

Mr. CLARK. No, I don't.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In connection with the—let me see whether these numbers will help your recollection. In Castle Grande, it was $3.8 million and change; and Campobello was $5.5 million and change. Does that help your recollection?

Mr. CLARK. What are these numbers you are reading to me? Are these the ultimate—is this the ultimate loss borne by the RTC?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Yes, and these are figures from the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report, which this Committee has made part of its record.

Mr. CLARK. I didn't have anything to do with the workout of these projects. I never did know what the ultimate loss was.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You didn't follow through on it? I am not suggesting there was a reason for you to do so.

Mr. CLARK. No, I understand. But, no, I was not involved.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The portion of your involvement that is relevant is the fact that, back in 1986, you and Ms. Pulcer reviewed the records of the bank to the extent they existed and were turned over to you, made an analysis of those records, and came to a conclusion with respect to the financial health of that savings and loan institution at that time; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You gave your report, your report was acted upon. Do you happen to know when it was that Ms. Bassett recommended that the savings and loan be taken over?

Mr. CLARK. I believe I heard during the House hearings that it was sometime later. I am not sure I recall precisely.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In December 1987, according to the records we have, she wrote to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to ask that the savings and loan be taken over. Do you know the reason given her why the Bank Board could not act?

Mr. CLARK. No, I don't.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know how much of the loss ultimately sustained by Madison Savings & Loan was occasioned by the delay between the time that Ms. Bassett requested that the savings and loan be taken over and the time that the Federal authorities actually acted?

Mr. CLARK. No, I don't.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Do you know that it was substantial?

Mr. CLARK. I would suspect that a substantial portion of the ultimate loss would have accrued after the exam. I am not sure about the timing after that.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So you are in no position to say on the basis of any work you have actually performed?

Mr. CLARK. No.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Is there any additional new information that you can provide this Committee consistent with your opening statement that was not provided to the House Committee?

Mr. CLARK. Again, not beyond the one caution I put forward in my statement concerning the limitation on conclusions that can be drawn from the 1986 examination.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, you knew as a result of what you looked at that the Clintons were not parties to any of these land flips or insider transactions; correct?

Mr. CLARK. I knew that, of the transactions we looked at, they were not parties.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed you were looking specifically to see whether the Clintons were parties to any transactions because you had been advised at the time that you began your inquiry that Mr. McDougal and the Clintons had some relationship; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Not quite. What we were doing, we were looking at projects. Now, we had the names of various people in mind, including that of Mr. Clinton, to see if any funds came out of those projects to those individuals. But we weren't specifically looking for transactions from Mr. Clinton.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. You made a list up of individuals who you were specifically looking for in terms of the transactions of Madison Savings & Loan?

Mr. CLARK. What I am trying to express is, that wasn't quite the process. The process was we were looking at certain developments and looking at funds coming out of the those developments, and to insiders. We had a list of potential insiders, and that list included Mr. Clinton's name.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Oh, that's the point that I was making, that you were aware and you were mindful that this is one of the things that you were going to investigate to determine whether there was anything to it. And your conclusion was, on the basis of what you saw, that there was indeed nothing to the suggestion that Mr. Clinton might be involved as an insider in these transactions?

Mr. CLARK. Not quite. My conclusion was that we didn't find anything going to Mr. Clinton. No, no, sir——

The CHAIRMAN. Let him finish his question. Then if you have to follow up, you can answer.

Mr. CLARK. Look, this gets to a very important point here, and I think frankly this is the point that caused confusion in my testimony before the House. There's quite a big difference, particularly in the case of Madison Guaranty, between saying I didn't find something, didn't find a certain transaction, to saying it didn't occur. It is not just a logical difference; it isn't just a bow to saying you can't prove a negative. There is an awful lot out there, an awful lot of transactions that occurred at Madison Guaranty the examination didn't look at. And that's the difference, that's why, yes, we didn't find any transactions involving Mr. Clinton, but given the process of the examination, we wouldn't necessarily have.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. You looked at the material transactions; correct? You wanted to focus on material transactions?

Mr. CLARK. We looked at the large land developments.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. In your testimony at page 212, you made the statement, yes, I was informed by Mr. Parr. Who is Mr. Parr?

Mr. CLARK. Mr. Parr was the Field Manager in the Little Rock office of the Dallas bank.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. OK. You were informed by Mr. Parr that Mr. McDougal was a friend of then-Governor Clinton's, and I believe they may have been business partners by Ms.—

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ben-Veniste, please, can we give him a copy?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Sure.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, we do it with every witness. You want to stop the time?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. While we are waiting for copies to be made, let me ask you this other question. I am puzzled, this is the first we have seen of this chart that's been put up here in the room, at least the first I've seen of it.

You indicated that there were no feasibility studies, to your knowledge, made in connection with the Seth Ward/Madison financial transaction; correct?

Mr. CLARK. I indicated there were no feasibility studies done, is my understanding—my recollection prior to the time of purchase. There certainly were no adequate feasibility studies ever done on the project.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And I am not suggesting there ever was an adequate feasibility study. But if you get up and take a look at that chart, could you read the bottom of it? I mean, in the center, what does it say?

Mr. CLARK. It says, "Castle Grande." It says, "Castle Grande feasibility study." I think that's from the Manes—

The CHAIRMAN. Wait, let him finish.

Mr. CLARK. I think it is from the Manes, Castin study which was not—did not really determine feasibility.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. So they called it a feasibility study, but it really didn't, in your view, determine feasibility?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. That's fine, I just wanted to clarify that point.

Senator DODD. While you are waiting for that, let me ask you if I can, I'd like to go back to—you responded strongly to the implication, the question was asked to you whether or not there were any—you had encountered any evidence of the Clintons involved in any of these—what did you call them, Mr. Ben-Veniste?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Sham or flips.

Senator DODD. Sham or flips. And you made the distinction between what you were able to discover and what might be out there. I appreciate that distinction. I am interested in how my colleagues might react to such a distinction. But, nonetheless, in your examination, did you find anything, yes or no? I appreciate what you may think, you didn't see every possible transaction all over Arkansas. But based on what you saw, as an examiner, did you find anything?

Mr. CLARK. Based upon what I saw, no. However, I didn't look—it is not just every possible transaction, we didn't look at most of the transactions.

Senator DODD. I understand. I appreciate that. I am trying to get at what you know. I realize maybe others may find something. Based on your examination, the answer is no?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator DODD. OK. Thank you.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Now, you have in front of you, I hope, from your House testimony, page 212 and 287.

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Mr. Clark, again let me pick up at line 4 on page 212 where you said,

Mr. CLARK. Yes. I was informed by Mr. Parr that James McDougal was a friend of then-Governor Clinton's, and I believe they may have been business partners.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. So you recall that Mr. Parr not only mentioned the friendship, but that they were not only social acquaintances, but business relationships between the two?

Mr. CLARK. Business and that they were both involved—there were political connections as well.

I believe he may have mentioned—I believe he mentioned it at the time that there may have been business connections, but I am not absolutely positive of that.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Primarily, at that point, you were very clear, however, concerning the political connections?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

And at page 287, line 12,

Mr. SANDERS. As your investigation continued, what did you discover about Mr. Clinton's role in Madison's financial troubles?

Mr. CLARK. We didn't find any financial transactions with Mr. Clinton.

Mr. SANDERS. So you found nothing whatsoever?

Mr. CLARK. We found no transactions involving Mr. Clinton financially. We did not find funds going to Mr. Clinton.

I would like to cede the remainder of my time to Senator Dodd.
Senator DODD. I have a yellow light on here.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We can wait until the next time.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, the yellow light is on.

The CHAIRMAN. Finish it.

Senator DODD. I am going to take a little more time with this, but my point is here, back here, and part of it I don't have in it my hands, but the fact that we had both these witnesses before the House—the Social Security Administration had 53 days of hearings. The Interstate Highway System was established in 10 days of hearings. The entire Iran-Contra was 21 days of hearings. The O.J. Simpson trial was 289 days from beginning to end—288 and we have now gone 289 days.

I will come back to this, Mr. Chairman. We have to move this along. This is just going on too long. Here we have an opportunity where we have previous public testimony, and I am not faulting either of our witnesses here, but they have been before Congressional Committees. We could certainly go over that testimony and examine it, if there are additional questions submit them in writing. But to spend an entire day here basically going through the same ground that's been gone over, I must raise again, the point that it is appearing as though we are dragging along here. And I will come back to this in a few minutes because I want to inquire of the Chair, as well as the Ranking Member, Senator Sarbanes, if there isn't some way here that we can begin to wrap this up. It's really gone on too long in my view.

The CHAIRMAN. Before I recognize Senator Mack, I will ask him if he will yield a minute to me. Put on the light. I'm going to make some comments to this.

There is an increasing drumbeat that I am hearing. Some letters were sent to me—by the way which I never received—from two Congresswomen, it is one thing to send somebody a letter and then put it out to the press. It is another thing to send it to the press first. I'm talking about Congresswoman Schroeder and the Congresswoman from, I believe, Georgia as well.

If you are going to send a letter to someone asking them questions or making observations, it seems to me that you should send it to them, you don't just distribute it to the press. In these letters they accused this Committee and the Chair of pillorying the First Lady. That is not the intent of the Chair, it is not the intent of this Committee. We are going to move forward in a thorough, comprehensive, and fair manner. And I will not be deterred by that kind of attack. It is just not going to take place.

Now as it relates to looking at the cost of the hearings and to the timeliness of the hearings. These hearings were delayed for 6 to 7 months, not because of the Chairman, and when I was Ranking Member as well, I didn't want to put them off. At that time, Senator Riegle was Chairman, but it was because the Special Counsel asked us not to examine various witnesses and not to get into various phases including Arkansas. That occasioned about a 6- or 7-month delay, and to why we have not been able and should have been able to move forward in some of these areas.

The fact of the matter is the production of documents has been delayed and we have just received the new materials which have recently appeared. And I will not characterize the manner in which they appeared, but certainly there are questions as to how and where they were as it related to the billing records, et cetera.

We are going to continue to move forward and we are going to do it thoroughly, comprehensively, and above all, fairly. That's my statement to it.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, I am not digging in. I appreciate the Chairman's point, but you understand my point as well. We are going to have a request here for $600,000 more, the total cost of this entire investigation exceeding $30 million, the Congressional cost of it approaching $2 million. Here we have two witnesses that have appeared before Congressional hearings, spent a day doing so. We have their testimony. Now certainly if you want to file some questions to them to cover some ground, I can understand that. But we are trying to get this work done.

The Chair, by his own comments earlier on, suggested that we ought to try and get this done as quickly as possible. We have done two-thirds of the hearings. We certainly ought to complete the last third of these hearings at least in the same amount of time, if not less time, than the first two parts. And here we are suggesting we might go on for months on this.

There is a drumbeat coming, because frankly—this is the longest hearing in the history of the U.S. Congress, that I know, on a matter we have yet to identify a single illegality or unethical behavior on the part of the people that are the subjects and the targets, we all know of.

After 258 days we are no further along in this process in that sense. So there is a sense of frustration on the part of those of us here who see witnesses come and testify before Congress. We have the availability of that testimony. Why don't we just move on instead of having another full day with these witnesses? That's my point, and you understand the frustration.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly, I do. But I might add that this witness was not examined in any sense of detail as it relates to Castle Grande, and that they touched on it very briefly in a review of the records, and did not go into it in terms of the detail we have. I think a good part of that takes place as it relates to the manner in which the House conducts its hearings, where they permit just 5 minutes and there are so many Members, but there was not that kind of review.

Obviously, this has become something of concern given the recent finding of the billing records. So we are not attempting to bring people in to replot old ground. And I assure you where we can, we will attempt to minimize that, but obviously it will be necessary to bring some witnesses in. I will take under advisement the fact that there may be some that we can rely upon their previous testimony and certainly look at depositions as a manner to move the process forward.

Senator Mack.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR CONNIE MACK

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let me express my appreciation to both the witnesses for being here this morning. You have difficult tasks. Examiners of financial institutions get blamed for everything they do. I can remember hearings in which bank examiners and examiners of financial institutions were harassed for being too tough, and therefore restricting credit in the country; and other times of not being tough enough, and allowing for collapse of financial institutions.

You go before management of the financial institutions who totally disagree with what you have to say about the loans that they have put on their books. The boards have a tendency to be very tough in questioning you and then you come before the Congress and you have the same treatment. So I realize how the tough the job is and I appreciate your action here.

I will probably spend my time this morning, Mr. Clark, going over one of the transactions that came out of the Castle Grande transaction, and that is the sale to Mr. Fitzhugh. I think that Castle Grande and the sale to Mr. Fitzhugh probably raises all of the problems that have existed in Madison Guaranty, or at least a good portion of them.

The sale to Mr. Fitzhugh, as I remember, was a sale of about $500,000. There was a nonrecourse loan and, as we have already discussed here this morning, that means that the borrower had absolutely no liability, could turn around, and in essence, I guess, sign a quick claim deed back to the financial institution, walk away with no loss; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's essentially correct.

Senator MACK. So it was a nonrecourse, no personal liability, no other assets of the individual were tied up, it was a 100 percent-plus finance of the purchase. The commission was used for whatever downpayment may have been made. Am I correct so far?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator MACK. As you reviewed Castle Grande, I think one of the things that you had mentioned that you were concerned with, was again insider transactions, insider sales. And I am going to quote one of your comments from the May 8, 1986 interim report in which you say, "since they appear to be acting as straws"—and when you use the word "they," I am assuming you used the borrower there—"since the borrowers appear to be acting as straws for Madison Financial, they cannot be relied upon for repayment no matter what their individual financial resources may be."

I guess what you are saying there is regardless of the strength, the financial strength of the individual, it really is meaningless because they are acting on behalf of Madison Financial; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct. In many cases, the straw borrowers did not have the financial strength necessary to support the size of the loans they were being granted. But in any case, since the intent was that they not be financially responsible for these transactions, you really—even if they did have assets, you couldn't rely upon them for repayment.

Senator MACK. You went on further to raise another point, that under Generally Accepted Accounting Principles, it was not appropriate for Madison to recognize profits on those land sales since, again, there were insiders and in essence there was no risk, or frankly, no ownership transfer; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. I'm sorry, could you repeat the question?

Senator MACK. The point I am getting at here, or at least I think what you were trying to say, was that since these were insiders and they were acting on behalf of Madison, there was no true risk or transfer of ownership, therefore there was really no profit.

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator MACK. And if I can, what is the concern there? Explain to me why this is a concern to you.

Mr. CLARK. Well, in the first place, it is an account—was part of the accounting rules. One of the indicators of whether a transaction was truly an arms-length transaction so that you could recognize profit from that, from a sale like that, immediately is whether the buyer had a true financial interest in the property. And if they did not, you could not recognize the profit.

Senator MACK. So, Madison Financial should not have recognized that profit; is what you are saying?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator MACK. What is the significance to Madison Guaranty as a result of the profit that they booked as a result of this sale?

Mr. CLARK. Well, Madison Financial is a subsidiary of Madison Guaranty. Profits that Madison Financial recorded flow through to the books and records of Madison Guaranty, and the profits ends up in Madison Guaranty's net worth. Again, that could be used to leverage, that is obtained savings so that you would have the cash to make more of these sorts of investments.

Senator MACK. How would Mr. McDougal benefit from that?

Mr. CLARK. Mr. McDougal?

Senator MACK. I guess most people might be thinking, well, the profits showed up in Madison Financial which then showed up in Madison Guaranty, but how did Mr. McDougal take advantage of that?

Mr. CLARK. In a couple of different ways. The first way is that moneys were funded out in the various land developments including Castle Grande to Mr. McDougal personally. The other way is that part of Mr. McDougal's compensation from Madison Guaranty, his bonus, was based upon the net income—excuse me, part of his compensation from Madison Financial was based upon the net income of the service corporation.

Senator MACK. So that would explain why they showed cost of sales, in relative terms, at very, very low cost. Or do you recall anything about the issue of cost of sales?

Mr. CLARK. Cost of sales was another way that they could show large profits on these transactions. Rather than recognizing the cost of the property they were selling, on a reasonable basis, they put off recognizing those costs until later, and so recognized very small costs as they sold the property. Therefore, if you have a lower cost, you can have—and you sell a piece of property, you can recognize a bigger profit.

Senator MACK. So Mr. McDougal, by showing a very, very low cost, was showing very high profits which increased his bonus from Madison Financial?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator MACK. Did it at the same time then increase substantially the net worth of Madison Guaranty?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it did.

Senator MACK. So, at this point, there's two comments that you are making; one is that those profits never should have been booked in the first place because of the insider transactions, and second that they were clearly overstating the profits—

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Senator MACK. —both for personal gain, and for the gain of increasing the net worth and therefore being able to draw more depositors into Madison Guaranty?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator MACK. Earlier in a discussion with respect to this—I think you—there was a list of potential insiders, I guess, that was put up, on which Mr. Clinton's name appeared on that list?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Senator MACK. And you made the statement that, you couldn't categorically say he didn't benefit from it because you didn't find any information. What I am curious about is, why did his name appear there in the first place? What was it that made you make up this list?

Mr. CLARK. As I said in my earlier testimony, because the field manager in Little Rock, Mr. Parr, had talked to me and told me of the relationship between Mr. Clinton and Mr. McDougal.

Senator MACK. Back to Mr. Fitzhugh for a moment. Did you become aware of—let me start over again. One of the comments that you made here this morning indicated that you thought that the management and/or directors were—these are my words now—interfering with the exam. And the way I took that was that they were keeping documents from you. In other words, they might keep a loan file until they had an opportunity to, let's say, adjust that loan file so it would look better in the eyes of the examiners; is that a fair conclusion?

Mr. CLARK. We suspected that was occurring.

Senator MACK. Were you aware or did you ever become aware, in Mr. Fitzhugh's case—again back to this nonrecourse—at least I am under the impression that the bank officers called Mr. Fitzhugh, asked him to allow them to rewrite the terms of the loan so that he, in fact, was personally liable. Are you aware of that at all?

Mr. CLARK. I don't believe we knew that during the examination, but I have heard it since.

Senator MACK. OK. So you don't have any direct knowledge of that, then?

Mr. CLARK. No, sir.

Senator MACK. But your fear was, during the exam, that you were not being given timely data, timely files, and that these files, in fact, were being changed, modified, added to during the process of the examination?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that was our concern.

Senator MACK. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Senator Dodd.

Senator DODD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I will not spend all day on this, but I want to come back to it, and in general, understand why—and I appreciate—let me just preface my remarks because I am sure there are those who are going to say, well, it is that fellow from Connecticut and we know what he does on weekends and evenings, and that's why he is raising these issues.

But my colleague from Alaska will recall, I believe, in 1991 there was a move on the part of people on this side of the aisle to fund and hold hearings in the so-called October Surprise. I strenuously opposed those hearings and the funding for them when there were those who thought we ought to have some hearings about President Bush flying to Europe or whatever else, to meet with people.

So I think I have some credibility when it comes to my concerns about hearings and the length of time on them and whether or not they are ones that really ought to be pursued as strenuously as we go forward.

It was in 1987 when there were those, I guess, who were suggesting that we have extended hearings on Iran-Contra. And it was Minority Leader Bob Dole, I will quote him here, speaking about the Iran-Contra investigation which went on for 21 days, not 2 years. I quote him, "We may never have all the facts. There are too many other problems, domestic and foreign, that are not going to go away. They could not and should not be swept aside because of an obsession with this Iranian affair."

Mr. Chairman, my concern here is we have an Independent Counsel, a lot of this material, and whatever remains, can be handled by them. I am not suggesting we cut this off prematurely. But when I hear about an additional request for $600,000 that may go on for additional months, I think it is warranted to start raising the concerns right now about why we can't have a schedule, that if it takes as we did back, I guess, was it—I am trying to remember now—2 years ago when we started here.

I realize it was difficult and painful, but we went about 10 hours a day, as I recall, long hours we sat there on the issues involving the first phase of these hearings, and we managed to get the work done. It seems to me, given things this Committee might otherwise do as well, with some good oversights over the Banking Committee, that we might find a way to expedite this process.

We have this week here, we have the two witnesses today, we have several tomorrow, one on Thursday. Now, we can't do anything about this week, I realize that, because invitations have gone out to try and get people here, but if we want to move this along, you can do it, I think, in a much more expeditious fashion than talking about going on for additional weeks and a lot more money.

Now as I understand it, we have approximately a quarter of a million dollars left, that hasn't been spent; some $250-$275,000. So, it seems we are talking about an additional $600,000 above and beyond what we have that we haven't already expended. Again, I think some very important concerns get raised about that, and why we can't try to do with what we have here, to complete the work.

I still believe we could probably get it done if we put an intense amount of time in on this and meet our deadline. But I guess the report is due around the end of February. You may need an extra few weeks to get the report done, and I would understand that, I understand the snowstorm, and so forth; but it seems to me here, again, we are talking about a month's worth of work.

We did the first two phases of this hearing in 29 days. Now it seems to me we ought to be able to do this last phase in something like half that time. It would not be an unreasonable suggestion to make to try and work 5 days a week, if necessary, 8 or 9 hours a day, bring the witnesses in and wrap it up. Rather than trying, as I say, to go one or two witnesses a day, 2 or 3 days a week, if we are really interested in getting this done, I think we can do it, and I suspect we can do it within the financial constraints we imposed on ourselves when the original Resolution was adopted.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard alot about, of course, the billing records, and I am confident that many of my colleagues saw the article that appeared in the Sunday New York Times, maybe many didn't, but I think it is important to note. Again, I am not going to imply anything by this because we are not revisiting Iran-Contra.

But in 1987 requests were made for all documents of President Bush's Administration, all documents. Of course the Vice President knew at the time that he had maintained a diary. Now, you know, that diary all of a sudden miraculously appears after a second request in 1992, when an aide found it up in the personal quarters of the White House. September a request was made. Finally in December 1992, after the elections, that diary was turned over.

Now again, I am not going to sit here and imply, but I don't recall anybody on this Committee getting terribly exercised over the fact that the diary of the Vice President on an important Congressional hearing, that he knew existed in 1987 when the request was made, that shows up in the personal quarters in 1992 when a staff person finds it but isn't turned over to the lawyers until after the election of 1992. Where was the outrage being expressed then about a similar set of circumstances here?

The Clintons' staff find these papers. They immediately turn them over to the lawyers. The lawyers immediately notify the Committee and others of their existence. So there is, as you might understand, some sense of frustration on the part of those of us who find that in this particular case, there is a great sense of outrage yet in a similar fact situation, we didn't find any of that kind of frustration or concern being expressed.

So, again Mr. Chairman, I just find myself, when I hear that $600,000 and months more work, I am sure again the Chairman is not going to be terribly surprised by my concerns about it when you consider the amount of time we have already spent on this, and my feelings that the work could be done in a lot more expeditious fashion.

I inquire of my colleague from Maryland, who has been involved in all of this, who may have some additional light to share on this matter, maybe some conversation I am not aware of has gone on. Our Counsel with the Majority staff, I haven't consulted people on my side before I made these comments here today. So maybe there are some things that are happening that I am not aware of.

But if not, I would like to know why we can't do work as we did a couple of years ago, when we went the 8, 9, 10 hours a day and completed those phases, difficult as it was, rather than this one or two witnesses a day, 2 or 3 days a week approach. So I would inquire of my colleague from Maryland if there is something going on that I am not aware of?

Senator SARBANES. First of all, I would say to the Senator from Connecticut, the Iran-Contra Committee held 44 days of hearings altogether; and in the last month, between July 7 and August 6, 1987, they held 21 days of hearings over that 1-month period in order to conclude its hearing schedule on August 6. The Committee was established on January 6, 1987, so they finished the hearings 7 months after its creation.

Now as of Friday, we will have done more hearings than the Iran-Contra Committee did. And yet we are now faced with a request by the Majority for another $600,000 to carry on the inquiry, and with an indefinite extension of time. Of course, we've taken the view, which I think is well based, that there should be an intensification of the scheduling in front of us, and that we ought to work within the timetable given us by the Senate in the Resolution, and within the money that's been allocated for that purpose.

Frankly, I think we need to intensify the schedule. We have made that very clear to the Majority, and in very recent discussions, where we have tried to get some sense of what the schedule is going to be and what the universe looks like in terms of witnesses which looks very large indeed.

We've moved beyond the Foster papers and beyond the Washington phase, and we are now talking about the so-called Arkansas phase, which involves matters that took place in Arkansas 10 and 15 years ago. And, of course, that phase could go on forever, I assume, but I don't think a good public purpose is served by that.

I have been very candid in stating it, and it is something I feel keenly, that the more this extends into the election year, the more it will be perceived by the public that this investigation is being conducted for political purposes. We ought to seek to avoid that and the way to do that is to intensify the hearing schedule, organize these witnesses, make use of past testimony that people have given in other fora, and move this thing along.

Now, I understand that the Majority has certain points they want to make. I think we ought to lay them out in a hearing, but not needlessly drag these hearings out. I think we ought to have more of a form to this, and a more intensification of the hearing program. Iran-Contra held 260 hours of hearings over a 3-month period. This Committee has held 180 hours over a 6-month period. I mean, there is a very sharp contrast, and in fact, there is even a contrast between some of the previous working periods of this Committee on this matter and the pace that's now here before us.

Senator DODD. Let me inquire as well. Today, in The Washington Times, there is a headline story that says, Panel wants chance to question Hale, seeks extension. Republicans on the Special Whitewater Committee want to extend the February 29th cutoff date for the panel inquiries to give Members, among other things, a chance to question former Little Rock judge who law enforcement officials have described as the piggy-back for Arkansas' political elite.

I raise that point because it kind of goes to the heart of this. We have a memo, Mr. Chairman, that was sent to Mr. Chertoff, the Majority Counsel, from Mr. Ben-Veniste, in December, 2 months ago, specifically regarding Mr. Hale. In which it says,

After the meeting with David Kendall and Jane Sherburne, Chairman D'Amato asked me to work with you to begin the process of having David Hale appear for a deposition, you put it out to the Chairman and Senator Sarbanes, that if the Independent Counsel objects to Hale providing testimony to the Committee, as the staff has indicated it will do, the process may take some time.

The reason I bring up that memo in December is because had we started then, December—and they may have objected, but now we are being told we have to extend in February because it may take some time to deal with Hale; here's a request in December to deal with Hale, 2 months ago, or at least the observation we should start early, I guess, is a better way to put it, rather than request, an observation, better said. It wasn't a request to the Chairman but an observation we may have some problems getting to this.

So trying to move this along, that is my concern here, Mr. Chairman. Again, you have a difficult job, no one is arguing that, to manage a Committee like this, a Committee where you have the subject matter as intense as it is. There is a tendency to want to personalize, I'm not trying to personalize.

I feel when you have one, two, three witnesses a week, the request for $600,000 more, months more of hearings, there are those of us here, as I say, I go back to 1991. I objected to the 1991 hearings. I saw that for what it was, in my view; now others thought there was great merit to it. I thought in 1991 it was nothing more than it was, an effort to embarrass through political hearings the Bush Administration with the October Surprise hearings, without any real shred of evidence that indicated the surreptitious flights the Vice President was supposed to have taken to meet with Iranian officials didn't exist. And to hold Congressional hearings at public expense, I thought was not worth it.

So as I say, I realize there will be those who will say the Senator from Connecticut is raising this because of other responsibilities. It is not the reason I am raising it here. If we are going on for weeks more with this thing, it seems to me, when we have an opportunity—particularly when we are not voting. We have no votes here for almost another month. We don't have to be interrupted with 15-minute roll calls as we have had in the past. We could plow along beginning at 8 or 9 in the morning and finish this work.

The CHAIRMAN. If I might, I have obviously—

Senator DODD. I appreciate it, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. We have gone well over the allotted time, but I think it is important that my colleagues be given the opportunity to express themselves—their feelings and their opinions. Now let me say two things:

First, I recognize the very legitimate concerns that my colleagues have as it relates to the possibility of hearings being delayed, and intended or unintended consequences that may come as a result of that. Let me say to you, irrespective of what party or positions that you hold or I hold, I believe what it comes down to is we try to do the best we can in our capacity as Senators. Not as Republican, Democrat, or as it relates to the body politic and what we are experiencing.

If we could have moved forward expeditiously, we would have. I can only assure you that this Senator at no time has attempted to delay these processes. Indeed, I share a frustration and have shared that with the Ranking Member and others as it related to our cooperation that necessitated delays with the Special Counsel. That's a fact. So when it is not fair to compare a situation or where there was not a delay of 6 or 7 months occasioned because the Special Prosecutor and the Committee had agreed to work as we have, together. I am willing, at certain points, to push forward, provided that we do not jeopardize the Special Prosecutor's work.

Second, let me say and this is just by way of illustration and making a rather small point but it's a point, and I think it's important. The necessity of Mr. Clark and Ms. Pulcer testifying today was questioned and raised by Counsel, and I believe some of the Senators saying well, didn't they testify before the House, and indeed there's volumes, page 185 through 400 something, so over 200 pages of testimony that Mr. Clark participated in, he and our other witness.

And the question of well, are we just going to have a rehash of this whole thing, came up as it related to Castle Grande and the importance of Castle Grande, et cetera, obviously has become something that we are concerned about, and with, as it relates to various statements in testimony that have been given. I'm not going to characterize it by who or where, because that just intensifies the situation as it relates to this as political.

But the fact is that Mr. Clark did testify and was asked questions as it related to Castle Grande, but Senator in a very, very limited way. I will take the time, and it's about one page, so that we can—that was not examined. If we're going to look at the totality, it was barely touched.

Congressman ROTH. Mr. Clark, in your examination of Madison Guaranty you reviewed a project that I think was called Castle Grande?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, that's correct.

And the reason I bring this up is because it is disingenuous and not right to suggest that this Committee is attempting simply to go over testimony that was elicited and duplicative, because we are not, I assure you. That may not say that in some cases we may not call the witnesses to amplify. In this case there was barely a mention of Castle Grande. It goes on:

Congressman ROTH. The project involved building houses in swamps; is that right?

Mr. CLARK. Well, certainly a lot of the land was low and a lot of it was swampy. That was part of the problem with building houses.

Congressman ROTH. Did you question the viability of the project?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, we did.

Congressman ROTH. What was the upshot of it?

Mr. CLARK. We classified assets related to the project. As I sit here, I can't tell you the exact amount but it was a substantial portion of the Madison Guaranty and financial investment in the project.

That's it. That's it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. You see, and by the way, I understand my colleague's question, if we went over the same old ground, I think it would be a good point. We will attempt not to go through witnesses who have testified or whose testimony that we have that we can put into the record. I'll attempt to minimize it, but I assure you, and I point this out by way of illustration, that is not why we are examining him in detail, for example, on other transactions in much greater detail than the House did. We're not going to look to duplicate it, but we are going to do it thoroughly, fairly, comprehensively, and as much as we can.

Now last but not least, the question of witnesses. We have submitted to Counsel for the Minority the potential of approximately 60 additional witnesses. I'm not saying that we're going to do all of them, but we have identified 60 witnesses, and that does not take into the question of dealing with those witnesses who the Special Prosecutor may want us to defer.

There's a trial going to go on in Little Rock, supposedly March 3rd or 4th, and we are very, very much concerned and we need some of those witnesses. To be candid with you, we will not be able to bring those witnesses in unless the Special Prosecutor agrees or unless we find some compelling reason and this Committee would be willing to vote to give some of these witnesses immunity.

I will discuss and I will ask Counsels to open up a dialogue with respect to what witnesses, if any, would we be willing to give immunity to. I have not approached that up until now for the very reason that I did not believe that my colleagues on the Minority particularly would be willing to grant immunity to witnesses. So if you want to explore that, I certainly will be willing to discuss that with you.

As you know, that is one of the areas in the Resolution when we constructed the panel that we were very much concerned about, and we would obviously, I think, have to consult with all of the Members of the body as it related to what cases, if any, would we grant immunity. So that is what has occasioned some of this delay.

Now, I have impinged upon the time of my friend and colleague.

Senator DODD. Mr. Chairman, could I just make one observation?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

OPENING COMMENTS OF SENATOR FRANK H. MURKOWSKI

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I would appreciate it if—I have been waiting a long time.

Senator DODD. I know, I just want to make one point, Frank.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I think this is a conclusion and the type of discussion that should take place in front of the Committee, but basically at the end when the Senators who have waited patiently to ask questions of the witnesses have that opportunity, because this could take a long time, but it is important.

Senator DODD. I've waited patiently but let me just say here—

Senator MURKOWSKI. The Senator from Alaska has waited patiently and he has heard from the Senator from Connecticut and I want to comment. The Senator of Connecticut has a good recollection, but a good deal of the time here has been spent debating how much time we are wasting as opposed to getting on with the witnesses and I have some questions for the witnesses.

Senator DODD. I appreciate that, and the only point I wanted to make is that I don't know how much our two witnesses are going to be able to tell us about Castle Grande. My suspicion is not a lot.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, let me try.

Senator DODD. My point is that a deposition of the witnesses by staff ahead of time would answer that question. These witnesses have not been deposed. So instead of holding a public hearing for a day with two witnesses, having staff over weekends or other time, could answer the question of whether or not they have something to tell us. Instead, we're going to spend a day.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator—

Senator MURKOWSKI. Hindsight is short.

The CHAIRMAN. One of the reasons we did not do that is to save time—we could have brought them in and taken a day for the deposition, reviewed the deposition, and then we would have brought them in. We were attempting to save some time and money. Because a good deal of the cost goes to the transcripts, not only of the public hearings but also with respect to the depositions, in producing them.

Senator Murkowski, you have waited patiently.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I think it's fair to say that this Committee has recognized the significance of Castle Grande as being a very, very complex issue representing some very, very questionable internal transactions and some loan document preparation that reflects on some answers that need to be determined by this Committee. Each time I come to this hearing process, I learn something new, something relative to either more questions being necessary to be pursued or events that seem to fall out of the sky like the White House discovery of the documents that had been missing for an extended period of time. We have had to accommodate the Special Counsel, in discovering these billing records that were missing for 2 years, that's put an additional consideration on certain questions. The Kennedy note delay, the subpoena, while that's separate, it still reflects on the mandatory responsibility that we have to proceed here, and I would like to ask a couple of questions of the examiners.

In your function as examiners for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, your concern obviously is to protect the interest of the de-positors. And as I understand it, the institution also was examined by State examiners. Do you have and did you evaluate the recommendations of the State examination for the S&L as a matter of review and can you highlight from recollection any of the exceptions that were noted in their examination, and did you share your examination with the State officials?

Mr. CLARK. Well, based upon my best recollection, I don't recall ever seeing an Arkansas State Examination Report for Madison Guaranty.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And does that imply that they don't do an examination?

Mr. CLARK. That may very well be true. I am not sure what exactly their procedures were, but in the case of Madison Guaranty, I don't recall ever seeing an Arkansas State report.

Senator MURKOWSKI. As a matter of course, do you make your examination available to the State?

Mr. CLARK. That would be——

Senator MURKOWSKI. In the sense of the State examiners.

Mr. CLARK. I myself don't do it, as an examiner-in-charge, but in the normal course what would happen would be the report, or at least its findings would be transmitted to State authorities.

Senator DODD. Frank, would you ask—did you read Beverly Schaffer's testimony?

Senator MURKOWSKI. Did I read——

Senator DODD. I just wondered if he had because you asked a very good question about whether or not they relied on the State, where she testified they always relied on Federal examinations and I just wondered if you had read your testimony.

Mr. CLARK. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, I'm sure that they do rely on Federal examinations.

Senator DODD. That's what she said.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But the question I had was whether the State ever did an examination, and we don't know that.

Senator DODD. We do know they didn't. She said they didn't.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, these gentlemen and the lady didn't address that.

Senator DODD. OK. I apologize.

Senator MURKOWSKI. If the testimony indicates that they did rely on the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, why then obviously the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's examination report fall short of a Cease and Desist Order on the first report to the Madison S&L. What did that basically say in the conclusion of your report?

Mr. CLARK. Of my 1986 examination report?

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. That Madison Guaranty was insolvent.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Was insolvent?

Mr. CLARK. Madison was insolvent. That there was a considerable amount of self-dealing and that the thrift had not been operated in a safe and sound manner.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Now when you say "insolvent," tell us a little bit about the relationship, how do you determine solvency? Is it capital and undivided profits, but in an S&L it's a little different.

Mr. CLARK. Well, it is basically the same. It is the net worth, the capital of the thrift. It would be the stock, the paid-in stock plus or minus any undivided profits, that is net income or loss that has happened at the institution.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Right. What was the date of the previous exam prior to the 1986 date roughly?

Mr. CLARK. My recollection is it was 1984.

Senator MURKOWSKI. In 1984. And did you or Ms. Pulcer do that examination?

Ms. PULCER. No.

Mr. CLARK. No.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You had that exam available to you as a reference when you did the 1986 exam?

Mr. CLARK. As I recall, we did.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Can you tell us or highlight what the 1984 exam suggested?

Mr. CLARK. Based upon my best recollection, and I have not seen that document in a very long time.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Right.

Mr. CLARK. What it indicated was that the books and records of Madison Guaranty were inadequate.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Were what?

Mr. CLARK. Inadequate.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Inadequate, in 1984.

Mr. CLARK. That particularly the underwriting of loans was not what it should have been, and I am not sure, it might have addressed insider transactions and conflicts of interest, but I am not positive of that.

I believe coming out of that examination was an agreement which we looked at at the beginning of the 1986 examination, we looked at it to determine whether Madison Guaranty had complied with the agreement, and they had not.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Is that your recollection, Ms. Pulcer?

Ms. PULCER. Yes, it is.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, when you enter into an agreement such as you indicated existed in 1984, don't you monitor whether or not that agreement is being adhered to as opposed to waiting 2 years, and isn't the institution required to report on corrective action taken during that time so you don't just walk into the institution 2 years later and find out they didn't comply?

Mr. CLARK. Normally, there are some monitoring provisions. I don't recall if there were or what those monitoring provisions were in terms of the agreement.

Senator MURKOWSKI. But it's customary that there be some kind of a monitoring situation so that you know that the institution is in compliance with the agreement. Is that not correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct, at least in terms of reviewing the financial reports that the institution submits and making periodic contacts with the management of the institution.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Was this done in the case of Madison between 1984 and 1986?

Mr. CLARK. I believe it was done by the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas based upon my best recollection.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And those records would be in existence?

Mr. CLARK. They were in existence at the time of the 1986 exam. I don't know whether they're in existence now.

Senator MURKOWSKI. You don't know why they wouldn't be in existence, do you?

Mr. CLARK. No, I don't.

Senator MURKOWSKI. I mean, these things are kept in files and the Resolution Trust would have them now?

Mr. CLARK. Well, normally they are kept in files. However, there was a destruction policy where you would normally destroy outdated documents. Whether these documents fell under that and were eventually destroyed, I don't know.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Now the purpose of examination is the protection of the depositors and to protect the insuring agency which insures the deposits, and that's your responsibility and you do the examination and you report to your chief your recommendations. Why wasn't action taken after the 1984 exam, prior to the 1986 exam, which resulted in a Cease and Desist Order? Did your chief examiner comment on the significance of the 1984 exam? And why wasn't there some action taken, if indeed the notations were such as to highlight irregularities that would necessitate an agreement and the agreement was evidently not monitored? Somebody in the organization—in the examination process seems to be falling short on their duty or follow-up and are exposing certainly the taxpayer to additional potential loss here.

Mr. CLARK. Well, I think that from the 1984 exam through the 1986 exam, there was this monitoring of financial information and perhaps contact with management. As to why there wasn't more aggressive action, my only understanding about that is that that is the reason all of us, not just the examiners at Madison Guaranty but all of the approximately 200 examiners from across the country were called into the Dallas bank district in 1986, is because they did not have the resources to take this more aggressive action for several of their institutions.

Senator MURKOWSKI. They didn't have the authority for a Cease and Desist Order?

Mr. CLARK. They had the authority but they did not have the resources to go out, find the facts and to make the necessary decision and to produce the Cease and Desist Order.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I would like just a couple of more minutes because I think my time started a little late after the extended conversation.

Wasn't it a fact that Madison was operating in the relationship of advancing funds for the Castle Grande purchase to its wholly-owned subsidiary, that throughout that period of time, and you would have access to those records in your 1986 examination, was in excess of the 6 percent limitation, which was a violation of law?

Mr. CLARK. Based upon my best recollection, that would have been true.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That would have been true, but nothing was done about it during that time, but you would have access or somebody would, to the 6 percent limitation vis-à-vis the accumulation of the credits that had been advanced by Madison to its subsidiary?

Mr. CLARK. Let me make a distinction here, and it might go to answer your question. As I said, the monitoring that was occurring was based upon financial reports sent in, OK. Because this purchase we were talking about, these sales, were to straws, they were not recorded as being investments, really, of Madison Guaranty. They were recorded as loans. So the reports that were sent in were incorrect.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That's a violation of the law?

Mr. CLARK. That is. Had the reports been correct, I think, they may very well have exceeded the 6 percent limitation. Under—

Senator MURKOWSKI. Seth Ward was the straw person in this, and yet he was employed, as I understand, by the wholly-owned subsidiary of Madison. Now that should have alerted—and I know the scrutiny and investigative curiosity of examiners. You get a smell and you start moving and satisfy yourselves, and I mean, this should have stood out like that red light.

Mr. CLARK. Well, it did arouse our curiosity in 1986 and we did pursue it, but in order to do that you have to be on-site in an exam.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, you can make a special visitation if you have reason to believe that the reports are false or they are not forthcoming. Was there any effort along the way to put any dampers on your aggressiveness or your curiosity to pursue the Madison matter by any level of oversight, either by your head examiners or by a State authority or any other effort to this, what should have been a very aggressive process of making a determination of whether what you suspected in 1984 turned out to be a reality in 1986?

Mr. CLARK. I wasn't involved in the 1984 exam.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. In 1986, there was no effort by anyone from the Dallas bank or anywhere in the Federal Home Loan Bank system at the time to restrict our investigation.

Senator MURKOWSKI. And was that true in your evaluation, Ms. Pulcer?

Ms. PULCER. Yes, it is.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Why weren't you more aggressive in the follow-up? I mean, you represent examiners but you have head examiners and you have previous examiners that did the 1984 report which alerted, if you will, your insuring agency to the fact that this institution was operating very questionably and proved in 1986 to be operating illegally. You have an obligation to protect the Government's interest and the depositors' interests. And while it's not your responsibility, it's certainly the responsibility of your agency, Mr. Clark.

Mr. CLARK. Again, I wasn't involved in the 1984 exam, and I was not involved after the 1986 exam closed. My only understanding of it, of the situation, is that the reason that an earlier examination that might have disclosed these problems sooner was not done was simply the lack of resources of the Dallas bank to perform examinations.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Who was your senior examiner that would have made the decisions to take action? Because obviously you are assigned to do an examination, you are not addressed to initiate an action. That's somebody else's decision.

Mr. CLARK. Again, I worked for someone in the Sixth Federal Home Loan Bank Board District, OK. That's Indianapolis. I didn't work direct—other than on the 1986 Madison Guaranty exam, I didn't work for anyone at the Dallas bank. Presumably, it would have been the management of the Dallas bank, the supervisory management of the Dallas bank.

Senator MURKOWSKI. All right.

Mr. CLARK. At some point, there was a reorganization of the system so that at prior to some point, perhaps during or prior to the 1986 exam, responsibility for supervision shifted from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to the Dallas bank. Prior to that point, it would be the supervisory management of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in the Dallas district.

Senator MURKOWSKI. My last question involves what you do when you do an examination. In 1986, you were looking at an institution that was in serious trouble, and you were looking at insider transactions, which I assume would lead you to look at virtually everything that might be inappropriate.

Now at that time the Rose Law Firm was on a retainer to Madison Guaranty, and I assume that recognizing at that time that the scam was clearly on, that Ward was a shell in a sense and that documents were still being drafted and, well, I guess the sale of Castle Grande took place in October 1985 and in May 1986. There were deeds drafted by the law firm covering at least a 22.5 acre parcel of Castle Grande. And these deeds were drafted by, as I understand it, Mrs. Clinton. Were you aware that the Rose Law Firm was clearly representing Madison and that if you look at whose interests they represent, whether they represent the interests of Madison or the interests of the purchasers of the property, which is the wholly-owned subsidiary of Madison, and the lawyer who is drafting the documents for the law firm is doing so—what does that lead you to do in your report? Do you write that up in your report? Do you imply that there's insider transactions or there's a questionable relationship? What do you do? Do you just ignore it, Mr. Clark?

Mr. CLARK. During the 1986 exam, I don't recall knowing that representatives of the Rose Law Firm drew up the documents of sale from IDC to Madison Guaranty or its straws. During the exam, we did know that the Rose Law Firm had done some work on Madison Guaranty, but I don't believe we knew they did that particular piece of work.

Senator SARBANES. Well, that's not a piece of fact. That's not the case, as a matter of fact. That's why you didn't know it.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Senator Sarbanes, I think there is still a question of whether that agreement was consummated or whether it was not consummated, but I think it's fair to say it was drafted.

Senator SARBANES. What deeds do you think were drawn up?

Senator MURKOWSKI. This is the 22½ acres that we're referring to with regard to the Castle Grande sale. This was the option agreement.

Senator SARBANES. Not a deed.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, all right. I stand corrected, the option agreement. But in any event, it was a document of some significance relative to the process that was going on internally within Madison.

What did you suspect when you looked at the Madison mess? Obviously, they are loaning funds to their own subsidiary. You must have drawn some conclusions relative to the insider transactions, the irregularities, the illegal actions associated with the operation of this organization. And if you knew about it, obviously those insiders would know about it, would they not?

Mr. CLARK. Well, to the extent they engaged in the transactions, yes, they would.

Senator MURKOWSKI. To the extent they engaged in the transactions.

Mr. CLARK. I'm not sure all of the insiders knew about all of the transactions, but I'm sure they knew about the ones they were involved in.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Because there were many facets. There were research and regulatory examinations on water and sewer utilities on Castle Grande, there was research on the brewery, as I recall, that was done by the Rose Law Firm and some of its principals. And as you've already testified before the Committee that, for the most part, the institution had been for an extended period of time in violation of law relative to the 6 percent limitation on what its own subsidiary could hold; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. Based upon my best recollection, that would have been correct.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, it seems to this Senator that anybody dealing with—particularly relatively closely and particularly the Rose Law Firm had to have some knowledge, they would have had to be blind not to know that there was some kind of a scam associated with the operation of the S&L; and particularly, Seth Ward's role, who is basically in the employ of the institution, which is the wholly-owned subsidiary of the institution. So you have a curious situation here, Mr. Chairman, where you have the Rose Law Firm representing Madison, Ward, who is the go-between, basically the recipient of the funds and employed by the Madison subsidiary, and I think it stretches the imagination to suggest that the law firm would not clearly see that there are substantial irregularities going on relative to the operation of the S&L.

So I think it would be interesting, Mr. Chairman, to have some understanding or explanation as to why there was not more aggressive action taken by the appropriate examiners as a consequence of the 1984 examination and the recommendations in that examination. Why reporting didn't take place and why it wasn't monitored in that timeframe from 1984 to 1986, because somebody clearly wasn't doing their job, and as a consequence it cost the taxpayers a pretty heavy hit here. And to suggest the law firm in a community, in that kind of an environment didn't have an idea of what was going on, I find just incredible.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Sarbanes.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clark, are you sitting at the table here testifying that no monitoring of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan took place after the 1984 exam in the way Senator Murkowski just suggested; is that your testimony?

Mr. CLARK. What I'm saying is there was, I believe, based upon my best recollection of documents I haven't seen in a long, long time, that there was some off-site monitoring being done. There would have been financial reports available, albeit incorrect ones, and some contact by supervisory authorities with the management of Madison Guaranty.

Senator SARBANES. Did you know there was a supervisory agreement between the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation and Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. In the summer of 1984?

Mr. CLARK. Did I know that in the summer of 1984?

Senator SARBANES. No, did you know it here today?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, and I knew about it during the 1986 exam.

Senator SARBANES. Wouldn't that constitute monitoring?

Mr. CLARK. No. That says that is an agreement to——

Senator MURKOWSKI. Perform.

Mr. CLARK. Yes, thank you, to perform, that the Madison Board of Directors agreed to take certain actions, they agreed with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board as the supervisory authority. To monitor means to take a look at the thrift periodically and see how it is performing, to monitor—perhaps even to monitor compliance with that agreement.

Senator SARBANES. Now there's a memo from John Mitchell on this very subject, saying the SA advised that Madison's growth, investment strategy, and net worth compliance would be monitored closely, with reference to the 1984 supervisory agreement.

Mr. CLARK. I'm sorry, is this the document you are referring to, this April 3, 1985 memo from John Mitchell?

Senator SARBANES. Look on the last paragraph.

Mr. CLARK. I'm sorry, sir. I'm taking some time to look at the document because I have never seen it before. At least, I don't recall ever having seen it before.

Senator SARBANES. Well, you went in 1986 to do an examination; correct?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Senator SARBANES. You had not worked this case?

Mr. CLARK. Prior to 1986, no, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Or after?

Mr. CLARK. Or after the completion of the exam in September of 1986. No, sir.

Senator SARBANES. Were you aware that they then took Mr. McDougal out of any connection with Madison subsequent to 1986?

Mr. CLARK. I may have become aware of that in 1987. In 1987, I was called to Little Rock by the FBI, and at that point looked at correspondence that had occurred, correspondence and other supervisory documents that had occurred since the end of the exam. So I'm sorry, could you——

Senator SARBANES. What follows from that?

Mr. CLARK. Well, at that point I think I did learn that McDougal was out of the institution. At the end of the 1986 exam, I don't believe he was.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Ben-Veniste.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Let me clarify one thing in connection with your cooperation with the House Committee which investigated this very same area. In addition to your public testimony, you were interviewed at some considerable length by the staff of the Committee, correct, Mr. Clark?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. And indeed for hundreds of pages which have been provided to us by the RTC, you answered questions about Castle Grande, other matters that you observed during your examination. You're aware of that. The Committee may not be, or some Members of the Committee may not be.

Mr. CLARK. Are you referring to the interview by the RTC?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. The interview by Pillsbury, which was produced to the RTC.

Mr. CLARK. As I said earlier, I haven't seen the transcript but yes, I was interviewed.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Quite extensively?

Mr. CLARK. As I said, my recollection is it was for 2, 3 hours.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. We have the transcript, and for those on the staff who haven't seen it, it's been designated Exhibit 2, 0658651 through, I can't read the end of it but it looks to be about 300 pages worth.

Let me ask you this: Are you familiar with the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report that has been made a part of the record of this Committee? It's dated December 28, 1995.

Mr. CLARK. I learned of its existence through the newspapers. I have never read the report.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, it would be enlightening, perhaps, because it goes through the entire chronology of the regulation of Madison Bank. And let me help you to see whether this refreshes your recollection.

The CHAIRMAN. I'm going to admonish Counsel.

If you want to refer the witness to a document, let him have a copy of it. I don't think this witness or anybody else has to be—you have to say, "It would be enlightening." I honestly believe, and I want to give great latitude to Counsel and other Senators, that it's absolutely inappropriate to approach it in that manner, this is not a hostile witness. He's responded to questions that other Senators on both sides have asked forthrightly; when he can't remember, he says he can't remember. Now, he's testified that he hasn't seen this report. Why would you want to tell him that "it would be enlightening" as it relates to this report?

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. Well, I would say—

The CHAIRMAN. If you want to give him a copy and ask him a question as it relates to a particular area, or if you give him the page and refer to it as refreshing something that he may have done or testified to or said, that's fair, but let's try and do it—and I don't say this because this is a witness who comes in that we expect a certain testimony one way or the other. He was the examiner. He's testifying to the best of his ability. He's not on trial. No one is on trial. So let's treat him with a certain amount of respect.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clark, I don't want you to think you haven't been treated with respect. I think you've been treated with respect by everyone here today. Let's send a copy of this down to him. I want to ask him some questions about it.

Mr. BEN-VENISTE. If I may respond, Mr. Chairman, I wasn't suggesting that Mr. Clark should have seen the report. I'm only suggesting that it would be enlightening to those who have not taken the time to read this report, because all of these events are laid out quite specifically in the report; and it is enlightening to those who have not had the opportunity to review it in any detail to see that all of these events, starting in 1984, are set forth with particularity in the Pillsbury Report for which the Government spent, we are told, $3.8 million.

The CHAIRMAN. They didn't get their money's worth, I can tell you that.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, may I interrupt here?

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Murkowski.

Senator MURKOWSKI. What disturbs me about this whole process and what we have learned today, and these examiners obviously have an expertise and a know-how to proceed when there's irregularity, so how can the Rose Law Firm not know the troubles, the corruption that was going on in Madison when Seth Ward, who was obviously the straw man, it was no secret, was Webb Hubbell's father-in-law and Webb Hubbell was a senior partner at the Rose Law Firm? Now let's quit kidding ourselves. This isn't New York City. This is a relatively small law firm. Lawyers talk. And this was going on 2 years before.

Senator SARBANES. Mr. Clark, do you know about any of these things that Senator Murkowski just mentioned?

Mr. CLARK. I'm sorry, I didn't—I was busy looking at the document. I thought you were going to question me on it. I'm sorry.

Senator SARBANES. I want to find out what your knowledge is. Let me ask you a couple of questions here. Would you turn to page 7 of this document. At the bottom of page 7, it says,

In January 1984, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board started a special limited examination of Madison Guaranty.

Then it goes on from there, discusses that and some of the things that were happening. And then it says in the middle of that page,

The 1984 examination led to a supervisory agreement, to which Madison Guaranty's Board of Directors consented in July 1984. The supervisory agreement required compliance with net worth and affiliated party transaction regulations, and better policies and procedures.

In October 1984, Jim and Susan McDougal resigned as directors and officers of Madison Guaranty. They remain majority shareholders; Jim McDougal remained chairman and president of Madison Financial until July 1986; and by most accounts other than his own Jim McDougal continued to dominate Madison Guaranty.

In March 1986, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board began another examination of Madison Guaranty.

Now that's the one you were involved with; is that correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Senator SARBANES. All right.

The problems recognized in the 1984 report of examination not only remained but had become much worse. On June 19, 1986, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board wrote to the Board of Directors of Madison Guaranty to report on its interim findings. This letter alleged a violation of the July 19, 1984 supervisory agreement and noted Madison Guaranty's continued failure to comply with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's net worth requirements.

On July 11, 1986, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board called Madison Guaranty's Board of Directors to a meeting in Dallas. The directors were instructed to remove Jim McDougal as chairman and president of Madison Financial (he had resigned his Madison Guaranty offices in 1984) and John Latham as chairman of Madison Guaranty. McDougal and Latham resigned. A month later, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board entered a Cease and Desist Order (C&D) against Madison Guaranty.

Now this is the Pillsbury Madison & Sutro Report about what took place, and I guess the reason I'm putting the question to you is it seems to me in previous answers at the table, either you weren't aware of this chronology or it wasn't being brought forward in response to questions.

As I understood it, you said nothing happened after the 1984 examination and I wasn't clear if you said nothing happened after the 1986 examination or that you weren't certain about, or didn't know about it.

Mr. CLARK. I was basing my answer upon my recollection. Now, I was not involved prior to—I personally was not involved prior to the 1986 exam and had only limited involvement thereafter. I certainly was not involved in the resolution of the Madison Guaranty supervisory problem.

Based upon my best recollection, I frankly—I testified that yes, there probably was some limited amount of monitoring between the two exams, which may or may not have been—obviously perhaps was not entirely effective.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Senator Sarbanes, I'm curious to know, are you referring to the report that was done by Pillsbury Madison & Sutro in December 1995?

Senator SARBANES. That's right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. That was, of course, done after Madison and the action by—Mr. Clark and his team of examiners had already completed their report. So this would not have been relative to their examination.

Senator SARBANES. No, this is Pillsbury's setting out the historical background of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan and the regulatory history. This is the regulatory history. Questions were being put to Mr. Clark which suggested that nothing was done after the 1984 examination and it wasn't quite clear what had been done after the 1986 examination. And I'm just trying to clarify that for the record, because regulatory steps were taken in both instances.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Well, I am not going to answer for the witness, but by the same token, an agreement that was initiated in 1984 and not monitored with specific compliance and changes clearly there wasn't any action that was taken relative to correcting the situation. And it behooves the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to mandate that those periodic reports show advancement and progress. Otherwise, they are ignoring their obligation, and clearly Madison is in violation of the law.

Senator SARBANES. We can bring in some—

Senator MURKOWSKI. This is somebody's interpretation of the Federal review.

Senator SARBANES. Right.

Senator MURKOWSKI. Whether they have had the benefit of the actual examinations, I don't know.

Senator SARBANES. Well, I would hope so. We paid $3.8 million for this study. The point is that Mr. Clark was asked questions which presupposed that nothing had been done, and Mr. Clark in his answers, in effect, accepted the assumption that nothing had been done, and things had been done.

Now, whether—

Senator MURKOWSKI. They weren't adequate, certainly, and I question whether they were done.

Senator SARBANES. Whether they were adequate is a different question, but that doesn't address Mr. Clark's testimony. He does not really know about that.

Mr. CLARK. Pardon me. Just so I don't have to correct the record again, that was not my testimony. I did say there was some limited amount, perhaps, but based on my recollection, some monitoring of Madison Guaranty between the 1984 exam and the 1986 exam.

The CHAIRMAN. You said specifically there was some off-site monitoring.

Senator SARBANES. What did you say about what took place after the 1986 exam?

Mr. CLARK. I said that—your question, I believe, if I recall it, was did I know that McDougal and several of the officers had been removed. My answer was that they had not been removed at the end of the 1986 exam. However, when I was in Little Rock in 1987, I may very well have learned that they had been removed.

Senator SARBANES. They were taken out as officers and directors in 1984. They were thrown out of the S&L altogether in 1986.

Mr. CLARK. McDougal as the Madison—excuse me. The Pillsbury Madison Report says McDougal was removed as President of Madison Guaranty. He remained as President of Madison Financial.

Senator SARBANES. Right.

Mr. CLARK. All right. The reason is, as I recall the 1984 report pointed out, his holding the office of President violated some specific rules regarding conflicts of interest. In order to not—to cease violating those rules, he resigned as President. He remained at the institution as President of Madison Financial. He was not removed from that office until after the close of the 1986 examination.

Senator SARBANES. That's right. And there was a Cease and Desist Order, was there not, in 1986?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it was agreed to during the 1986 exam.

Senator SARBANES. That's right.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Giuffra.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Clark, normally, the results of an examination by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board would be kept confidential, isn't that right, back in 1986?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, isn't it, I believe, a crime to release the actual results of the examination to someone outside of the bank?

Mr. CLARK. The law requires that release of an exam report be restricted.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you're not supposed to disseminate even—for example, if you're a bank regulator, the results of the exam to persons outside of either the regulatory agency or the bank; right?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. So it would be wrongful for a bank regulator to provide information to, say, the general public about the results of an examination of an S&L?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Pulcer, you would agree with that?

Ms. PULCER. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Bank examinations are conducted in very confidential circumstances; right?

Ms. PULCER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's in part because people are concerned about runs on banks if people find out that a bank is in trouble?

Ms. PULCER. I would assume so, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you've examined banks, Mr. Clark, in a number of places in the country. What is your experience with regard to the interaction between a State bank regulator and the Governor that appointed that State bank regulator?

Mr. CLARK. I am not sure I have any experience in that interaction.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Are you aware of any instances in which a State bank regulator would have tipped off the Governor's office with regard to how an examination was proceeding?

Mr. CLARK. No, I know of no such instance.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you think that is something that a State bank regulator should do in the normal course, based on your experience?

Mr. CLARK. I don't—as I sit here, I can't think of a reason why that should occur.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Pulcer, can you think of any reason why a State bank regulator or S&L regulator should tip-off a Governor's office about the results of an examination while the examination is in process?

Ms. PULCER. I have no experience in this regard with State regulators and the structure within the State, the reporting structure between the State supervisor and the governorship.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, going back to the role of Ms. Bassett, I believe, Mr. Clark, you testified earlier, about 3 hours ago now, that you thought that Ms. Bassett had a conflict because she had done some legal work for Mr. McDougal. Do you recall that testimony?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I do.

Mr. GIUFFRA. I would like to put up on the Elmo the document bearing Bates number CCBW 884. This is a document that the Committee received recently. You were never asked about this particular document during your House testimony, were you, sir?

Mr. CLARK. Not that I can recall, no.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Let me just give you some background on the document. This is a document that Ms. Bassett, who was the Securities Commissioner and also the head S&L regulator in Arkansas, sent to a Mr. Sam Bratton, who was an adviser to Governor Bill Clinton. This was sent on July 2, 1986. Now, this would be prior to the meeting that was held on July 11, 1986 in Dallas of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Your exam was still in progress on July 2, 1986; correct?

Mr. CLARK. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Were you aware of the fact that—let me just read the note into the record. It says, "Madison Guaranty is in pretty serious trouble. Because of Bill's relationship with McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it." Did Ms. Bassett ever advise you that she had communicated to the Governor's office that Madison Guaranty was in pretty serious trouble?

Mr. CLARK. No, she did not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Was that something you would have liked to have known in advance of the July 11, 1986, Federal Home Loan Bank Board meeting?

Mr. CLARK. It might have been interesting.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Especially in view of the fact that you thought Ms. Bassett had a conflict?

Mr. CLARK. Yes. However, I don't know if it would have changed the outcome of the meeting.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Now, you had indicated in questioning by, I believe it was Mr. Ben-Veniste, and there was a document that was put up, indicating that you thought that Governor Clinton might be a potential insider in the course of your examination?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, I recall the document.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And I believe you testified that you spoke to Mr. Parr in March 1986. He was the person who was the field manager of the Little Rock Federal Home Loan Bank Board's office?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, he was, I believe, one of two field managers in that office.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Parr had indicated to you that Jim McDougal had ties with a number of prominent officials, public officials, and elected officials in Arkansas. Am I right about that?

Mr. CLARK. Yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. In fact, he told you that McDougal was a friend of Governor Clinton?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, he did.

Mr. GIUFFRA. You also had some understanding that McDougal and Clinton might have been business partners in some venture?

Mr. CLARK. I thought that might be the case, but I am not absolutely sure about that.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Would it be proper for an S&L regulator to tip-off someone who had a business relationship with the head of an S&L, the fact that the S&L was in pretty serious trouble?

Mr. CLARK. I don't know if it was improper; however, it certainly has an appearance of a conflict.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Isn't it correct that one of the reasons why you want to maintain the confidentiality of bank examinations is because you don't want to tip-off insiders of how the examination is progressing; isn't that right?

Mr. CLARK. No. Let me make sure I'm understanding your question. What your question is, is the prohibition against disclosing the contents of an examination report—

Mr. GIUFFRA. There clearly is a prohibition on that, you would agree?

Mr. CLARK. Yes. Is that in order to limit information to insiders during the exam? No. Obviously, the report is prepared at the end of the exam.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But you don't tip-off insiders as to how the exam is progressing; isn't that right?

Senator SARBANES. On the tip-off of insiders point, why don't you give Mr. Clark the letter that's referred to in this note so he doesn't catch himself out. He ought to see the letter that was sent to the directors of Madison.

The CHAIRMAN. The attachment.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Do you have anything to add to your testimony after seeing that letter?

Mr. CLARK. No, I am familiar with the letter.

Senator SARBANES. Do you understand what the letter is?

Mr. CLARK. It is a letter from the authorities of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board dated June 19, advising the Board of Directors of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan Association of the general gist of the exam findings to date and asking them to take certain actions.

Senator SARBANES. It would indicate they were in pretty serious trouble, wouldn't it?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, it would.

Senator SARBANES. So where does the tip-off come if the directors have already gotten this letter?

Mr. CLARK. The director—well, the management of Madison Guaranty received the letter. I'm not sure whether it was given to all of the directors, some of the directors or not.

Mr. GIUFFRA. But one point, just to be clear about this, with regard to a bank examination report and the results of an examination, the directors are not allowed to disseminate the results of that examination outside the bank or the S&L; isn't that right?

Mr. CLARK. Yes, the rule applies to them as well.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Pulcer, we sort of tried to get into this before and didn't have enough time. With regard to the meeting on July 11, 1986 in Dallas of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, you attended that meeting; correct?

Ms. PULCER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And you took notes, fairly extensive and copious notes of the meeting?

Ms. PULCER. That's correct.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Ms. Bassett, the S&L supervisor in Arkansas, did not have any comments to make during the meeting; correct?

Ms. PULCER. To the best of my recollection, that's true.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Why don't we just have you read into the record the highlighted portion in yellow and just tell us what you recall about that exchange during the meeting.

And, I guess, is the comment your comment? That would be on page 1398 of your notes. If you could just read into the record beginning "Faulk asks."

Ms. PULCER. "Faulk asks Beverly Bassett if she wants to say anything. Bassett, I have no comment." Comment, this is my personal comment, "Strange, Faulk asked for her comments. Bassett's silence interesting."

Mr. GIUFFRA. What did you mean by that comment that you made in your notes during the course of this meeting?

Ms. PULCER. That comment was my personal observation. I would have expected the State Supervisor to make a comment at that point in the meeting whether she concurred or had any other statements to add.

Mr. GIUFFRA. That's based on your experience in attending similar meetings in the past?

Ms. PULCER. At this point, I don't recall as I had ever attended a board meeting with another State regulator, or with a State regulator.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Mr. Clark, what did you think about the fact that Ms. Bassett did not have any comment to make at this point in the meeting? Did you find it interesting as well?

Mr. CLARK. I thought it was a little odd. I, too, would have expected her to say something in support of the actions that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board supervisory authorities were taking.

Mr. GIUFFRA. We just gave you a copy, Mr. Clark, of a document that bears Bates number DKSJN 29010. It is a bill that was discovered in the White House residence I believe on January 4 of this year, and it is a bill of the Rose Law Firm for legal services that were rendered through January 30, 1986 by H.R. Clinton, T. Thrash, P. Donovan, K. Sheman, and J. Birch, and it relates to a matter known as IDC. Now, in the course of your work as a banker examiner, you have probably reviewed legal bills?

Mr. CLARK. To some limited extent, yes.

Mr. GIUFFRA. Just looking at this bill and trying to ascertain what the role of the Rose Law Firm would have been with regard to IDC, we've had testimony from members of the Rose Law Firm, was also the Castle Grande transaction, but in this bill, which was for $4,670, the Rose Firm billed for "Reviewing contract for sale." What would reviewing contract for sale constitute, in your view?

Mr. CLARK. I presume they would be reviewing a contract for sale to see that it was a legally valid document and in the best interests of Madison Guaranty.

Mr. GIUFFRA. And then attending the IDC board meeting, that would have been the board meeting whereby IDC sold the property to Mr. Ward and also to Madison Financial?

